
Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2024

https://archive.org/details/historyofhunting0000unse_h7q3

HISTORY

OF

HUNTINGDON AND BLAIR

COUNTIES,

PENNSYLVANIA.

BY

J. SIMPSON AFRICA.

ILLUSTRATED.

PHILADELPHIA:
LOUIS H. EVERTS.
1883.

PRESS OF J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO., PHILADELPHIA.

The reproduction of this book has been made possible through the joint sponsorship of the Huntingdon County Historical Society of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, and the Blair County Historical Society, of Altoona, Pennsylvania.

A Reproduction by
UNIGRAPHIC, INC.
1401 North Fares Avenue
Evansville, Indiana 47711 nineteen hundred and seventy-seven

PREFACE.

THIS handsomely-printed and illustrated volume is the result of the efforts of Major Louis H. Everts to prepare and publish a history of the counties of Huntingdon and Blair. The material for the histories of the several sub-divisions of these counties was chiefly collated and the sketches prepared by writers detailed for that purpose by the publisher, as follows: J. L. Rockey for Barree, Brady, Franklin, Henderson, Jackson, Juniata, Logan, Miller, Morris, Oneida, Porter, Walker, Warrior's Mark, and West townships of Huntingdon County, and Snyder and Tyrone of Blair County; Dr. Thomas Cushing for Carbon, Cass, Hopewell, Lincoln, Tod, and Union; William H. Shaw for Clay, Cromwell, Dublin, Shirley, Springfield, and Tell townships of Huntingdon; and J. H. Schenck for the other townships of Blair County. The sketch of the city of Altoona was commenced by J. P. Snell, and completed, after his death, by Dr. Thomas Cushing and others, and that of Penn township was written by Dr. John H. Wintrode. Chapter XVII., the "Bench and Bar," was prepared by Theodore H. Cremer, Esq., and the narratives of the numerous military organizations that participated in the great conflict for the maintenance of the integrity of our national Union were written by Capt. Franklin Ellis. Additional information, drawn from various reliable sources, was incorporated with these sketches.

It is not claimed that this work is free from error. It treats of a region whose history began nearly a century and a half ago, and which has within that period developed from an almost trackless wilderness to become the happy home of ninety thousand people. It requires great care to separate truth from error in the numerous cherished traditions of past events. This duty has been as faithfully performed as possible under the attending circumstances. Much valuable information will be found in the following pages that never before appeared in print or was accessible to the public.

Very many of the citizens of the two counties cheerfully responded to requests for information, or kindly tendered it, and they thereby contributed much to the thoroughness of details of the work. To all such respectful acknowledgment is made. Some localities have been more minutely described than others. A reason for this will be found in the fact that the residents of such districts manifested an interest in the work, and assisted in procuring valuable data pertaining to their respective neighborhoods.

J. SIMPSON AFRICA.

HUNTINGDON, PA., March 15, 1883.

CONTENTS OF HUNTINGDON COUNTY.

CHAPTER I. PAGE

The English Claim to Pennsylvania—Swedish and Dutch Possession —Final acknowledgment of the English Claim..... 1

CHAPTER II.

The Charter to William Penn for the Province of Pennsylvania—Formation of the Three Original Counties..... 2

CHAPTER III.

Erection of Lancaster, Cumberland, and Bedford Counties—Purchase of the Indian Titles—Erection of Townships and Election Districts—Local Officers..... 3

CHAPTER IV.

Indian Occupation—Lenni Lenape—Iroquois—Complaints of Intrusions by the Whites on Unpurchased Lands..... 8

CHAPTER V.

The Murder of John Armstrong, an Indian Trader, and his Companions..... 9

CHAPTER VI.

The Original Inhabitants of the Juniata Valley—Unlawful Intrusions upon their Lands—Efforts of the Government to restrain the Intruders..... 13

CHAPTER VII.

The Indian and French War of 1755—Erection of Forts Shirley, Standing Stone, Fetter's, Holliday's, Lowry's, Hartsock's, Lytle's, Anderson's, McAlevy's, and Roberdeau—Troubles with the Indians during the Revolutionary War—Tory Expedition to Kittanning..... 18

CHAPTER VIII.

Highways—Indian Paths—Public Roads—The River—Turnpike Roads—Canals—Railroads..... 27

CHAPTER IX.

Early Settlements—Names of Pioneers..... 38

CHAPTER X.

Huntingdon—The Warm Springs—Jack's Narrows—Fort Shirley—Black Log Valley—The Clugage Family, and the Shades of Death in 1778..... 45

CHAPTER XI.

Confiscation of the Estates of Traitors..... 46

CHAPTER XII.

Formation of Huntingdon County—Erection of County Buildings... 48

CHAPTER XIII.

The Constitutional Conventions of 1776, 1790, 1838, and 1873..... 51

CHAPTER XIV.

Iron Manufacture..... 54

CHAPTER XV.

List of Marriages by Rev. John Johnston, 1787 to 1823, 349 couples.. 56

CHAPTER XVI.

The Press of Huntingdon County..... 58

CHAPTER XVII.

Bench and Bar..... 65

CHAPTER XVIII.

Military..... 102

CHAPTER XIX. PAGE

Military—War of the Rebellion—The Three Years' Troops—The Twenty-fifth Regiment..... 116

CHAPTER XX.

Military—The Forty-ninth and Fifty-third Regiments..... 124

CHAPTER XXI.

Military—The Sixty-second Regiment..... 134

CHAPTER XXII.

Military—The Seventy-sixth and Seventy-seventh Regiments..... 139

CHAPTER XXIII.

Military—Eighty-fourth Regiment..... 150

CHAPTER XXIV.

Military—Ninety-second Regiment—One Hundred and Tenth Regiment—The Twelfth Cavalry..... 160

CHAPTER XXV.

Military—War of the Rebellion continued—One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Regiment..... 176

CHAPTER XXVI.

Military—War of the Rebellion continued—One Hundred and Forty-seventh and One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiments..... 185

CHAPTER XXVII.

Military—War of the Rebellion continued—Nineteenth and Twentieth Cavalry, and One Hundred and Ninety-second Regiment.... 190

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Military—War of the Rebellion continued—Two Hundred and Second, Two Hundred and Fifth, Two Hundred and Eighth Regiments—Huntingdon and Blair Men in other regiments..... 197

CHAPTER XXIX.

Representatives in Congress and the State Legislature..... 204

CHAPTER XXX.

Judicial Officers..... 206

CHAPTER XXXI.

County Officers..... 206

CHAPTER XXXII.

Population and Post-offices..... 208

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Barree Township..... 210

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Brady Township..... 217

CHAPTER XXXV.

Carbon Township..... 228

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Cass Township..... 237

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Clay Township..... 245

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Cromwell Township..... 252

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Dublin Township..... 265

CHAPTER XL.

Franklin Township..... 268

CHAPTER XLI. PAGE
Henderson Township 280

CHAPTER XLII.
Hopewell Township 288

CHAPTER XLIII.
Jackson Township 292

CHAPTER XLIV.
Juniata Township 301

CHAPTER XLV.
Lincoln Township 305

CHAPTER XLVI.
Logan Township 307

CHAPTER XLVII.
Miller Township 317

CHAPTER XLVIII.
Morris Township 320

CHAPTER XLIX.
Oneida Township 329

CHAPTER L.
Penn Township 336

CHAPTER LI.
Shirley Township 340

CHAPTER LII. PAGE
Shirleysburg Borough 348

CHAPTER LIII.
Mount Union Borough 353

CHAPTER LIV.
Springfield Township 361

CHAPTER LV.
Tell Township 365

CHAPTER LVI.
Tod Township 368

CHAPTER LVII.
Union Township 371

CHAPTER LVIII.
Walker Township 379

CHAPTER LIX.
Warrior's Mark Township 387

CHAPTER LX.
West Township 401

CHAPTER LXI.
Porter Township 408

CHAPTER LXII.
Huntingdon Borough 435

ILLUSTRATIONS.

		PAGE
Adams, John, autograph letter of	facing	48
Adams, T. H	"	358
Africa, J. Simpson	"	470
Bailey, John M	"	99
Baptist Church of Huntingdon		452
Barree Iron-Works	facing	424
Broad Top City, plat of	"	236
Brumbaugh, A. B	"	455
Burnside, Thomas		76
Caldwell, D	facing	100
Clarkson, David		244
Corbin, Abraham	facing	302
Court-House Huntingdon County	"	50
Cresswell, George M	"	310
Dewees, P. P	"	258
Eby, Samuel		285
Entrekin, James	facing	306
Faust, R. F	"	356
Fisher, H. G	"	478
Fisher, Thomas	"	469
Fort Shirley, map of	"	342
Foust, B. R	"	224
Glock, J. G		351
Heffner, Andrew	facing	380
Hefright, Frank	"	482
Henderson, David	"	271
Henry, S. E	"	479
Henry & Co., building		479
Hewitt, George W	facing	430
Houtz, Dr. Daniel	"	428
Huntingdon Bank Shinplaster		469
Huntingdon Borough, plat of	between	434, 435
Huntingdon Borough, seal of		449
Huntingdon Borough Shinplaster		450
Huntingdon, oldest house in		444
Huntingdon Principal School		484
Huston, Charles		76
Huyett, John	facing	416
Hyskell, T. B	"	388

		PAGE
Isett, Jacob		276
Lovell, K. Allen	facing	453
Map, outline	"	1
Martin, Robert	"	384
McAteer, H. J	"	426
McNite, W. P	"	346
McVitty, S	"	250
Mears, J. F	"	230
Mosser, O. B		366
Mount Union in 1840		354
Neff, Benjamin	facing	418
Neff, Samuel	"	419
Orbison, William	"	438
Petersburg, plan of	"	313
Petrikin, R. Bruce	"	97
Powel, Robert Hare	"	232
Powelton Furnace	"	233
Presbyterian Church, Huntingdon		463
Quinter, James	facing	467
Rex, W. H	"	376
Robley, Elliott		378
Shaver's Creek, plat of	facing	211
Shinplaster Huntingdon, Cambria and Indiana turnpike		32
Shirleysburg, plat of	facing	348
Speer, B. M	"	98
Stair, Michael	"	254
State Industrial Reformatory	"	382
Stevens, Frank D	"	357
Stewart, Alexander	"	270
Sweet, W. H	"	229
Swoope, G. W. R	"	355
Thompson, G. W	"	354
Tussey, Robert	"	322
Tyhurst, Alfred	"	473
Watson, Joseph	"	483
Weaver, David B	"	288
Whitehead, John	"	459
Wilson, Henry		332
Wright, Simeon		372

TOWNSHIP MAP
of
HUNTINGDON AND BLAIR COUNTIES
by

J. MURRAY AFRICA
Surveyor
Engraved expressly for this Work

JACKSON PORTER
HUNTINGDON
JUNIATA
MIFFLIN
FRANKLIN CO.
BRANCH PENN
Warriors Mark
Pennsylvania
Furnace
Grayville
Huntingdon Furnace
Plunkitsville
Coleraine Forge
Nell's Mills
McAlevys Fort
Saulsburg
Cottage
Miller Hill
Barree
Shavers Cr.
Stone Cr.
Greenwood Furn.
Dorris Ferry
Logan
Doe Hill
Miller
Murrays Run
Anderson
Ardenheim
Mill Creek
Penn
Grafton
Juniata River
Mapleton Depot
Penn
Union
Colvin
Augh wick Mills
Shirley Still Valley
Cass
Cassville
Todd
Burres Valley
Orbisonia
Cromwell
Shirleysburg
Shade Valley
Black Dog Cr.
Tell
Nossville
Saltillo
Great
East Broad
Three Springs
Shade Cr.
Shade Gap
Springfield
Meadow Gap
Dublin
Dickerson
Huntingdon
Mill
Franklin Co.

HISTORY

OF

HUNTINGDON AND BLAIR COUNTIES,

PENNSYLVANIA.

HUNTINGDON COUNTY.

CHAPTER I.

The English Claim to Pennsylvania—Swedish and Dutch Possession—Final acknowledgment of the English Claim.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, to whose enterprise and courage the world is indebted for the discoveries that resulted in opening the western continent as a home for the oppressed people of Europe, was born in the city of Genoa, Italy, about the year 1435. At this time a large and profitable trade was carried on between the European countries and India. Convinced by his deductions from the experience of preceding and contemporaneous travelers and navigators, of the magnitude and globular form of the earth, he was assured that a new route to this rich region would be found by sailing westwardly. For eighteen years he labored to the end that he might fit out an expedition to practically test his scientific opinions. After many rebuffs and disappointments that would have crushed the ambition of ordinary men, he gained the confidence and secured the encouragement and support of Ferdinand and Isabella, the reigning sovereigns of Spain, by whose liberality three small vessels were fitted out and placed under his command. Columbus with his little fleet set sail from the roads of Saltez, near Palos, on the 3d day of August, 1492, and on the 12th day of October touched land, afterwards ascertained to be an island, which, in devout reverence, he named San Salvador, one of the Bahama group, situated in N. lat. 24° 30′, and longitude 1° 30′ E. from Washington. He also discovered Cuba, Hayti, and other islands, and, returning, he reached the harbor of Palos on the 15th day of March, 1493.

The intelligence of Columbus' discoveries stimulated the fitting out of other expeditions by the maritime nations of Europe. Henry VII. of England eagerly accepted the offer of John Cabot, a merchant of Bristol (but supposed to a Venetian by birth), to fit out a fleet of vessels for a voyage of discovery by a more northern route than the one pursued by Columbus. On the 5th day of March, 1496, the king, by patent signed at Westminster, authorized Cabot and his three sons, Lewis, Sebastian, and Sancius, "to saile to all parts, countreys, and seas of the East, of the West, and of the North, under our banners and ensigns, with five ships, of what burden or quantitie soever they may be, and as many mariners and men as they will have with them in the said ships, upon their own proper cost and charges, to seeke out, discover, and find whatsoever isles, countreys, regions, or provinces of the heathen and infidels, whatsoever they may be, and in what part of the world soever they may be, which before this time have been unknown to all Christians."[1]

Under this charter, in May, 1497, an expedition under the command of Sebastian set out, and on the 24th day of June land was descried, which proved to be the coast of Labrador. He sailed along the coast three hundred leagues, and planted on the soil the banners of England and Venice.[2] The next year he again touched the continent in high latitudes, and turning southward, followed the coast as far as the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay.

As many European governments were from time to time sending out expeditions for discovery and conquest, it became necessary to avoid conflicts with and war upon each other, to settle a principle which all should acknowledge as the law by which the right of acquisition which they all asserted should be regulated between themselves. This principle was, that discovery gave title to the government by whose subjects or by whose authority it was made against all other European governments, which title might be consummated by possession. Upon the discoveries of the Cabots rested the claim of the English government to dominion in the northern part of this continent.

[1] Hakluyt's Voyages and Discoveries, vol. iii. p. 6.

[2] Amer. Cyclop., vol. iii. p. 529.

Henry Hudson, an English navigator, set out from Texel, Holland, April 9, 1609,[1] in the ship "Half-Moon," to seek a passage to China by the northeast. He was then in the service of the Dutch East India Company. Encountering great fields of ice, he was compelled to change his course, and then sailed for Davis Strait. He touched land in latitude 44° 15′, and sailed thence southwestwardly as far as latitude 37° 15′. Returning, he entered the mouth of the Delaware Bay on Friday, August 28th,[2] but encountering shoal water he continued northward, entered New York Bay, discovered the river that bears his name September 11th,[3] and explored it above the mouth of the Mohawk.

The high and mighty States-General of Holland in 1614 issued an edict granting to persons who had or should thereafter discover "any new courses, havens, countries, or places" the exclusive privilege of resorting to and frequenting the same for four voyages. Under this edict the merchants of Amsterdam fitted out several vessels for the purpose of exploration. One of these was commanded by Capt. Cornelius Jacobsen Mey, who entered the Delaware Bay. He gave his own name to the northern cape, now called Cape May, and to the southern the name Cape Cornelius, now known as Henlopen.

No settlement was made on the Delaware until 1623, when under the auspices of the West India Company, chartered in 1621, Capt. Mey ascended the Delaware, and on the eastern side, about Gloucester Point, commenced the erection of Fort Nassau, intended for a trading-post, as well as for security against the Indians. This effort was not successful. The fort was soon abandoned, for we are informed by De Vries, who visited it in 1633, that it was then in the possession of the Indians.

Peter Minuit, in 1637, under the patronage of Christiana, Queen of Sweden, with two vessels and a number of settlers, crossed the Atlantic, and after touching at Jamestown, Va., reached the Delaware about May, 1638. He purchased from the Indians the soil on the western side of the bay and river from Cape Henlopen to Santickan (the falls at Trenton), and erected the fort and founded the town of Christiana, on the north bank of Minquas Creek, a league above its mouth. From this beginning, Swedish settlements were made from time to time along the western side of the Delaware to and above the site of Philadelphia. In 1654, Peter Lindstrom, a Swedish engineer, surveyed and mapped the river from its mouth to Trenton Falls. The next year a Dutch fleet under the command of Governor Peter Stuyvesant, entered the river and captured one by one the Swedish forts and took possession of the colony, and thus ended the Swedish government. Both nationalities continued to dwell along the banks of the stream, the Dutch being the rulers.

The English continued to claim dominion over that portion of the continent along which Cabot had coasted, and Charles II., with the view of wresting possession from the Dutch, on the 12th of March, 1664, by patent granted to his brother James, Duke of York, the territory now embraced in the States of New York and New Jersey. An expedition was sent from England for the purpose of reducing the Dutch fortresses, and on the 8th of September the fort and town of Manhattan, now New York, were surrendered. On the 1st of October following, the settlements on the Delaware yielded, and thus ended Dutch dominion over the soil of Pennsylvania.

[1] Brodhead's Address to the N. Y. Hist. Soc., p. 14.

[2] Journal of Robert Juet, Hudson's mate. Trans. N. Y. Hist. Soc.

[3] Amer. Cyclopædia, vol. ix. p. 30.

CHAPTER II.

The Charter to William Penn for the Province of Pennsylvania—Formation of the Three Original Counties.

DURING the interval between the end of Dutch occupation of Pennsylvania and the granting of the charter to William Penn, the English Governors of New York issued a large number of land grants, and under their administration settlements multiplied along the Delaware. But as these relate wholly to that portion of the province, they do not directly concern residents in the interior.

William Penn, in 1674, became one of three trustees chosen to manage the affairs of West Jersey. In the execution of this trust he had good opportunity to become acquainted with the valuable tract of land lying on the opposite side of the river. At the death of his father, Admiral William Penn, it was found that the British government was indebted to him for money loaned and services rendered about sixteen thousand pounds. Instead of money, William suggested that he would prefer a grant of land on the western side of the Delaware north of Maryland. A formal petition was presented to Charles II. in June, 1680, and after many conferences with adjacent proprietors, on the 4th day of March, 1681, the king granted a charter. The boundaries were described, but serious differences occurred, and many years passed before they were settled and defined. Penn, his heirs and assigns, were made and ordained true and absolute proprietaries of all the lands within the bounds described in the charter, and upon him and his heirs, their deputies and lieutenants, was conferred the executive authority of the province. William Markham was commissioned Deputy Governor, and sent over from England clothed with full authority to inaugurate the new government, and in the fall of the year, at Upland, now Chester, he took charge of the executive affairs.[1] In October, 1682, Penn arrived in the "Welcome," and soon thereafter the lands of the province were divided into three counties, to wit, Chester, Philadelphia, and Bucks. The precise date of the erection of these counties does not appear, but it must have been before the 18th day of November, 1682, as on that day the proprietary issued his writs to the sheriffs of the respective counties, requiring them "to summon all freeholders to meet on the 20th instant, and elect out of themselves seven persons of most note for wisdom, sobriety, and integrity, to serve as their deputies and representatives in General Assembly, to be held at Upland, in Pennsylvania, December 6th (4th?) next." In this assembly there were representatives from each of the counties named, as well as from the three "lower counties" of Kent, New Castle, and Sussex. Representatives were chosen, and met in General Assembly at Chester on the 4th day of December. Among the most notable acts of this legislative body was the passage on the 7th of the same month of the "great law." The broad declaration of religious liberty contained in the first section of this law, incorporated in substance in each of the constitutions since adopted by the people of the commonwealth, indicated the liberal opinions of our ancestors as inculcated by the founder, and contributed to the rapid peopling and subsequent prosperity of the colony. It is in these words:

"Almighty God being the only Lord of conscience, father of lights and spirits, and the author as well as object of all divine knowledge, faith, and worship, who only can enlighten the mind and persuade and convince the understanding of people in due reverence to his sovereignty over the souls of mankind, it is enacted by the authority aforesaid that no person now or at any time hereafter living in this province who shall confess and acknowledge one Almighty God to be the creator, upholder, and ruler of the world, and that professeth him or herself obliged in conscience to live peaceably and justly under the civil government, shall in anywise be molested or prejudiced for his or her conscientious persuasion or practice, nor shall he or she at any time be compelled to frequent or maintain any religious worship, place, or ministry whatever, contrary to his or her mind, but shall freely and fully enjoy his or her Christian liberty in that respect, without any interruption or reflection; and if any person shall abuse or deride any other for his or her different persuasion and practice in matter of religion, such shall be looked upon as a disturber of the peace and be punished accordingly. But to the end that looseness, irreligion, and atheism may not creep in under pretence of conscience, in this province, be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that, according to the good example of the primitive Christians, and for the ease of the creation, every first day of the week, called the Lord's day, people shall abstain from their common toil and labor, that whether masters, parents, children, or servants, they may better dispose themselves to read the Scriptures of truth at home, or to frequent such meetings of religious worship abroad as may best suit their respective persuasions."

[1] William Penn, in a letter dated 5th of 1st mo. (corresponding with March in the present style), 1681,* addressed to Robert Turner, thus explains the origin of the name of the province:

"I chose New Wales, being, as this, a pretty hilly country; but Penn being Welsh for a head, as Penmanmoire, in Wales, and Penrith, in Cumberland, and Penn, in Buckinghamshire, the highest land in England, called this Pennsylvania, which is the high or head woodlands; for I proposed, when the secretary, a Welshman, refused to have it called New Wales, Sylvania, and they added Penn to it, and though I much opposed it, and went to the king to have it struck out and altered, he said it was past, and would not take it upon him; nor could twenty guineas move the under secretary to vary the name, for I feared lest it should be looked on as a vanity in me, and not as a respect in the king, as it truly was, to my father, whom he often mentions with praise."

* It must be borne in mind that for many years after the charter to Penn the inhabitants of the province began the year on the first day of March, hence in many old documents the dates are written thus: 1st day of 1st month, 168⅔.

CHAPTER III.

Erection of Lancaster, Cumberland, and Bedford Counties—Purchases of the Indian Title—Erection of Townships and Election Districts—Local Officers.

LANCASTER,[2] the fourth county of the province, was erected from Chester by an act of the General Assembly passed the 10th day of May, 1729, and embraced all the lands of the province to the northward of Octorara Creek, and to the westward of a line of marked trees running from the north branch of said creek to the river Schuylkill. The sixth county, Cumberland,[3] was erected by the act of the 27th day of January, 1750, and took from Lancaster all the lands lying within the province to the westward of Susquehanna and northward and westward of the county of York.[4]

The proprietaries, having due regard to the rights of the Indians, would not permit any occupation of lands, either by settlement or grant from the land office, until after the Indian title had become vested in them. At the time of the organization of Cumberland County the natives were yet in possession of all the territory northwest of the Kittatinny Mountain (the northern barrier of the Cumberland Valley) and the Susquehanna River. At a treaty held by order of the king at Albany in the summer of 1754, negotiations for the purchase of the Indian title resulted in the execution, on the 6th day of July in that year, of a deed from the chiefs of the Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga, Seneca, and Tuscarora nations, constituting the confederacy known as the Six Nations, conveying, for the consideration of four hundred pounds lawful money of New York, to Thomas and Richard Penn, "all the lands lying within the said province of Pennsylvania, bounded and limited as follows, namely: Beginning at the Kittochtinny or Blue Hills, on the west branch of Susquehanna River, and thence by the said, a mile above the mouth of a certain creek called Kayarondinhagh; thence northwest and by west as far as the said province of Pennsylvania extends to its western lines or boundaries; thence along the said western line to the south line or boundary of said province; thence by the said south line or boundary to the south side of the said Kittochtinny hills; thence by the south side of said hills to the place of beginning."

Although a few warrants were issued during the year 1755 for lands in the upper part of the valley of the Juniata, and some surveys and improvements were made, there does not seem to have been any division of this territory into townships for some years thereafter. At July sessions in 1767 the Cumberland court fixed the boundaries of DERRY township as follows: "Beginning at the middle of the Long Narrows; thence up the north side of Juniata as far as Jack's Narrows; thence to include the valley of Kishacokulus and Jack's Creek." These boundaries included a part of the present township of Brady.

[2] 1 Smith, 176. [3] Ibid., 201. [4] Ibid., 198.

At October sessions of the same year four additional townships were erected, and were named and bounded as follows:

DUBLIN.—"Bounded by Air and Fannet townships on the one side, and Coleraine and Barre townships on the top of Sideling Hill on the other side."

COLERAINE.—"Bounded by Dublin township, as above, by the provincial line, and the top of Dunning's Mountain (so as to join Cumberland and Bedford townships) to the gap of Morrison's Cove, from thence to the mouth of Yellow Creek (joining Barre township) to strike Sidling Hill."

CUMBERLAND.—"Bounded by Coleraine township (as above), the provincial line to the Allegeney Mountain, and along the top of the Allegeney Mountain to the top of the ridge that divides the waters of Wills Creek; from thence of Juniata to strike Dunning's Mountain through Lun's Gap."

BEDFORD.—"Bounded by the above-mentioned east line and Dunning's Mountain to the gap of Morrison's Cove, and from thence to the top of Tussee's Mountain (joining Barre township) so as to include Morrison's Cove, and from the end of Morrison's Cove cross by Frankstown to the Allegheny."

BARRE.—"Bounded by Dublin, Coleraine, and Bedford townships, as already mentioned, and along the Allegany until a line struck from thence to Jack's Mountain so as to include the waters of Little Juniata and Shaver's and Standing Stone Creeks."

These townships of Derry, Dublin, Coleraine, Cumberland, Bedford, and Barre included all of the area of Bedford, Blair, and Huntingdon, a large part of Fulton and Mifflin, and a part of Centre Counties. It is probable that as the eastern limits of Dublin were not clearly defined, a part of what is now Tell township, Huntingdon Co., may have been included in the previously-erected township of Lack.

Armagh township was created at January sessions, 1770, from a part of Derry, and included all the territory of that township northwest of Jack's Mountain.

The officers of these townships were as follows:

1767.—John Ramsey (Dublin), William Parker (Coleraine), Thomas Coulter (Cumberland), John Cochran (Bedford), John Forsee (Barre), constables.

1768.—Charles Boyle (Dublin), Samuel Anderson (Barre), constables; John Brady, Jacob Hair (Barre), supervisors; George Jackson, Zebulon Moor (Barre), overseers of the poor.

1769.—Robert Ramsey (Dublin), Samuel Anderson (Barre), constables; Zebulon Moor, Robert Caldwell (Barre), supervisors; Benjamin Elliot, Charles Boyle (Dublin), overseers of the poor; James Little, Charles Caldwell (Barre), viewers of fences.

1770.—James Watson (Dublin), John Wilson (Barre), William Brown (Armagh), constables; Samuel Thompson, Daniel Egoe (Barre), James Moor (Armagh), supervisors; Zebulon Moore, Robert Caldwell (Barre), James Reed (Armagh), overseers of the poor; James Little, Charles Caldwell (Barre), viewers of fences.

1771.—William Shirley (Barre), James Foley (Dublin), constables; Samuel Thompson, Daniel Ego (Barre), supervisors; Zebulon Moor, Robert Caldwell (Barre), Charles Boyle, Benjamin Elliot (Dublin), overseers of the poor.

The Indians, after fully realizing the immense stretch of country covered by the bounds set in the treaty of 1754, expressed disappointment and dissatisfaction. They said they did not understand the points of the compass and were thereby deceived. Some of them became allies of the French and commenced a series of depredations upon the frontier settlers.

An accommodation of the differences between the proprietary government and the Indians was effected at a conference held at Easton, where on the 23d day of October, 1758, a deed was executed limiting the boundaries of the purchase as follows, to wit: "Beginning at the Kittochtinny or Blue Hills, on the west bank of the Susquehanna River, and running thence up the said river, and binding therewith, to a mile above the mouth of a creek called Kaarondinhah (or John Penn's Creek); thence northwest and by west to a creek called Buffaloe's Creek; thence west to the east side of the Alleghany or Appalachian Hills; thence along the east side of said hills, binding therewith, to the south line or boundary of the said province; thence by the said south line or boundary to the south side of the Kittatinny Hill; thence by the south side of the said hill to the place of beginning." This deed confirmed the title of the proprietaries to all the lands within the boundaries above mentioned, including the present counties of Bedford, Fulton, Blair, Huntingdon, Mifflin, Juniata, and Perry, and parts of Snyder, Union, and Centre, and released to the Six Nations the residue embraced in the deed of 1754.

By an act passed on the 9th day of March, 1771, Bedford County was erected from Cumberland, and its boundaries fixed as follows: "Beginning where the province line crosses the Tuscarora Mountain, and running along the summit of that mountain to the gap near the head of Path Valley; thence with a north line to the Juniata; thence with the Juniata to the mouth of Shaver's Creek; thence northeast to the line of Berks County; thence along the Berks County line northwestward to the western bounds of the province; thence southward, according to the several courses[1] of the western boundary of the province, to the southwest corner of the province; and from thence eastward with the southern line of the province to the place of beginning."

[1] At one time it was claimed by Virginia that the western boundary should be made parallel with the Delaware River and at the distance of five degrees of longitude therefrom.

This act authorized the Governor to commission a competent number of justices, who, or any three of whom, were empowered to hold courts in the months of January, April, July, and October in every year. With remarkable promptitude a Court of Quarter Sessions was opened at Bedford on the 16th day of April, 1771, by William Proctor, Robert Hanna, William Lockery, Robert Cluggage,[1] George Wilson, and William McConnell. The court then proceeded to divide the county into townships. AIR, DUBLIN, and COLERAINE were to remain as fixed by the Cumberland court. The lines of BEDFORD and CUMBERLAND were extended from the foot to the top of the Allegheny Mountain. BARRÉ to be cut off by Little Juniata and Tussey's Mountain. Brother's Valley, Fairfield, Mount Pleasant, Hemp Field, Pitt, Tyrone, Spring Hill, Ross Straver, Armstrong, and Tullileague follow, but as these townships embraced territory outside of the limits of Huntingdon and Blair they do not concern us now.

At July sessions, 1773, "that part of Barré township including all the waters that empty into the Raystown Branch of Juniata below the mouth of Yellow Creek and up said creek to Tussey's Mountain is hereby erected into a township by the name of Hopewell township."

It will be noticed that the act creating Bedford County excluded from the boundaries therein described that portion of Huntingdon County lying northeast of the Juniata below the mouth of Shaver's Creek, and according to the letter of the law that territory remained in Cumberland County. The act of March 21, 1772, forming Northumberland, took from Bedford the territory lying west of Tussey's Mountain and northeast of the main branch of the Little Juniata to the head thereof.[2] Another act passed the same day[3] for the purpose of explaining and better ascertaining the boundary lines of the county of Bedford, after reciting the boundaries described in the act of the 9th day of March, 1771, and that as "the Tuscarora Mountain does not extend to the province line and the southern boundaries aforesaid are not properly described, the lines of the county of Bedford cannot be known and run by the trustees appointed for that purpose, provided that the lines following, to wit: "Beginning where the province line crosses the North or Blue Mountain, that runs between the Great and Little Coves and that part of Cumberland County called Connegocheague, and thence along the summit of the said mountain to the beginning of the Tuscarora Mountain, and running along the summit of the said Tuscarora Mountain to the gap near the head of the Path Valley, from thence a north line to the Juniata River; thence up the Juniata to the mountain that divides the Kishicocolus Valley from the Standing Stone Valley, and along the summit of that mountain to the head of the Standing Stone Creek; from thence northeast to the line of Berks County; thence by Berks County line to the western bounds of the province; thence southward, according to the several courses of the western boundary of the province, to the southwest corner thereof; and from thence with other boundaries of the province to the place of beginning; shall be, and are hereby declared to be, the boundary lines of the said county of Bedford."

By act of the 26th day of February, 1773, all the territory of Bedford lying west of the Laurel Hill and of the ridge dividing the waters of the Allegheny and Susquehanna to the head of the latter stream, and south of a line to be run thence due west to the limits of the province, was erected into a new county called Westmoreland.[4]

The geography of the valley of the Juniata was not well understood by the framers of the acts of Assembly above recited, and the indefinite and inconsistent descriptions of boundary lines were producing uncertainty and conflict of authority. On the 30th day of September, 1779, an act was passed reciting that,—

"Whereas the act of General Assembly of the province of Pennsylvania entitled An Act for explaining and better ascertaining the boundary lines of the county of Bedford, passed the twenty-first day of March, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-two, and the act passed the same day entituled An Act for erecting a part of the counties of Lancaster, Cumberland, Berks, Northampton, and Bedford into a separate county, are contradictory to each other, and assign different and inconsistent boundaries to the said county of Bedford and the county of Northumberland; and part of the boundary of the said county of Northumberland is, by reason of the course of Little Juniata, near the head thereof, impassable; and that strip of land on the northeast side of Juniata, between Jack's Narrows and Standing Stone Mountain, being separated by large mountains from the rest of Cumberland County, makes it inconvenient for the people residing on the said north-east side of Juniata at the place aforesaid; that the same should continue in the said county of Cumberland: For remedy whereof,—

"Be it enacted, etc., That the lines following, viz.: Beginning where the line (dividing Pennsylvania and Maryland) crosses the north of Blue Mountain that runs between the Great and Little Coves and that part of Cumberland County called Conecocheague, and thence along the summit of the said mountain to the beginning of the Tuscarora Mountain, and running along the summit of the said Tuscarora Mountain to the gap near the head of the Path valley; from thence a north line to the Juniata River; then up the Juniata to Jack's Narrows; thence along the summit of the ridges and mountains which divide the waters falling into the said northeast side of the said Juniata above Jack's Narrows aforesaid, from the waters which fall into the said river below the said Narrows to Tussey's Mountain at the head of the Standing Stone Creek; thence along the summit of Tussey's Mountain to the ridge dividing the waters falling into Bald Eagle Creek from the waters of Little Juniata; thence along the said last-mentioned ridge to the Chestnut Ridge; thence along the Chestnut Ridge to the head of the southwest branch of Bald Eagle Creek; from thence a straight line to the head of Moshannon Creek; thence down Moshannon Creek to the West Branch of Susquehanna; thence up said West Branch to the purchase line run from Kittanning to the said West Branch, to the line of Westmoreland County; thence along the southeast boundary of the said county of Westmoreland, as the same is described in the act erecting the said county of Westmoreland, to the line dividing Pennsylvania from Maryland aforesaid; and thence along the said line last mentioned to the place of beginning."

This act annexed that part of Kishacoquillas Valley now in Brady township, Huntingdon Co., to Bedford

[1] Cluggage resided in Black Log valley, east of Orbisonia.

[2] Smith's Laws, vol. i. p. 367. [3] Ibid., p. 386.

[4] Ibid., p. 407.

County. In 1773, two years after the erection of Bedford County, the lands along the river from Jack's Narrows to the mouth of Mill Creek, and those then taken up in the west end of Kishacoquillas Valley, were taxed in the assessment of Barré township, Cumberland Co., and it is fair to presume that this district remained under the jurisdiction of that county until after the passage of the act of the 30th of September, 1779.

FRANKSTOWN township was created at April sessions, 1775, from parts of Bedford and Barré, and the boundaries fixed as follows: "Along the line dividing Bedford and Northumberland Counties from the West Branch of Susquehanna to where Little Juniata runs through Tussey's Mountain; then along the said mountain to the ridge dividing Morrison's Cove from Croyle's Cove; then along the said ridge to Dunning's Mountain; then along Dunning's Mountain to the dividing ridge between the waters of Dunning's Creek and the southwest branch of Frankstown Branch; then along said ridge to the Allegeny Mountain; then cross the same and by the line of Quemahoning township to the line dividing Bedford and Westmoreland Counties, and by the said line and along the limits of this county to the place of beginning."

This township included the whole of Blair County and the present townships of Morris, Franklin, and Warrior's Mark of Huntingdon County.

HUNTINGDON township was formed from a part of Barré. The records of the court do not contain any account of its erection. At April sessions, 1780, a return of the township officers was made, from which it may be inferred that the township was formed about 1779. Its territory is now divided into Brady, Walker, Porter, and parts of Juniata, Logan, Henderson, and Oneida. The records also fail to give an account of the erection of SHIRLEY township, which was formed from Dublin about the date last mentioned. The earliest assessment of this township was made in 1780, and of Huntingdon in 1781.

TYRONE township was erected from Frankstown, but neither the date nor boundaries appear among the records of the Bedford court. In the proceedings at April sessions, 1787, the name occurs for the first time.

Elections and Election Districts.—A law enacted June 14, 1777, fixed the second Tuesday of October as the day for holding the annual general election. Bedford County was divided into four districts, and the places named at which the elections should be held, as follows: "The freemen of the townships of Bedford, Coleraine, and Cumberland Valley, being the First District, shall hold their elections at the court-house of the said town of Bedford; the freemen of the townships of Bethel, Air, and Dublin, being the Second District, at the house of John Burd, at Fort Littleton; the freemen of the townships of Barré, Hopewell, and Franktown, being the Third District, at the place called the Standing Stone; and the freemen of the townships of Brother's Valley, Turkey Foot, and Quesnachoning, being the Fourth district, at the house of John Kemberline, near the junction of said three townships." Each voter was required to produce a certificate of his having taken and subscribed the oath of allegiance, as prescribed by an act passed the preceding day.

By the act of the 13th day of September, 1785,[1] dividing the several counties into election districts, Bedford County was separated into five districts, and the elections directed to be held as follows: First, the town of Bedford and the townships of Bedford, Coleraine, Providence, and Cumberland Valley, at the court-house in Bedford; Second, the townships of Bethel and Air, at the house of Ephraim Wallace, in Bethel; Third, the townships of Barré, Hopewell, Frankstown, and Huntingdon, at the place called the Standing Stone; Fourth, the townships of Brother's Valley, Quesmahoning, Turkey Foot, and Wilford, at the house of James Black, in Quesmahoning; Fifth, the townships of Dublin and Shirley, at the house of George Cluggage, in Shirley. On the 19th day of September, 1786,[2] a sixth district was created, consisting of the "townships of Frankstown and Morrison's Cove" (?), and the elections directed to be held at the house of Lazarus Lowrey, at Frankstown.

The act of Sept. 27, 1786, fixed the number of representatives to the General Assembly to be elected in Bedford County at three.

The officers of the townships of Bedford County that covered the present territory of Huntingdon and Blair, appointed by the Court of Quarter Sessions, were as follows:

1772.—Thomas Weston (Barree), James Foley, Jr. (Dublin), constables; Samuel Anderson and George Jackson, (Barree) overseers of the poor; John Wilson and James Little, (Barree) supervisors.

1773.—April sessions: Charles Caldwell (Barree), John Bale (Dublin), constables. July sessions: James Little, Jr., appointed in the room of Charles Caldwell.

1774.—March sessions: Philip Stoner (Hopewell), constable. April sessions: James Little (Barree), John Bell (Dublin), Philip Stoner (Hopewell), constables. July sessions: Robert Caldwell, John Thorlton, deputy (Barree), John Latta (Dublin), Philip Stoner (Hopewell), constables; James Little, Michael Cryder (Barree), John Ramsey, James Foley (Dublin), Richard Long, Samuel Thompson (Hopewell), supervisors of the highways.

1775.—Private sessions, March 25: John Mitchell (Barree), John Latta (Dublin), Philip Stoner (Hopewell), constables; Samuel Anderson, Thomas Johnston (Barree), overseers of the poor; James Little, Michael Cryder (Barree), supervisors. General sessions, second Tuesday in April: James Dean (Barree), Samuel Daniel (Dublin), William Phillips (Frankstown), Walter Clark (Hopewell), constables; Samuel Anderson, Thomas Johnston (Barree), Benjamin Sanders, Bastian Shoupe (Hopewell), overseers of the poor; James Little, Michael Cryder (Barree), Michael Whetstone, Peter Hartsock (Hopewell), supervisors.

1776.—Private sessions, March 25: William Barrick (Frankstown), William Smart, Jr. (Hopewell), constables; Absalom Gray, Samuel Jack (Frankstown), Benjamin Saunders, Bastian Shoupe (Hopewell), overseers of the poor; Markem Coleman (Frankstown), Peter Hartsock (Hopewell), supervisors. April sessions: David Lewis (Barree), Samuel Thompson (Dublin), William Smart, Jr. (Hopewell), constables.

[1] Smith, vol. ii. p. 334. [2] Ibid., p. 385.

1777.—Petty sessions, Sept. 27: William Riddle (Barree), John Walker (Dublin), Joseph Cellar (Frankstown), Joshua Davis (Hopewell), constables. General sessions, Oct. 14: William Riddle, of Barree, fined; John Walker, of Dublin, fined thirty shillings; Thomas Anderson, Joshua Davis (Hopewell), Felix Miller, appointed constables.

1778.—General sessions, April 13: William Wilson (Barree), William Winton (Dublin), constables.

1780.—General Sessions, April 11: Robert Wasson (Barree), James Morton (Dublin), Jacob Rowler (Frankstown), Benjamin Sanders (Hopewell), George Reynolds, Isaac Worrill, deputy (Huntingdon), Giles Stevens (Shirley), constables; Alexander McCormick, John Glenn (Barree), Hugh Davison, John Walker (Dublin), Patrick McGuire, David Lowry (Frankstown), William Sherley, Levi Moore (Hopewell), Archibald Fletcher, James Gibson (Huntingdon), James Galbraith, James Cluggage (Shirley), overseers of the poor; James Anderson, Jeremiah Rickets (Barree), James Coil, Esq., John Ramsey (Dublin), Jacob Rowler, Jr., Absalom Gray (Frankstown), Solomon Sell, Hugh Skelly (Hopewell), Ludwick Sells, Joshua Lewis (Huntingdon), Jacob Shara, James Carmichael (Shirley), supervisors of the highways.

1781.—April sessions: David Ralston (Barree), James Barnet (Dublin), Absalom Gray (Frankstown), Ludwick Sells (Huntingdon), George Cluggage (Shirley), constables; Joseph Oburn, Benjamin McGuffey (Barree), Hugh Davidson, John Walker (Dublin), Samuel Rhea, James Johnston (Frankstown), Henry Lloyd, Michael Cryder (Huntingdon), James Galbraith, James Cluggage (Shirley), overseers of the poor; William Nelson, Archibald Glen (Barree), James Coyle, Esq., John Ramsey (Dublin), Urick Heifheit, Edward Beatty (Frankstown), Joseph Prigmore, Moses Donaldson (Huntingdon), James Carmichael, Esq., Jacob Shara (Shirley), supervisors of the highways.

1782.—April sessions: Chain Rickets (Barree), William Justice (Dublin), William Traviss (Huntingdon), Giles Stevens (Shirley), constables; Henry Ferguson, James Carswell (Barree), Hugh Davidson, John Walker (Dublin), Michael Cryder, Henry Lloyd (Huntingdon), overseers of the poor; William McLevy, Alexander McCormick (Barree) James Coil, John Ramsey (Dublin), Joseph Prigmore, Jacob Laird (Huntingdon), supervisors of the highways.

1783.—April sessions: William Long (Barree), James McKee (Dublin), George Jackson (Huntingdon), James Cluggage (Shirley), constables; Benjamin McGoffin (Barree), Hugh Davidson, John Walker (Dublin), Henry Lloyd, Michael Cryder (Huntingdon), James Galbraith, Matthew Patton (Shirley), overseers of the poor; David Ralston, Gilbert Cheny (Barree), John Burd, George Hudson (Dublin), George Reynolds, Samuel Donnel (Huntingdon), John Morgan, Francis Cluggage (Shirley), supervisors of the highways.

1786.—April sessions: Abraham Nelson (Barree), Benjamin Burd (Dublin), Absalom Gray (Frankstown), Solomon Sill (Hopewell), John Biddle (Huntingdon), constables; John Ramsey, Hugh Orlton (Dublin), William Devinny, Thomas McCune (Frankstown), James Hale, Felix Miller (Hopewell), John Fee, Jacob Laird (Huntingdon) overseers of the poor; Robert Ramsey, George Hudson (Dublin) Samuel Davis, Michael Fetter (Frankstown), William Sherley, Hugh Skelly (Hopewell), Henry Neff, George Reynolds (Huntingdon), supervisors of the highways.

1787.—April sessions: William Nelson (Barree), John Ramsey (Dublin), John Bittle (Huntingdon), John Armstrong (Shirley), constables, James Anderson, John Dickey (Barree), James Barnet, Hugh Davison (Dublin), John Fee, George Reynolds (Huntingdon), George Wilson, John Morgan (Shirley), overseers of the poor; John Wilson, James Hannam (Barree), Robert Ramsey, George Hudson (Dublin), Henry Neff, Nathaniel Jarrit (Huntingdon), James Galbraith, William Morris (Shirley), supervisors of the highways.

Among the citizens of that portion of Bedford County now composing Huntingdon and Blair, summoned as grand jurors, were: 1772, July 14th, Michael Cryder; 1780, April 11th, William Shirley; 1781, January sessions, William Simonton, James Foley, and Michael Cryder; 1782, April sessions, Samuel Anderson; July sessions, Samuel Anderson, James Foley, and Moses Donaldson; October sessions, Alexander McConnell; 1786, January sessions, George Ashman and George Cluggage.

The first Court of Quarter Sessions was held at Bedford, April 16, 1771, before "William Proctor, Robert Cluggage, Robert Hanna, George Wilson, William Lockery, and William McConnell, Esqs., justices of our Lord the King, to hear and determine divers felonies and misdemeanors in the said county committed." Twenty-three grand jurors were sworn. Robert Galbraith was enrolled as an attorney. At April sessions, 1773, "John Freeharty, of the grand jury, is fined five shillings for being drunk, and ten shillings for the contempt in so doing while on the duty of that office, and coming into court while in that condition."

At July sessions, 1780, "The Court proceeded to regulate the Price of Labourers, and are of opinion that the same shall be estimated and rated 26 Dollars each Man ℔ Day." October sessions continued at same rate.

Unexplained this would appear extravagant, but it must be borne in mind that the standard of value was the dollar in Continental currency, which had rapidly shrunk in worth as contrasted with specie. When measured by the specie standard, the price of a day's labor was about forty cents. The paper currency of the country depreciated so rapidly in value that it was necessary to establish some rate of exchange, and the General Assembly, by act of April 3, 1781, fixed a scale of depreciation for each month from the beginning of the year 1777 to the end of February, 1781. In July, 1780, it required sixty-four and one-half dollars in paper to equal one dollar in specie.

Among the justices sworn, as appears by the records, were:

1771, April 16, Robert Cluggage; 1773, April 13, Robert Cluggage; 1774, April 13, Robert Cluggage; 1782, Dec. 18, Robert Cluggage; 1773, April 13, William McConnell; 1774, May 12, Henry Lloyd; 1777, September, Robert Galbraith, James Martin; 1779, Jan. 13, James Carmichael, James Coyle; 1779, Feb. 12, Matthew Dean; 1781, April 28, John Canan (commission dated Feb. 3, 1781); 1786, July 20, Thomas Wilson, John Little; 1787, Jan. 22, John Coyle; 1787, June 22, James Coyle.

Persons were recommended for license to keep public-houses as follows:

1773, July sessions, Michael Cryder; 1773, October sessions, Michael Cryder; 1774, October sessions, Michael Cryder, Ludwick Sells; 1778, April sessions, Francis Cluggage; 1781, January sessions, Ludwick Sells; 1781, April sessions, Benjamin Elliot.

Benjamin Elliot was commissioned high sheriff Oct. 31, 1785, and was sworn Dec. 19, 1785.

George Ashman, lieutenant, was sworn Dec. 26, 1780.

CHAPTER IV.

Indian Occupation—Lenni Lenapes—Iroquois—Complaints of Intrusion by the Whites on Unpurchased Lands.

At the time the first European settlements were made in Pennsylvania the soil was occupied by Indians who called themselves Lenni Lenape, or the original people. They were designated by the Europeans Delawares, by reason of their inhabiting the region of country drained by that stream. They were also known as Algonquins. The tradition of this people was that in the far-distant past, in migrating eastward, about the time they reached the Mississippi,[1] they fell in with the Mengwe,[2] who also came from a distant country, and had reached the river farther north. Both nations had the same object in view, the seeking of a new and better country towards the rising sun. Exploring parties sent in advance reported the region east of the river to be inhabited by a people of physique much superior to that of the invaders, and that they dwelt within intrenchments or fortifications. This people, called Allegewi, declined permission to settle in their country, but agreed that the Lenapes and Mengwe might pass through their domain and settle farther eastward. Accordingly the Lenapes began to cross the Namoesi Sipu. Their numbers, for there were thousands of them, so appalled the Allegewi that they withdrew their permission and commenced a savage warfare upon those who had already passed the stream. A conference was held, and the Mengwe, who had been content to remain as spectators, united with their new allies and waged a fierce war against the Allegewi, who, after suffering severe loss, and finding that further resistance would result in extermination, abandoned the country to the conquerers and fled southward. In the conflicts, which continued many years, the Lenapes lost many of their warriors, and they claimed that they were always compelled to bear the brunt of battle, while the Mengwe would hang in the rear.

By slow and easy stages these nations moved farther eastward, still continuing upon terms of friendship, the Lenapes following the streams that ran eastward, while the Mengwe made choice of the lands in the vicinity of the great lakes. The former occupied the country from the Hudson to the Chesapeake Bay, including the shores of the four great rivers, the Hudson, Delaware,[3] Susquehanna, and Potomac, making the Delaware the chief centre of their possessions. In the course of time that portion of the nation that had reached the Atlantic slope became divided into three tribes, to wit: Unamis or Turtle, Unalachtgo or Turkey, Wolf or Minsi, corrupted into Monsey and Muncy. The latter, being the most warlike of the three tribes, dwelt farther inland as a guard against any incursions by the Mengwe, and their possessions, extending southwest from the Hudson to far beyond the Susquehanna, included the valley of the Juniata. These three principal divisions were divided into many subordinate clans or tribes, each assuming a distinct name as circumstance or locality might suggest.

The Mengwe were separated into five principal tribes, — Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas, and Senecas. Growing jealous of their more southern neighbors, and apprehensive of their increasing numbers and power, they endeavored to provoke hostilities between different tribes of the Lenapes. Failing in their designs, some time about the close of the fifteenth century a union of all the tribes in one common bond was effected, and they were afterwards known in history as the Five Nations. By the French they were known as Iroquois, by the Dutch, Maquas, and by the English, Mingoes. They subsequently overmastered the Lenapes and became the dominant power, whether by force of arms, as they claimed, or by dishonorable stratagem, as the Lenapes alleged, it is needless now to inquire. In 1712 the Tuscaroras, who had inhabited the interior of North Carolina and Virginia, were driven therefrom by the Powhattans, a branch of the Lenapes, moved northward, and were adopted by the Iroquois, who were thereafter mentioned by the English as the Six Nations. The language of the five original tribes was practically the same, but different from that of the Lenapes.

The early treaties made by the proprietary government for the purchase of lands from the natives were with the shackamackers or chiefs of tribes of the Delawares. The Five Nations soon appear as claimants for the territory drained by the Susquehanna by right of conquest. In the absence of written records it is difficult to determine the time when the northern confederacy subdued the Lenapes and wrested this part of their domain from them, but from the best accessible data it appears to have occurred between 1677 and 1684.[4] The proprietary government made purchases from both claimants until the right of the Six Nations was acquiesced in by the Delawares. On the 2d of July, 1742, a conference with the chiefs of the Six Nations and the chiefs of the Shawanese was held by the Governor and Council at Philadelphia, and continued for several days. Among the many subjects presented for consideration and adjustment were renewed complaints on the part of the Indians "against some people who are settled at Juniata, a Branch of Sasquehannah, and all along the Banks of that River as Mahaning, and desire that they may be forthwith made to go off the Land, for they do great Damage to our Cousins, the Delawares." The Governor responded that on their former complaints relative to settlers on the Juniata and Sasquehannah,

[1] Called by the Lenapes Namoesi Sipu, or river of fish,—Namoes, a fish; Sipu, a river.

[2] The Iroquois or Five Nations.

[3] This river they called the Lenapewhittuck. Hittuck in their language signified a rapid stream.

[4] Mombert's Lancaster County, p. 23.

"some Magistrates were sent expressly to remove them, and we thought no person would stay after that." The Indian response was, "So far from removing the people, they made Surveys for themselves, and they are in League with the Trespassers. We desire more effectual Methods may be used and honester men employ'd." This the Governor promised to do, and complained to the chiefs that the Delawares were giving some trouble about lands purchased from them about fifty years ago. A few days later, in the presence of Sassonan, a chief of the Delawares, and a number of Indians of that nation from Shamokin and the forks of the Delaware, Canassatego, a chief of the Onondagas, and orator on the occasion, said,—

"BRETHREN, THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL:

"The other day you informed us of the misbehavior of our cousins, the Delawares, with respect to their continuing to claim and refusing to remove from some land on the river Delaware, notwithstanding their ancestors had sold it by deed, under their hands and seals, to the proprietors for a valuable consideration upwards of fifty years ago, and notwithstanding that they themselves had about —— years ago, after a long and full examination, ratified that deed of their ancestors, and given a fresh one under their hands and seals, and then you requested us to remove them, enforcing your request with a string of wampum. Afterwards you laid on the table by Conrad Weiser our own letters, some of our cousins' letters, and several writings to prove the charge against our cousins, with a draught of the land in dispute. We now tell you we have perused all these several papers. We see with our own eyes that they have been a very unruly people, and are altogether in the wrong in their dealings with you. We have concluded to remove them and oblige them to go over the river Delaware, and to quit all claim to any lands on this side for the future, since they have received pay for them and it has gone through their guts long ago. To confirm to you that we will see your requests executed, we lay down this string of wampum in return for yours."

Then turning to the Delawares, holding a belt of wampum in his hand, he spoke to them as follows:

"COUSINS:

"Let this belt of wampum serve to chastise you. You ought to be taken by the hair of the head and shaked severely till you recover your senses and become sober; you don't know what ground you stand on, nor what you are doing. Our Brother Onas' case is very just and plain, and his intentions to preserve friendship; on the other hand your cause is bad, your heart far from being upright, and you are maliciously bent to break the chain of friendship with our Brother Onas. We have seen with our eyes a deed signed by nine of your ancestors above fifty years ago for this very land, and a release signed not many years since by some of yourselves and chiefs now living to the number of fifteen or upwards. But how came you to take upon you to sell land at all? We conquered you, we made women of you,—you know you are women, and can no more sell land than women. Nor is it fit you should have the power of selling lands since you would abuse it. This land that you claim is gone through your guts. You have been furnished with clothes and meat and drink by the goods paid you for it, and now you want it again like children as you are. But what makes you sell land in the dark? Did you ever tell us that you had sold this land? Did we ever receive any part, even the value of a pipe-shank from you for it? You have told us a blind story that you sent a messenger to us to inform us of the sale, but he never came among us, nor we never heard anything about it. This is acting in the dark, and very different from the conduct our Six Nations observe in their sales of land. On such occasions they give public notice and invite all the Indians of their united nations, and give them a share of the present they receive for their lands. This is the behavior of the wise united nations, but we find you are none of our blood. You act a disgraceful part not only in this but in other matters. Your ears are ever open to slanderous reports about our brethren. You receive them with as much greediness as lewd women receive the embrace of bad men. And for all these reasons we charge you to remove instantly. We don't give you liberty to think about it. You are women; take the advice of a wise man and remove immediately. You may return to the other side of Delaware, where you came from, but we don't know whether, considering how you have demeaned yourselves, you will be permitted to live there, or whether you have not swallowed that land down your throats as well as the land on this side. We, therefore, assign you two places to go, either to Wyoming or Shamokin. You may go to either of these places, and then we shall have you more under our eye, and shall see how you behave. Don't deliberate, but remove away and take this belt of wampum."

This incisive speech was interpreted by Conrad Weiser into English, and by Cornelius Spring into the Delaware language, when Canassatego, taking a string of wampum, added,—

"After our just reproof and absolute order to depart from the land, you are now to take notice of what we have further to say to you. This string of wampum serves to forbid you, your children, and grandchildren, to the latest posterity, for ever meddling in land affairs; neither you nor any who shall descend from you are ever hereafter to presume to sell any land, for which purpose you are to preserve this string in memory of what your uncles have this day given you in charge. We have some other business to transact with our brethren, and therefore depart the council and consider what has been said to you."

CHAPTER V.

The Murder of John Armstrong, an Indian Trader, and his Companions.

JOHN, familiarly called "Jack," Armstrong, an Indian trader, and his two companions, James Smith and Woodworth Arnold, were murdered by three Delaware Indians at the Narrows, above the borough of Mount Union, about the middle of February, 1744. This event, which spread alarm and consternation among the frontier settlers and the traders, gave name to the narrow gorge through which the Juniata breaks its winding course. Jack's Narrows are known to every traveler who has wended his way through the narrow defile. "Jack's Spring" is celebrated for its cool, silvery water.

The following deposition communicates the first authentic intelligence of the murders:

"PAXTON, April 19th, 1744.

"The Deposition of the Subscribers Testifieth and Saith that the Subscribers having a Suspicion that John Armstrong, Trader, Together with his Men, James Smith & Woodworth Arnold were Murther'd by ye Indians. They met at the House of Joseph Chambers in Paxton, and there consulted to go to Shamokin, To Consult with the Delaware King & Secalima[1] & their Council, what they should do Concerning the Affaire. Whereupon the King & Councel Ordered Eight of their men to go with the depts. to the House of James Berry, in order to go in Quest of the Murther'd persons; but that Night they came to said Berry's House, three of the Eight Indians ran away, and the next Morning these Depts, Together wth ye five Indians that remained, Set on their Journey Peaceably to the last Supposed sleeping place of the Deceased, and upon their Arrival, these Depts. dispersed themselves in Order to find out the Corps of the deceased, & one of the Depts. Named James Berry, a Small Distance from the aforesd sleeping Place Came, came to a White Oak Tree which had three Knotches on it, & close by sd Tree he found a Shoulder Bone, (which these Depts. does Supose. to be John Armstrong's, And that he himself was Eating by the Indians) which he carried to the aforesd sleeping place and Showed to his Companions, one of which handed it to the sd five Indians to know what bone it was, & they, after passing different sentiments upon it, handed it to a Delaware Indian who was Suspected by the Dep^ts, and they Testify and Say, that as soon as the s^d Indian took the bone in his hand, his Nose Gushed out with Blood, and he directly handed it to Another, from whence these Dep^ts steered along a path about three or four Miles to the Narrows of Juniata, where they Suspected the Murther to be Comited, and where the Allegany Road Crosses the Creek. These Dep^ts Sat Down in Order to Consult on what Measures to take in order to proceed on a Discovery, Whereupon most of the White Men, These Dep^ts Cros^t the Creek again, And went down the Creek and Crost into an Island where these Dep^ts had had Intelligence the Corps had been Throwne; And There they Met the rest of the White Men & Indians who was in Company, and there Consulted to go further down the Creek in Quest of the Corps, & These Dep^ts Further saith, they Ordered the Indians to go down the Creek on the Other side, but they all followed these Dep^ts at a Small distance, except one Indian who Cros't the Creek again, & Soon After these Dep^ts Seeing Some Bawld Eagles and other Fowles, Suspected the Corps to be thereab^ts, and thereab^ts lost Sight of the Indians, & Immediately found one of the Corps, w^ch these dep^ts says was the Corps of James Smith, one of s^d Armstrong's Men, And Directly upon finding the Corps, these Dep^ts heard three Shotts of Guns, which they had great Reason to Think was the Indians, their Companions, who had deserted from them, and in order to let him know they had found the Corps, these dep^ts fired three Guns, but to no purpose, for they Never saw the Indians any More, and Abt Quarter of a Mile farther down the Creek, they Saw More Bawled Eagles, whereupon they made down towards the Place, where they found another Corps, (being the Corps of Woodworth Arnold, the other Serv^t of s^d John Armstrong) lying on a rock, and then Went to the Former Sleeping place, where they had Appointed to meet the Indians, but Saw no Indians, only that the Indians had been there & Cooked Some Victuals for themselves and had gone off. And that Night these Dep^ts further says they had great Reason to suspect that the Indians was then Thereab^t, and intended to do them some Damages, for a Dog these Dep^ts had with them Barking that Night, which was remarkable, for the s^d Dog had not Barked all the time they was out till that Night, nor never since, which Occasioned these Dep^ts to stand upon their Guard behind Trees, with their Guns Cock'd that Night. Next Morning these Dep^ts went back to the Corps, which they found to be Barbarously and Inhumanly Murthered by Very Gastly and deep cuts on their Heads with a Tomahawk or such Like Weapon, which had sunk into their Sculs & Brains, & in one of s^d Corps there appears a hole in his scul near the cut, which was supposed to be with a Tomahawk, which these Dep^ts does believe to be a Bullet hole. And these Dep^ts after taking as particular a View of the Corps as their Melancholy Condition would admit, they buried them as decently as their circumstances would allow, and returned home to Paxton, the Allegany road to John Harris^s, Thinking it Dangerous to return the same Way they went out; and Further These Deponents saith not.

[1] The name of this chief of the Six Nations is variously spelled, according to the fancy of the writer. By some it has been written Shikellimo, others Shick Calamy, etc.

"These s^d Depp^ts being legally qualified before me, James Armstrong, one of his Majesties Justices of the Peace for the County of Lancaster, have hereunto set their hands in Testimony Thereof.

"JAS. ARMSTRONG.

"ALEXD^R ARMSTRONG.
"THOMAS McKEE.
his
"FRANCES ✕ ELLIS. mark
"JOHN FFORSTER.
his
"WILLIAM ✕ BASKINS.
mark
his
"JAMES ✕ BERRY. mark
"JOHN WATT.
"JA^S. ARMSTRONG.
"DAVID DENNY."

Thomas Cookson wrote to the Governor from Lancaster, under date of April 22d, informing him that John Mussemelin and John, son of Neshalleeny, both Delaware Indians, were adjudged at a council held by Shickalamy and other natives at Shamokin guilty of the murders, and were sent under guard to be delivered to justice. Neshalleeny's son escaped, but Mussemelin had been delivered and placed in jail. He stated that the prisoner confessed the crime, and gives his version of the circumstances. This letter was laid before the Council on the 25th, and directions given that Conrad Weiser should be immediately dispatched to the chiefs of the Delawares at Shamokin to make peremptory demand for the delivery of the other murderers, and that Shickalamy and the Indians there shall make immediate search for the goods of the deceased, in order that they may be put into the hands of his brother for the satisfaction of his creditors or the support of his family.

Alexander, brother of John Armstrong, the murdered trader, wrote to the Indians as follows:

"TO ALIMOPPUS, KING OF THE DELAWARES:

"GREAT SIR,—As a parcel of your men have murdered my brother and two of his men, I write to you, knowing you to be a king of Justice, that you will send us in all the murderers and the men that was with them, as I looked for the Corps of my murdered brother, for that reason your men threaten my life, and I cannot live in my house: now as we have no inclination or mind to go to war with you, our friends, as a friend I desire that you will keep your men from doing me harm, and also send the murderers and the Companions. I Expect an Answer, and am your much hurted friend and brother,

"ALEXANDER ARMSTRONG.

"April ye 25^th, 1744.
"we have sent
"John Mashamelen
"to Goal."

"TO SICALAMOUS, THE KING'S GREAT COUNCELLOR:

"MY GREAT FRIEND,—I write to you as you are a man that I hope will do your friends good; now, my brother is murdered, and his men, by the Delawares; I desire that you will send us all the murderers and the men that Joyned with them, and as we do not want to fall out or quarrel with you without you make us do it, I desire that you will Endeavour to send us all your men that are guilty of the murder, and the men that Joyned with them.

"I am your hurted friend and brother,

"ALEXANDER ARMSTRONG.

"April ye 25^th, 1744.

"We have sent John Mashamelen to Goal, and he says that the Nishalenerd's son killed Smith, and he is not willing to die till the rest are brought in to him."

The superscription of the letter was,—

"To Sicalamus, the great Councellor for the Mingoes."

Conrad Weiser, upon whom the government always relied as a mediator and pacificator in troubles with the natives, in a letter to Richard Peters, from "Tulpehokin, April 26, 1744," giving an account of some other business, congratulated himself that by his absence from home he was spared the duty of interceding on behalf of the Indians with the government. But before his letter was forwarded he received one from the Governor, dated the 26th, containing the instructions of the Council, and acknowledging the same in a postscript of the 28th, prepared to set out on the next morning for Shamokin. Peters' to Weiser was dated Philadelphia, April 26th, and was sent by special messenger.

On the 2d of May, Weiser delivered his message at Shamokin to Olumapies, the Delaware chief, and the rest of the Delaware Indians, in the presence of Shick Calamy and a few others of the Six Nations. Olumapies, in the presence of the Indians named, thus responded:

"BROTHER, THE GOVERNOR:

"It is true that we, the Delaware Indians, by the instigation of the Evil Spirit, have Murdered James (John) Armstrong and his Men. We have transgressed, and we are ashamed to look up. We have taken the Murderer and delivered him to the Relations of the Deceased, to be dealt with according to his works.

"BROTHER, THE GOVERNOR:

"Your demand for the goods is very just. We have gathered some of them. We will do the utmost of what we can to find them all. We do not doubt but we can find the most part, and whatever is wanting we will make up in Skins, which is what the Goods are sent for to the Woods.

"BROTHER, THE GOVERNOR:

"The dead Bodies are Buried; it is certain that John Armstrong was buried by the Murderer, and the other two by those that searched for them. Our Hearts are in Mourning, and we are in a dismal condition and cannot say anything at present."

Shick Calamy, on behalf of the Six Nations, then said,—

"BROTHER, THE GOVERNOR:

"We have been all misinformed on both sides about the unhappy accident. Mussemelin has certainly murdered the three white men himself, and upon his bare accusation of Neshaleeny's son, which was nothing but spite, the said Neshaleeny's son was seized and made a prisoner. Our cousins, the Delaware Indians, being then drunk, in particular Olumapies, never examined things, but made an innocent person prisoner, which gave a great deal of disturbance amongst us. However, the two prisoners were sent, and by the way in going down the river they stopped at the house of James Berry. James told the young man, 'I am sorry to see you in such a condition. I have known you from a boy, and always loved you.' Then the young man seemed to be very much struck to the heart, and said, 'I have said nothing yet, but now I will tell all; let the Indians come in, and the white people also; they shall hear it.' And then told Mussemeelin, in the presence of all the people,—

"'Now I am going to die for your wickedness. You have killed all the three white men. I never did intend to kill any of them.' Then Mussemeelin in anger said, 'It is true I have killed them. I am a man, you are a coward; it is a great satisfaction to me to have killed them. I will die with joy for having killed a great rogue and his companions.' Upon which the young man was set at liberty by the Indians. We desire, therefore, our brother, the Governor, will not insist to have either of the two young men in prison or condemned to die. It it is not with the Indians as with white people to put people in prison on suspicion or for trifles. Indians must be first found guilty of a crime, then judgment is given and immediately executed. We will give you faithfully all the particulars, and at the ensuing treaty entirely satisfy you; in the mean time we desire that good friendship and harmony may continue, and that we may live long together is the hearty desire of your brethren, the Indians of the United Six Nations, present at Shamokin."

The following is what Shick Calamy declared to be the truth of the story concerning the murder of John Armstrong, Woodworth Arnold, and James Smith, from the beginning to the end, to wit:

"That Mussemeelin owing some skins to John Armstrong, the said Armstrong seized a horse of the said Mussemeelin and a rifled gun; the gun was taken by James Smith, deceased. Some time last winter Mussemeelin met Armstrong on the river Juniata and paid to about twenty shillings, for which he offered a neck-belt in pawn to Armstrong, and demanded his horse, and James [John?] Armstrong refused it and would not deliver up the horse, but enlarged the debt, as his usual custom was, and after some quarrel the Indian went away in great anger without his horse to his hunting-cabin. Some time after this Armstrong with his two companions, on their way to Ohio, passed by Mussemeelin's hunting-cabin; his wife only being at home demanded the horse of Armstrong, because he was her proper goods, but did not get him, Armstrong had by this time sold or lent the horse to James Berry. After Mussemeelin came from hunting, his wife told him that Armstrong was gone by, and that she demanded the horse of him, but did not get him; and, as is thought, pressed him to pursue and take revenge of Armstrong. The third day in the morning after James Armstrong was gone by, Mussemeelin said to two young men that hunted with him, 'Come, let us go toward the Great Hills to hunt bears;' accordingly they went all three in company. After they had gone a good way Mussemeelin, who was foremost, was told by the two young men that they were out of their course. 'Come you along,' said Mussemeelin, and they accordingly followed him till they came to the path that leads to Ohio.[1] Then Mussemeelin told them he had a good mind to go and fetch his horse back from Armstrong, and desired the two young men to come along; accordingly they went. It was almost night, and they traveled till next morning. Mussemeelin said, 'Now they are not far off. We will make ourselves black; then they will be frightened and will deliver up the horse immediately, and I will tell Jack that if he don't give me the horse I will kill him;' and when he said so he laughed. The young men thought he joked, as he used to do. They did not blacken themselves, but he did. When the sun was above the trees, or about an hour high, they all came to the fire, where they found James Smith sitting, and they also sat down. Mussemeelin asked where Jack was. Smith told him he was gone to clear the road a little. Mussemeelin said he wanted to speak with him, and went that way; and after he had gone a little distance from the fire he said something and looked back, laughing, but he having a thick throat and his speech being very bad, and their talking with Smith, hindered them from understanding what he said, they did not mind it. They being hungry, Smith told them to kill some turtles, of which there were plenty, and we would take some bread, and by and by they would all eat together. While they were talking they heard a gun go off not far off, at which time Woodward Arnold was killed, as they learned afterward. Soon after Mussemeelin came back and said, 'Why did you not kill that white man according as I bid you? I have laid the other two down.' At this they were surprised, and one of the young men, commonly called Jimmy, ran away to the river side. Mussemeelin said to the other, 'How will you do to kill Catawbas, if you cannot kill white men? You coward, I'll show you how you must do,' and then taking up the English axe that lay there, he struck it three times into Smith's head before he died. Smith never stirred. Then he told the young Indian to call the other, but he was so terrified he could not call. Mussemeelin then went and fetched him, and said to him that two of the white men were killed, he must now go and kill the third, then each of them would have killed one. But neither of them dared venture to talk anything about it. Then he pressed them to go along with him; he went foremost. Then one of the young men told the other as they went along, 'My friend, don't you kill any of the white people; let him do what he will; I have not killed Smith; he has done it himself; we have no need to do such a barbarous thing.' Mussemeelin being then a good way before them in a hurry, they soon saw John Armstrong sitting upon an old log. Mussemeelin spoke to him and said, 'Where is my horse?' Armstrong made answer, and said, 'He will come by and by; you shall have him.' 'I want him now,' said Mussemeelin. Armstrong answered, 'You shall have him. Come, let us go to that fire (which was at some distance from the place where Armstrong sat), and let us smoke and talk together.' 'Go along then,' said Mussemeelin. 'I am coming,' said Armstrong; 'do you go before Mussemeelin, do you go foremost.' Armstrong looked then like a dead man, and went toward the fire, and was immediately shot in his back by Mussemeelin, and fell. Mussemeelin then took his hatchet and struck it into Armstrong's head and said, 'Give me my horse, I tell you.' By this time one of the young men who had fled again that had gone away before, but he returned in a short time. Mussemeelin then told the young men they must not offer to discover or tell a word about what had been done for their lives, but they must help him to bury Jack, and the other two were to be thrown into the river. After that was done Mussemeelin ordered them to load the horses and follow him toward the hill where they intended to hide the goods. Accordingly they did, and as they were going Mussemeelin told them that there were a great many Indians hunting about that place, if they should happen to meet with any they must be killed to prevent their betraying them. As they went along, Mussemeelin going before, the two young men agreed to run away as soon as they could meet with any Indians, and not hurt anybody. They came to the desired place; the horses were unloaded, and Mussemeelin opened the bundles and offered the two young men each a parcel of goods. They told him as they had already sold their skins, and everybody knew they had nothing, they would certainly be charged with a black action were they to bring any goods to the town, and therefore they would not accept any, but promised, nevertheless, not to betray him. 'Now,' says Mussemeelin, 'I know what you were talking about when you strayed so far behind. You have agreed to betray me, but you shall fare like the white men if you intend to hurt me.'

[1] The path, trail, or traders' road, leading via Aughwick and Standing Stone.

"The two young men being in great danger of losing their lives, of which they had been much afraid all that day, accepted of what he offered to them, and the rest of the goods they put in a heap, and covered them from the rain, and then went to their hunting-cabin. Mussemeelin unexpectedly finding two or three more Indians there, laid down his goods, and said he had killed Jack Armstrong and taken pay for his horse, and should any of them discover it, that person he would likewise kill, but otherwise they might take a part of the goods. The young man called Jimmy went away to Shamokin, after Mussemeelin went to bury the goods, with three more Indians with whom he had prevailed. One of them was Neshaleeny's son, whom he had ordered to kill James Smith, but these Indians would not have any of the goods. Some time after the young Indian had been in Shamokin it was whispered about that some of the Delaware Indians had killed Armstrong and his men. A drunken Indian came to one of the Tudolous houses at night, and told the man of the house that he could tell him a piece of bad news. 'What is that?' said the other. The drunken man said, 'Some of our Delaware Indians have killed Armstrong and his men, which, if our chiefs should not resent and take them up, I will kill them myself, to prevent a disturbance between us and the white people, our brethren.' Next morning Shick Calamy and some other Indians of the Delawares were called to assist Olumapies in council. Then Shick Calamy and Olumapies got one of the Tridolow Indians to write a letter to me to desire me to come to Shamokin in all haste, that the Indians were very much dissatisfied in mind. This letter was brought to my house by four Delaware Indians, sent express, but I was then in Philadelphia, and when I came home and found no particulars mentioned in the letter, and that none of the Indians of the Six Nations had been down, I did not care to meddle with Delaware Indian's affairs, and stayed at home till I received the government's orders to go, which was about two weeks after. Olumapies was advised by his council to employ a conjuror, or ker, as they call it, to find out the murderer. Accordingly he did, and the Indians met. The seer, being busy all night, told them in the morning to examine such and such a one, that they were present when Armstrong was killed, naming the two young men. Mussemeelin was present. Accordingly, Olumapies, Quitheyquent, and Thomas Green, an Indian, went to him that had fled first and examined him. He told the whole story very freely. They then went to the other, but he would not say a word, but went away and left them. The three Indians returned to Shick Calamy and informed them of what discovery they had made, when it was agreed to secure the murderers, and deliver them up to the white people. Then a great noise arose among the Delaware Indians, and some were afraid of their lives, and went into the woods. Not one cared to meddle with Mussemeelin and the other that could not be prevailed on to discover anything, because of the resentment of their families, but they being pressed by Shick Calamy's sons to secure the murderers, otherwise they would be cut off from the chain of friendship, four or five of the Delawares made Mussemeelin and the other young man prisoners, and tied them both. They lay twenty-four hours, and none would venture to conduct them down, because of the great division among the Delaware Indians, and Olumapies, in danger of being killed, fled to Shick Calamy, and begged his protection. At last Shick Calamy's son Jack went to the Delawares, most of them being drunk, as they had been for several days, and told them to deliver the prisoners to Alexander Armstrong, and if they were afraid to do it, they might separate their heads from their bodies and lay them in the canoe and carry them to Alexander, to roast and eat them. That would satisfy his revenge, as he wants to eat Indians. They prevailed with the said Jack to assist them, and accordingly he and his brother and some of the Delawares went with two canoes and carried them off."

Weiser, in his capacity as mediator between the government and the Indians, had good opportunity of judging the disposition of the different races and their inclination to deal justly with each other. He did not conceal his conviction that the red man of the forest had been unfairly treated. In a letter to Secretary Peters, dated June 21, 1747, he said,—

"I have informed the government several times of the mischief some of our people from time to time did to the poor Indians, but I don't remember that ever anything effectually was done for their relief. I desire you to press it on the council, in the best manner you can, to order the Indians justice done in their complaint, that they may be satisfied of our true and upright heart towards them, according to what we promise in public treaties. I shall be sick of Indian affairs if no medium is found to do them justice. It may happen that some of our people may be served as J. A. was, which is the only resentment the Indians use when once satisfied that they have to deal with a rogue and can't get other satisfaction. Let such grievances be redressed out of the public stock at this critical time, rather than suffer the Indians to be wronged, if no other medium can be found. I assure you, sir, I find it very hard sometimes to excuse the government, and must hear words entirely disagreeable. I am satisfied the Indians have just reason to complain at the behavior of some of our people."

At a conference held by Weiser with Shick Calamy and a number of other Indians, whom he had met at Chambers' Mill, in Pextang, in June, 1747, before the above letter was written, they made special complaint against James Dunning and John Powel, traders, for stealing property from a Delaware Indian, a sober, quiet, and good-natured man. The accusation against Dunning was for stealing forty-seven deer-skins and three horses (or mares) upon the heads of Joniady (Juniata) River, while that against Powel was for stealing two bundles of skins from the same Indian when he was in pursuit of Dunning. The Indian had sent the skins down the Juniata with his brother, giving him instructions to leave them on "the Island," at the house of another Indian. The brother went to Powel's house, and there took sick and died. Powel took the skins from the island, and it was claimed that he stole them. Powel was also charged with keeping a gun that had been pawned with him by these two Indians after the debt to him had been paid. Weiser, when writing to Secretary Peters, on the 14th of July, says he would be glad to hear what the Council proposes to do about the complaints against these two traders, and adds,—

"Shickelimy was very much concerned about it, and did want an answer. He is afraid that no good will come from it if the Council don't find a remedy for the Indian's loss. I for my part am fully satisfied the Indian's complaint is just in the mean (main), let the particulars fall out as they will. When an Indian in his own judgment thinks himself wronged by some body, more especially by the white people, he will never forgive, and he is apt to revenge himself, and urged to do it by his country people. John Armstrong, the poor man, had warning sufficient to persuade him to due the Indians justice, but Covetnous prevented him. At last he pay'd to dear for his faults. Our people are apt to for get such Exempels."

Again, under date of July 20th, Weiser urges in a letter to Secretary Peters that the Indians must have satisfaction made for private injuries inflicted upon them; if in no other way, they should be recompensed from the public treasury, and more than hints that they are not dealt with according to the letter and spirit of the public treaties. He says it is difficult to arrive at the truth in private quarrels between the "white and the brown people, for the former will outswear the very Devil, and the oath of the latter is not good in our laws."

Governor Thomas communicated in his message to the Assembly May 18, 1744, official notification of the arrest and imprisonment of the murderer of Armstrong and his men, and at a treaty held at Lancaster in June with the deputies of the Onondagas, Senecas, Cayugas, Oneidas, and Tuscaroras he referred to the murder, and was responded to by Canassetego on behalf of the Six Nations. From his personal intercourse with the Indian chiefs and the statements of Conrad Weiser, the Governor was convinced that the Indian complaints against the traders and others were well founded, and in a message to the Assembly on the 31st of July said,—

"I cannot but be apprehensive that the Indian trade as it is now carried on will involve us in some fatal quarrel with the Indians. Our traders, in defiance of the law, carry spirituous liquors amongst them, and take advantage of their inordinate [appetite] for it to cheat them out of their skins and their wampum, which is their money, and often to debauch their wives into the bargain. Is it to be wondered at then if when they recover from the drunken fit they should take severe revenges? I shall do all that lies in my power to prevent these abuses by ordering a strict observance of the law relating to licenses, and the rigid prosecutions against such as shall be discovered to sell rum to the Indians. But I am sensible these will avail but little, the ill practices of these people being carried on in the woods, and at such a distance from the seat of government that it would be very difficult to get evidence to convict them. If I am rightly informed, the like abuses of the traders in New England were the principal causes of the Indian wars there, and at length obliged the government to take the trade into its own hands. This is a matter that well deserves your attention, and perhaps will soon require your imitation."

CHAPTER VI.

The Original Inhabitants of the Juniata Valley—Unlawful Intrusions upon their Lands—Efforts of the Government to restrain the Intruders.

THE Indians found in the valley of the Juniata by the white pioneers were Monseys and Conoys of the Lenape nation, Nanticokes of the same original stock, Shawnees and Tuscaroras. Some Mingoes of the Iroquois nation made their home afterwards for some time in Kishacoquillas Valley. In an account dated in 1731, appended to the depositions of Jonah Davenport and James Le Tort, Indian traders, mention is made of Indian towns on the river as follows:

Ohesson, upon Choniata, distant from Susquehanna sixty miles. Shawanese. Twenty families and sixty men. Kissikahquelas.

Assunnepahla, upon Choniata, distant about one hundred miles by water and fifty by land from Ohesson. Delawares. Twelve families and thirty-six men.

Trading-posts had been fixed at an early day in the valley, where goods were bartered with the natives for furs and skins, but settlements could not be lawfully made prior to the extinction of the Indian title by the treaty of 1754. Notwithstanding the fact that before the treaty the lands were expressly withheld from occupancy by the whites, they, regardless of treaty stipulations and the reserved rights of the aborigines, pushed forward beyond the purchase-lines, and began settlements here and there as inclination led or choice lands and abundance of game attracted them. The first complaint by the Indians about intrusions upon unpurchased lands in this valley is described in the following paragraphs.

At a meeting of the proprietary, Thomas Penn, the Lieutenant-Governor, and members of the Provincial Council, with Shekallamy, a chief, and Indians of the Six Nations, held at Philadelphia on the 19th day of June, 1733, through the interpreter, Conrad Weiser, Shekallamy, after disposing of other items of his mission, asked "Whether the proprietor had heard of a letter which he and Sassoonan sent to John Harris, to desire him to desist from making a plantation at the mouth of Choniata, where Harris has built a house and is clearing fields."

They were told that Harris had only built that home for carrying on his trade; that his plantation, on which he has houses, barns, etc., at Pextan, is his place of dwelling, and it is not to be supposed he will remove from thence; that he has no warrant or order for making a settlement at Choniata.

Shekallamy said that though Harris may have built a house for the conveniency of his trade, yet he ought not to clear fields.

To this it was answered that Harris had probably cleared as much land only as would be sufficient to raise corn for his horses. Shekallamy said, "He had no ill to John Harris, it is not his custom to bear any man ill will, but he is afraid that the warriors of the Six Nations, when they pass that way, may take it ill to see a Settlement made on lands which they have always desired to be kept free from any persons settling on." He was told in answer that care should be taken to give the necessary orders in it.

John Harris, father of the founder of Harrisburg, was a native of Yorkshire, England, and settled on the bank of the Susquehanna some time before the year 1726. He carried on an extensive trade with the neighboring Indian tribes, bartering his merchandise for furs and skins. In the pursuit of his business he appeared to have established a branch trading-house at the mouth of Choniata, of which encroachment the ever sensitive aborigines uttered the complaints detailed in the above paragraphs.

Conrad Weiser, who appears as interpreter for the Indians at the meeting on the 19th of June, and who subsequently became an active and valuable intercessor between them and the whites, was born in Germany in 1696, but at an early age emigrated to America, and settled about the year 1714. His numerous letters, interspersed in our records and archives, indicate him to have been a man of unusual acuteness, thorough knowledge of Indian character, and strictly upright in the business committed to him. His place of residence was in what is now Berks County, and the inscription of his letters written when at home, "TULPYHOCKIN," indicates that it was at or near the creek bearing that name. He was the grandfather of Rev. H. A. Muhlenberg, once minister to Austria.

Weiser is first noticed as an interpreter at a meeting of the Council held at Philadelphia, Dec. 10, 1731, to which he accompanied Shekallamy and another Indian, messengers sent to the Six Nations.[1]

[1] Col. Rec., iii. 425.

A part of the business of the chiefs of the Six Nations at the conference of 1742, which began on the 30th day of June,[1] had reference to the consideration for releasing their claim to all the land in the province on both sides of the river Susquehanna lying eastward of the Endless Hills, called by the Delawares the "Kekkachtananin Hills."[2]

The Indians having at a previous meeting received payment for the lands lying eastward of the Susquehanna, the goods delivered on this occasion were for the lands on the west of that river.

Rude and uneducated as the Indians were, they were not insensible of the value of their lands nor ignorant of the fact that the goods received in exchange therefor were either tawdry finery or articles of little use and soon destroyed or consumed. Canassatego, an Onondaga chief, on this occasion said, "We know our Lands are now become more Valuable; the white People think we don't know their Value, but we are sensible that the Land is Everlasting, and the few Goods we receive for it are soon Worn out and Gone; for the future, we will sell no lands but when Brother Onas [Penn] is in the Country, and we will know beforehand the Quantity of Goods we are to receive." (Col. Rec., iv. 570.)

The whites still persisted in their desire to push their settlements westward, probably for the double purpose of seeking game and securing good soil for cultivation. In the same speech from which we have made the last extract, Canassatego, in speaking of the lands westward of the Endless Hills, thus complains: "Your People daily settle on these Lands and spoil our Hunting. We must insist on your removing them, as you know they have no right to the Northward of Kittochtinny Hills."

In these transactions the duplicity and greediness of the white man are prominently exhibited, and the Indians—sole and rightful proprietors of the soil—set examples of truthfulness and integrity which the European intruders might have imitated with credit to themselves. They are already aware that however justly the proprietaries and their officers deal with them, and desire to restrain the incursions of the whites into their territory in quest of game or for the purpose of settlement, the government is either too weak or not inclined to protect them and their rights, and that soon they will be driven from their domain by the advancing column of civilization. And this work to be accomplished by the formality of a deed, in exchange for which they will receive a few worthless trinkets, or by the gradual and certain increase of settlers on the frontier who restrict the limits and assist in the destruction of game, their only means of subsistence. Need we be surprised then to learn of some atrocious act committed by the red man upon the whites when they are daily harassed by settlers and traders coming uninvited among them and dealing out potions of poisonous rum, defrauding them in trade, and occupying their lands?

In compliance with the request of the Indians the following proclamation was issued:

"By the Honorable GEORGE THOMAS, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania, and the Counties of New-Castle, Kent, and Sussex upon Delaware,

"A PROCLAMATION.

"WHEREAS, by the express Orders of the Hon., the Proprietaries, no Warrant or License has issued out of the Land-office for taking up or settling any Land in the county of Lancaster, to the Westward of the Kittochtinny Hills, otherwise called the Endless or Blue Mountains, so that all such as have presumed to possess themselves of any Lands there are manifest Intruders, and as such liable by the Laws to be removed, and, in Case of refusal, to be committed to Prison and severely fined. AND WHEREAS, the Indians, at the Treaty made with them in the month of July last, did complain that they were greatly disturbed and injured by the Peoples settling at Juniata and in other parts of the county of Lancaster to the Westward of those Hills, and became earnest Petitioners that all such persons might be made to remove from thence, I, favoring the request of the said Indians, and to the End that all persons concerned may have sufficient Notice of the Dangers they incur from their resentment, and the Violation of the Laws, Have thought fit to issue this my Proclamation, hereby strictly requiring all persons who have presumed to possess themselves of any Lands situate in the places aforesaid, or in any part of the said county of Lancaster, to the westward of the aforesaid Ridge of Mountains, or who have seated themselves on any tracts appropriated to the use of the Indians on this side of those Hills, forthwith to leave their possessions, and remove off them with their Families and Effects, as they will answer the contrary at their highest Peril. And as by reason of the approaching Winter, some may not be able to provide themselves with fit Habitations or with the Necessaries of Life, if they should be compell'd immediately to leave their Houses and Plantations, the Removal of such as are in these Circumstances is respited to the first Day of May next, the longest time that will be allowed any one to continue in the possession of any lands so situate as aforesaid. AND I DO hereby require the sheriff of Lancaster county to publish this Proclamation at the Court-House of the said county, and to cause Copy's thereof to be affixed at the most publick places, and particularly at Juniata, and from thence all along on the Banks of the River Susquehanna to Wyomen, and at Licking Creek Hills, near the River Patowmeck, that none may pretend Ignorance thereof.

"Given at PHILADELPHIA, under my Hand and the Great Seal of the said Province, the Fifth Day of October, 1742, in the Sixteenth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland, KING, Defender of the Faith, etc.

"GEORGE THOMAS.

"GOD save the King!"

The provincial government doubtless honestly desired to comply with the demands of the Indians, and to carry out in good faith the mutual contract made with them, but the cupidity of the daring white pioneer impelled him to pay little heed to the proclamation, or to his own personal safety in resisting its commands. At a council at Shamokin, held April 9, 1743, the orator on the part of the Indians, in addressing "Brother Onas," through Conrad Weiser, said,—

[1] Col. Records, vol. iv. pp. 559, etc.

[2] Indian deed dated 11th October, 1736. This deed has been styled a pre-emption deed, and is recorded in the city of Philadelphia, in Book G., vol. v. p. 277, etc. It was executed by the sachems or chiefs of the Five Nations, to wit, Onondagoes, Senekaes, Oneydas, Tuskaroras, and Cayoogoes, and granted and confirmed unto John, Thomas, and Richard Penn all the "River Susquehannah, with the Land lying on both sides thereof, to Extend Eastward as far as the heads of the Branches or Springs which run into the said Susquehannah, And all the lands lying on the West side of the said River to the setting of the Sun, and to extend from the mouth of the said River Northward up the same to the Hills or mountains called in the language of the said Nations the Tyannuntasacta, or Endless Hills, and by the Delaware Indians the Kekkachtananin Hills."—Archives, vol. i. p. 494.

"The Dutchman[1] on Scokooniady (Juniata) claims a right to the land merely because he gave a little victuals to our warriors, who stand very often in need of it. This string of wampum serves (the speaker then took two strings of wampum in his hands) to take the Dutchman by the arm and to throw him over the big mountains within your borders. We have given the River Scokooniady (Juniata) for a hunting-place to our cousins, the Delawares, and our brethren, the Shawanese, and we ourselves hunt there sometimes. We, therefore, desire you will immediately by force remove all those that live on the said river of Scokooniady."

From time to time the Indians repeated their complaints against the intruders with little avail. The white pioneers cared little for paper proclamations, and less, if anything, for either the presence or the rights of the natives. Finally affairs reached such a crisis that the government must either enforce its laws or by passiveness invite savage revenge. Richard Peters and Conrad Weiser were accordingly sent out with authority to view the frontier, and dispossess any persons found on unpurchased territory. Peters' report is herewith printed in full, as it relates in part to a district within the bounds of Huntingdon County:

"To the Honourable James Hamilton, Esquire, Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania, and Counties of New Castle, Kent, and Sussex on Delaware.

"The Report of Richard Peters, Esquire, Secretary of the Province of Pennsylvania, of the Proceedings against sundry Persons settled in the unpurchased Part of the Province aforesaid.

"May it Please your Honour:

"Mr. Weiser and I having received your Honour's Orders to give Information to the proper Magistrates against all such as had presum'd to settle and remain on the Lands beyond the Kittochtinny Mountains not purchased of the Indians, in Contempt of the Laws repeatedly signified by Proclamations, and particularly by your Honour's late one, and to bring them to a legal Conviction, least for want of their Removal a Breach should ensue between the Six Nations of Indians and this Province, We set out on Tuesday, the fifteenth day of May last, for the new County of Cumberland, where the Places on which the Trespassers had settled lay.

"At Mr. Croghan's[2] we met with five Indians, three from Shamokin, two of which were Sons of Schickcalamy, who transact the Business of the Six Nations with this Government, two were just arrived from Alegheny, viz., one of the Mohock's Nation called Aaron, and Andrew Montour, the Interpreter at Ohio. Mr. Montour telling us he had a Message from the Ohio Indians and Twightwees to this Government, and desiring a Conference, one was held on the eighteenth of May last, in the Presence of James Galbraith, George Croghan, William Wilson, and Hermanus Alricks, Esquires, Justices of the county of Cumberland, and when Mr. Montour's Business was done we, with the advice of the other Justices, imparted to the Indians the Design we were assembled upon, at which they expressed great satisfaction.

"Another Conference was held at the Instance of the Indians in the Afternoon, in the Presence of Mr. Galbraith and Mr. Croghan, before mentioned, wherein they expressed themselves as follows:

"'Brethren: We have thought a great deal of what you imparted to us, that ye were come to turn the People off who are settled over the Hills; we are pleased to see you on this occasion, and as the Council of Onondago has this affair exceedingly at Heart, and it was particularly recommended to us by the Deputies of the Six Nations when they parted from us last summer, we desire to accompany you, but we are afraid, notwithstanding the care of the Governor, that this may prove like many former Attempts—the People will be put off now and next Year come again; and if so, the Six Nations will no longer bear it, but do themselves Justice. To prevent this, therefore, when you shall have turned the People off we recommend it to the Governor to place two or three faithful Persons over the Mountains who may be agreeable to him and us, with Commissions impowering them immediately to remove every one who shall presume after this to settle there, until the Six Nations shall agree to make Sale of their Land.' To enforce this they gave a String of Wampum and received one in return from the Magistrates with the strongest assurances that they would do their Duty.

"On Tuesday, the twenty-second of May, Matthew Dill, George Croghan, Benjamin Chambers, Thomas Wilson, John Finley, and James Galbraith, Esquires, Justices of the said County of Cumberland, attended by the Under Sheriff, came to Big Juniata, situate at the distance of twenty-five miles from the mouth thereof and about ten Miles North from the Blue Hills, a place much esteemed by the Indians for some of their best hunting Ground, and there they found five Cabbins or Log Houses, one possessed by William White, another George Cahoon, another, not quite finished, in possession of David Hiddlesson, another possessed by George and William Galloway, and another by Andrew Lycon;[3] of these Persons William White, George and William Galloway, David Hiddleston, and George Cohoon appeared before the Magistrates, and being asked by what Right or authority they had possessed themselves of those Lands and erected Cabbins thereon, they replied by no Right or Authority, but that the Land belonged to the Proprietaries of Pennsylvania. They then were asked whether they did not know they were acting against the Law and in Contempt of frequent notices given them by the Governor's Proclamation. They said they had seen one such Proclamation, and had nothing to say for themselves but craved Mercy. Hereupon the said William White, George and William Galloway, David Hiddleston, and George Cohoon being convicted by the said Justices on their view, the Under Sheriff was charged with them, and he took William White, David Hiddleston, and George Cohoon in Custody, but George and William Galloway resisted, and having got at some Distance from the Under Sheriff they called Us, 'You may take our Land and Houses and do what you please with them, we deliver them to you with all our Hearts, but we will not be carried to Goal.'

"The next morning being Wednesday, the twenty-third of May, the said Justices went to the Log House or Cabbin of Andrew Lycon, and finding none there but Children, and hearing that the Father and Mother were expected soon, and William White and others offering to become security jointly and severally, and to enter into Recognizance as well for Andrew's Appearance at Court and immediate removal as for their own. This Proposal was accepted, and William White, David Hiddleston, and George Cohoon enter'd into a Recognizance of One Hundred Pounds, and executed Bonds to the Proprietaries in the sum of Five Hundred Pounds, reciting that they were Trespassers and had no manner of Right and had delivered Possession to me for the Proprietaries. Then the Magistrates went to the Log House or Cabbin of George and William Galloway (which they had delivered up as aforesaid the Day before, after they were convicted and were flying from the sheriff), all the Goods belonging to the said George and William were taken out, and the Cabbin being quite empty I took possession thereof for the Proprietaries, and then a conference was held what should be done with the empty Cabbin, and after great Deliberation all agreed that if some Cabbins were not destroyed they would tempt the Trespassers to return again, or encourage others to come there should these Trespassers go away, and so what was doing would signify nothing, since the Possession of them at such a Distance fro i the Inhabitants could not be kept for the Proprietaries, and Mr. Weiser also giving it as his firm Opinion that if all the Cabbins were left standing the Indians would conceive such a contemptible Opinion of the Government that they would come themselves in the Winter, murder the People, and set the Houses on Fire. On these Conditions the Cabbin, by my Order, was burnt by the Under Sheriff and Company.

"Then the Company went to the House possessed by David Hiddleston, who had enter'd into Bond as aforesaid, and he having voluntarily taken out all the things which were in the Cabbin and left me in Possession, that empty and unfurnish'd Cabbin was likewise set on Fire by the Under Sheriff by my Order.

"The next Day being the twenty-fourth of May, Mr. Weiser and Mr. Galbraith, with the Under Sheriff and myself, on our Way to the mouth of Juniata, called at Andrew Lycon's with Intent only to inform him that his Neighbors were bound for his Appearance and immediate Removal, and to caution him not to bring himself or them into Trouble by a Refusal; But he presented a loaded Gun to the Magistrates and Sheriff, said he would shoot the first man that dar'd to come nigher. On this he was disarm'd, convicted, and committed to the Custody of the Sheriff. This whole Transaction happened in the Sight of a Tribe of Indians, who by Accident had in the Night-time fix'd their Tent on that Plantation, and Lycon's Behavior giveing them great Offence, the Shickcalamies insisted on our burning the Cabbin, or they would burn it themselves Whereupon, when everything was taken out of it (Andrew Lycon all the while assisting) and Possession being delivered to me, the empty Cabbin was set on Fire by the Under Sheriff and then Lycon was carried to Gaol. Mr. Benjamin Chambers and Mr. George Croghan had about an hour before separated from us, and on my meeting them again in Cumberland county, they reported to me that they had been at Sherman's creek, or Little Juniata, situate about six miles over the Blue mountains, and found there James Parker, Thomas Parker, Owen McKeeb, John McClare, Richard Kirkpatrick, James Murray, John Scott, Henry Gass, John Cowan, Simon Girtee, and John Kflaugh, who had settled Lands and erected Cabbins or Log Houses thereon; and having convicted them of the trespass on their own View, they had bound them in Recognizances of the Penalty of One Hundred Pounds to appear and answer for their Trespasses, on the first Day of the next County Court of Cumberland, to be held at Shippensburgh; and that the said Trespassers had likewise enter'd into Bonds to the Proprietaries in Five Hundred Pounds Penalty to remove off immediately, with all their Servants, Cattle, and Effects, and had delivered Possession of their Houses to Mr. George Stevenson for the Proprietaries' Use; and that Mr. Stevenson had order'd some of the meanest of those Cabbins to be set on Fire, where the Families were not large nor the Improvements considerable.

[1] Supposed to refer to Frederick Star, a German, who settled near Big Buffalo Creek, in Oliver township, Perry Co.

[2] In Cumberland Valley, about five miles above Harris' ferry.

[3] These cabins were probably in Pfouts' Valley, Perry Co., a short distance from Millerstown, and in the vicinity of one of the two Indian villages or encampments in that county.

"On Monday, the 28th of May, we were met at Shippensburgh by Samuel Smith, William Maxwell, George Croghan, Benjamin Chambers, Robert Chambers, William Allison, William Trent, John Finley, John Miller, Hermanus Alricks, and James Galbraith, Esquires, Justices of Cumberland County, who informing us that the People in the Tuscoraro Path, in the Big Cove, and at Auquick would submit, Mr. Weiser most earnestly pressed that he might be excused any further Attendance, having abundance of necessary Business to do at Home; and the other Magistrates, tho' with much Reluctance, at last consenting, he left us.

"On Wednesday, the thirtieth of May, the Magistrates and Company, being detain'd two Days by Rain, proceeded over the Kittochttinney Mountains and enter'd into the Tuscoraro Path, or Path Valley thro' which the Road to Allegheny lies. Many settlements were found in this Valley, and all the People were sent for, and the following Persons appear'd, viz.: Abraham Slack, James Blair, Moses Moore, Arthur Dunlap, Alexander McCartie, David Lewis, Adam McCartie, Felix Doyle, Andrew Dunlap, Robert Wilson, Jacob Pyatt, Jacob Pyatt, Junior, William Ramage, Reynolds Alexander, Samuel Patterson, Robert Baker, John Armstrong, and John Potts, who were all convicted by their own Confession to the Magistrates of the like Trespasses with those at Sheerman's Creek, and were bound in the like Recognizances to appear at Court, and Bonds to the Proprietaries to remove with all their Families, Servants, Cattle, and Effects; and having all voluntarily given Possession of their Houses to me, some ordinary Log Houses to the Number of eleven were burned to the Ground, the Trespassers, most of them cheerfully, and a very few of them with reluctance, carrying out all their Goods. Some had been deserted before and lay waste.

"At Aucquick Peter Falconer, Nicholas Delong, Samuel Perry, and John Charleton were convicted on the view of the Magistrates, and having enter'd into like Recognizances and executed the like Bonds, Charleton's Cabbin was burnt and Fire set to another that was just begun, consisting only of a few Logs pil'd and fastened to one another.

"The like Proceedings at Big Cove against Andrew Donaldson, John Macclelland, Charles Stuart, James Downy, John Macmean, Robert Kendell, Samuel Brown, William Shepperd, Roger Murphy, Robert Smith, William Dickey, William Millican, William Macconnell, Alexander Macconnell, James Campbell, William Carrell, John Martin, John Jamison, Hans Patter, John Maccollin, Adam Macconnell, James Wilson, and John Wilson, who coming before the Magistrates were convicted on their own Confession of the like Trespasses as in the former cases, and were all bound over in the like Recognizances and executed the like Bond to the Proprietaries. Three waste Cabbins of no value were burnt at the North end of the Cove by the Persons that claim'd the right to them.

"The Little Cove and Big and Little Conolloways being the only Places remaining to be visited, as this was on the Borders of Maryland the Magistrates declin'd going there, and departed to their Homes. The next Day several of the Inhabitants of the Little Cove came to me at Philip Davies and gave me a Petition addressed to the Governor, purporting That they were settled to the North of the Temporary Line[1] in the Province of Pennsylvania, Westward to the Place where that Line was left off, and pray'd that his Honour might suffer them to remain there till the Line should be extended and the Purchase made of the Lands from the Indians. Finding the Petition signed only by a few I returned it, telling them when it was signed by more if it should appear to me that they were North of the Temporary Line I would recommend their Case to the Governor, but that if they were settled South of the Temporary Line they were in the Jurisdiction of Maryland and this Government would have nothing to do with them, adding that what had been done was solely with a View to prevent an Indian War, and was undertaken as much to serve the neighboring Colonies as our own; That there was a good Harmony subsisting between the Governments of Pennsylvania and Maryland, and I hop'd it would always continue, and recommended it to them earnestly not to have Recourse to this Government if they were to the South of the Line, or if they were really to the North of it that they would give no Umbrage to Maryland, but behave friendly and be sure to avoid creating any Cause of Complaint from the Governor of Maryland.

"I have truly related the several Matters of Fact in the order they were done by the Magistrates as well as myself, but I should not do Justice to myself or Mr. Weiser, in whom your Honour placed the same confidence and whom I principally consulted about the mode of executing your commands, if I should close my Report here without giving the History of these settlements, and shewing upon what solid and just Reasonings our Proceedings were founded. Your Honour will, therefore, indulge me in laying this matter particularly before you, that it may appear we have acted a right and dutiful Part to the Government and a kind and affectionate Part to these indiscreet people.

"About the year 1740 or 1741, one Frederick Starr, a German, with two or three more of his Countrymen, made some small settlements at the very same place where we found William White, the Galloways, and Andrew Lycon, which were discovered by the Delawares at Shamokin to the Deputies of the Six Nations as they came down to Philadelphia in the year 1742 to hold a Treaty with this Government, and they were so disturbed at it as to enquire with a peculiar Warmth of Governor Thomas if these People had come there by the orders or with the Privity of the Government, alledging that if it was so this was a Breach of the Treaties subsisting between the Six Nations and the Proprietor William Penn, who in the most Solemn Manner had engaged to them not to suffer any of the People to settle Lands till he had purchased them from the Council of the Six Nations. The Governor, as he might with great Truth disown any knowledge of these Persons' Settlements, and on the Indians insisting that they should be immediately thrown over the Mountains, he promised to issue his Proclamation, and if this had no effect to put the Laws in Execution against them. The Indians in the same Treaty publickly express'd very severe Threats against the Inhabitants of Maryland for settling Lands for which they had received no Satisfaction, and said if they would not do them justice they would do justice to themselves, and would certainly have committed Hostilities if a Treaty had not have been set on Foot between Maryland and the Six Nations, under the Mediation of Governor Thomas, at which the Indians consented to sell the Lands and receive a valuable consideration for them, which put an end to the Danger.

"The Proprietaries were then in England, but observing on perusing the Treaty with what asperity they had expressed themselves against Maryland, and that the Indians had just Cause to complain of the Settlements at Juniata, so near Shamokin, they wrote to their Governor in very pressing Terms to cause those Trespassers to be immediately removed; and both the Proprietaries and Governor laid their commands on me to see this done, which I accordingly did in June, 1743, the Governor having first given them Notice by a Proclamation served upon them.

"At that time none had presumed to settle at a Place called the Big Cove (having this Name from its being enclosed in the Form of a Bason by the farthermost Range of the Kittochtinny Hills and the Tuscoraro Hills, which last end here and lose themselves in other Hills). This

[1] The boundary between Pennsylvania and Maryland was disputed for many years. After much contention the authorities of the two provinces consented to the establishment of a temporary line, which was run in 1739 as far west as the summit of the Cove or Kittatinny Mountain. This was recognized until superseded by the permanent line established by Mason and Dixon, 1764–67.

Big Cove[1] is about five miles North of the Temporary Line, and not far West of the Place where the Line terminated. Between the Big Cove and the temporary Line lies the Little Cove, so called from being likewise encircled with Hills; and to the West of the Little Cove towards Patowmec lie two or three other Places called the Big and Little Conolloways, all of them situate on the Temporary Line, was it to be extended towards Patowmec. In the year 1741 or 1742 Information was likewise given that People were beginning to settle in these Places, some from Maryland and others from this Province. But as the two Governments were not then on very good Terms, the Governor did not think it proper to take any other Notice of these Settlements than to send the Sheriff to serve his Proclamation on them, though it gave ample occasion to lament the vast Inconveniences which attend unsettled Boundaries. After this the French War came on, and the People in those Parts taking advantage of the Confusion of the Times, by little and little stole into the Great Cove, so that at the End of the War it was said thirty Families had settled there, not however without frequent Prohibitions on the Part of the Government, and Admonitions of the great Danger they run of being cut off by the Indians, as these settlements were on Lands not purchased of them. And at the Close of the War Mr. Maxwell, one of the Justices of Lancaster County, delivered a particular Message from this Government to them, ordering their Removal, that they might not occasion a Breach with the Indians; but it had no effect.

"These were, to the best of my Remembrance, all the Places settled by the Pennsylvanians in the unpurchased Part of the Province till about three years ago, when some Persons had the Presumption to go into the Path Valley[2] or Tuscoraro Gap, lying to the East of the Big Cove, and into a Place called Aucquick,[3] lying to the Northward of it, and likewise into a Place called Sherman's Creek,[4] lying all along the Waters of Juniata, and is situate East of the Path Valley, through which the present Road goes from Harris' Ferry to Allegheny, and lastly they extended their Settlements to Big Juniata; the Indians all this while repeatedly complaining that their Hunting Ground was every Day more and more taken from them, and that there must infallibly arise quarrels between their Warriors and these Settlers which would in the End break the Chain of Friendship, and pressing in the most importunate Terms their speedy Removal. The Government in 1748 sent the Sheriff and three Magistrates with Mr. Weiser unto these Places to warn the People; but they, notwithstanding, continued their Settlements in Opposition to all this, and as if these People were only prompted by a Desire to make Mischief, settled Lands no better, nay not so good as many vacant Lands within the purchased Parts of the Province.

"The Bulk of these Settlements were made during the Administration of President Palmer, and it is well known to your Honour, tho' then in England, that his attention to the Safety of the City and the Lower Counties would not permit him to extend more Care to Places so remote.

"In these Circumstances Matters stood between the Indians and this Province when the Six Nations came last Summer to visit the Government on the Closing of the War, and to receive a Present in Reward of their Fidelity. At this Treaty they renewed their complaints of the Injuries received by these Encroachments on their hunting-grounds, and peremptorily insisted on the Removal of the Intruders; and your Honour, as an Expedient to quiet them, proposed a purchase of those Lands from the Indians, signifying to them that it would be more agreeable to you to buy them (as the Cause of Complaint principally arose there) than any other; but they absolutely refused, and instead thereof made an offer of about two Millions of Acres on the East Side of Susquehannah, saying the People might go and settle there, which was accepted and a Sum of Money paid them down; and thereupon a Proclamation was issued to warn the People against continuing or settling on any unpurchased Land over Susquehannah on the severest Penalties; but this making no Impression, your Honour issued Orders to me and Mr. Weiser to effect their Removal.

"I leave it to Mr. Weiser (as he was joined with me by your Honour) to make his own Report, and shall only observe that in all our Consultations he (who is Indian Interpreter for Virginia and Maryland as well as of this Province, and must be supposed to know the minds of the Indians the best) proceeded on this as a certain Truth, that if we did not in this Journey entirely remove these People it would not be in the Power of the Government to prevent an Indian War; and that as the neighboring Provinces were as much concerned in this Event as ourselves, he recommended it to the Magistrates either not to go or to act with the utmost Spirit, and his arguments were so convincing that all the Magistrates determined to go in a Body.

"I had furnished myself with blank Convictions and Mittimus settled by the Attorney General on the Act of Assembly intituled 'a Supplementary Act, &c.,' and had taken his Instructions, and was determined to proceed by Conviction, Fine, and Imprisonment; but when on the very first attempt to convict and imprison the two Galloways fled from the Sheriff, it then appeared very plain to everybody that this method would not answer, and that if the trespassers, who were more numerous in other Parts, should believe they were to be carried to the Prison, they would either unite and with a superior Force resist the Magistrates, or they would flee from Justice, and, in short, that the whole Design must infallibly miscarry.

"And it was remembered that in a similar case, on Complaint of the Indians, in the year 1721, the Magistrates residing in that Part of the Province did, by order of the then Governor, burn and destroy the Houses and Habitations of certain Settlers on Lands on the West side of Sasquehannah without Right. On this the Persons in Custody were told that they should deliver Possession of their Places to me, and become bound in a Bond to the Proprietaries in Five Hundred Pounds, conditioned to move off with all their cattle, &c., and that in the Condition they should acknowledge they had given Possession to me for the Proprietaries, and were told at the same time that some Cabbins must be burnt. With this they were satisfied, and chearfully executed the Bonds, and expected that as their Cabbins did now belong to the Proprietaries the Person in Possession of them might do what he pleased with them, and that some, if not all, would be destroyed.

"At the Path Valley, and, indeed, at all other places, the offenders were got together and were told by the Magistrates beforehand what was intended to be done and that all the new settled Cabbins would be burnt. After they were told this they executed the Bonds, thereby putting me into Possession, and very chearfully and voluntarily took everything out of their Log Houses and assisted in burning them. In truth, all submitted in every Place except the two Galloways and Andrew Lycon; and even the two Galloways came voluntarily after their Cabin was burnt and surrendered their Persons and entered into Bonds and expressed Satisfaction at what had been done to their Cabbins, saying That if the Indians were determined they should not stay there it was better to be away directly, as it was Summer Time and mild weather. Finding such a general submission, and verily believing the Evil would be effectually taken away, there was no Kindness in my Power which I did not do for the offenders, giving them Money where they were poor, and telling them they might go directly on any Part of the two Million of Acres lately purchased of the Indians; and where the Families were large, as I happened to have several of my own Plantations vacant I offered them to stay on them Rent free till they could provide for themselves; then I told them that if after all this Lenity and good Usage they would dare to stay after the Time limited for their Departure, no mercy would be shewed, but that they would feel the whole Rigour of the Law.

"It may be proper to add that the Cabbins or Log Houses which were burnt were of no considerable Value, being such as the Country People erect in a Day or two, and cost only the Charge of an Entertainment.

"Thus I have given your Honour a full Relation of this whole Transaction, humbly hoping the Part I have acted therein will meet with your approbation, and that it will have the desired good Effect in removing the Trespassers and prevent their returning to their Settlements, and any future Clamours or Complaints from the Indians on that Head, and am

"Your Honour's most obedient,
"humble Servant,
"RICHARD PETERS.[5]

"PHILADELPHIA, July 2, 1750."

None of these settlers had ventured farther west within the limits of Huntingdon County than the Tuscarora Valley in Dublin and probably Tell town-

[1] Fulton County.

[2] Fannett township, Franklin Co.

[3] On the waters of Little Aughwick Creek, in Dublin township, Huntingdon Co., and the township of the same name in Fulton County.

[4] Perry County.

[5] Richard Peters was commissioned provincial secretary Nov. 24, 1748, and served until 1760. He owned the land upon which Hollidaysburg is located.

ships. The recollection of this official visit is perpetuated in the name of the village of "Burnt Cabins," situated in Fulton County, near the line of Huntingdon, in the vicinity of which some of the cabins stood, probably those of Falconer, Delong, Perry, and Charlton.

In August and September following the occurrences detailed in Secretary Peters' report, Weiser was among the Indians of New York, delivering a message to them from the proprietary government. The Onondaga chiefs were anxious to know what action had been taken towards removing the settlers on their lands near the Juniata and thereabouts, and expressed great satisfaction in learning from Weiser the result of the visit of the secretary and the officers of Cumberland County, and that the Governor had thus heeded their complaints about the intruders.

The summary measures adopted by the provincial authorities in 1750 seemed to have the intended effect, for there does not appear to be any further complaint from the Indians about unauthorized intrusions in this region. Four years afterwards, in July, 1754, the Indian title was purchased, and the lands were formally opened for appropriation by warrant or actual settlement.

CHAPTER VII.

The Indian and French War of 1755—Erection of Forts Shirley, Standing Stone, Fetter's, Holliday's, Lowry's, Hartsock's, Lytle's, Anderson's, McAlevy's, and Roberdeau—Troubles with the Indians during the Revolutionary War—Tory Expedition to Kittanning.

THE alliance between the French and western Indians, resulting in the failure of Col. Washington's expedition for the occupancy of the Forks of the Ohio and the subsequent defeat of Gen. Braddock, spread alarm throughout the province, and many of the frontier residents abandoned their homes and fled for safety to the eastern settlements, while some of the more courageous, who remained behind to protect their homes or garner their little crops, were murdered or carried off as prisoners. During the winter of 1755–56 a cordon of forts was built across the province from the Susquehanna, as follows: Augusta, at Shamokin, now Sunbury; Pomfret Castle; Granville, on Juniata, above Lewistown; Shirley, at Aughwick; and Littleton, in Fulton County.

Fort Shirley, probably Croghan's fort enlarged or strengthened, named by Governor Morris in honor of Gen. William Shirley, stood on the high bank of Fort Run, on the western side of the main street of Shirleysburg, on or near the ground occupied by the dwelling of David Douglass. A map of the survey of the tract, made while the fort was yet standing, shows that it stood very close to the run. The last four named forts were completed about February, 1756, and each garrisoned by a company of seventy-five men, exclusive of officers. Capt. Hugh Mercer,[1] commandant at Shirley, reported, April 19th, that he had only thirty men, who were engaged to remain there until the 1st of May, by which time he is in hopes of completing his company. Col. John Armstrong, August 20th, reported to Governor Morris, that "as Fort Shirley is not easily defended and their Water may be taken possession of by the Enemy, it running at the Foot of a high bank Eastward of the Fort, and no well Dugg, I am of Opinion, from its remote situation, that it can't serve the Country in the present Circumstances, and if Attacked I doubt will be taken if not strongly Garrisoned, but (extreamities excepted) I cannot evacuate this without your Honour's Orders." Acting upon the suggestion of Col. Armstrong, William Denny, who had succeeded Robert Hunter Morris as Lieutenant-Governor, ordered the evacuation of the fort, and reported his action to the Council October 15th. In another letter of the same date, written from Carlisle, now in the possession of the editor, Armstrong says,—

"the great confusion and distress of this part of the country wherewith I am Publickly as well as privately concern'd has prevented my sending you the inclos'd Draft so early as I promis'd it.

'the people here move off daily, and many of them in a Deplorable Condition. Indians are seen every week in sundry parts of this County, & a general terror has so much obtain'd that few, very few, Care to shew their faces to these tawny sons of Violence! so that I fear bloodshed & devastation is like to be the fate of the West Side of Sasquehanna, but especially ye Poor County of Cumberland.

"as the Capts. Armstrong and Ward examin'd the Ruins of Fort Granville, they discover'd the bones with some other parts hardly separated, of Eight of the enemy which were there burn'd. Ye French officer having artfully carried our Prisoners out of sight of the Fort before he Order'd the Indians to burn the Barrack and Stores.

"a certain Peter Walker, one of the Soldiers taken at Granville, has made his escape since the Dutchman did, and says there were 120 of the Enemy returned from Granville, and of these but 12 or 14 French, one whereof the Lieut. (a little before his death) had shot thro' the shoulder. Had this young man's life been spar'd, Walker thinks that nothing but his Ammunition being exhausted (wch was not quite) or dieing for want of water, woul'd have made him yield. The Enemy by every means Urg'd a Surrender, but he obstinately refused, threatning to blow the brains out of one of his own men (a frenchman), who wanted to treat with the enemy in the French tongue. Soon after he ran round the Fort bravely encouraging the few men he had at their several posts, and telling them the flame was much abated, to which he return'd, and in throwing on of Clay rec'd the fatal Ball. He was immediately carry'd to his Barrack where he expire'd. The Savage Scalp'd him, and the French refus'd to let the Soldiers bury his Corps; but the more generous flames supply'd the inhuman defect by turning the young hero into his Original dust.

"The French had with them one McDonnel, a Scotchman, for their interpreter, who told Walker they woul'd soon take Fort Shirley, which they intended to do with 400 men. Capt Jacobs said he woul'd take any Fort that wou'd catch fire, and wou'd make peace with the English when they learn'd him to make Gunpowder.

"The French and Indians divided our people, making Male & female Carry with them great Loads of flower & Salt. After some days journey the greatest number of the Indians fel back towards the inhabitants, Walker knows not where, and the residue with the French proceeded with the prisoners. Walker made his escape in the Night somewhere about the Alleghany Mountain, and fell down Juniata to the Mouth of Tuscarora where my brother George was encamped.

[1] Mercer was born in Scotland about 1720, and was educated as a physician. He was in Braddock's army in 1755. Subsequently settling in that part of Cumberland now Franklin County, he practiced his profession. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary war he was appointed by Congress a brigadier-general. Wounds inflicted at Princeton, N. J., caused his death, Jan. 12, 1777. Mercersburg, Franklin Co., was named out of respect to his memory.

"I am, dear Sir, your most "Humble Servt.,

"JOHN ARMSTRONG."[1]

The destruction of Fort Granville and capture of prisoners by the French and Indians added to the terrors of the frontier settlers, and impelled the government to resort to more decisive measures to protect the people from the murderous assaults of the enemy. Accordingly Governor Morris, acting upon information received from escaped prisoners that Shingas and Jacobs, the leaders of the hostile Indians, lived at Kittanning, from which point bands were fitted out for depredations in this and adjacent provinces, concerted an expedition against that town, to be conducted by Col. John Armstrong, who was to have under his command the companies officered by Capts. Hamilton, Mercer, Ward, and Porter, and such volunteers as could be enlisted. The expedition was to be conducted as secretly as possible, and was to be organized at Fort Shirley. About the end of August the command proceeded en route for Kittanning. "At the Beaver Dams, a few miles from Frankstown, on the North Branch of Juniata," the sections of the command that marched separately were consolidated, and proceeded via the Kittanning path to the objective point.

The expedition was, considering the times and circumstances, well planned and promptly executed. By the 14th of September, Armstrong had reached Fort Littleton on his homeward march, and from that point sent by express to Governor Denny his official report. This bold and determined move stayed for a time the incursions of the enemy, but there was a sense of insecurity felt in the valley until about the beginning of 1762. On Jan. 5, 1757, the corporation of Philadelphia, as a reward for his services, presented Col. Armstrong with a piece of plate, caused a medal with appropriate legends to be struck, and addressed him a letter thanking him and his officers for their gallant conduct.

In 1758 an army under Gen. John Forbes, comprising commands officered by Cols. Boquet and Washington, set out via Fort Bedford to dislodge the French at Fort Duquesne, and with the exception of a sanguinary engagement between advanced bodies under Majs. Grant and Lewis and the French and Indians, the main army reached the fort without serious loss, but found it in ruins. The French, unable to cope with the superior force of the English, chose to apply the torch rather than to surrender the fortress. Forbes erected defensive works, which the next year were supplanted by more substantial ones, and, in honor of the then British premier, were named Fort Pitt. The same year (1758), at a council held at Easton, the boundaries in the Indian deed of 1754 to the proprietaries were curtailed and more clearly defined, and their title to the lands in the valley of the Juniata confirmed.

The Pontiac war, begun in 1763, again alarmed the frontiersmen, and quiet and peace was not assured until the successful termination of Col. Boquet's expedition in the autumn of 1764.

Fort Standing Stone.—This fort stood in the vicinity of Penn and Second Streets in the borough of Huntingdon. Its dimensions or precise locality cannot be ascertained, for no one now living ever saw its lines of defense. The only parts of it remaining in modern times were the logs from one of the magazines that had been removed from their original place in the fort to No. 205 Penn Street, and there re-erected and utilized as the lower story of a building which was long occupied as a blacksmith-shop by John Simpson, James Simpson, David Snare, and others. They were of heavy oak timber, hewn on four sides, and "dove-tailed" at the corners so as to fit closely together. This building was torn down about 1854 to clear the ground for the erection of the residence of Theodore H. Cremer, Esq. The accepted tradition relative to the time of the erection of this fort fixed the date about the beginning of the war of the Revolution, but on an interesting map of the territory embraced between the Hudson on the east, the central part of Ohio on the west, the shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario and the river St. Lawrence on the north, and Maryland on the south, constructed by Capt. Pouchot, in the French military service, and transmitted by him to Marshal de Belle Isle in a letter dated Montreal, 14th April, 1758,[2] quite a number of the English defenses and other prominent objects are located. Among those in Pennsylvania are Philadelphie, Lancastre, Easton, Franckstown, Rays Town, de la Susqueahanna, Juneata R., Belle R., F. Comberland, F. Standen Stone, F. du Quesne, Laudon, Liteton, Loyalanon, etc. Viewed in the light of our present geographical knowledge, the map presents many inaccuracies, but it is, nevertheless, a remarkable exhibit of the district it essays to represent when we consider the time at which it was prepared, and the meagre data obtainable a century and a quarter ago in the then western wilds.

This map gives Fort Standing Stone an existence at a date much earlier than that fixed by any English records that have been found. The French having, by the treaty of Paris in 1763, surrendered all their northern possessions to the British, were no longer interested in this region; and after that time could have no motive to revise Pouchet's map, which as now printed purports to be a fac-simile of the original.

[1] Col. Armstrong with two brothers and a sister emigrated from the north of Ireland, and settled at Carlisle about 1748. He died March 9, 1795, and was buried in the old cemetery at Carlisle. His son John, born in Carlisle in 1758, served in the Revolutionary war, United States senator from New York, minister to France, and Secretary of War under President Madison. Dr. James, another son, became distinguished as a physician. He died in 1828, and was buried alongside his father.

[2] Pa. Archives, Second Series, vi. 409.

Other Forts.—Almost at the beginning of the Revolutionary struggle the settlers of the valley felt the necessity for providing safe retreats from invading parties of Indians, and forts were from time to time erected throughout the settlements. They were usually constructed of logs, and provided with loopholes to serve the double purpose of "outlooks" and for the use of the rifle in case of attacks. Those most elaborately built were made of timbers set on end and firmly imbedded in the ground, and were called stockades. Inside were magazines for the safe storage of ammunition, and barracks for the accommodation of soldiers or those seeking protection. Fetter's was above Hollidaysburg, near where McCahan's mill stands. Holliday's, about a mile below that town, was Peter Titus' log barn transformed into a military defense. Lowry's was built in Canoe valley, three miles southwest of Water Street, where the German Reformed Church now stands. This being small, the house of Matthew Dean, farther up the valley, was used temporarily. The people of Sinking Valley were accommodated by a fort built near the residence of Jacob Roller. Hartsock's, in Woodcock Valley, near Marklesburg, and Lytle's, in Hart's Log, three miles south of Alexandria, served the inhabitants in their respective localities. On the southwest side of Shaver's Creek, near its mouth, was Anderson's, while farther up the creek Alexander McCormick's house was used for the same purpose. McAlevy's, a short distance east of the village of McAlevy's Fort, was the refuge of the inhabitants of Standing Stone Valley.

The demand for lead in the Revolutionary struggle stimulated search for that metal, and sufficient indications were found in Sinking Valley to warrant mining operations there. In the explorations made tracings of ancient workings were found, and these were supposed to have been the work of the French, to whom the Indians had communicated the information that lead existed in the valley. John Armstrong, then a major-general, in a letter from Yorktown, Feb. 23, 1778, to President Wharton, mentions this locality, and suggests that the mine (on the proprietaries' tract) should, "at least for the present, be seized by and belong to the State." Gen. Daniel Roberdeau, then a member of Congress, asked and obtained leave of absence for the purpose of going to the valley and conducting mining operations, and on the 17th of April was at Carlisle on the road thither. On the 23d of that month he was at Standing Stone, and on the 27th writes from "Sinking Spring Valley" encouragingly about the discovery of a new vein of ore that promises an ample supply. To protect his workmen a stockade was built, which was called Fort Roberdeau, but by many was designated the Lead-Mine Fort. During the autumn of 1779, Capt. Thomas Cluggage was in command of the fort with a company of Rangers. In March of that year the provincial authorities decided to raise five companies of Rangers, making three hundred and eighty men in all, for the defense of the frontiers, and on April 7th the Council appointed Thomas Cluggage captain, and —— Means first lieutenant of the company to be raised in Bedford County. At the captain's suggestion, Moses Donley was appointed second lieutenant, June 26th. October 10th he reported that his command had been reviewed and passed muster; three officers and forty-three rank and file, one of the latter "killed or taken."

Numerous parties of hostile Indians fell upon the settlers of the valley from time to time, murdering inhabitants, carrying off captives, and burning dwellings. The particulars in most cases will be found in the history of the townships where these events occurred. The business of the land office is a pretty good indication of the sense of security felt by the people of the province in these perilous times. From Feb. 3, 1755, to the month of June of that year a dozen or more warrants were granted for land in Huntingdon and Blair. During the seven years immediately following there does not appear to have been any issued. On May 31, 1762, several warrants were taken out for lands on the Aughwick, on the Frankstown Branch, and in other localities, and from that date business was quite active during the balance of that and the first half of the succeeding year. The only entry for 1764 appears to be George Croghan's application for a warrant for the Standing Stone tract, then held by improvement. The next year, 1765, a dozen or more warrants were taken out, and in 1766 a much greater number. In the latter year the "application system" was introduced, and hundreds of persons availed themselves of the opportunities it afforded of obtaining land on advantageous terms, and from the time at which this plan was put into operation, Aug. 1, 1766, until the close of the land office during the war of the Revolution but few warrants were issued.

The Indians Grow Troublesome.—In the early part of the summer of 1777 the Indians began to make incursions from the West and commit murders and pillage in Westmoreland County, which had been set off from Bedford in 1773, and then embraced all of the southwestern part of the province. Col. John Piper, lieutenant of Bedford County, apprehending that the savage foe would soon be emboldened to invade the territory of his military jurisdiction, supplied arms and sustenance to the militia called out for the defense of the frontier as far as it was possible with the means at command to do. In a letter to the Council, Dec. 19, 1777, he commends Mr. Holliday, of Frankstown, for his action in assembling the people of his vicinity and in procuring provisions for the militia who went to their assistance. The situation grew more alarming, and Piper reported to President Wharton, Jan. 20, 1778, that the situation of the frontiers was such that on consultation with Col. Hugh Davidson, sub-lieutenant, it was decided that to prevent the entire evacuation of the western part of the county it was necessary to raise thirty men for the defense of the Glades (now Somerset County), forty for the central division, including the town of Bedford, thirty for Frankstown, thirty for Sinking Valley, and thirty to guard the inhabitants of Hart's Log and Shaver's Creek Valleys, the enlistments to be for nine months. He remarked that if the measures recommended be approved the settlers will remain, and if rejected he had reason to believe that upon the first alarm from the Indians a great part of the county would be left desolate. The Council, February 2d, refused approval of his action, as it was unwarranted by the militia law, which pointed out the method of raising such a force as he deemed necessary in the emergency.

The deprivations to which our citizens were subjected are so fully portrayed in the following document that it is presented entire:

"May 19, 1778.

"The Inhabitants of Dublin Township, To the honourable Assembly, the Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania:

"We, your humble Petitioners, deeply impressed with a sense of the danger to which we are exposed by the Indians, beg leave in a suppliant manner to lay our case before you, praying that in your deliberations you may endeavor to adopt proper measures for our safety and protection. You are no doubt informed that the Savages have already begun to murder and destroy the property of the inhabitants on the frontiers of this State; that those who escaped their barbarities, fearing lest they may also fall a prey into their hands, are flying to more secure parts of the Country. As this is the case, what are we to expect but in a short time to lie open to all the cruelties they are now obliged to suffer; our lives to be taken away in the most inhuman manner, our property to be wantonly destroyed, and ourselves and our families reduced to the greatest distress. These are the dangers to which we look forward with fear and anxiety, and these are the dangers against which we pray that in your wisdom you w'd make the speediest and most effectual provision. Besides, should the cruelties of the savages extend as far as us, you must know that we are not capable of ourselves to make adequate resistance; we must flie, and leave those who are now more remote from danger exposed to all that inhumanity which we now dread before the danger reaches us. We will cheerfully contribute all the assistance in our power to the present sufferers; but should we ourselves become the sufferers, many circumstances will concur to hinder us from exerting ourselves effectually for that purpose. Farther, what will be the consequence of the savages ravaging the country and driving the inhabitants before them without any opposition. We shall shortly be deprived of the common support of life, nor have any secure retreat to w'h we may flie for protection. Hence it appears that the sooner we put a stop to their progress, it will in many respects turn out to our greater advantage. We would not pretend to dictate to your wisdom any particular plan necessary in the present exegency, but only pray in the most suppliant manner that you would seriously consider our situation and proceed in the speediest manner against the evils that now threaten us. Neither do we lay these considerations before you to awaken in you the feelings of humanity. We apprehend you are sensibly affected with the view of our distressed situation, and will at all times act for the good of the people, whose sentiments you are supposed to speak. We only mean to shew you that as we are a part of the whole, so the whole must be rendered more weak in proportion to the loss we or any other part may sustain. Your hearkening to the voice of our petition, and endeavoring to give us the speediest succour in your power, will increase our obligations to confess ourselves to be ever bound in duty to pray.

"James Coyl, John Moore, James Shields, John Tice, John Shedugars, Andrew Michael, William Marks, Andrew Hammer, George Shedagars, John Galloher, David Walker, Nicholas Welch, Thomas Hunter, James Morton, Robert Ramsey, James Fleming, Campbell Lefever, Samuel Morton, James Neely, John Morton, Tho's Burd, Alexander McCalroy, James McBride, George Wilson, John Stitt, John Appleby, James Wilson, John Wilson, Hugh Davidson, John Morrison, John Walker, Patrick Fitzsimmons, John Ramsey, William Carter, Rob't Nelson, Tho's Carter, John Brison, James McCee, Charles McGill, Henry Holtz, Isaac Lefever."

These petitioners chiefly resided in the territory now embraced in Dublin township, Huntingdon Co., and Dublin township, Fulton Co., and many of their descendants now live in the same neighborhood.

The Tories and their Expedition to Kittanning—Murders by the Indians.—The year 1778 opened inauspiciously for the province, and especially for the settlers in the interior. The British were in possession of Philadelphia, the Indians were menacing the settlements and Tories along the frontiers, adding terror to the already alarmed pioneers and their families. The number of the residents in the upper part of the Juniata Valley that adhered to the mother-country during the early days of the struggle for independence has been greatly exaggerated, and the statement that the valley contained nearly as many Tories as it did patriots[1] is a great error, and an unwarranted reflection upon the patriotism of a region, sparsely populated as it was, that when New England appealed for aid, furnished a company of frontier riflemen to assist in the defense of Boston in 1775. On the other hand, public sentiment in favor of independence was so strong in the valley, that those clearly guilty of treasonable practices could not dwell longer therein, while the sojourn of the suspected became very uncomfortable to them. Of the small number that had the courage to even secretly espouse the British cause, John Weston, who it is supposed then resided in Canoe Valley, a mile or two west of Water Street, was the chosen leader, and at his house convocations were held.

It appears that a general plan was formed to concentrate a large force of Indians and Tories at Kittanning, then cross the mountain by the Indian path, and at Burgoon's Gap divide, one party to march through the Cove and Conococheague Valleys, the other to follow the Juniata Valley, and form a junction at Lancaster, killing all the inhabitants on their march. The Tories were to have for their share in this general massacre all the fine farms on the routes, and the movable property was to be divided among the Indians.[2] A party was organized and proceeded to Kittanning in April, 1778, but by a mistake on the part of the leaders their designs were providentially frustrated. Gen. Roberdeau, in a letter from Standing Stone, April 23d, to the lieutenant of Cumberland County,[3] apprised him of the expedition, and estimated the number of men therein at thirty. He stated that one of them (Hess) had been taken, who, in a confession extorted, said they expected to be joined by three hundred men from the other side of the Allegheny. Roberdeau mentions the prevalence of other reports fixing the number of whites and savages at a thousand, but in view of provisioning so large a body, thinks the number to be overestimated. Carothers reported to the Council, April 24th, that he had just received an express from Kishacoquillas Valley for a supply of arms, and bringing information that Col. McAlevy had come there express himself, with an account that a body of Tories, numbering nearly three hundred and twenty, had driven a number of inhabitants from "Standing Stone Town." This report, if it had any foundation in fact, was greatly exaggerated, and Col. McAlevy, who was not upon the ground himself, was misinformed. Richard Weston, one of the Kittanning party, was arrested on his return to the valley, and sent, April 27th, by Gen. Roberdeau,[1] under guard commanded by Lieut. Means, to the Carlisle jail, to await the orders of the Council. Carothers,[2] who understood the condition of affairs at this critical time, stated the inhabitants are very much disheartened, not knowing at what moment those "villains" may bring down the savages to murder their families. Col. Piper, whose residence was some miles distant from the path from Carlisle to Kittanning, did not appear to receive information of the contemplated invasion until May 4th, when he wrote to the president as follows:[3]

[1] Jones, p. 250. [2] Ibid., p. 251. [3] Archives, vi. 436.

"Sir,—An affair of the most alarming nature (and as I believe altogether unprecedented) has happened lately in a Corner of this County, and wch I could not think myself justifiable in not communicating to the Honorable, the Supreme Executive Council of this State. 'Tis as follows: a Number of evil-minded Persons, to the amount of thirty-five (I think), having actually associated together, marched away toward the Indian country, in order to join the Indians, and to conduct them into the Inhabitance, and there united, kill, burn, and destroy Men, Women and Children.

"They came up with a Body of Indians near or at the Kittannings, and in conferring with them, they, the Indians, suspecting some design in the white People, on wch one of their Chiefs shot one Weston, who was the Ring-leader of the Tories, and scalp'd him before the Rest, and immediately (as if Divine Providence ever attentive to Baffle and defeat the Schemes and Measures of wicked Men) the rest fled and dispersed.

"A very considerable Number of the well-affected Inhabitants having, as soon as their combination and march was known, pursued them, and met five of them, and yesterday brought them under a strong Guard to the County Gaol.[4]

"They confess their Crime and Intention of destroying both Men and property. As these People thus in open rebellion are so numerous, there is great Reason to believe them as a part of a greater whole in some dangerous confederacy with the Common Enemy, either at Phila. or Detroit.[5]

"Therefore it was as well my own Opinion as that of a Number of the Principal Inhabitants met for that purpose, that the Honorable Council be immediately requested to order in their Wisdom such relief as may appear to be most expedient, either in removing those Prisoners to some Place of greater security, or else order Commissioners for their immediate and speedy Trials, wch last wou'd be the most grateful to the Country, who are extremely incensed against them, and think the prosecution wou'd be more easily effected where the Evidence is on the spot, and perhaps give an immediate Check to so openly avowed Rebellion.

"In the county of Westmoreland, at a little Fort called Fort Wallace, within some sixteen or twenty miles of Fort Ligoneir, there were nine Men killed, and one man, their Captn, wounded last week; the Partys of Indians was very numerous, so that between Indians (and the still more savage) Tories, these backward Counties are in real distress.

"I am, Sir,
"with the greatest respects,
"your most obedt
"Hble Servt
"John Piper."

[1] Pa. Archives, vi. 446. [2] Ibid., 447. [3] Ibid., 469. [4] At Bedford.

[5] Piper here gave expression to an opinion prevalent at the time that the Tories were in communication with the British officers in Philadelphia, and that the Kittanning expedition, too precipitately undertaken, was a part of a plan to crush out opposition to England's rule over the colonies.

In his letter of the 15th of the same month, Piper gives a still more gloomy account of the consternation of the people, the flying of great numbers to places of greater security, and the increasing dread of those who remained of an attack from the savages or their Tory allies.

After Richard Weston's capture, he was examined, April 27th, relative to the Kittanning expedition, and narrated the circumstances as follows:

That John Weston,[6] his brother, asked him if he would go out to hunt. That he had heard at the Standing Stone that a company of men were going to join the English and the Indians, and his informant was Benjamin Elliot, in conversation with Francis Cluggage. That he refused to go hunting, and that brother John and wife both came and entreated him to go, and he was prevailed on. That last Thursday was a week he set off with his said brother, and the same evening was led by his brother to a company of men whom they met in the woods in Sinking Spring valley, viz., Samuel Berrow, Jacob Hare,[7] Michael Here, Peter Shaver,[8] Peter Daly, Adam Portmerser,[9] Peter Portmerser, and old Portmerser, the father of Adam and Peter, —— McKee,[10] James Little,[11] John Campbell and William Campbell, William Hamson, James Armstrong,[12] John and William Shilling, and others, whose names he does not remember, making in the whole, with his brother and himself, the number of thirty-one. That McKee, Jacob Hare, and Samuel Berrow, in particular, urged him, with a promise of three hundred acres of land, to pick the same where he pleased, if he would go with the company to the Kittanning to join four or five hundred English and Indians, and to return to Fort Pitt, Frankstown, and Sinking Valley, to kill the male inhabitants capable of bearing arms who were in any kind of fort or place of defense, and all others of any sex or age who attempted to escape or elude their search. That if he refused to join said company he would be hung or banished to the Bay of Honduras, if the English prevailed over this country. That he went with the company over Allegheny Mountain. That in their progress they were met by Indians, and [6] These Westons were sons of John Weston, Sr., an Englishman by birth, who resided on Raystown Branch, about a mile above its mouth, in Juniata township. Capt. John then lived on the "Means" farm, Canoe Valley.

[7] Jacob Hare, who resided where Mapleton, Huntingdon Co., is built, at the mouth of Hare's valley.

[8] Lived at the mouth of Shaver's Creek.

[9] Adam Bardmess. His name appears on the assessment of Barree township for 1773 as Pottmiser, and he is charged with five acres of improved land, horses and cows; in 1774, as Beardmiser; in 1776, as Patmisser. He owned lot No. 16 in the borough of Huntingdon, and a small improvement in the vicinity of the town. After the unfavorable result of his trip to Kittanning, a residence in Huntingdon was not congenial, and he went eastward. April 15, 1785, he sold his possessions in this locality to Henry Wikel, of Washington County, Md.

[10] Lived in Amberson's Valley, Franklin Co.

[11] Lived in Path Valley, Franklin Co.; called in some [illegible]s Wi[illegible]

[12] Lived in Tuscarora Valley, Huntingdon Co.; [illegible] John.

that one of them shot his brother, and another of them scalped him. That after his brother was shot, McKee pulled a letter out of his pocket which he had got from an English officer in Carlisle gaol, and with this letter displayed a handkerchief, crying peace, peace, brothers, but that the savages ran off without giving attention. That he immediately returned, with McKee, Jacob and Michael Hare, Little, Adam Portmerser, Peter Portmerser, William and John Shilling, Peter Shaver, William Hamson, and one or two more whose names he does not know. That he parted with some of them at the foot of Allegheny, and with some others in Sinking Valley, all of whom declared they would never return home or surrender themselves, but go to Baltimore, and wait the arrival of the English fleet. That he came and surrendered himself to Capt. John McDonald, at Edward Beaty's. That McKee informed the company that he understood a number of English were to join the savages, and about the 10th of next month to come down upon this State. That he was informed by his brother, John Weston, that John Hess was to meet and join the company. That he heard Zebediah Rickets, now a prisoner, say that if he knew how to leave his family he would go away, to avoid taking the oath prescribed by the State.[1]

Col. Armstrong, June 23d, reports that a woman and two children were missing and one man wounded at the head of Kishacoquillas Valley. This woman was the wife of Rev. David Eaton, who then lived on the farm lying immediately west of the gap in Standing Stone Mountain, Brady township, and now constituting a part of what was commonly called the "Milliken mill property." Mr. Eaton had settled there in 1775[2] or earlier. The wife and two children were carried off by the savages, and all efforts on the part of the husband and father, assisted by many of his neighbors, were unavailing. Skeletons were afterwards found near a path in the Warrior's Mark settlement which were by some supposed to be those of the captives. A son, Joseph, escaped, and afterwards became a man of some prominence as a surveyor and military officer. He removed to Ohio about 1805. His son George W., adopting the calling of the grandfather, afterwards became connected as professor with colleges in Kentucky and Hamilton, N. Y., and died in the latter place Aug. 3, 1872.

The wounded man mentioned by Armstrong was a young Slagle, who, according to one tradition, was passing through the gap from his home to Pridmore's mill with a bag of grain. He was shot by some one in ambush, and instead of returning home proceeded to Fort Standing Stone to have his wounds dressed. There was no surgeon at that place, and despairing of rendering him the necessary aid, some friends set out with him in a canoe to go down the river to Middletown, the nearest point where he could be properly cared for, but he died before reaching his destination. He declared that he was shot by Jacob Hare.

Armstrong, always practical, insisted that the grain then growing upon the frontier farms was of such importance for the support of the people that it must be harvested, and, for the present, the idea of invading the Indian country must be postponed to enable the harvest to be cut, and to that end suggested that the work in the fields must be conducted by associated bodies of men, with guards to cover them and patrols to pass from settlement to settlement. He also recommended to Congress[3] a simultaneous advance, at the proper time, of not less than three bodies of men from widely separated points into the Indian country in the valley of the Allegheny, as the most efficient means of routing the invaders of the settlements of the province. The authorities endeavored to carry out the suggestions for the protection of the frontiersmen engaged in gathering the crops, and to that end Col. Carothers sent to Standing Stone Valley such men as could be spared for that purpose.[4] In a consultation between the Council and the board of war arrangements were made for frontier defense, and it was agreed that Col. Brodhead's regiment, then (July 14th) on the march for Pittsburgh, should be ordered to the Standing Stone. In addition to these Continental troops, three hundred militia from Cumberland County and two hundred from York County were to be ordered to the same place. Brodhead's regiment, or the part of it ordered to Standing Stone, was estimated at three hundred men; these, with the militia, would make a force of eight hundred.[5] Other bodies, numbering ten hundred and fifty and five hundred and seventy, were ordered respectively to Sunbury and Easton. Brodhead received orders to pass over to the upper branches of the Susquehanna, and if he reached Standing Stone at all, did not halt long there. The presence of his command exercised a salutary effect, as great number of the terrified inhabitants on the West Branch and Penn's Valley returned and saved most of the growing crops. Col. Carothers reported August 13th[6] that great difficulty was experienced in procuring arms for the militia of Cumberland County ordered to Standing Stone; that some of them had gone, and others were ready to go, but were delayed from want of camp-kettles, haversacks, and canteens. Dr. William Shippen, director-general, was informed by the Council that beside the militia at Sunbury there were two other commands in the Continental service that would require a supply of medicine; one, consisting of five hundred men, at Standing Stone, on the Juniata, in Bedford County, and the other of four

[1] Archives, vi. 542.

[2] He obtained a warrant for the land Feb. 3, 1775. In June following William Scott, an assistant of William Maclay, deputy surveyor, went to Eaton's "dwelling-house" and made a survey of the land. On June 20, 1783, he obtained a pass to go to Canada in search for his children, who he hoped were yet alive.

[3] Archives, vi. 613.

[4] Ibid., 620.

[5] Ibid., 638–41.

[6] Ibid., 709.

hundred and fifty men at or near Easton; and he was instructed to pay attention to these two bodies at the same time that the one at Sunbury was supplied.[1]

During the latter part of 1778 and the early months of 1779 there were frequent rumors of Indian incursions east of the Allegheny Mountains and some murders committed. In the latter part of June, Breckenridge and his daughter were killed and scalped by the Indians on their plantation three miles southwest of McConnellstown, in Penn township. This event struck terror among the residents of the adjacent valleys, and as a result the Frankstown settlement was almost abandoned.[2]

In May, 1780, Col. McAlevy attended the Council in person and presented a petition of his neighbors asking that military relief should be sent to Standing Stone Valley. On the 30th of the same month, Maj. Robert Cluggage, in writing to Col. Piper from Huntingdon, reports that lurking bands of Indians had been at one of the gaps of the Allegheny, and that William Phillips on the preceding Friday had seen two Indians near the Three Springs, and was deterred from firing on them by having a child with him, which he was apprehensive might fall into their hands if he led an encounter. He, however, collected some of the residents of the vicinity and traced them towards Pridmore's mill,[3] but finally lost their track and abandoned pursuit. He expressed fears of other savage invasions, and detailing sixteen men as a guard for Huntingdon, urged that the post in Sinking Valley should be defended on account of convenient access to the gaps of the Allegheny.

Col. Piper having been elected to represent Bedford County in the Council, he resigned the lieutenancy of the county, and on November 21st the vacancy was filled by the appointment of George Ashman, who then resided on the "Three Springs" farm, in Clay township.

The General Assembly, spurred by frequent importunities from local officers and private citizens, finally resolved to raise four companies of Rangers for the defense of the frontiers, one company from each of the counties of Northumberland, Westmoreland, Northampton, and Bedford. For the Bedford company the Council, Feb. 10, 1781, appointed John Boyd captain, and Richard Johnston lieutenant. March 14th the Council, taking into consideration the defense of the frontiers until these companies could be raised, ordered the lieutenant of Cumberland County to call out two hundred militia, one-half thereof to be immediately marched to the defense of Bedford County and the other half for Northumberland, to be stationed as the lieutenants of those counties shall direct. On the 31st the lieutenants of Northumberland and Bedford were authorized and directed to enlist in the companies commanded respectively by Capts. Robinson and Boyd and Lieut. Kreamer as many volunteers to serve seven months as would fill their companies.

Lieut. Ashman, June 5th, wrote Col. Arthur Buchanan, at Kishacoquillas, he had learned by express that on the morning of that day, as a party of volunwere going from Bedford to Frankstown, a band of Indians fell upon and killed thirty; seven only of the party escaped and made their way to the garrison at Frankstown. He urges Buchanan to exert himself in getting men to go to Standing Stone, and to let the residents along the river know of the movement so they can join with his men on the march. The latter reported on the 5th that the day before Col. Brown had marched a party to Standing Stone, and Capt. Means led another to reinforce the post in Penn's Valley.

Various traditions have been current relative to this sortie, differing so much in details that it is preferred to give the account officially transmitted by Lieut. Ashman to the president of the Supreme Executive Council. Ashman lived some distance from the scene, and may not have been fully informed as to all that occurred. He wrote,—

"BEDFORD COUNTY, June 12, 1781.

"SIR,—I have to inform you that on Sunday, the third of this instant, a party of Rangers under Captain Boyd, eight in number, with twenty-five Volunteers under Capt. Moore and Lieut. Smith, of the militia of this County, had an engagement with a party of Indians (said to be numerous) within three miles of Frankstown, where seventy-five of the Cumberland militia were stationed, commanded by Captn. Jas. Young. Some of the party, running into the Garrison, acquainting Capt. Young of what had happened, he issued out a party immediately and brought in seven more, five of whom are wounded, and two made their escape to Bedford,—eight killed and scalped,—Captn Boyd, Captn Moore, and Captn Dunlap, with six others, are missing. Captn Young, expecting from the enemy's numbers that his garrison would be surrounded, sent express to me immediately; but, before I could collect as many volunteers as was sufficient to march to Frankstown with, the enemy had returned over Allegheny hill. The waters being high, occasioned by heavy rains, they could not be pursued. This county at this time is in a deplorable situation. A number of families are flying away daily ever since the late damage was done. I can assure your Excellency that if immediate assistance is not sent to this county that the whole of the frontier inhabitants will move off in a few days. Colo. Abm. Smith, of Cumberland, has just informed me that he has no orders to send us any more militia from Cumberland County to our assistance, which I am much surprised to hear. I shall move my family to Maryland in a few days, as I am convinced that not any one settlement is able to make any stand against such numbers of the enemy. If your Excellency should be pleased to order us any assistance, less than three hundred will be of but little relief to this county. Ammunition we have not any. The Cumberland militia will be discharged in two days. It is dreadful to think what the consequences of leaving such a number of helpless inhabitants may be to the cruelties of a savage enemy.

"Please to send me by the first opportunity three hundred pounds, as I cannot possibly do the business without money. You may depend that nothing shall be wanting in me to serve my country as far as my abilities.

"I have the honor to be,
"Your Excellency's most obedient,
"humble servant,
"GEORGE ASHMAN,
"Lieut. Bed'd Cty."

The masterly policy of Washington in the autumn of this year, resulting in the surrender of Lord Cornwallis' army at Yorktown, October 19th, revived the spirits of the patriots and encouraged the despondent, and as the joyful intelligence was carried from settlement to settlement the bold frontiersmen were stimulated to hope that the day would soon arrive when the bloody scalping-knife would be returned to its sheath never more to be removed, and that along the fertile valleys of the Juniata the husbandman would be permitted to pursue his toil in peace. To guard the British soldiers surrendered at Yorktown levies were made upon the organized militia of the neighboring States, and the Council, November 20th, ordered Capt. Boyd's company of Rangers to march to that place and act as guards over the prisoners, with instructions to remain there until February 25th following, and then return. The Council, Feb. 23, 1782, ordered Lieut. Richard Johnston, then at Yorktown, to march with his command forthwith to Bedford, and there put himself under the command of the lieutenant of the county for frontier defense. During the balance of the year there were frequent alarms of Indian incursions, some well founded and others imaginative, but the military force was maintained in garrisoning the forts and by scouting parties. The number of men thus employed was sometimes so great as to subject the authorities to much inconvenience in keeping up a supply of provisions. On September 20th, Lieut. Johnston was ordered to march from Bedford County and put himself under the command of Maj.-Gen. Irvine, to take part in a contemplated expedition into the Indian country. Washington disapproved of the movement, the plan was abandoned, and on the 28th, Lieut. Johnston's orders were countermanded. By a return made in November this company consisted of one captain (then a prisoner), one lieutenant, one ensign, two sergeants, two corporals, and forty-five privates.

[1] Pa. Archives, vi. 688. [2] Ibid., vii. 535. [3] Mill Creek, Brady township.

Capt. Boyd, missing after the affray of June 3, 1781, and supposed to have been taken prisoner by the Indians, on Jan. 4, 1783, asked and obtained an order on the provincial treasurer for thirty pounds (specie) on account of his pay, and two days later, on his representation, an order was granted in favor of Henry Dugan, one of his sergeants, for six pounds, who had just "returned from captivity among the savages." By the month of June the safety of the inhabitants of the frontiers, that had for twenty-eight years been frequently menaced, was now so well assured that the Council on the 6th ordered that the Bedford, Westmoreland, and Washington ranging companies should be immediately discharged from the service of the State.

Another Account of the Tory Expedition to Kittanning.—When the news of this intended foray broke upon the residents of the valley, the narrative received high coloring from the affrighted people, and it is difficult at this day, after the lapse of a century, to arrive at the precise facts. The statement of Richard Weston, one of the participants, given above, should have been full and correct, but possibly through fear or from a desire to shield himself or companions he may have withheld some important circumstances and become oblivious of names. From a manuscript entitled "An Account of some of the first settlers of the Juniata in Huntingdon County, collected from the first settlers themselves, by Samuel Caldwell,"[1] the following statement of the expedition was compiled.

During the time Gen. Howe, the British commander, occupied Philadelphia an association was formed by the Tories in this region. They thought the British were about to reduce the country to subjection, and supposed that by assisting the Indians to massacre the settlers on the Juniata they would be entitled to share the spoils and apportion the principal farms among themselves. The conspiracy extended from Path, through Amberson's and Tuscarora Valleys, and up the Juniata into Sinking Valley. The chief men were McGee,[2] of Amberson's Valley, Capt. John Weston, and Lieut. Jacob Hare.

McGee brought their men up the river into Sinking Valley. The place of rendezvous was on Brush Mountain, near Union Furnace, where the men arrived in small parties, generally traveling by night. Weston furnished provisions. After the company was organized, the force started to meet the expected Indian allies at Kittanning. Halting a short distance from the town, the captain seated his men, and he, with Lieut. Hare, entered the town with a flag, and were received in due form. Weston, who could speak the language of the tribes there located, explaining the object of the visit of the white brethren, said they had come to meet them as brothers in arms, and to lead them against their enemies on the Juniata, until they were all destroyed. The savages were pleased with the prospect of so many white allies, but, exercising that caution which is so remarkably developed in their character to provide against possible treachery, they mounted a few of their warriors on horseback with cocked guns, and placing Weston and Hare in the advance, proceeded to meet the residue of the company and escort them into the town. Capt. McGee and the men who remained with him, instead of laying down their arms, as the Indian notion of military courtesy would require on such a mission, rose up with their guns in their hands and moved forward at a quick step. This movement alarmed the Indians, and supposing they were betrayed by spies, immediately shot Weston, raised the war-whoop, and fled to the town. This was a reception not looked for, and full of alarm, Hare and his comrades made haste to reach the Juniata.

Meantime information of the expedition having been organized and its objects leaked out through the wives of some of the participants, who were anxious to enlist the sympathies of some of their neighbors, and thereby save them from the general massacre which they expected would follow the return of their husbands and Indian allies. It was preconcerted that the Tory families and those in sympathy with them should display from their houses a certain flag or signal. The inhabitants of all houses not so designated were to be destroyed. A man named Pierce, who lived with Michael Cryder at his mill, two miles above the Standing Stone, accompanied the Kittanning party. On the night he left some one wrote on the door of the mill, "This mill belongs to Gen. Howe," and it was supposed that Pierce was the writer. After he left, his wife, uneasy about the safety of her friends, disclosed the secret of the expedition to Mrs. Cryder, and insisted that she should hang out the Tory flag. In a similar manner the fact leaked out in Sinking Valley. This information, and the absence of many persons suspected of Toryism, satisfied the people of the truth of the story. Alarm was sounded from house to house, and from fort to fort, and after distributing a sufficient force to garrison the frontier defenses, a large body of scouts was sent out to traverse the country along the eastern base of the Allegheny Mountain, watch the gaps, and note the approach of the expected invaders. Soon they came, not as defiant leaders escorting the dreaded savages, but in detached parties of half-starved and broken-spirited men. Some escaped through the settlements to the eastern counties, and being unknown, avoided punishment. Six were captured and taken to the Bedford jail, where they remained prisoners for some time, but were subsequently, through the intercession of friends, pardoned.

[1] Maj. Caldwell was a son of Robert Caldwell, and his mother a daughter of Matthew Dean, who settled on a farm now in Porter township. His statement was prepared from information communicated by Margaret Means, his aunt, Israel Cryder, his father-in-law, Richard, son of Robert Morrow, who assisted at the "cropping" of Jacob Hare, and other old citizens, and was committed to writing at various dates from 1841 to 1856.

[2] Richard Weston called him McKee.

One party, consisting of four or five, suffering from hunger, went to the house of Matthew Dean, near Lowry's fort, in Canoe Valley, having one of the number tied with hickory withes, and said to Mrs. Dean (she and a servant-man only being at home), "We have been out after the damned Tories for several days, being out of provisions, and are nearly starved. We have one of the rascals tied, and want to take him before a justice of the peace, but cannot go farther without something to eat." Mrs. Dean, deceived by this statement, gave them all the bread she had, and set about baking cakes on a griddle, which the Tories devoured before they were half baked. They also gave a share of the food to the pretended prisoner, saying that "it would not do to let the poor devil starve, although he ought to be hung." After the cravings of hunger were satisfied, Mrs. Dean sent her servant with the party to point out the way to Esquire McCune's. After they got out of sight of the house the prisoner was released from his bonds, and they told the servant, Kelly, to return home. It is not known where this party went, but it is supposed they passed on to the eastern counties.

It is not known what became of McGee. Jacob Hare fled to the lower counties. His property was confiscated and sold by the provincial government. Some time after his return from the Kittanning expedition he stopped for the night at the house of Nathaniel Paul, in Path Valley, Franklin Co., about three miles from Concord. News soon spread that Hare was in the valley, and the next day a number of the neighbors collected, some out of curiosity, and others determined to avenge the murder of relatives or friends by the savages or their Tory allies. Among the number that had assembled were Richard and Thomas Morrow, William McMullen, William Kelly, Edward Kelly, Thomas Askey, James Lathers, Matthew Ormsby, William Darlington, and a man named Shoemaker. Various methods of punishment were proposed. The severity of some of them indicated the bitter feeling that then prevailed against any one clearly in the Tory interest. More humane counsels prevailed, and it was decided that he should be "cropped." A case-knife was "hacked" along the blade to resemble a saw, and with this instrument Darlington executed the sentence by sawing off both of Hare's ears close to his head. He was then set at liberty, and left the Juniata Valley, never to return. He became a minister in the West, and lived some years thereafter in Ohio or Kentucky.

Israel Cryder named Capt. John Weston, Jr., Richard Weston, Capt. McGee, of Path Valley, Peter Shaver, who lived at the mouth of Shaver's Creek, three men of the name of Potmesser (Bardmess), father and two sons, who lived at Huntingdon, James Bridges, who farmed the Michael Cryder land near that place, as some of the Kittanning party, which he thought numbered about thirty. He stated that Peter Dewitt and Thomas Vaughn were among the scouts who were watching along the foot of the Allegheny for the return of Weston's men.

On the representation of Robert Galbraith and others, citizens of Bedford County, that there were in the jail of that county several persons charged with treasonable practices and one said to have committed murder, and a list of the names having been laid before the Council August 18th, it was decided that in view of the situation of the county and the danger there might be of the rescue of the traitors, a speedy trial of the offenders was highly necessary. Accordingly, John Armstrong, of Cumberland, Barnard Dougherty and James Martin, of Bedford, Archibald McClean, of York, and John Hubly, of Lancaster County, were appointed, and on the 24th commissioned to "inquire, on the oath of good and lawful men of the said county of Bedford, of and concerning the said offenses, and to determine the same according to law." September 29th was the day named for the commission to meet, but it appears from letters of Mr. Dougherty dated April 6th, and one from Mr. McClean in September, 1779, that their duties had not been fully executed. The names of the persons tried or the result of the trials is not known.

CHAPTER VIII.

Highways—Indian Paths—Public Roads—The River—Turnpike Roads —Canal—Railroads.

Indian Trails.—When the Indian trader first penetrated the wilds of the valley of the Juniata, the only highways that traversed the area now embraced within the counties of Huntingdon and Blair, were the trails or paths used by the aborigines. They were mere "bridle-paths," only wide enough to admit the passage of a horse and its rider, and crossed the counties in various directions. The principal one crossed in a general northwesterly direction, and the earliest written account of this is found in the journal of Conrad Weiser, sent by the colonial government in 1748 to treat with the Indians on the Ohio, as follows:

"Aug^{t}. 11th.—Set out from my house and came to James Galbreath that day, 30 Miles.

"12th.—Came to George Croghan's, 15 Miles.

"13th.—To Robert Dunning's, 20 Miles.

"14th.—To Tuscarroro Path, 30 Miles.

"15th and 16th.—Lay by on account of the Men coming back Sick, & some other affairs hindering us.

"17th.—Crossed the Tuscarroro Hill & came to the Sleeping Place called the Black Log,[1] 20 miles.

"18th.—Had a great rain in the afternoon; came within two miles of the Standing Stone,[2] 24 miles.

"19th.—We travelled but 12 miles; were obliged to [illegible] things in the afternoon.

"20th.—Came to Franks Town, but saw no Houses or Cabbins; here we overtook the Goods, because four of George Croghan's Hands fell sick, 26 Miles.[3]

"21st.—Lay by, it raining all Day.

"22d.—Crossed Allegheny Hill & came to the Clear Fields, 16 miles."

He continues to describe subsequent incidents of his journey to Logstown and other points, conferences with the Indians, and delivery of the presents to them, his turning homeward on the 19th of September.[4]

At the Black Log, another fork passed by the Three Springs, through Sideling Hill Gap, by Raystown, etc., to Logstown. Hugh Crawford[5] and Andrew Montour, April 16, 1752, Indian traders, and doubtless familiar with every path in this region, reported to the provincial authorities[6] the distance from Philadelphia to "Twightwees," on a branch of Ohio, via George Croghan's, "Auchquick," Frankstown, Clear Fields, etc. John Harris, in his account of the road to Logstown, taken in 1754, gives the following interesting data:

"From my Ferry to Geo. Croghan's	5 Mil^{s}. to the Kittitany Moun^{s}	9
to Geo. Cowen's House	6
to Andrew Montour's	5
to the Tuscaroraw Hill	9
to Tho^{s} Mitchell's Sleep^{g} Place	3
to Tuscaroraw	14
to the Cove Spring[7]	10
to the Shadow of Death[8]	8
to the Black Log	3
Now the Road forks towards Ray's Town & Frank's Town, we continue Ray's Town Road to Allegheney	3
to the 3 Springs[9]	10
to the sidling Hill Gap	8
to Juniata Hill	8
to Juniata Creek at ye Crossing	8
to the Snake's Spring	8
to Ray's Town[10]	4
to the Shawana Cabbins	8
to Allegheney Hill	6
to Edmond's Swamp	8
to Stoney Creek[11]	6"

Then follow other distances and points of note to Logstown,—

"Now beginning at the black Log, Frank's Town Road.
to Aughwick[12]	6 Miles.
to Jack Armstrong's Narrows,[13] so called from his being there murdered	8
to the Standing Stone[14] (abo^{t}. 14 f^{t}. high, 6 inch square)	10
(At each of these last places we cross Juniata.)
to the next & last crossing at Juniata	8
to Water Street (branch of Juniata)	10
to the big Lick	10
to Frank (Stephen's) Town[15]	5
to the Beaver Damms	10
to Allegheney Hill	4
to the clear Fields	6
to John Hartts Sleep^{g} place	12
to the head of Susquehannah	12
to the Shawana Cabbins	12
to P. Shaver's Sleeping place, at two large licks	12
to the 18 mile Run	12
to the 10 mile Lick	6
to Kiskemenette's Town on the Creek, runs into Allegheney Riv^{r} 6 mil^{s} down (almost as large as Schuylkill)	10
to the Chartiere's Landing on Allegh^{y}	8
to the Kittanning Town up the River	18
to Venango, higher up Allegh^{y}	70
Down the River from Chartiere's Land^{g} to Pine Creek	14
to the Logs Town	17

Logs Town lays due West from J. Harris's Ferry.

"Note.—John Harris told me that he verily believed that Logs Town was distant from his House due West an hundred miles less than the within acco^{t} mentions, the road he went having so many great Crooks."

"Joseph Shippen, Jr."

In December, 1753, Governor Hamilton sent James Patten to deliver a message to the chiefs of the Six Nations at Ohio, and among other instructions he was directed to take a particular account of the road from Carlisle. The concern of the provincial government was to ascertain if the Forks of the Ohio were within the limits of the province, the boundary lines of which had not been fully ascertained. Patten was to call at Mr. George Croghan's, at "Aucquick," and consult with him. After his return he and Andrew Montour constructed and presented to the Council, March 2, 1754, a map containing "a just Description of the Road, as well by Computation as by the Compass," which they believed "to be as near the Truth as it could be known without actual Mensuration." The following tables were taken from the map:

The Computed Distance of the Road by the Indian Traders from Carlisle to Shanoppin's Town.

	From Carlisle. Miles.
From Carlisle to Major Montour's	10
From Montour's to Jacob Pyatt's	25
From Pyatt's to George Croghan's, at Aucquick Old Town	15

[1] At the gap east of Orbisonia.

[2] Now Huntingdon.

[3] Croghan's men were employed in transporting the goods sent by the Provincial Council to the Ohio, intended as presents to the Indians.

[4] Colonial Records, v. 248.

[5] Hugh Crawford subsequently became the owner of the "Standing Stone" tract of land.

[6] Pennsylvania Archives, ii. p. 133.

[7] Trough Spring, in Tell township.

[8] Shade Gap, in Shade Mountain.

[9] Near Saltillo, Huntingdon Co.

[10] Bedford.

[11] A branch of Conemaugh.

[12] Afterward known as Fort Shirley, where Shirleysburg now stands.

[13] Gap in Jack's Mountain, above Mount Union.

[14] Huntingdon.

[15] Frankstown, Blair Co.

From Croghan's to the Three Springs	10
From the Three Springs to Sideling Hill	7
From Sideling Hill to Contz's Harbour	8
From Contz's Harbour to the top of Ray's Hill	1
From Ray's Hill to the 1 crossing of Juniata	10
From the 1 crossing of Juniata to Allaquapy's Gap	6
From Allaquapy's Gap to Ray's Town	5
From Ray's Town to the Shawonese Cabbin	8
From Shawonese Cabbins to the Top of Allegheny Mountain	8
From Allegheny Mountain to Edmund's Swamp	8
From Edmund's Swamp to Conamahony's Creek	6
From Conamahony to Kackanapaulins	5
From Kackanapaulins to Loyal Hannin	18
From Loyal Hannin to Shanoppin's Town	50

The Courses of the Road from Carlisle to Shanoppin's Town by Compass.

N. 20 W. 8 miles to Major Montour's.
W.S.W. 20 miles to Jacob Pyatt's.
N. 20 W. 8 miles to George Croghan's, or Aucquick old Town.
N. 70 W. 7 miles to the three Springs.
S. 70 W. 5 miles to Aucquick Gap.
S. 70 W. 5½ miles to Contz's Harbour.
S. 80 W. 9 miles to Allaquapy's Gap.
West 3 miles to Ray's Gap.
N. 45 W. the course up the Gap.
N. 63 W. 5 miles to the Shawonese Cabbins.
N. 60 W. 5 m[s] to the top of Allegheny Mount[s].
N. 75 W. 4½ miles to Edmund's Swamp.
N. 80 W. 4 miles to Conamahony Creek.
N. 10 W. 3½ miles to Kackanapaulin's House.
N. 64 W. 12 miles to Loyal Hannin Old Town.
N. 20 W. 10 miles to the Forks of the Road.
West 10 miles to ———.
N. 80 W. 15 miles to Shanoppin's Town.

A Mr. West was at the same time examined by the Council, and he expressed his opinion that the courses and distances set down by Mr. Patten came as near to the truth as was possible without actual measurement.

In the latter part of August, 1754, Conrad Weiser set out on a journey from home to Aucquick, by order of the government, to have a conference with some Indians. In his journal he states that he left Andrew Montour's on the 2d of September. "Rode six hours before noon and three after—took up lodging in the woods. 3d. Sat out by six o'clock, and by eight came to the Trough Spring; by nine to the Shadow of Death; by eleven to the Black Log, and by twelve arrived at Aucquick."

This principal road entered Huntingdon County in the vicinity of Blair's Mills, and passed up the Trough Spring branch of Tuscarora Creek, by the "Trough" or "Cove" spring, through Shade Gap, northward along Black Log valley to the "Black Log," in or near the gap east of Orbisonia; through Shirleysburg (Aughwick Old Town, or Fort Shirley); crossed to the northern side of the Juniata above Mount Union; crossing Juniata again to the south side at the lower end of Cypress Island, in the borough of Huntingdon; over the Warrior's ridge and crossing to the north side of the river near Hart's Log (Alexandria); thence via Water Street and Canoe valley to Frankstown and Hollidaysburg; and thence over the Allegheny. The southern branch, leaving the main road at Black Log, passed the Three Springs near the borough of that name, and leaving Huntingdon County at Sideling Hill Gap, touched Everett and Bedford, crossing the Allegheny a number of miles southwest of the main or Kittanning trail.

There were a number of other paths of minor importance. One extended from Frankstown to the Bald Eagle's Nest, near Milesburg, Centre Co. A branch ran from this through Warrior's Mark, Franklin, and Morris to the main road at Water Street, and will be noted in the description of those townships. Another from Raystown to Frankstown, one from Standing Stone to Raystown, one from the mouth of Raystown Branch to Raystown, one from Standing Stone to the Bald Eagle's Nest, etc.

First Public Roads.—At the January sessions, 1772, of the Bedford court, on the petition of Samuel Anderson[1] and others, inhabitants of the township of "Barree," setting forth the necessity of a road leading from the Standing Stone or Hart's Log by Boquet's Spring (at McConnellstown) and up Woodcock Valley to the crossings of Yellow Creek, and from thence to join the great road near Bloody Run, now Everett, James Little,[2] William Shirley,[3] Robert Friggs,[4] Hugh Guttery, Richard Long,[5] and Samuel Anderson were appointed viewers. A report not being made by these viewers, on the 14th of July following, a petition of inhabitants of "Barree and Coleraine" townships, representing that a road between the points above mentioned would be of great use to the public, the court named Richard Long, Hugh Guthrey, Samuel Thompson,[4] James Little, Samuel Anderson, and Walter Clark[5] to view the road and make report of their proceedings to the next court. This appointment did not secure a report, and at October sessions the persistent inhabitants of Barree township were heard by the court in another petition, when John Piper,[6] Esquire, Richard Long, Michael Cryder,[7] Samuel Anderson, James Little, and William Shirley were appointed viewers. A favorable result was not yet secured, and at April sessions, 1774, urged by another petition of inhabitants of the township named, John Piper, Esquire, Richard Long, James Little, John Mitchell,[8] Samuel Anderson, and Michael Cryder were appointed to view. These viewers laid out a road and made return to July sessions of the same year. One branch of the road began at a "hickory standing on the north side of the Frankstown Branch of Juniata River, about a quarter of a mile below the mouth of Standing Stone Creek, at the end of Standing Stone Mountain, supposed to be at or near the line which divides the county of Bedford from Cumberland; and running from thence north thirty-four degrees west eighty-six perches to Standing Stone Creek; and thence up said creek north fifteen degrees east nineteen perches; and thence north sixty-four degrees west across the said

[1] Resided near Petersburg, in Logan township, Huntingdon Co.
[2] Resided in Shaver's Creek Valley.
[3] Resided on land adjoining the borough of Cassville.
[4] Resided on Raystown Branch.
[5] Resided on Broad Top Mountain.
[6] Resided in Bedford County.
[7] Resided at his mill on the Juniata, two miles above Huntingdon.
[8] Resided on the Henry G. Neff farm, in Porter township.

creek and along the principal street, called Alleghany Street, in the town of Huntingdon ninety-two perches to the centre of the said town, and thence the same course continued and along the same street, in all two hundred and seventy-two perches, to the point of the island above the Standing Stone; thence south fifty-eight degrees west fourteen across the river Juniata," etc. Then follow the courses and distances to a point about one hundred perches southwest of Boquet's Spring, where the other branch of the road was intersected, which began at the lower end of Water Street Narrows, on the northeastern side of the Frankstown Branch of Juniata River, and ran along the same about a mile and a half, then crossed said river, and passing near the house of Charles Caldwell, in Hart's Log Valley, and the house of Henry Lloyd in Woodcock Valley. The route from the intersection of the two branches was through Woodcock Valley, passing near the houses of James Piper and John Piper, to the "great road about fifteen perches above Bloody Run." Computing the measurements of the several lines we find the distances, according to the return of this road survey, from the intersection of Allegheny and Third Streets, in the borough of Huntingdon, to be as follows: To Boquet's Spring at McConnellstown,[1] four miles and two hundred and ninety-five perches; to the crossing of Yellow Creek, thirty miles and two hundred and ten perches; and to Bloody Run, now Everett, thirty-eight miles and two hundred and thirty-six perches; all somewhat short of the actual distances. This route was ordered to be opened to the breadth of thirty-three feet, and confirmed as a public road.

On the 12th day of July, 1773, on a petition of a number of the inhabitants of the county, Benjamin Elliot, John Ramsey, John Walker, Gaven Cluggage, Lawrence Swop, and James Carmichael were appointed to view and lay out a road from the mouth of Aughwick Creek to the great road leading from Bedford to Baltimore. As no report was made by these viewers at April sessions, 1774, on petition, another board of viewers, consisting of James Galbraith, Samuel Thompson, Gaven Cluggage, Giles Stevens, Charles Boyle, and Samuel Daniel, was appointed to lay out a bridle-road. The report of these viewers was presented to the court at July sessions, 1774, and the road ordered to be opened thirty-three feet wide. The line began at Silver's Ford, on the Juniata River, about a mile above the mouth of Aughwick Creek, crossed the creek north of Fort Shirley, passed Robert Cluggage's mill, and intersected the wagon-road at Charles Magill's at the Burnt Cabins. Distance, according to the return, twenty-one miles and fifty-four perches.

At the October sessions, Bartholomew Davis petitioned for a road from his mill "to James Galbraith's, & from thence to Patrick Kanan, on the great road leading from Silver's Ford to the Burnt Cabins." James Galbraith, John Donough, John Ramsey, Robert Ramsey, James Cluggage, and Samuel Thompson were appointed viewers.

At April sessions, 1776, on the petition of inhabitants of Barree township, setting forth "that they labor under many disadvantages for want of roads to the Juniata, Frankstown Branch,[2] and to Bedford, to Huntingdon meeting and market, unto the saw- and grist-mill[3] on the aforesaid branch, and praying the court to appoint men to view, and if they see cause to lay out one road beginning at William McLevy's, on Standing Stone Creek, near to the Big Gap that leads into Kishacoquillas Valley; thence down Shaver's Creek to the mouth thereof into Frankstown Branch; thence down the aforesaid branch to the upper end of Dr. William Smith's island;[4] thence crossing Juniata the nearest and best way unto the public road to Bedford, etc. The other road beginning at the upper end of the aforesaid island where the first-mentioned road ends, on the northeast side of said branch, and from thence down said branch until it joins the aforesaid public road. William McLevy,[5] Alexander McCormick,[6] James Williams, Abraham Haines,[7] Robert Smith, and Nathaniel Jarrard[8] were appointed viewers.

The Revolutionary troubles followed so soon after these proceedings, that road-making was suspended during that contest and for some years afterwards, and the inhabitants were constrained to content themselves with the few roads, paths, or trails already opened. Beside the roads already mentioned, there was one that led from the Raystown Branch through Tatman's Gap and Plank Cabin Valley to Fort Littleton; one from Garard's mill, below McConnellstown, to the Raystown Branch. These were in use in 1787. A road that branched from the Hart's Log road west of the pulpit rocks, and led to the settlements on the river above Petersburg, was known in 1788 as Graffius' road, and one in Plank Cabin Valley was called, as early as 1766, "Thomson's road." A public road from Huntingdon to Three Springs, via Cassville, was laid out about 1790; from McCormick's mill to Huntingdon, surveyed in November of the same year; from Minteer's Gap to the Warm Springs, May, 1791; and that from the Three Springs, through Hare's Valley, to the Juniata occupies in part the route of an ancient path.

The State Road over the Allegheny Mountain,

[1] This spring is on the southern side of the road or street in McConnellstown, in the rear of the houses and below the tannery. It received its name from the fact that Col. Henry Boquet had owned the adjacent land.

[2] In the olden time the river flowing past Huntingdon was called the Frankstown Branch down to its junction with the Raystown Branch.

[3] Cryder's Mills.

[4] Cypress Island.

[5] Gen. William McAlevy.

[6] Resided on Shaver's Creek, West township.

[7] Resided in Huntingdon.

[8] Owned and resided at the lower mill, McConnellstown.

—The General Assembly, March 29, 1787, authorized the president to appoint three commissioners to lay out a State highway from the Frankstown Branch of the river Juniata to the river Conemaugh, from or near points at which these streams become navigable. On the 6th of April, Charles Campbell, of Westmoreland, James Harris, surveyor, of Cumberland, and Solomon Adams, of Bedford, were named as commissioners. Their return was confirmed December 18th, and the road ordered to be opened to the width of fifty feet. It began at "a buttonwood-tree on William Holliday's land, on the bank of the Frankstown Branch of Juniata." The distances to principal points along the line were: To the top of the "Allegany" Mountain, nine miles; to a branch of Conemaugh, seven miles; to the top of Laurel Hill, ten miles; to the Round Top, thirteen and a half miles; to the mouth of Black Lick Creek, four miles; to the mouth of Loyalhanna, eight and three-quarters miles,—making the whole distance fifty-two and one-quarter miles. Advertisements were ordered to be inserted in the Philadelphia, Carlisle, and Pittsburgh newspapers inviting proposals for the construction of the road. Sept. 25, 1788, the proposal of Robert Galbraith, Esq., to clear and make good the road between the points named, to the breadth of fifteen feet, except in places where digging or bridging is necessary, and there but twelve feet, with convenient passing-places, to be completed by the 1st day of January following, for the sum of three hundred and ninety-three pounds in specie, was accepted by the Council. Hugh Davidson and Andrew Henderson were received as sureties for the completion of the work. One-half of the contract price was paid in hand, and the balance was to be paid on the completion of the work. Galbraith, in a communication to the Council, dated Jan. 4, 1790, claims to have completed the road according to contract, and that by actual measurement it was found to be fifty-four miles, eleven miles longer than he was led to suppose it to be at the time he undertook the contract. He also produced certificates from James Karr, Daniel Titus, Michael McGuire, and Joseph McCartney, to the effect that the road was sufficiently opened, digged, and bridged, so that wagons and horses could pass and repass. McGuire stated that he drove "his wagon with upwards of twenty hundred over the Allegheny Mountain with ease." Notwithstanding these statements, it was alleged by some persons that Galbraith had not fully complied with his contract, and after an examination of the road and further consideration by the Council, an order for one hundred pounds was granted him, and the Council expressed the opinion that he should "be directed to complete the opening of the said road from Conemaugh to Loyalhanna, and such part of the said road as is already opened to be completed for the easy passage of carriages." How Galbraith and the State government finally settled their disagreements is not important to the reader. The road was accepted by the public, and it continued, until the construction of the turnpike, to be the chief highway between the valley of the Juniata and the waters of the Ohio.

The Larger Streams declared Public Highways.—Before roads were constructed in this region at public expense, the larger streams were utilized as highways, and it became necessary to dedicate them to public use. The Assembly on the 9th of March, 1771, passed an act declaring a number of the rivers and creeks "public streams and highways for the purposes of navigation up and down the same; and that all obstructions and impediments to the passage of his Majesty's liege subjects up and down the same, erected or hereafter to be erected, shall be deemed, held, and adjudged common nuisances." The Juniata, with the branches as far up as Bedford and Frankstown, was embraced within the provisions of this act. Commissioners were named and authorized to "scour, enlarge, straighten and deepen" the streams mentioned in the act, and penalties prescribed for the erection or maintenance of any dam or other obstruction.[1] By act of Feb. 5, 1794, the Little Juniata from its mouth up to the head of Logan's Narrows, and Standing Stone Creek from its mouth up to the mouth of Laurel Run, were declared public highways for the passage of boats and rafts. Feb. 25, 1795, Benjamin Elliott was authorized to erect a wing-dam on the northeast side of the river. March 23, 1796, Thomas Whittaker was empowered to make "good and convenient landings on both sides of the river Juniata, opposite the end of Montgomery (now Fourth) Street, in the town of Huntingdon, where he at present keeps a ferry, and shall at all times hereafter maintain the same in good order and repair, fit for men, horses, and carriages to pass and repass."[2] Robert Dean and Joseph Smith obtained legislative authority, March 9, 1797, for erecting a wing-dam. John Canan was authorized by act, approved Feb. 19, 1799, to erect a toll-bridge over the "Frankstown Branch of Juniata River, nearly opposite the said John Canan's mills, where the great road from Huntingdon to the western part of the country and to Pittsburgh crosses the said branch." This crossing was near Hatfield's Juniata Iron-Works, in Porter township. Charles Smith was authorized by act of Feb. 7, 1803, to erect a wing-dam in the Juniata. He then owned the Huntingdon Mills. Shaver's Creek, from its mouth up to the line of James and John Crawford's land, was declared a public highway by act of Feb. 19, 1800; Tuscarora Creek, from its mouth up to the forks near Morrow's mill, by act of April 4, 1805; and the Little Juniata, from Logan's Narrows to Bell's mills, then Allegheny township, by act of March 26, 1808. The Aughwick Creek became a highway April 1, 1822, and several other acts relative to smaller streams were passed in subsequent years.

[1] The Frankstown Branch of the Juniata, throughout its whole navigable course, was made a public highway March 23, 1787.

[2] Thomas Whittaker resided on the southwest corner of Fourth and Allegheny Streets, where the Union Passenger Station now stands. His grandson, Capt. John Whittaker, conducted the "Sorrel Horse Hotel" on that corner for many years, commencing in 1817.

The importance of the streams as public highways attracted the attention of the Legislature to such an extent as to secure the passage, April 13, 1791, of an act authorizing the improvement of the larger rivers and creeks of the State. It included the Juniata from its mouth to Water Street, and thence to Frankstown, and £2320 was appropriated. The same act made liberal appropriations for the laying out of new and improvement of old roads. For the road through Canoe Narrows and from Daniel Titus' to Poplar Run £300 was set apart; for the road from Poplar Run to Conemaugh, £360; for a road to be laid out from Frankstown to Pittsburgh, £300; for a road through Jack's and Igow's Narrows, £120. The next year[1] the Legislature made some changes in the application of the moneys appropriated for the road over the Allegheny Mountain, and directed that £530 shall be given towards improving and opening a road from Frankstown to Conemaugh at or near the mouth of Stony Creek. Six hundred pounds was appropriated towards improving the navigation of the Raystown Branch of the Juniata from its mouth to a point above Bedford. In 1792,[2] $400 was appropriated for improving the road between Lewistown and Huntingdon, and $500 added to former grants to the road from Frankstown to Pittsburgh.

The Legislature, April 7, 1807, appropriated eight hundred dollars for the purpose of laying out and opening a road to begin at Logan's Narrows and extend via mouth of Anderson's Creek, in Clearfield County, to the State road leading to Erie.

The numerous mountain gorges along the course of the Juniata presented so many difficulties in the way of constructing a passable artificial road, that little could be done with the amount of money from time to time collected by taxation, or appropriated from the public treasury towards that end, and after the upper part of the valley had reached that state of improvement as to have a surplus of the products of agriculture or manufactures, resort was had to the river for reaching the eastern markets. The ark and the keel-boat were introduced. The first was constructed of hewn and sawed lumber, fastened together with wooden pins, built to carry freight down the river, and after the discharge of the cargo sold. It was taken apart, and the plank and timber used for building. The keel-boat was constructed somewhat like the hull of the present canal-boat, and after unloading its downward freight, brought back such commodities as the merchants and others purchased in the East. It was "pushed" up stream by men working with poles, a slow and slavish process. With the removal of some obstructions, the navigation of the Juniata to its mouth and the Susquehanna to Harrisburg became to experienced rivermen comparatively easy and safe, but the terror of the boatmen was "Conewago Falls." It was reserved for some brave spirits of the upper Juniata to successfully grapple with the perils of these falls. In Appendix III. to the "American Museum," Part I., from January to July, 1792, published by M. Carey, Philadelphia, on page 32, the following account is given: "A Baltimore paper mentions that Mr. Kryder had arrived there from Standing Stone, on Juniata, with one hundred and four barrels of flour, having performed the voyage in five days. His flour passed for superfine, and was sold immediately at the highest price for cash; the merchants presented Mr. Kryder with one hundred and four dollars as premium for the risk he ran, with his two sons, in attempting the navigation of the Susquehannah, heretofore thought to be impracticable for boats of burden." This flour was doubtless the product of Cryder's own mill, which stood on the south side of the Juniata, between the head of Cypress Island and the Huntingdon Dam. For a further description of the mill and the Cryder family, see Porter township.

Turnpikes.—The river could only be relied upon for the floating of arks and keel-boats when the water was at a certain stage. During the frosts of winter and the droughts of summer, navigation was suspended, and some other more certain means of communication between the upper Juniata region and the seaboard became, with increasing population and the growing wants of the people, necessary to be supplied. Other sections of the State, imitating the example of the older countries, had tested the merits of turnpikes, and soon the project of the construction of a macadamized road from Harrisburg to Pittsburgh was agitated. This scheme took shape in the passage of an act Feb. 24, 1806, appointing commissioners to open books and receive subscriptions of stock to the "Harrisburg and Pittsburgh Turnpike Road," to be constructed through Bedford. The act prescribed the conditions requisite to the issue of letters of incorporation, as well as the rights and privileges to be enjoyed by the company. On the 4th of March, 1807, the Legislature appointed commissioners to take stock "for the purpose of making an artificial or turnpike road from Harrisburg through Lewistown and Huntingdon to Pittsburgh," and when a sufficient number of shares had been subscribed the Governor was authorized to issue letters patent creating the subscribers a corporation, to be styled "The president, managers, and company of the Harrisburg, Lewistown, Huntingdon and Pittsburgh turnpike road." This company was to have all the powers and privileges granted to the Harrisburg and Pittsburgh Company by the act of Feb. 24, 1806. Among the commissioners named were Andrew Henderson, Patrick Gwin, William Steel, John Canan, William Moore, Thomas Province, and Lazarus Lowry, of Huntingdon

[1] Act of April 10, 1792.

[2] Act of April 11, 1793.

County. The efforts made by the commissioners were not rewarded with success, and on the 20th of March, 1810, a supplement was passed authorizing the incorporation of the "Huntingdon, Cambria and Indiana turnpike road," to enjoy all the privileges conferred in the original act. A meeting of the citizens of the county favorable to the contemplated improvement was held at the court-house in Huntingdon, Wednesday evening, Jan. 12, 1814, at which Col. John Canan presided, and William R. Smith acted as secretary. It was resolved to memorialize the Legislature that a proportional part of the sum already appropriated by that body towards making the road from Alexandria to the crossings of the Conemaugh, be appropriated towards making that portion of the road from the east side of the Allegheny to the west side of the Laurel Hill. The route recommended was to commence at John Blair's, on the east side of the Allegheny, thence by the nearest and best way through Munster and Ebensburg to Martin Reager's section of the road lying between the west end of Front Street, in Alexandria, to the lane that led from David Stewart's house to the big road, was advertised to be let on the 25th of February following. From a report of the affairs of the company, made in May, it appeared that its funds were as follows:

Amount appropriated by the State by act of March 24, 1812, for that part of the road between Alexandria and Conemaugh, embracing the section extending over the Allegheny Mountain	$100,000.00
Proportional amount appropriated by the same act for the construction of a turnpike road from Alexandria to Millerstown	6,857.14
Appropriated by act of March 24, 1817, for that part from John Blair's to Martin Rigart's	30,000.00
Amount of stock subscribed	51,650.00
	$188,507.14

The contracts for the construction of the road amounted to $190,155.80, and the tolls received up to the preceding March aggregated $5000.

At the election of January, 1820, John Blair was again elected president, and J. George Mytinger tavern, on the west side of Laurel Hill. David Stewart, Benjamin Patton, John Blair, Patrick Gwin, Samuel Steel, and others, commissioners, published a notice April 4, 1814, of the opening of subscription books for this company at Huntingdon, Lewistown, Bellefonte, Ebensburg, and other points, in the months of May and June following. Accordingly, on Monday, May 9th, books were opened in Huntingdon, at the taverns of Patrick Gwin and Samuel Steel, and during the week a number of citizens of the county subscribed liberally. A sufficient amount of stock having been taken by the 15th of February, 1815, letters of incorporation were issued, and an organization effected by the election of officers. At the annual election, Monday, Jan. 4, 1819, John Blair was re-elected president, Lewis Mytinger chosen treasurer, and David Stewart secretary. The making of that chosen treasurer. In 1821 these gentlemen were re-elected. The friends of the improvement persevered, and ultimately succeeded in opening the entire line of road from Huntingdon to Blairsville, a distance of seventy-seven miles. A considerable length of the line passed through a rugged and sparsely-settled region, unable to contribute any substantial aid, many of the subscribers were tardy in paying installments on their subscriptions, and the managers felt compelled to resort to the issue of "scrip" to meet accruing debts for work performed. The above is a fac-simile of one of the "shinplasters" put out by the company.

HUNTINGDON, CAMBRIA AND INDIANA TURNPIKE SHINPLASTER.

At the elections of 1824, 1825, and 1826, John Blair was continued as president, and J. George Mytinger, treasurer. For the last-named year the board of managers consisted of John Patton, Joseph Patton, John Stewart, Maxwell Kinkead, Thomas Jackson, John Cresswell, John Lyon, William R. Smith, Silas Moore, Moses Canan, George Mulhollan, Jr., and James Elliott.

The Lewistown and Huntingdon Turnpike Road Company was organized and incorporated under the act of March 4, 1807, and constructed the road between those two boroughs. The Legislature, in an act passed March 26, 1821, making appropriations for the improvement of the roads and streams of the State, authorized the Governor to subscribe for three hundred and forty shares of the stock of this company.

On the first Monday of January, 1824, the following officers were chosen: President, E. W. Hale; Treasurer, David Lusk; Managers, A. Bratton, James Creswell, B. Walters, Ruel Elton, M. Norton, T. I. Postlethwaite, John Mavey, Jr., George Macklin, A. Jacobs, Elijah Davis, Jacob Miller, and David R. Porter.

Numerous other companies were from time to time authorized to be incorporated for the purpose of constructing transverse roads. The principal ones were:

Turnpikes.—Bedford and Frankstown, April 6, 1830; Brown's Mills and Alexandria, April 14, 1834; Duncansville, Newry and Leamersville, April 21, 1858; Glen Hope and Little Bald Eagle, March 20, 1849; Hart's Log Valley, April 4, 1863; Hollidaysburg and Bedford, April 10, 1835; Huntingdon and Cassville, Feb. 15, 1860; Huntingdon and Clearfield, April 2, 1838; Huntingdon and McAlevy's Fort, Feb. 19, 1850, April 20, 1854, and March 21, 1860; Huntingdon and Phillipsburg, March 31, 1825; Lewistown and Stone Valley, Feb. 12, 1856; Loudon and Drake's Ferry, April 10, 1826; Morrison's Cove, April 11, 1848; Morrison's Cove and Woodcock Valley, May 8, 1854; Mount Union, Shirleysburg and Orbisonia, April 5, 1862; Old Fort and Spruce Creek, April 23, 1844; Petersburg and Shaver's Creek, April 20, 1850; Petersburg and Reedsville, April 4, 1864; Shade Gap and Burnt Cabins, April 20, 1853; Shade Gap and Mount Union, April 11, 1853; Spruce Creek and Phillipsburg, March 24, 1849; Spruce Creek, April 8, 1826; Spruce Creek and Water Street, April 13, 1846; Tyrone and Spruce Creek, April 4, 1868; Water Street and Clearfield, April 2, 1838.

Plank-Roads.—Altoona and Clearfield, April 11, 1853; Barree Station and Alexandria, Feb. 27, 1854; Bell's Mills and Fallen Timber, May 6, 1857; Freedom and Sarah Furnace, April 15, 1853; Hollidaysburg and Altoona, April 5, 1852; Hollidaysburg and Bedford, April 26, 1850; Shade Gap, Shirleysburg and Juniata, April 13, 1854; Tuckahoe and Mount Pleasant, Feb. 20, 1852.

Some of these were constructed, a few are yet maintained, but the larger proportion remain in their primitive condition.

The Canal and the Portage Railroad.—The middle turnpike, as the several sections extending from Harrisburg to Pittsburgh were called, had not been fully completed before the construction of a line of railroad and canal, from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, was agitated. In the Huntingdon Gazette of Jan. 27, 1825, the following editorial paragraph appears:

"Turnpike roads had their day, and now we are all agog in this and many other parts of the country on the subject of canaling. In Philadelphia a society (at the head of which we find the name of Matthew Carey) has been formed to promote internal improvements. This society has set to work in good earnest to convince the public by written essays of the necessity and advantage of having a canal to unite the Eastern and Western waters on the Juniata route; but whether their laudable views will be seconded by the Legislature is very questionable."

A convention of delegates, representing nearly all of the counties of the commonwealth, was held in Harrisburg, Aug. 4, 1825, for the purpose of discussing the subject of public improvements. John Blair (Blair's Gap) and John Scott, of Alexandria, were chosen to represent Huntingdon County in this assemblage. After full discussion, the convention gave a decided expression of opinion that the opening of an entire and complete communication from the Susquehanna to the Allegheny and Ohio, and from the Allegheny to Lake Erie, is indispensably necessary to maintain the character and standing of the State, and to preserve her strength and resources. By act of Feb. 25, 1826, the commencement of "The Pennsylvania Canal" was authorized, and the location of a section from the mouth of the Swatara to the mouth of the Juniata, and another section from Pittsburgh to the mouth of the Kiskiminitas, directed to be made immediately and put under contract. The next year, April 9th, the Legislature directed the work to be extended up the valley of the Juniata to a point at or near Lewistown, and up the valleys of the Kiskiminitas and Conemaugh to a point at or near Blairsville. March 24, 1828, the commissioners were instructed to make an extension from Lewistown to the highest point expedient and practicable for a canal on the Juniata, and from Blairsville to the highest point expedient and practicable for a canal on the Conemaugh, and to locate by the most eligible route a railroad across the Allegheny Mountain, with a view of connecting the Juniata and Conemaugh sections of the canal. At the letting at Lewistown, October 15th, contracts for the line in Huntingdon County were awarded as follows (canal in half-mile sections):

160, Cromwell, Diven & Barton.
161, same.
162, Thomas and James Moore.
163, same.
164, Bull & Buck.
165, Bargy & Billinger.
166, James K. Morehead.
167, Drum, Arnold & Clark.

168, same.
169, Robert Smith.
170, John Elder.
172, D. McGillicuddy.
173, Breslin & Monaghan.
174, McManus & Behan.
175.
176.
177.
178, Cahoon, McFarland & Co.
179, same.
180, Smith, Mulholland & Co.
181, same.
182, Leach, Tracy & Co.
183, Wellman & Brown.
184, same.

On November 19th the following contracts were awarded:

Raystown Branch feeder, Uriah Wickwire.

Raystown Branch dam, Dearmond, Rodearmel & Co.

Aughwick Falls dam, Leslie, Cook & Derno.

Shaver's aqueduct, Jonathan Leslie.

Jackstown aqueduct, Bishop & McCoy.

Mill Creek aqueduct, Corker & Divit.

Standing Stone Creek aqueduct, Beaumont, Leach & Tracey.

On the organization of the board of canal commissioners for 1829, James Clarke, of Westmoreland, was appointed acting commissioner for the Juniata division, and De Witt Clinton principal engineer for the same. In the following November the water was let into the canal between Lewistown and Mifflin, and the packet-boat "Juniata" commenced running between those towns. To the two dams, one at the head of the Long Narrows and the other at North's Island, were attached locks, each ninety feet long and seventeen feet wide within the chambers, for the passage of arks and other crafts floated down the river. Pursuant to the act of April 6, 1830, the number of canal commissioners after the first Monday of June following was to be limited to three, to be appointed by the Governor. James S. Stevenson, of Allegheny, James Clarke, of Westmoreland, and John Mitchell, of Centre, were the new appointees. On the 7th of June the new board was organized by electing Mr. Stevenson president, and Francis R. Shunk secretary. The appointments made for the Juniata division were James Taggart, superintendent; James Ferguson, principal engineer; William B. Mitchell, supervisor. James Criswell succeeded the latter a few months afterwards. On Tuesday, the 2d of November, the water was let into the level at Huntingdon to test the banks. The Advocate of November 9th, after describing the filling of the level, says,—

"On Thursday and Friday (4th and 5th) our citizens displayed the utmost hilarity on the occasion. A vessel was fitted up, which plied from basin to basin, bearing different parties of pleasure, accompanied with enlivening strains of music. Our ears were astounded with the perpetual rattling of firearms. A splendid ball was given at the house of Mr. Jackson, several houses were illuminated, and scarcely anything occurred to alloy the general happiness which was felt by every friend to internal improvement. In a few days the water will be let into the other levels to test their tightness also. The completion of the aqueducts at Jack's Narrows and Shaver's Ford is all that is now wanting to have the Pennsylvania Canal in complete operation from Middletown to this place."

In the spring of 1831 the commissioners appointed James Taggart, superintendent; Edward F. Gay, principal engineer; and James K. Moorhead, supervisor from Newton Hamilton to Huntingdon. On Wednesday, May 18th, a boat built on Standing Stone Creek for Messrs. Hill & Mayland, of Huntingdon, was floated down that stream to its mouth, thence down the Juniata to the Raystown Branch feeder, through which it entered the canal and was towed up to the town. The Advocate of Friday, May 27th, contains the following announcement:

"PORT OF HUNTINGDON.

"Canal Arrivals.

"Thursday, 26.—1st. Boat 'Emily,' Capt. Bechtel, from Bonsal & Rouvt, Vine Street wharf, Philadelphia. Merchandise for William Walker, Petersburg, five and a half tons having been unloaded, most part at Newton Hamilton and Bell's Mill.

"2d. Boat 'Rebecca,' Capt. Walters. Merchandise for Caldwell & Clarke, of Williamsburg; Judge Adams, Petersburg; Galbraiths, Kittanning; Houston, do. Cargo, fifteen tons.

"3d. 'Waynesburg,' trader, Capt. Vancourt, in less than four days from Middletown. Fifteen tons merchandise, fish and plaster, for Dull & McCoy, Water Street.

"4th. Boat 'Lady Lightfoot,' Capt. Dull, in less than four days from Middletown; cargo, twenty tons. Merchandise, fish and plaster, for Dull & McCoy.

"5th. Boat 'Margaret,' Capt. McCoy, sixteen tons. Merchandise, fish and plaster, for Messrs. Orbison & Snyder, Frankstown; Caldwell & Clark, Williamsburg; Bucher & Porter, Alexandria; Mr. McCahan, Huntingdon.

"The arrival of five boats on the canal yesterday was a sight pleasing to our citizens. The hum of business arising from wagons loading and boats unloading gave our wharves truly the appearance of a port of entry. Five or six boats are also expected here to-night or to-morrow, and though some trifling breaches may occur in the canal which will require a few hours to repair, yet we expect a complete navigation to be carried on hereafter between this place and Philadelphia."

On the 1st day of June, a letting of the work between Huntingdon and Hollidaysburg was made at Williamsburg. Between two and three thousand persons were in attendance, and the bids handed in numbered over four thousand. The plans embraced fourteen dams, forty-three locks, seven guard-locks, and seventy-three sections. The Portage road, divided into thirty-five sections, was allotted to contractors at Ebensburg on the 25th of May.

"On last Saturday hundreds of our citizens witnessed the launching of the 'James Clarke,' a new and very handsome canal-boat, into the basin at the west end of the borough, owned by Messrs. Williams & Miller. When safely launched into the basin, she was greeted by the hearty acclamations of those who witnessed the pleasing and interesting sight. What! a canal-boat launched in the vicinity of Huntingdon? Had any one predicted an event of this kind some years back, he in all probability would have been yclept a wizard or set down as beside himself. When the mail stage commenced running once a week from Philadelphia to this place our older citizens considered it a marvelous affair. What will they say now?"[1]

On the 16th the "James Clarke," having been prepared for an excursion, left its wharf at Huntingdon about ten o'clock A.M., with about eighty ladies and gentlemen and the Huntingdon Band on board, and proceeded to Clintonville, a shipping-point at the upper end of Mount Union, and returned in the evening. The Gazette says, "Among those on board we observed James Clarke, Esq., and lady. The canal banks at every lock and bridge were crowded with anxious spectators, who evinced their delight at the approach of the boat by hearty cheers and huzzas. The re-echo of the soul-stirring drum, shrill fife, melodious flute, etc., added double zest to the occasion. The sublime and romantic scenery, particularly at Drake's Ferry, is not excelled in any part of Pennsylvania. The imagination cannot paint anything so beautifully striking. Old nature sits there in fearful grandeur unmolested by the hand of time or art of man."

On the 29th of July, at Hollidaysburg, a letting of some sections, culverts, and viaducts on the Portage Railroad was made, and on the 5th of August, at the same place, contracts were awarded for canal work between Huntingdon and that point. About the 1st of December navigation was closed by the severity of the weather. The novelty of canal-boating up the Juniata, was so great as to invoke the enterprise of the newspapers of this region to such an extent as to publish weekly lists of the arrival and departure of the crafts navigating the canal.

The boating season of 1832 began early in March. On Monday, May 28th, a packet-boat called "Dr. William Lehman, of Philadelphia," named in honor of one of the early advocates of internal improvements, was placed in the canal at Huntingdon. This boat was built on Standing Stone Creek, about seven miles above the borough, and was numbered thirteen of David Leech's line. It had a cabin at the bow for ladies and one at the rear for gentlemen. In the intermediate space from twenty to thirty tons of freight could be carried. The line east of the Allegheny Mountains had a sufficient number of boats to run one each alternate day from Huntingdon eastward. The "William Lehman," loaded with freight and passengers, departed on the 29th for Harrisburg, the passengers congratulating themselves that this improved method of travel was a wonderful advance in the matter of personal comfort over the jolting stage-coach.

The Frankstown line, the designation applied to the canal between Huntingdon and Hollidaysburg, was pushed with great energy, and in a little over a year was completed and placed in navigable order. On the 15th of November, at a meeting of the citizens of the county held at the Washington Hotel, in the borough of Huntingdon, for the purpose of adopting measures expressive of their gratification at the completion of the Juniata division of the canal, William Orbison presided, and Robert Williams acted as secretary. Resolutions were adopted declaring the importance of the public improvements, proposing a public celebration, and authorizing the appointment of a committee of arrangements to perfect a plan for the celebration and invite the State officials and others to participate. The committee consisted of John Henderson, M.D., Matthew McConnell, David R. Porter, James McCahan, William Dorris, Walter Clarke, and Robert Wallace, with the following assistant committees: Petersburg, Joseph Adams, William Walker; Alexandria, John Cresswell, John Porter; Williamsburg, Thomas Jackson, Adolphus Patterson; Frankstown, Henry B. Smith, Martin Denlinger; Hollidaysburg, Christian Garber, Samuel Smith, Christian Denlinger; Blair's Gap, John Walker.

At ten o'clock A.M. on Tuesday, November 28th, in accordance with the adopted programme, the packet-boat "John Blair" left Huntingdon for Hollidaysburg, bearing the committee of arrangements, Mr. Taggart, superintendent of the Juniata division, Edward F. Gay, principal engineer, a number of young men attached to the engineering corps, and some ladies and gentlemen. Accessions to the number were made at each town along the route. At Alexandria salutes were fired by the citizens and responded to by a cannon from the boat. Williamsburg was reached at ten o'clock P.M. The houses were illuminated, and the arrival of the little vessel greeted with music and volleys of musketry. Here the passengers tarried the night. At ten o'clock on Wednesday the "James Clarke," towed by four horses, left its moorings, and, in company with escorts from Frankstown and Hollidaysburg, proceeded westward.

At Frankstown the fleet met a cordial reception. Here the visitors, numbering about three hundred, dined, and then set out for Hollidaysburg, which point was reached about sunset. In the evening the houses were illuminated, a ball given, and a public meeting held. At the latter, John Scott, of Alexandria, presided, assisted by Thomas Jackson and Henry Beaver as vice-presidents. Samuel Royer and Joseph Adams acted as secretaries. Resolutions commending the policy of the State in regard to internal improvements, congratulating the people on their progress, the contractors for the prompt and faithful execution of their contracts, etc., reported by a committee consisting of David R. Porter, John Cresswell, J. George Miles, James M. Bell, and James O'Connor, were unanimously adopted. The Huntingdon excursionists arrived at home on Friday evening, highly delighted with the trip and the hospitality extended them en route. Many marks of gratification of the inhabitants along the line were noticed. In passing the farm of Abraham Boyles, a soldier of the Revolution, he appeared alone on the bank of the canal, and gave a salute with his musket, which was returned by three cheers from those on board the boat. The old gentleman made the following laconic reply: "This is a greater event than the Revolutionary war. That had some enemies; this has none."

[1] Gazette, Wednesday, June 15, 1831.

The opening of the canal to Hollidaysburg marked the beginning of the rapid and substantial growth enjoyed by that town for two decades.

James K. Moorhead, supervisor, selected, in February, 1833, the following lock-tenders for the Franks-town line:

No. 1, John Daily; 2 and 3, Alexander Lowry; 4, John Speilman; 5 and 6, Christian Gaust; 7, William McAvoy; 8, Daniel Clopper; 9, N. W. Green; 10 and 11, Philip Caup; 12, John Miller; 13, P. W. Matthews; 14 and 15, Robert McCutcheon; 16, William Potter; 17, Henry Kephart; 18, M. P. Brown; 19, John Donnelly; 20, Jacob Glaze; 21 and 22, John Hutchinson; 23 and 24, Thomas McMillen; 25, John Kennedy; 26, Daniel Mullen; 27 and 28, Robert McFarland; 29, John Armitage; 30 and 31, Moses F. Cromwell; 32 and 33, John Martin; 34 and 35, James McDonell; 36, Jacob Longenecker; 37, James McCauley; 39 and 40, George McDonough; 41, John Nash; 42 and 43, John Trump.

The following exhibits the business transacted at the collector's office at Huntingdon from the opening of the canal, in the spring of 1833, until the 31st day of October following:

Tolls received	$4699.58
Tonnage cleared:
Eastward	3,022,963 lbs.
Westward	2,978,175 "
Total	6,001,138 "

This tonnage consisted of the following commodities, all of which were products of the county:

Iron	734,459 lbs.
Flour	1,836,768 "
Wheat	398,880 "
Corn and rye	202,104 "
Clover and other seeds	33,796 "
Leather	21,978 "
Butter	30,965 "
Lard	3,064 "
Scantling and other sawed stuff	116,708 feet.
Whiskey	3,923 galls.
Coal	293¼ tons.
Number of boats cleared	424
Number of boats passing which were cleared at other offices:
To the East	346
To the West	388
	734

The following is a partial list of the officers on the canal:

Supervisors.

James Criswell, from Lewistown to Huntingdon, appointed Sept. 25, 1830.

James K. Moorhead, from lift lock beside Aughwick dam to the head of the feeder above Huntingdon, appointed April 5, 1831.

John Whittaker, Jr., from Hollidaysburg to Aughwick dam, appointed February, 1836.

Moses J. Clark, from Hollidaysburg to Petersburg, appointed February, 1836.

William Reed, from Petersburg to Aughwick dam, appointed February, 1836.

William Reed, from Hollidaysburg to the Raystown Branch dam, February, 1838.

John Whittaker, Jr., from the Raystown Branch dam to the dam below Lewistown, February, 1838.

David Woods, from the Newton Hamilton dam to Hollidaysburg; reappointed February, 1842, February, 1843.

Casper Dull, appointed January, 1844.

John Ross, appointed Jan. 30, 1847; reappointed Jan. 25, 1848.

John P. Anderson, appointed Feb. 2, 1849; reappointed Jan. 21, 1850, Jan. 29, 1851.

James A. Cunningham, appointed Jan. 30, 1852; reappointed Jan. 17, 1853.

Jonathan D. Leet, appointed Nov. 15, 1854; reappointed Nov. 9, 1855.

John Gadd, appointed Nov. 21, 1856.

HUNTINGDON.

Collectors.

A. W. Benedict, appointed March, 1836.

Jacob Hoffman, appointed February, 1838.

John Creswell, appointed February, 1839; reappointed February, 1840, February, 1841, February, 1842, February, 1843.

John S. Patton, appointed January, 1844; reappointed January, 1845, January, 1846.

John M. Cunningham, appointed Jan. 29, 1847; reappointed Jan. 25, 1848.

Andrew S. Harrison, appointed Feb. 2, 1849; reappointed Jan. 21, 1850, Jan. 29, 1851.

David Black, appointed Feb. 7, 1852; reappointed Jan. 18, 1853, 1854.

Thomas Jackson, appointed Nov. 15, 1854; reappointed Nov. 8, 1855, Nov. 19, 1856.

HOLLIDAYSBURG.

Collectors.

John Walker, appointed Feb. 18, 1833.

Joseph G. Hammer, appointed March, 1836.

W. C. McCormick, appointed February, 1842; reappointed February, 1843, January, 1844, January, 1845.

George W Patterson, appointed Feb. 11, 1847.

Archibald A. Douglass, appointed Feb. 2, 1849; reappointed Jan. 21, 1850, Jan. 29, 1851.

J. P. Hoover, appointed Jan. 30, 1852; reappointed Jan. 18, 1853, Nov. 15, 1854, Nov. 9, 1855.

Joseph McClelland, appointed Nov. 19, 1856.

Weighmasters.

John Dougherty, weigh lock, appointed February, 1842.

J. Piper, weigh scales, appointed February, 1842.

George Potts, weigh lock, appointed January, 1844.

John O'Connor, weigh scales, appointed January, 1844; reappointed January, 1845.

F. R. West, appointed Feb. 9, 1847.

Robert Williams, appointed Jan. 21, 1850.

John Snodgrass, superintendent motive-power, appointed February, 1842; reappointed February, 1843, February, 1844.

The main line of the State public works were sold by authority given in an act of the Legislature passed May 16, 1857, and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company became the purchaser. Meantime, the "new Portage" road had been constructed over the Allegheny Mountain to avoid the inclined planes. Some time after the sale, the purchaser removed the iron from the new Portage, and abandoned the canal in sections from Hollidaysburg down to the Huntingdon dam.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.—Various projects for the construction of a railroad across the State from east to west were discussed from time to time, and surveys of various routes made, but no decisive action was taken until April 13, 1846, when the Pennsylvania Railroad Company was incorporated by act of the Legislature, with an authorized capital of seven and one-half million dollars. Among the commissioners named for the purpose of receiving subscriptions to the stock of the company the following were residents of Huntingdon County: John George Miles, John Ker, A. P. Wilson, Edwin F. Shoenberger, Benjamin Leas, John McCahan, John Long, Brice Blair, Thomas E. Orbison, Edward Bell, William Williams, and John Porter. John Edgar Thomson was chosen chief engineer, and entered upon his duties in the early part of 1847. On the 23d of July, a corps of engineers arrived at Huntingdon, and began explorations in the vicinity of the borough. On the 19th of May, 1848, thirty-nine sections of the road were let at Huntingdon. The contracts for the portions of the line in Huntingdon and Blair Counties let at this time were awarded as follows:

Section No. 87, Thomas Dolan; No. 88, McIlduff & Dougherty; No. 89, A. & P. Martin; No. 90, Salsburg & Bro.; No. 91, Saxton & Anderson; No. 92, Becker & Gros; No. 93, George Scott; No. 94, Charles Murray & Co.; No. 95, Charles Murray & Co.; No. 96, James McMahon & Sons; No. 97, White, Wolf & Co.; No. 98, E. & J. McGovern; No. 99, McMurtrie & Fisher; No. 113, Carr & Thurlow; No. 114, George Leibrick & Co.; No. 115, John McGran & Co.; No. 116, McCue & Gillespie; No. 117, W. P. Sterrett & Co.; No. 121, E. Sankey & Co.

In June, 1850, the road, with a single track, was completed to Huntingdon. On Thursday, the 6th, the first locomotive arrived, and on the next day trains ran regularly between this point and Philadelphia. The papers of the day regarded it as evidence of wonderful progress when the distance from Philadelphia to Cincinnati could be accomplished in three days and six hours. On the 17th of September, 1850, trains began to run via Altoona to Duncansville, where connection was made with the Portage Railroad. On the 10th of December, 1852, trains were run through from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh. The Mountain division of the road was not completed until Feb. 15, 1854, when the first trains passed without using the inclined planes.

The Bald Eagle Valley branch extends from the main line at Tyrone through Bald Eagle Valley, touching at Bellefonte, fifty-four miles to the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad at Lock Haven. It was leased by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in 1864. The Tyrone and Clearfield branch, leased in 1867, extends from Tyrone forty-one miles to Clearfield, with lateral roads extending into the Clearfield bituminous coal region in the valley of the Moshannon Creek. The Bell's Gap (narrow-gauge) runs from Bell's Mills, or Bellwood, into the Alleghany coal field. From Altoona branches run to Hollidaysburg, Williamsburg, Morrison's Cove, and to Newry.

The heights in feet of the principal stations on the main line and branches in Huntingdon and Blair Counties above the mean level of the Atlantic ocean, and distances in miles from Philadelphia, are as follows:

Stations.	Heights.	Distances.
Mount Union	597	191
Jacksto[illegible]	59[illegible]	.....
Mapleton	593	194
Mill Creek	604	198
Huntingdon	622	203
Warrior's Ridge	677	.....
Petersburg	678	209
Barree Forge	724	212
Spruce Creek	777	215
Union Furnace	799	216
Birmingham	866	220
Tyrone	907	223
Tipton	990	226
Fostoria	1029	228.5
Bell's Mills	1060	230
Elizabeth Furnace	1079	232.5
Blair Furnace	1114	234
Altoona	1178	237
Kittanning	1594	242
East end of Tunnel	2126	.....
Gallitzin	2161	249
Hollidaysburg	953	From Altoona.. 8
Williamsburg	847	.....
Martinsburg	1366	.....

The Huntingdon and Broad Top Mountain Railroad.—In January, 1847, David Blair, member of the House of Representatives from Huntingdon County, introduced a bill to incorporate "The Huntingdon and Broad Top Mountain Railroad Company." It was passed by both houses, but vetoed by Governor Shunk. He objected to the large quantity of land, five thousand acres, which it was proposed to authorize the company to hold, as well as to other powers conferred. At the next session another bill was prepared, passed by both houses and approved by the Governor, but an organization of a company was not effected. On the 6th of May, 1852, another bill incorporating "The Huntingdon and Broad Top Mountain Railroad and Coal Company" received the approval of Governor Bigler. By August a sufficient amount of stock had been subscribed to warrant the application for letters patent. The first election for directors was held in the borough of Huntingdon, Monday, Jan. 10, 1853, when the following gentlemen were chosen: William Ayres (president), James Saxton, A. P. Wilson, James Entrekin, William P. Schell, Alexander King, John Scott, Lewis T. Watson, and John H. Wirtrode. The board was immediately organized, and Jacob Miller chosen treasurer, and Samuel W. Mifflin, chief engineer. An engineering party was soon organized as follows: Joseph Mifflin, assistant engineer; Peter Van Devander and J. Simpson Africa, levelers; John B. Johnson and George Eyster, rodmen; A. S. Ennis and George M. Houston, slopemen; John Wright, back flagman; Nathaniel Williams and Charles A. Gwin, chainmen: George Westbrook and Alexander Coulter, axemen.

On Friday, January 28th, the survey was commenced and pushed without interruption. The main line from Huntingdon to Hopewell was let on the 28th of June. On Monday, July 30, 1855, the engine "Beaver" passed over the road for the distance of eight miles, and on the 13th of August trains commenced to make regular trips daily as far south as to Marklesburg station. By the close of the year the line was opened to the bridge at Stonerstown, and in February following the first coal was carried by rail to Huntingdon. During the summer, the line was opened to Hopewell, and soon after to Mount Dallas, a distance of forty-five miles. Branches called Shoup's Run, Six-Mile Run, and Sandy Run extend eastward into the Broad Top coal region. The cost of the road and equipment was $4,412,163.23. The number of tons of coal carried in 1881 was 518,420; pig metal, 23,223 tons; iron and other ores, 48,904 tons. At Mount Dallas connection is made with the Bedford and Bridgeport Railroad, leased to and operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and trains are run daily direct between Huntingdon and Cumberland, Md. The present officers of the company are: President, B. Andrews Knight; Secretary, J. P. Donaldson; General Superintendent, George F. Gage.

The East Broad Top Railroad.—Simultaneous with the movements looking towards the construction of a railroad from Huntingdon to reach the western side of the Broad Top coal field, efforts were made to organize companies to build a road from Mapleton or Mount Union to the eastern side. Meetings were held at several points in the southeastern part of Huntingdon County to awaken the citizens to the importance of the project. The result was the granting of a charter, March 24, 1848, for the formation of the "Drake's Ferry and Broad Top Railroad Company," but subsequent efforts to organize the company failed.

The East Broad Top Railroad and Coal Company was organized under an act approved April 16, 1856. The work of construction was commenced on the 16th of September, 1872, and the road opened for business to Orbisonia, a distance of eleven miles from its northern terminus, Mount Union Station, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, on the 30th of August, 1873, and to Robertsdale, the southern terminus, on the 4th of November, 1874. The length of the main line is thirty miles; gauge, three feet. The cost of the road was $914,142.82; the cost of the equipment was $163,779.25. The officers are: President, William A. Ingham; Vice-President, Edward Roberts, Jr.; Secretary and Treasurer, W. B. Jacobs: Chief Engineer, General Manager, and General Superintendent, A. W. Sims. During 1881, 143,449 tons of bituminous coal, 19,117 tons of pig metal, and 25,219 tons of iron and other ores were carried over the road.

The levels on these roads are as follows:

Huntingdon and Broad Top.

	Above Huntingdon. Feet.	Above Ocean Level. Feet.	Dist. from Huntingdon. Miles.
Huntingdon	.....	621	...
McConnellstown	52.6	674	5
Grafton	127.2	748	7
Marklesburg	167.6	789	11
Coffee Run	250.6	872	...
Rough and Ready	267.6	889	17
Cove	300	921	...
Fisher's Summit	353	974	21
Stonerstown bridge	210.3	831	...
Saxton	228	849	25
Riddlesburg	243.6	865	30
Hopewell	277.3	898	32
Bloody Run Summit	613.3	1234	...
Everett	497.3	1118	44
Coalmont	488.8	1110	...
Dudley	803.6	1425	...
End of track	1240.2	1861	...

East Broad Top.

		Dist. from Mount Union. Miles.
Mount Union	597	...
Shirleysburg	572	7
Rock Hill	624	11
Three Springs	717	...
Saltillo	781	19
Sideling Hill tunnel	1232	...
Cole's	1359	24.5
Cook's	1541	...
Robertsdale	1785	30

The altitude of some of the mountains above ocean level is as follows:

	Feet.
Jack's, 1¾ miles north of Mount Union	2354
" 2¼ " " Three Springs	2220
Round Knob, near Cook's station	2304
Allegheny, Emig's Summit	2043
" Three Spring Gap	2614
" Bell's Gap Summit	2301
" Blair's Gap "	2339
" Pipe-Line "	2537
Brush, Pipe-Line Summit	2412
Canoe, " " "	1940
Tussey's, Pipe-Line Summit	2328
Piney, Ridge Pipe-Line Summit	1137.6
Terrace, " " "	1684
Sideling Hill, " " "	1652

CHAPTER IX.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS—NAMES OF THE PIONEERS.

THE first settlements within the limits of Huntingdon County were doubtless those made by the persons whose cabins were burned by order of Secretary Peters in the summer of 1750, near the village of Burnt Cabins, and probably extending northeastward therefrom along the Tuscarora Valley. These were unwarranted intrusions upon unpurchased lands, and the squatters therefore acquired no title. Andrew Montour having earnestly and repeatedly applied for permission to live in some of the plantations over the Blue Hills, Governor Hamilton, by the advice of the Council, on the 18th of April, 1752, issued a commission to him, reciting the fact that many persons had gone and were continually going over the Kittatinny Mountains to settle, notwithstanding the repeated proclamations against such practices, and that he had represented that he could be serviceable alike to the government and the Six Nations in keeping people from settling on the unpurchased lands, in consideration of which, license and authority was given him to reside in such place over the mountains, found to be central and convenient for the purpose named. Montour settled on the north side of Sherman's Creek, on the Elliott farm, Perry County. His name is perpetuated in the designation Montour's Run.[1]

GEORGE CROGHAN.—George Croghan, a conspicuous character in provincial times, an Irishman by birth, was licensed in 1744 as an Indian trader. In 1748 he purchased land, and became a resident of Cumberland County. In 1750, as one of the magistrates of that county, he accompanied Secretary Peters in his visits to the trespassers, and, as appears by a letter of his dated June 10, 1751, he yet resided southeast of the Kittatinny Mountain. Soon thereafter, possibly under authority similar to that granted to Andrew Montour, he took up his residence at "Aucquick," now Shirleysburg, for it is found in the proceedings of a conference held by the commissioners appointed on behalf of the provincial authorities, with representatives of the Six Nations and other tribes at Carlisle, in October, 1753, that the Indians proposed that any presents intended for them should be sent to "George Croghan's house at Juniata." In the instructions of the Governor to James Patten, who was sent in December of that year on a journey to the Ohio, he was directed to call "at George Croghan's at Aucquick" and consult with him.

The strife between the English and French for the possession of the Ohio Valley was reaching a crisis which would be settled only by the arbitrament of the sword. The latter, sweeping down from their Canadian colonies, were enlisting the sympathies and services of the Indians on the frontiers and alienating their support from their English rivals. As early as 1749, Capt. Celeron, commanding a detachment sent by the Captain-General of Canada to take possession of the lands along the Ohio and its branches, deposited at Venango, Forks of the Ohio, and Kanawha, leaden plates as monuments of the "renewal" of their claim to dominion over the region drained by those streams. Col. George Washington was sent by the Governor of Virginia with a small military force to occupy the Forks of the Ohio, but before reaching his destination was attacked at Fort Necessity, by a body of French and Indians much superior in numbers, and compelled, on the 4th day of July, 1753, to surrender his defenses and retrace his steps over the Alleghenies.

Some Indians friendly to the English interests immediately moved eastward towards the settlements. Croghan writes to Lieutenant-Governor Hamilton from "Aucquick Old Town, Aug. 16, 1754," that "The Half-King Scarrooyady and several other Indians, with their wives and families, have been here since Col. Washington was defeated, and about twelve days ago come here the young Shawanese king from the lower Shawanese town, and several more with him, and Delaware George and several other Delawares came here from the French fort." Coinciding with the views of his Indian guests, Croghan suggested that the government must move quickly and vigorously or the Ohio lands would be lost. A conference was proposed to be held at his place in ten days. His letter was laid before the Council on Thursday, August 22d, and it was then decided that Conrad Weiser should be immediately sent with some money and a letter of instruction to Aughwick. He set out from home on the 27th of August, and reached his destination on the 3d of September. In the account of his transactions, he stated that Croghan had had between twenty-five and thirty acres of the best Indian corn he ever saw, and counted above twenty cabins about his house, and in them at least two hundred Indians, men, women, and children, and that a great many more were scattered thereabouts, some two or three miles off. The extent of the cleared and cultivated land and the number of cabins, indicates that Croghan had been a resident there for a considerable time. Beginning with the morning of the 4th, the conference occupied several days, Weiser leaving on the morning of the 8th. There were present Indians of the Seneca, Oneida, Cayuga, and Mohawk tribes of the Six Nations, and some Delawares and Shawanese. Croghan complained to the government of the great expense that he was subjected to in provisioning his Indian guests, and stated, August 30th, that they had already almost destroyed thirty acres of corn. Under date of May 1, 1755, he writes Governor Morris from "Aucquick" that, pursuant to his instructions, he will set out the next day with all the Indians, except the women and children, to join Gen. Braddock. It appears that some of the women and children accompanied him; but on joining Braddock the general refused permission for them to accompany the army. Croghan then proposed that they should go nearer the settlements, but they declined, saying that they had fixed on Aughwick for their residence until the war was over, and as many women and children were there planting, they were determined to return. Croghan, in a letter dated at Fort Cumberland, May 20th, says there will be about one hundred and twenty women and children left behind, and suggests that if provisions are purchased and sent to his house, his brother would deliver rations to them daily. After the defeat of Braddock, July 9th, Croghan returned home, and notwithstanding he learned from an Indian from Ohio a rumor that the French and their allies would make a descent upon the frontiers during the coming winter, and who advised him to leave Aughwick, he commenced the erection of a stockade fort, and by the 9th of October had it nearly completed. In this movement he was acting out the suggestion made by Secretary Peters in December previous. On 12th of November he had about forty men with him, but in view of the apprehended approach of hostile Indians, he was fearful he could not maintain possession long. The fort was continuously occupied, however, until some time in the spring of 1756, during which time it was strengthened by direction of the provincial authorities and christened Fort Shirley. During his career as a trader among the Indians, he was so liberal in his dealings and so profuse in his presents to the natives, that with the losses sustained by the French, who seized and appropriated great quantities of his goods, he became embarrassed financially, and in view of his services to the government, the Assembly, Dec. 3, 1755, passed a law exempting him from arrest for debt for ten years. It does not appear that he resided at Aughwick or Fort Shirley after the summer of 1756, but still claimed the land. A survey without a formal warrant, but by the consent and direction of the proprietaries, was made by Samuel Finley for Croghan on the 14th of October, 1762, of a tract containing four hundred and twenty-four acres, called "Old Town," "situated on Aughwick Creek, where Fort Shirley stood." This tract became the property of James Folay, to whom it was patented Oct. 19, 1773. He, with Mary, his wife, Jan. 29, 1776, conveyed it to Paul Warner, of Maryland. Croghan owned numerous other tracts on the Aughwick, at Shade Gap, Huntingdon, Alexandria, and other places. (See map.)

[1] Wright's Perry County, p. 10.

PETER SHEAVER was licensed as an Indian trader in 1744. He settled upon the west side of Shaver's Creek, near its junction with the Juniata, at a date not known. The warrant was taken out for the land by Samuel Anderson, Nov. 9, 1784, and it was certified, on the oaths of Thomas Mitchell, Oliver Walliss, and John Walker, that the improvement was made in 1754. The creek received its name from Sheaver, who, it is said, was murdered some time before 1765. (See Logan township.)

In 1744, LAZARUS AND JAMES LOWRY were licensed as Indian traders. The first land warrant issued for the upper part of the Juniata Valley in the purchase of 1754 was granted Feb. 3, 1755, to James Lowry, supposed to be one of the above-named traders, for three hundred acres, "including a meadow on the Spring Branches, the old Indian town of the Shawanese and Delawares, called Frankstown, on the Branches of Juniata." A survey of three hundred and ninety-three and three-fourths acres, made June 15, 1765, was patented March 28, 1783, and called "Frankstown," and described as situated at the old Indian town of the Shawanese and Delawares called Frankstown. The warrantee conveyed to James Lowry, the patentee, by deed dated April 15, 1757. The accepted tradition is that the name of this locality was given by reason of its being the trading-post of Stephen Franks, a German. His name does not, however, appear upon the lists of licensed Indian traders. In the assessment of Barree township (which then included this region) for 1767, James Lowry, deceased, is taxed with one thousand acres of land, and in 1769 the same. In 1770 and 1771 it is charged to James and Daniel Lowry's heirs.

On the same day that James Lowry's warrant was granted, five others were issued for lands in the same region, to wit: James Rankin, three hundred acres adjoining Lowry, and including "an Indian cabin called the Little Hunting Cabin;" Alexander Lowry, three hundred acres, upon which a survey of two hundred and fifty-seven and one-half acres was made, called the "Canoe Place;" Samuel Smith, three hundred acres; Edward Johnston, one hundred acres, including the "Sleeping-Place at the Big Spring at Frankstown Hill;" and James Sterrat, four hundred acres. Alexander Lowry's warrant was executed on two hundred and fifty-seven and one-half acres at and below the mouth of Canoe Creek.

JOHN HART, who began to trade with the Indians under his license of 1744, had a feeding or lodging place at Alexandria, and "Hart's Log" Valley perpetuates his name. He did not purchase any lands nor effect any permanent settlement. The warrant for the land was granted Feb. 3, 1755, to James Sterrat, for four hundred acres, "including the bottom at the Sleeping-Place called John Hart's Log, on the waters of Juniata." Further details about the settlements on this and adjacent lands will be given under the head of Porter township.

On May 26, 1755, John McDowell applied for three hundred acres "at a place called the Burnt Cabbins, at Aucquick;" and William Maxwell for three hundred acres, "including Falkner's and William and Thomas Thompson's improvements at Aucquick," and two hundred acres at a place called the "Three Springs, on the Rays Town Road at Aucquick." Warrants were not granted on these applications, but the descriptions serve to identify localities. The Falkner here mentioned is doubtless the Peter Falconer described in Secretary Peters' report of his visit in 1750. Maxwell lived near the Burnt Cabins.

ASSESSMENT LIST OF DUBLIN TOWNSHIP FOR THE YEAR 1768.

[This township then included all of the area of Huntingdon County south of the Juniata and east of Sideling Hill, also a considerable part of Fulton County. The valuation is omitted. Abbreviations: a., acres; h., horses; c., cows; cl., cleared. Those taxed with horses or cows can be taken as residents. The others were generally non-residents.]

Boyle, Charles,[1] 150 a., 15 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Brown, William, 1 h., 1 c.
Burd, John,[2] 300 a. warranted, 150 unwarranted, 20 a. cl., 2 h., 5 c., 1 servant.
Barclay, James, 170 a.
Baynton, Wharton & Co.,[3] 900 a. near the Great Meadows,[4] on Aughwick; 300 a. adj. Dr. Smith's and Brown's improvement; 600 a. below Fort Shirley; 200 a., 10 a. cl.
Clugadge, James,[5] 100 a., 20 a. cl., 3 h., 2 c.

[1] Lived at the mouth of Aughwick, now Shirley township.
[2] Lived at or near Fort Littleton, Fulton Co.
[3] John Baynton and Samuel Wharton, residents of Philadelphia and owners of large bodies of land in the valley of the Juniata.
[4] The Great Meadows are on Aughwick Creek, near Meadow Gap, Springfield township.
[5] Lived in Black Log Valley, near Black Log gap.

Calvert, Thomas, and Steel, Rev., 200 a.
Campble, Francis, Esq., 150 a., 10 c.
Charleton, Samuel, 200 a., 10 c.
Dayly, James,[1] 300 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 1 c.
Devenport, Josiah, 100 a.
Elliot, Benjamin, 100 a. patented, 3 a. cl., 1 h., 1c.
Elliot, Robert, 150 a., 4 a. cl.
Elliot, James, 100 a., 5 a. ci.
Elliot, John, 100 a., 4 a. cl.
Henery. George, 300 a., 3 a. cl.
Harbridge, George, 150 a., 5 a. cl., 1 h.
Holt, Henry, 150 a., 1 c.
Hunter, James, 200 a. patented.
Harvey, Robert, 150 a., 4 a. cl.
Hunter, James, 200 a. patented, near Black Log; 200 a. patented, Aughwick and Brown's improvement.
Lukens, John, Esq., surveyor-general at Great Meadows, near Aughwick, 300 a.
McCormick, Andrew, 96 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h., 2 c.
Owins, David, 1 h., 1 c.
Owens, John, Sr.,[2] 150 a., 8 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Owens, John, Jr., 100 a., 15 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Petit, Elias, 300 a., 10 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Ramsey, Robert,[3] 100 a., 16 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Ramsey, William, 50 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h.
Ramsey, John, 100 a., 15 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c., 5 sheep.
Smith, Rev. Dr. William,[4] 100 a., including Brown's improvement.
Steel, Andrew, 150 a.
Swaghart, George, 50 a., 2 a. cl., 2 h., 1 c.
Thompson, Capt. William, 300 a., 4 a. cl., near the Great Meadows.

In the list for 1769 the following names occur that were not on the assessment of the previous year:

Armstrong, John, Esq.,[5] 1000 a., 12 a. cl.
Alexander, Randle, Path Valley, 200 a., 3 a. cl.
Armstrong, George, Col., 600 a., some improved.
Barnet, James, 200 a., 4 a. cl., 1 h.
Blair, John, Esq., 300 a.
Burd, John, in addition to 400 a. land, 100 cl., he was charged with 2 servants, 1 negro, 3 h., 4 c., and 3 sheep.
Bogle, James, 160 a.; Little Hell.[6]
Campble, Joseph, 200 a., 10 a. cl., 1 h., 3 c.
Cluggage, George, 100 a., 5 a. cl[7]
Davis, Bartholomew,[8] Poor, 50 a., 3 a. cl.
Elliot, John, Jr., Path Valley, 200 a., 2 a. cl.
Gallaher, Phila., 200 a., Little Hell.
Horrel, Clement, 300 a.
Jones, Thomas, 1 h.
Justice, Joseph, 1 h.
Justice, William.
Kelver, Capt. Thomas, 200 a.
Findlay, Samuel,[9] 500 a., some improved.
Moorhead, Thomas, 300 a., 20 a. cl., 1 c.
Moore, James, Path Valley, 100 a.
McBride, James.
McMurtrie, David, Little Hell, 100 a.
Morris, William, Little Hell, 200 a.[10]
Owens, David, 1 h., 1 c.
Patrick, Peter, 1 h.
Ralph, Lieut. James, 400 a., Three Springs.[11]
Rickets, Zacharias, 100 a., Little Hell.
Smith, William, Esq., 200 a.
Trent, Capt. William, 1800 a.
Watson, Robert, 1 h.
Watson, James, 400 a., 1 h., 1 c.
Watson, Samuel, 1 h.
Walling, Thomas, 50 a., 7 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Ward, Maj. Edward, sundry surveys, 2900 a.
Warder, Jeremiah, 1600 a., 15 a. cl., 1400 on Aughwick.
Wallace, William & Co., and Caleb Jones, 1500 a., Cluggage's Valley.

Freemen.

James Cluggage, George Cluggage, Robert Watson, James Watson, Joseph Justice, Thomas Jones, Robert Kelsey, James Bennet, Samuel Watson.

The list for 1770 contains names that do not appear on those for the preceding years, as follows:

Blair, Thomas, 200 a., 4 a. cl.
Cooper, James, 2 h., 2 c.
Dunnahoe, John,[12] 1 h., 2 c.
Henry, William, 500 a.
McDowel, John, 200 a., 10 a. cl.
McDowel, William, 200 a., 15 cl.
McDowel, Nathan, 200 a., 15 cl.
Morrison, William, 400 a.
Paxton, Samuel, 1 h.
Steel, Rev. John, 300 a.
Winton, William, 100 a., 5 cl.
Wayne, Isaac, 1 h., 1 c.
Wallin, Thomas, 1 h., 1 c.

Freemen.

James Cluggage, Robert Cluggage,[13] George Cluggage, Robert Calley, William Everet, Robert McKnight, William McCall, Robert Malcomson, James Watson, Samuel Watson.

Bedford County was erected from Cumberland by the act of March 9, 1771, and Dublin township was included therein. Before the new county was organized the assessment for that year was made, and as many new names and changes occur it is presented entire:

Armstrong, John, Esq., 300 a., 30 cl.
Armstrong, George, 200 a., 5 cl.; Kennedy Spring, 300 a.; Aughwick, Powell's Spring, 300 a.
Alexander, Randle, 200 a., 4 a. cl.
Boyle, Charles, 250 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 4 c., 6 sheep.
Bird, John, 300 a., 100 a. cl., 1 servant, 1 negro, 4 h., 4 c.
Blair, Thomas, 150 a., 3 a. cl.
Buchanan, William, 300 on Black Log.[14]
Barnet, James, 200 a., 7 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Burge, Henry, Poor, 300 a., 10 a. cl.
Bell, John, 300 a., 7 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Bogle, James, 100 a.
Cluggage, Robert, 150 a., 30 a. cl., 1 grist-mill,[15] 3 h., 4 c., 5 sheep.
Campbell, Francis, 100 a., 5 a cl.
Charlton, Samuel, 100 a., 15 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Carmichael, John, Little Hell, 200 a.

[1] Lived in Black Log Valley, northeast of the Black Log Gap. The valley was sometimes designated "Dailey's Valley."

[2] Lived on Aughwick Creek, near Aughwick Mills, now Shirley township, at the foot of Owens' Ridge.

[3] Lived between Burnt Cabins and Fort Littleton, now Fulton County.

[4] Founder of the town of Huntingdon.

[5] Col. John Armstrong, of Carlisle, once deputy surveyor of Cumberland County and the leader of the expedition against Kittanning. His land was on Aughwick, below Fort Shirley.

[6] This designation is harmless when it is explained to have been intended as an abbreviation of "Hunter's Little Hill Valley," lying between Jack's Mountain and Chestnut Ridge, Shirley, Cromwell, and Clay townships.

[7] Black Log Valley.

[8] Lived near the mouth of Sugar Run, Shirley township.

[9] Samuel Finley, an assistant of Col. John Armstrong and Richard Tea, deputy surveyors of the southern district of Cumberland County, was an active and accurate surveyor, and located many of the surveys in Bedford, Huntingdon, and Blair Counties from 1762 to 1767. Some of his descendants now reside in Dublin township.

[10] The tract upon which a part of Mount Union is built.

[11] The tract upon which the borough of Three Springs is located.

[12] He owned the David McGarvey farm and some adjoining lands, Shirley township.

[13] Robert Cluggage was afterwards a justice of the peace, and a military officer in Revolutionary times.

[14] The tract on Aughwick at and including the mouth of Black Log Creek.

[15] Stood near the junction of Black Log and Shade Creeks, Cromwell township.

Carmichael, James, 150 a.
Dayley, James, 300 a., 10 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c., 6 sheep.
Cluggage, George, 100 a., 10 a. cl.
Donachy, John, 1 h., 1 c.
Davis, Bartholomew, 40 a., 4 a. cl., 1 mill, 1 h., 1 c.
Doyle, David, 100 a., 4 a. cl., 1 c
Devenport, Josias, 100 a , 4 a. cl.
Eliot, Benjamin, 100 a., 25 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c., 8 sheep.
Elliot, John, 200 a., 5 a. cl.
Elliot, James, peddler, 100 a., 5 a. cl.
Fleming, James, Poor, 335 a., 8 a. cl.
Finlay, Samuel, 250 a., 300 a. on Aughwick waters.
Foley, James,[1] 200 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Galloher, John, Phila., 500 a., Little Hell.
Galloher, John, Poor, 150 a., 10 a. cl.
Hunter, James, 230 a. on Aughwich, near James Barnet's; 75 a. near mouth of Three Springs; 200 a. on Three Springs Run.
Horrel, Clement, 300 a in White Oak Valley.
Henry, George, 300 a. adjoining Littleton, 300 a. on Aughwick, adjoining , John Burd.
Henry, William, 400 a. at the forks of the Three Springs road.
Holt, Henry, 300 a., 20 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c., 4 sheep.
Justice, William,[2] 50 a., 10 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Neave & Company, 300 a., 15 cl.: 340 a. near mouth of Aughwick Creek; 1100 a. adjoining Chestnut Ridge; 300 a. at the Red Banks, on Aughwick; 570 a. at the mouth of Black Log Creek; 570 a. adjoining Richard Tea, at Clark's Bottom; 1800 a. on Three Springs Creek.
Lukens, John, 300 a. on Aughwick.
Moorehead, Thomas, 300 a., 20 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c., 4 sheep.
McCall, William, Poor, 300 a., 20 a. cl.
Morrison, William, in Tuscarora, 400 a. Little Hell.
McMurtry, David, 100 a.
Magaw, Rev. David, 200 a. Chestnut Ridge.
Magill, Charles, 100 a., 5 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Owens, John, Sr., 200 a., 20 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Picket, Heathcoat, Poor, 300 a., 15 c.
Ricket, Zachariah, 200 a.
Ramsey, Robert, 200 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c., 8 sheep.
Ramsey, John, 150 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c., 5 sheep.
Ramsey, William, 1 h., 1 c.
Ralf, Capt. James, 400 a.
Smith, Rev. Dr. William, 500 a. near the Red Bank; 200 a. near mouth of Aughwick; 300 a. adjoining Samuel Charlton, on Aughwick; 100 a. on top of Sideling Hill.
Steel, Rev. John, 289 a. on Sideling Hill Creek.
Smith, William, 200 a.
Trent, Capt. William, 300 a. adjoining Chestnut Ridge; 300 a. Black Log Fork; 500 a. near mouth of Black Log; 300 a., 5 a. cl., Black Run.
Tea, Richard, 500 a. Clark's Bottom.
Warder, Jeremiah, 300 a. near Aughwick, called Johnston's improvement; 300 a. at Minskey's Spring; 570 a. in Clark's Cove; 570 a. near mouth of Three Springs; 300 a. adjoining Oldtown.
Ward, Maj. Edward, 3000 a. Black Log Valley; 500 a. Turkey Hill, Shade Valley.
Wallace, William, 1500 a. Black Log Valley.
Walton, James, 50 a., 10 a. cl., 1 h , 1 c.
Watson, James, 300 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 1 c., 1 sheep.
Winston, William, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c., 4 sheep.

Freemen.

George Cluggage, Robert Cluggage, Robert Barnet, James McAnally, Thomas Shannon, Henry Hackney, Hugh Colhoon, James Watson, Heathcoat Picket, William Smith, Isaac Newtown, James Porter.

BARREE RATES, 1768.[3]

Allan, George, 600 a. on Shaver's Creek.
Baynton, Wharton & Morgan, 16,500 a. on the heads of Little Juniata;[4] 600 a. adjoining John Gammil; 2000 a. Woodcock Valley; 8000 a. on Frankstown waters; 600 a. on Shaver's Creek.
Benstead, Alexander, 360 a. on Little Juniata.
Brady, Capt., & Company, 1500 a. on Little Juniata and Shaver's Creek.
Boquet, Col., or heirs,[5] 300 a. in Woodcock Valley; 1500 a. in Trough Creek Valley.
Brady, John,[6] 2 h., 2 c.
Clark, Daniel, 200 a., joined Wharton & Pollock, Frankstown waters.
Calwell, Charles,[7] 200 a., 20 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Duffield, Edward & Co., 1600 a. on Canoe Run Valley.
Dunn, William, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Elliott, James & Co., 6000 a. in Point Valley.
Finlay, Samuel, 300 a. on Frankstown waters; 300 a. on Shaver's Creek.[8]
Joshua, John, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Gamble, John, 600 a. at Clover Lick; 400 a.,[9] 20 a. cl., 1 negro, 2 h., 2 c.
Hunter, James, 50 a. at Canoe Place; 300 a. adj. Capt. Finlay, on Frankstown waters.
Kore, Jacob, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Johnston, James, or heirs, 50 a. Frankstown waters.
Irwin, Robert, Jr., 200 a., Shaver's Creek.
Lukens & Little, 400 a. below Frankstown; 800 a. on Canoe Run; 500 a., 40 a. cl., on Shaver's Creek.
Lowry or Starret, 200 a. on Canoe Place.
Means, Hugh, 200 a. Water Street Valley.
McNitt, Alexander, 200 a., 10 a. cl., on Shaver's Creek.
Mifflin, Samuel, 2000 a., Standing Stone Creek.[10]
Mitchel, John, wagoner, 200 a. Woodcock Valley; 40 a. Totman's Island.[11]
Peters, Rev. Richard, 1400 a.[12]
Pollock, James, tavern-keeper, 100 a. on Frankstown Branch.
Physick, Edmond, 400 a. Woodcock Valley.
Proprietaries, 1500 a. above Water Street; 11,000 a. on Sinkhole Valley;[13] 3000 a. Woodcock Valley;[14] 3000 on Shaver's Creek.[15]
Renkin, James, 200 a. above Frankstown.
Sterrat, James, 200 a. at the Beaver dams.
Sparks, William, 100 a., 8 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[16]
Smith, Rev. Dr., 600 a. above Water Street; 1400 a. Standing Stone;[17] 1500 a. heads of Crooked Creek.[18]
Shippin, Edward, Jr., 1500 a. head of Juniata.[19]
Simpson, John,[20] Paxton, 300 a. on Little Juniata.
Totman, Joseph, 100 a., 6 a. cl.[21]
Trent, William, capt., 300 a. adj. Starret; 1000 a. adj. Duffield, Canoe Run.
Wallace & Co., 600 a. adj. Gamble, up Frankstown Creek; 5000 a. east branch of Juniata;[22] 1500 a., and 6000 a. recovered of Mr. Elliot, east branch of the waters of Juniata,[23] surveyed by Robert McKinny; 1500 a. adj. Capt. Brady.
Ward, Maj. Edward, 300 a. Ward's Cain; 1500 a. Trough Creek, Juniata.[24]

[1] Owned the Fort Shirley tract.

[2] Resided on Big Trough Creek, near Cook's mill, Tod township.

[3] This township then included all of Huntingdon and Blair and parts of Bedford and Centre Counties lying northwest of Dublin township.

[4] In Logan's, Warrior's Mark, and Spruce Creek Valleys.

[5] Col. Henry Boquet.

[6] Brady was from the Cumberland Valley, and settled in Woodcock Valley, north of McConnellstown. He sold his land there, and moved to Standing Stone (Huntingdon), where his son, Gen. Hugh Brady, was born in 1768. He afterwards removed to Northumberland County.

[7] Resided on south side of Juniata, above Alexandria, now Porter township.

[8] On the Globe Run, West township.

[9] Hart's Log tract.

[10] This land extended from the Standing Stone tract up the creek for several miles, and included the Kyper, Neal, Shoemaker, Warm Springs, and other farms.

[11] Tatman's Island in the Raystown Branch, above the mouth of Coffee Run.

[12] The tract upon which Hollidaysburg is located.

[13] The Sinking Valley Manor, in Tyrone and Morris townships.

[14] The Woodcock Valley Manor, Penn township.

[15] The Shaver's Creek Manor, Barree township.

[16] He lived on Raystown Branch.

[17] The tract upon which Huntingdon is located.

[18] In Woodcock Valley, north of McConnellstown, Walker township.

[19] The borough of Tyrone occupies a part of this land.

[20] The grandfather of the editor. The land is on the south side of the Little Juniata, above Petersburg.

[21] This man, whose name was "Tatman," lived on the east side of the Raystown Branch of Juniata, above the mouth of Coffee Run. From his residence there is derived the name of "Tatman's Gap," in Terrace Mountain.

[22] Head-waters of Spruce Creek.

[23] Warrior's Mark Valley.

[24] Plank Cabin Valley, Tod township.

Willson, John, 150 a., 15 cl., 2 h., 2 c.
Woods, George, 200 a. Woodcock Valley.[1]

In the Barree list for 1769 the following additional names appear:

Allison, Patrick & Co., 1000 a.[2]
Allison, Rev. Dr., 200 a.[3]
Allison, Samuel, 2000 a.
Allison, John, 200 a.
Anderson, Samuel, 100 a., 8 a. cl.[4]
Agnew, John, 150 a.[5]
Bond, Phineas, 200 a.
Boggs, Andrew, 600 a.
Beaver, William, 300 a.
Brady, John, 2 h., 2 c. (He is also rated for one house and lot supposed to be in the town of Huntingdon.)
Brady, Samuel, 1 house and lot, 1 h., 1 c.
Brady & Henderson, 2000 a. back of Tussey Mountain.
Clark & Peters, 1000 a.
Cox, Dr. John, 600 a.
Chew, Benjamin, Esq., 500 a.[6]
Couts, Benjamin, 200 a.
Caldwell, Robert,[7] 100 a., 10 a. cl., 300 a., 2 h., 2 c., 2 sheep.
Carnahan, John, 1 house and lot, 2 h., 1 c.
Campble Cleary, 20 a., 5 a. cl., 2 h., 1 c.
Dunn, William, 100 a., 15 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c., 6 sheep.[8]
Dewitt, Paul, 100 a., 3 a. cl., 1 h.[9]
Deane, William, 50 a., 6 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[10]
Eygo, Daniel, 80 a., 1 a. cl., 1 negro, 3 servants, 3 h.[11]
Flora, James, 2 h., 2 c.[12]
Friggs, Robert, 100 a., 4 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[13]
Founder, Frederick, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[14]
Gamble, William, 400 a.
Haynes, Reuben, 2000 a.; 1200 a. on Shaver's Creek.
Hillegas, Michael, 800 a.
Hartles, ——, Mr., 200 a.
Hampson, James,[15] 40 a., 5 a. cl., 2 h., 3 c., 5 sheep.
Hair, Jacob,[16] 150 a., 24 a. cl., 4 h., 4 c., 2 sheep.
Jacobs, Joseph & Co., 1500 a.
Johnston, Edward, 200 a.
Irwin, Christian, 300 a.
Jackson, George, 50 a., 6 a. cl., 1 h., 2 c., 4 sheep.[17]
Johnston, William, 100 a., some improved, 1 h., 1 c.[18]
Kidd, Benjamin, 300 a.[19]

[1] Liberty township, Bedford County.
[2] Head of Standing Stone Creek, Jackson township.
[3] Woodcock Valley, Penn township.
[4] Mouth of Shaver's Creek, Logan township.
[5] Shaver's Creek, Logan township.
[6] In Hart's Log Valley, Porter township.
[7] Ancestor of the Caldwells of Huntingdon and Blair Counties. His land was on the southwest side of the Little Juniata, opposite Barree Iron-Works.
[8] Resided in the bend of Raystown Branch, at the south end of Haun's Bridge, Juniata township, Huntingdon Co.
[9] Supposed to have lived near the head-waters of Shaver's Creek.
[10] Supposed to have lived on Raystown Branch, Penn township.
[11] Owned and resided on the "Igo farm," immediately above Jackstown, in Brady township. The designation "Igo's Hill," over which the turnpike passes between Jackstown and Bridgeport, was derived from this settler.
[12] Lived on Raystown Branch.
[13] Lived on Raystown Branch.
[14] Called in some of the old land titles "Frederick, the Dutchman," lived on Raystown Branch.
[15] Ancestor of the Hampsons of Mill Creek. He is supposed to have lived at this date on the Irwin farm in Union township.
[16] Owned the land at the mouth of Hare's Valley, and resided there. During the Revolution he became a Tory, and his land was confiscated and sold by the government.
[17] Ancestor of the Jacksons of the borough of Huntingdon, Jackson township, Huntingdon Co., and of Graysport, Blair Co. (See Logan township, Huntingdon Co., where the farm is situated.)
[18] Situated at Stewart's Mill, on Shaver's Creek, Logan township.
[19] A part of the Norris estate, Penn township, on Raystown Branch.

Lowry, James,[20] deceased, 1000 a.
Little, John, 400 a.[21]
McNutt, William, 250 a.[22]
McClay, William, 300 a.[22]
Murtrey, David, 300 a.[22]
Melchar, ——, 400 a.
Mould, Anthony, 50 a.[23]
McBride, James, 150 a.
McGaw, David, 100 a.
Moore, Zebulon, 100 a., 20 a. cl.; 2 h., 2 c., 3 sheep.[24]
Nilson, William, 300 a.[25]
Patterson, James & Co., 1550 a., 200 a.
Patterson, William, Esq., 18,000 a., 1400 a.[26]
Potter, James & Co., 1000 a.
Patterson, James, and Clayton, 1000 a.
Porter, Thomas, 150 a.
Perry, Samuel, Esq., 100 a.
Pridmor, Joseph, 100 a., 1 a. cl., 3 h., 3 c., 3 sheep.[27]
Poltney, Joseph, 1900 a., East Branch of Bald Eagle.
Rippey, William, 300 a.[28]
Roberts, Joseph, 300 a., 4 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[29]
Shea, John, 600 a.
Shirley, William, 20 a., 13 a. cl., 2 h., 1 c.[30]
Saunders, Benjamin, 250 a., 10 a. cl., 4 h., 2 c.[31]
Troy, Michael, 600 a.
Thompson, Samuel, 150 a., 12 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[32]
Wallace, John, deceased, 1000 a.
Wallace, William, 600 a.
Wolf, George, 200 a.
Wetherton, William, 100 a.
Weston, John, Sr., 150 a., 8 a. cl.[33]

Freemen.

Mordecai Gosnel, William Risle, John Parker, John Montgomery, John Weston, John Long, and Anthony White.

Additional names are found in the list for 1770, as follows:

Anderson, Samuel, 100 a., 20 a. cl., 25 a., 2 a. cl., 3 h., 5 c., 4 s.
Anderson, Daniel, 100 a.
Bowers, John, 2 h., 2 c.
Boquet, Col., 1300 a.
Beckbough, Jacob, 100 a., 3 a. cl., 1 h.
Caswell, Robert, 184 a.[34]
Hutchison, George, 300 a. Shaver's Creek.
Heather, George, 70 a.
Leamy, Daniel, 2 h., 1 c.
Little, James, 3 h., 2 c.
Morgan, Richard, 300 a., 6 a. cl., 150 a., 2 h., 2 c.
McIlleaver, William, 300 a.[35]
Ralph, David, 100 a., 2 a. cl., 50 a., 2 h., 2 c.
Shirley, William (increased to), 200 a., 13 a. cl., 2 h., 4 c.
Smart, William, 100 a., 4 a. cl., 2 h., 3 c.[36]
Stoner, Philip, 100 a., 15 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c.[37]

[20] He owned the "Old Town tract" at Frankstown.
[21] Little Valley, Penn township.
[22] Shaver's Creek Valley.
[23] Raystown Branch.
[24] Lived on Raystown Branch.
[25] Supposed to be "Nelson," Shaver's Creek Valley.
[26] At the Falling Spring and other places in Standing Stone Valley.
[27] Pridmore owned and lived on the Mill Creek tract, Brady township, and built the first mill there about 1770 or 1771.
[28] On Raystown Branch, Lincoln township.
[29] On Raystown Branch, Penn township.
[30] Lived in Trough Creek valley, near Cassville. "Shirley's Knob" was named after him.
[31] Lived on Raystown Branch, Lincoln township.
[32] Lived on the Yocum farm, Juniata township, Huntingdon Co.
[33] Lived on Raystown Branch, above the mouth of the Rippling Run, Juniata township.
[34] Shaver's Creek Valley.
[35] Probably intended for McAlevy.
[36] Lived on Raystown Branch, in Lincoln township.
[37] Lived on Raystown Branch.

Shoaf, Boston, 150 a., 10 a. cl., 50 a.[1]
Teaburn, Philip, 100 a.
Willson, William, 100 a., 6 a. cl.,[2]
Weston, John, Jr., 100 a.
Whetstone, Michael.
Woolery, ——, 180 a., 5 a. cl., 100 a.

Additional Freemen.

John Shaver, John Forsythe, Daniel Anderson, Hugh Guthrie, Jacob Kelly, John Kelly, Solomon Foreshear,[3] Kilgore.

Additional names and changes occur in 1771, as follows:

Blythe, Benjamin, 200 a.
Boshar, Samuel, 300 a., 6 a. cl., 1 h., 2 c., 5 s.
Bebout, Jacob,[4] 10 a., 5 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Bowers, John, and James Little, 700 a., 13 a. and 10 a. cl. on the proprietary tract,[5] 2 h., 2 c. to Bowers, 2 h., 2 c., 3 s. to Little.
Beech, Walderen, 100 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h., 2 c.
Chestnut, William, 700 a.
Cross, Cornelius, 50 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h., 3 s.
Clark, Walter,[6] 100 a., 7 a. cl., 2 h., 3 c.
China, Robert.
Croghan, George, 200 a. adjoining Raystown Branch, 170 a. adjoining Philip Stoner.
Dunlop, James, 160 a.
Flower, James, 50 a., 3 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Denneston, James, mill-carpenter, 222 a. bought of William Patterson.
Heather, George, 200 a., 10 a. cl., 3 h., 5 c.
Hartsock, Peter, 2 h., 2 c.
Hicks, Lewis, 400 a., 6 a. cl., 1 b., 1 c.
Igo, Peter,[7] 1 h., 2 c.
Kleygar, Anthony, 40 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Leane, Daniel, renter, 1 h., 1 c.
Lukens, John, Esq., 360 a. at the mouth of Little Juniata.
Lowry, James, and Daniel's heirs, 1000 a.
Minor, Thomas, Poor, 60 a., 1 a. cl.
Moor, Levy,[8] 100 a., 9 a. cl., 2 h., 2 c., 5 s.
Murray, William,[9] 2 h.
Maclay, Samuel, 139 a. bought of William Patterson, on Standing Stone Creek.
McKnight, John, deceased, estate, three 300-a. tracts, all on Shaver's Creek.
McKnight, William, 250 a. on Shaver's Creek.
McLeavey, William, 300 a.
McKnight, Alexander, 150 a.
Neave & Co., 300 a., 4 a. cl.; 300 a., 10 a. cl.; 900 a. in Woodcock Valley;[10] 7000 a. on Little Juniata, called the Warrior's Mark;[11] 500 a. at upper crossing of Frankstown Branch;[12] 1300 a. at the Globe.[13]
Oulery, David, 20 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Patterson, James, 180 a. opposite the mouth of the Juniata.
Poage, James, 180 a. upper crossing of Frankstown Branch.
Patterson, William, Esq., 574 a. Standing Stone Creek.
Prigmore, Joseph,[14] 150 a., 5 a. cl., 1 grist-mill, 2 h., 3 c.
Petticoat, Dorsey.

[1] Sebastian Shoup, who built a mill on the run that bears his name, in Hopewell township.

[2] Shaver's Creek Valley.

[3] Solomon Forshey, who resided in Penn township, and from whose family Forshey's Gap, in Terrace Mountain, derived its name.

[4] One of the builders of the mill at the mouth of Spruce Creek

[5] The Manor of Hart's Log, Porter township.

[6] Lived on the waters of Big Trough Creek, Broad Top, Carbon township.

[7] Lived in Brady township.

[8] Lived on Raystown Branch, in Lincoln township.

[9] Settled upon the Gorsuch farm, Centre Union, Oneida township, and gave the name to Murray's Run.

[10] The upper and lower mill tracts, McConnellstown.

[11] The lands on the eastern side of Bald Eagle Ridge, extending from the Little Juniata to near the Centre County line.

[12] Below Alexandria.

[13] On Shaver's Creek, West township.

[14] See list for 1769.

Robb, James, 160 a. on Crook Creek.[15]
Reapher, Chris[r], 100 a., 5 a. cl.
Rickets, Edward, 300 a., 10 a. cl., 2 h., 2c., 2 sheep.[16]
Rannels, George, 1 h., 1 c.[17]
Smith, Rev. Dr. William, 1500 a. Crooked Creek; 100 a. on James Creek; 400 a. on Standing Stone Creek; 200 a. at Big Spring.
Shilling, Christopher, 2 h.
Sullivan, Rev. Cornelius.
Shope, Bostian, 100 a., 6 a. cl., 2 h., 1 c.[18]
Shope, Jacob, 100 a., 2 a. cl.
Stevenson, George, 300 a. on Standing Stone Creek.
Tipton, Edward, renter, 1 h.
Vaunce, Thomas, 2 h., 1 c.
Wilson, James, 100 a., 5 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
White, Anthony,[19] 100 a., 20 a. cl., 1 h., 2 c., 2 s.
Whiston, Michl., 100 a., 2 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Wallace, Samuel,[20] 300 a. on Robinson's Run; 300 a. on Shaver's Creek; 300 a. on Shaver's Creek; 300 a. on the mouth of Trough Run; 100 a. on Bedford Branch.
Wallace, John (dec'd) & Co., 1000 a.
Willroy, ——, 100 a.

Additional Freemen.

Joseph China, Mathias Beebout.

The act erecting Bedford County (March 9, 1771) fixed the Juniata River as the line from a point below Newton Hamilton up to Shaver's Creek, hence that part of the territory now embraced in Huntingdon County which lies north of the river and east of Shaver's Creek, remained in Barree township, Cumberland Co., until annexed to Bedford by the acts of 1772 and 1779. The assessment of this fragmentary township, taken by the Cumberland authorities, for 1773 was as follows:

Boran, William, 200 a., 5 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Bond, Dr., 200 a. on the head of Kishacoquillas Valley.
Chandley, Benjamin, 300 a.[21]
Dickson, James, 300 a. on Beaver Creek.[22]
Drake, Benjamin, 100 a. on Juniata River.[23]
Mifflin & Dean, 500 a.
Hare, Jacob, 100 a., 5 a. cl. on Juniata River.[24]
Igo, Daniel, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 1 servant, 2 h., 2 c.
Igo, Peter, 100 a., 10 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Murray, William, 100 a., 6 a., c. 1 h., 1 c.
Montgomery, John, 600 a., Kishacoquillas Valley.
Maclay, John, 300 a. Kishacoquillas Valley.
Kyle, James, 100 a., 7 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Nailer, Ralph, 300 a., Kishacoquillas Valley.
Prigmore, Joseph, 200 a., 15 a. cl., 1 grist-mill, 1 h., 1 c.
Perkins, John, 100 a., 3 a. cl., 1 h., 1 c.
Petticoat, Dorsey, 1 h., 1 c.
Vandevander, Peter, 100 a., 3 a. cl.[25]

[15] A part of the Whitaker lands, Hart's Log Valley, Porter township.

[16] Lived at one time on Standing Stone Creek. The Ricketses were early settlers. Some resided in Hill, Spruce Creek, and Warrior's Mark valleys.

[17] Lived in Huntingdon, and afterwards became owner of lands in Woodcock Valley and on Piney Ridge. His son David (Reynolds) moved to Armstrong County, where many of his descendants now reside.

[18] Same as Boston Shoaf, on list of 1770.

[19] Ancestor of a branch of the White family at Huntingdon and vicinity, resided on a part of the Shenefelt farm, Juniata township, Huntingdon Co.

[20] Properly written Wallis. He was an extensive dealer in lands.

[21] In Kishacoquillas Valley, Brady township.

[22] The old name of a branch of Mill Creek.

[23] The lower end of the "Mill Creek" farm.

[24] The old Plowman farm.

[25] Peter Van Devander, from Virginia, settled upon the Robley farm, in Brady township, and there reared a large family. Among the sons were Peter, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and John. Daughters married respectively —— Armitage, Peter Swoope, —— Shaver, and Samuel Hampson.

CHAPTER X.

Huntingdon—The Warm Springs—Jack's Narrows—Fort Shirley—Black Log Valley—The Clugage Family, and the Shades of Death in 1775.

THE following is copied from a manuscript diary of Rev. Philip Fithian, who left his home at Greenwich, N. J., May 9, 1775, for a tour through Delaware, Maryland, and Pennsylvania, and at a Presbytery held at West Conococheague Church (near Mercersburg, Pa.) was commissioned to visit Central Pennsylvania as a supply to the scattered Presbyterian Churches. On his return from Kishacoquillas Valley he passed through the territory of Huntingdon County.[1]

Under date Monday, Aug. 21, 1775, he draws near the town of Huntingdon, and the diary continues,—

"I met two men on horseback. As they passed me I smelled their breaths; it was strong of whiskey. By this token, which in thicker settled places you would scruple, I grew certain that I was near the town. My conjecture was right: I soon after entered Huntingdon.

"As I drew near I could not help thinking myself on the borders of some large town. There was a drum beating, several antic loud singers, every now and then a most vociferous laugh, and candles, thinly scattered, shining here and there from the houses. I expected to find a few of our American bedlams. These small towns, especially when they are growing fast and a new thing, go before every other place in most sort of vice, but especially drinking and a few of its nearest allied attendants. I had cautiously put on my riding-coat to disguise the clerical cloth, for I was not certain that I should escape some blackguard embarrassment, for too much liquor makes many 'over wicked;' but it makes some 'over good,' and sets them in a tune to ask more questions in divinity, especially explanation of parts of Scripture, than unexperienced I or any other Dr. of Divinity in America could have the patience, if he had the ability, to resolve. Fearing all this, and knowing in such a case I should escape no better myself, before I arrived within a mile of town I put on my surtout and cocked up my hat in the best manner.

"'You seem to be a stranger,' said a tall youngster to me as I put my first foot on the porch.

"'Is the hostler here?' I asked.

"'Are you from below, stranger?'

"'Bring in the saddle-bags, and let the horse cool before you give him a gallon of oats.'

"'Are you a stranger, sir?'

"'Yes, sir, a stranger.'

"I could hear one another whispering about me on the porch. Some thought I was one of the delegates appointed to the treaty with the Indians which is soon to be held at Fort Pitt. Some thought I was a land-jobber, some that I was a broken, absconded merchant, some that I was a Tory flying from knobstick vengeance. I supped, however, and soon retired.

"Tuesday, August 22d.—I spent the night, quite contrary to my expectations, in peace. Squire Hall, a store-keeper, came in late, found me a stranger, and took me in with another young man, Mr. Clugage, of Shirley, to his house. Here was a late paper; it said His Excellency Gage has resigned his commission to Gen. Howe, etc. Squire Hall told me that he is now selling salt by the bushel at fourteen shillings current. He told me further that many in this town and neighborhood are under present alarming apprehensions of danger from the Indians. It is certain the Indians now show temptation; the Governor of Canada with all his agents are employed and bribed to set them on us.

"I rose from my bed early in order to be at the 'Warm Springs,' for I came about by the village wholly to see them. I rode through the wet bushes five miles quite alone. The path is single and not over stony, but all the way bushy. These springs rise in what is called Standing Stone Valley, a little west of the mountain, and five miles north of Juniata River. The water rises boiling up with sand and much air in bubbles in a piece of land which is almost level. There is a small descent of a few feet from the highest part of the neighboring land to the place of the water rising; and below is a watery flat covered with marsh flowers, flags, touch-me-nots, water-lilies, etc. The water rises up in nearly equal quantities in two places at about three perches distance. One is used by the invalids for drinking; the other for bathing. They both stand as great nature formed them, edged with moss and overhung with boughs; only delicacy has the present year's inhabitants urged to assist nature a little by adding a few more boughs to the bathing part, which are laid in the form of an arch, and wholly conceal such as choose to bathe alone. They have also scooped out the bath into a kind of hollow basin, about six feet long and four feet wide. The water is quite clear, without any floating scum whatever. The bottom is covered by a white sand and small gravel, which makes the place in bare appearance desirable. I could not but wonder at the rising wind. In both springs it ascends continually and at times in large quantities, bubbling up through the sand and breaking with a small noise when it comes to the surface of the water, which is two or three feet deep. I am not qualified by reading or experience to judge for myself or inform others of these springs from any information I can get by being present and seeing and tasting them. I have said the water is quite clear. It has no unusual or unpleasant taste. It is not indeed cold. I think it like some springs which I have seen running without a shade in summer.

"The water is sensibly soft to the mouth, and those who are trying it tell me it may be drunk without injury in great quantities. I drank out of curiosity near a pint, but it was to me in taste and effect like other common water, and I feared that a pint would be as much as I would choose to swallow at once. The water must be used some days before the perspiration fully begins. On this account it cannot be used at first in so large a measure as it may be after used. As to the virtue of these waters, the people say it is chiefly in rheumatic cures, violent pains in the limbs and different parts of the body, and some that have been long fixed, the steady use of these springs has entirely recovered. Weakness and debility of the system have been much assisted, and in some few cases quite restored. I heard one person say—I will not vouch for the credit of his assertion—that it was an effectual asylum for all barren women, etc. There are now twenty-two persons professedly indisposed. Seven I took from their afraid appearance to be unmarried virgins, two with their husbands, and one of them is very old. A young lad said of this venerable silver-haired matron that she came filled with the hope of finding these springs possessed with the quality to heal old age. The remaining thirteen were men of different ages.

"It looks indeed like an infirmary hospital. Many of them are by no means in health. The most in strong belief at least are indisposed, or they could not submit to the inconveniences for any length of time which the situation of the place makes necessary. It is quite in the woods, not a single house or any cleared land between it and town. They must carry all their provisions and supply themselves; they live in low cabins built with slabs and boughs, and cook their dinners all at one great common fire; the men for exercise play at quoits, hunt deer, turkeys, and pheasants; with their hardships, however, they live in friendship, and are steadily cheerful, conquering by society the uneasiness of infirmity and labor, and making them almost constantly pleasant.

"In a brook at some distance from the springs are many remarkably smooth blue stones; their shape chiefly I admire; every size of these stones is an oblate spheroid, and they are very dense in contexture; some not larger than an ordinary tea-kettle was nearly a load for a common man. On the smooth surface of several of these which people had brought to their cabins and used as seats are inscribed the names, in large and initial letters, of great numbers who have been here before. Partaking of the general desire deeply fixed in all the human race for every method of passing down notice of our existence, I also with my spur wrote at full length in italic letters my three names. Having at last, with as much accuracy as possible, viewed and reviewed the whole, I mounted and rode back to town. In this town I parted not without reluctance with an able, steady, useful friend,—I mean my horse. Bob Orr, of Kishacoquillas, gave me a small neat black horse of four years old and a half for my old companion 'Jack.'

"Having adjusted matters, I left town in company with Mr. Clugage, and rode down the river, a stony path, through Jack's Narrows, where the high mountains on each side of the water came down to its very bank, so that in places we were forced to go down on the water's edge. We crossed over the water. 'This is one end of Hell Valley,' said Mr. Clugage to me, as we were jogging along in silence, about ten miles onward in a gap between the hills which is called the Shades of Death. What! are the shadows of death and hell here? Death and hell so easily passed through! Vain man, how daring to make these tremendous subjects so common. We crossed Ofwick (Aughwick) Creek, and arrived about eight in the evening at Mr. Fowley's, who lives within the walls of old Fort Shirley. Distance from town twenty miles.

[1] Furnished by Hon. John Blair Linn, of Bellefonte.

"Wednesday, August 23d.—I had almost forgotten to tell the person who shall read these papers a couple of hundred years hence that there is now standing in a garden at Huntingdon a tall stone column or pillar nearly square, which has given to the town and valley the name of Standing Stone Valley.' The column is seven feet above the ground.

"After breakfast with Mrs. Fowley, a smart, neat woman (her pewter in the dresser glistened, her wooden dishes, pails, and the like were white and sweet), and after appointing sermon to be here Sunday we rode up Ofwick six miles to Mr. Clugage's. The good little woman received me with great kindness She looked to be an old woman, very healthy, and indeed florid in her appearance, yet she wears neither shoes nor stockings. It is the custom in these backwoods almost universal for the women to go barefooted. Men in common, I observe, wear moccasins, or Indian shoes. When I had seated myself for a few hours, impatient of confinement, I rambled out. Here are two fine brooks; near the N. and S. are two high mountains; from them the streams came trickling down. As I was strolling along the water I found two sorts of plums; the one is a red or streaked plum not yet quite ripe and very tart. The other is by far the best; is a yellow, and when rubbed is a bright orange-colored plum, now nearly ripe, and very juicy and sweet. Both kinds are nearly of a size, and grow upon a low, scrubby, thorny bush. We received intelligence that Gen. Gage, in some fit of surprise, has burned down the town of Boston, and, with all his army, gone off. This in my opinion wants confirmation it came by an unprinted letter.

"Thursday, August 24th.—The weather is wet and very muggy. All the inhabitants in these back settlements are remarkably strong, fresh, and cheerful. I have seen only one, the young man in Northumberland, at all indisposed with any kind of fever. With Mr. Clugage, I rode after dinner three miles to the Shades of Death to fish. Ofwick Creek runs between two high mountains. These narrows are overhung with high spruce, elm, ash, and interspread with ivy, laurel, etc., which make a dismal gloom.

"Friday, August 25th.—As I was with eagerness looking through Mr. Dunlap's paper of the 7th, impatient to hear from oppressed Boston, in my hurry of reading I passed over the astonishing sentence, 'On Friday, the 20th of July, died at his home, in Cohansie, New Jersey, the Rev. Andrew Hunter, A.M., etc.'

"I am aided in averting grief by Mrs. Clugage's pathetic sorrow. One of her sons has gone captain of a company of riflemen to Boston, just now gone. Her tears are not yet dried since his departure. She seems to be a woman of sedate, philosophical temper; carries a kind of dignity that is persuasive in her presence. The young gentleman that has gone was a magistrate here and in high reputation. Since his departure another of the good, kind woman's sons has been chosen by company of militia for captain. There are five brothers, all grown, and appear to be young men of prudence and understanding.

"Sunday, August 27th.—Shirley. We held sermon in Mr. Fowley's barn. A rainy, stormy day. Many, however, were present,—fifty or more. On my way to sermon I was met by a message from a poor, dying man, urging me on that I might converse with him a little before his departure,—a stranger, and here dying. He came to Mr. Fowley's last Thursday, on his way to Virginia. He appeared ill when he came in; he was exceeding ill. He begged the liberty of a bed to rest awhile. But, poor youth, it was the bed of death. His disorder was a consumption. When I came in he was too far wasted to converse. His body, even his head, was cold; his legs were much swollen; he was in a deep sweat; his breath, too, was cool and short. He had his understanding in full, and I asked some questions, which he answered with calmness and great judgment. He told me he was near his end, and begged that I would remember him in public assembly and recommend him to God's mercy. I summed up to him in the plainest manner a few of the greatest necessary evidences of union to God by Christ, and assured him of the ability and willingness of our great Redeemer 'to save to the uttermost.' Before the last sermon was finished, poor youth, he expired. This settlement is broken with religious divisions. There is a Baptist Society, now under the direction of Mr. Lane. There is also a Methodist Society, but no stated minister. These, when the whole settlement is not large, makes every society quite inconsiderable in number and power. Good Mrs. Clugage stayed with Mrs. Fowley, to assist in directing the funeral. After sermon I stopped at young Mr. Clugage's and stayed overnight. For my supply one of the hearers, I know not who, gave me twenty shillings.

"Monday, August 28th.—A damp, muddy, sickly morning. I set out over the rocky path to Loudon."

CHAPTER XI.

CONFISCATION OF THE ESTATES OF TRAITORS.

AMONG the early enactments of the General Assembly under the Constitution of 1776, was one "declaring what shall be treason, and what other crimes and practices against the state shall be misprision of treason," passed Feb. 11, 1777. In each county there were inhabitants who still adhered to the crown and directly or covertly assisted the enemies of American independence. That the line between friend and foe might be distinctly drawn, the General Assembly, by act passed June 13th of the year named, required all the white male inhabitants of the State to take and subscribe an oath renouncing all allegiance to George the Third, king of Great Britain, and pledging themselves to be faithful and bear true allegiance to the commonwealth as a free and independent State. The justices before whom the oaths were made and subscribed, were required to keep registers of them, and to transmit annually a list of the names of the persons sworn to the recorder of deeds of the proper county, who was enjoined to record the same. The justices were also required to give a certificate to every person who had taken the prescribed oath. On the opposite page is a copy of a certificate transcribed from the original.

The General Assembly, by act passed March 6, 1778, after naming a number of prominent citizens of the commonwealth as having "most traitorously and wickedly, and contrary to the allegiance they owe to the said State, joined and adhered to, and still do adhere to, and knowingly and willingly aid and assist the army of the king of Great Britain," and commanding them to appear for their trial for such treason on or before a day named, or by neglect to appear be convicted and attainted of high treason, authorized the Supreme Executive Council to command, by public proclamation, all persons, subjects or inhabitants of the State, or those owning real estate therein, aiding or assisting the enemies of this State or of the United States, to render themselves on or before a day to be named, to abide their trial for treason, or after that day to stand and be attainted of high treason, and suffer such penalties and forfeitures as persons attainted of high treason ought to do.

By a proclamation of the Council issued Oct. 30, 1778, among others, John Campbell, William Campbell, James Little, Edward Gibbons, and James Delong, of Amberson's Valley; Andrew Smith and Robert Nixon, of the township of Lack; Joseph King and William Wright, of Path Valley; Dominick McNeal and John Stillwell, of the township of Tuscarora, all of the county of Cumberland; Richard Weston, of the township of Frankstown, and Jacob Hare, Michael Hare, and Samuel Barrow, of the township of Barree and county of Bedford, with others, were charged with having adhered to and knowingly and willingly aided and assisted the enemies of this State and of the United States, by having joined their armies within this State, and were required to render themselves for trial on or before the 15th day of December following, or thereafter suffer the penalties and forfeitures prescribed by law.

In Council, May 29, 1778, agents for the confiscated estates were appointed for the several counties and instructions to them adopted. Those for Bedford County were Robert Galbraith, Thomas Urie, and John Piper. On the 29th day of January, 1781, John Canan and Gideon Richey were appointed, and on the 15th day of November in the same year, Michael Cryder was named in the room of Mr. Canan. By proclamation of the 20th day of March of this year, "Henry Gordon, now or late a military officer in the British service, now or late of the township of Kennett," in the county of Chester, was commanded to render himself on or before the first day of November following.

Messrs. Richey and Cryder, after giving due public notice, sold at the court-house in Bedford, on the 18th day of April, 1782, a tract of land containing about three hundred acres, situated in Hopewell township, "a little above Jack's Narrows, the late property of Jacob Hare," to Michael Huffnagle, Esq., "for and in trust for James R. Reed, a major, and Capt. Samuel Brady, for the sum of six hundred and fifty ." They also made return of the sale of a tract in Frankstown township, "containing about eighteen hundred acres, divided into two tracts, the one, containing about fourteen hundred and ninety-five acres, sold to James Woods, of the county of Cumberland, for the sum of two thousand and five pounds; the other, containing three hundred and twenty-five acres, sold to the said James Woods for the sum of one hundred and seventy pounds." "The Council (June 11, 1782), recurring to the proclamation dated March the twentieth, 1781, on which the attaint of Harry Gordon and the seizure of said tract of land is said to be founded, observes that Henry Gordon is there called upon to render himself and abide his trial, etc., and that the said lands have been sold as late the property of Harry Gordon, were unanimously of opinion that the seizure and sale of the said tract of land is void and of none effect."

In an act passed the 31st day of January, 1783,[1] after reciting the misnomer, provided that if Harry Gordon should not render himself for trial on or before the 24th day of July then next ensuing, that the seizure and sale already made should be confirmed. Gordon did not appear, and on the 2d day of October deeds were executed by the Council to James Woods for the two tracts for the consideration named.[2] Woods and the persons holding under him retained possession until 1805.

Seven hundred and fifty acres of the larger tract had become vested in the devisees of Adam Holliday; four hundred and sixty-two and three-fourths acres had become vested in David Hayfield Conyngham, of Philadelphia, the possession of the remainder not having been obtained by him, and the smaller tract of three hundred and twenty-five acres became the property of Daniel Martin. These persons were by judgment of the Circuit Court of the United States, rendered at April sessions, 1805, evicted from the parcels mentioned, by Harry Gordon, an heir-at-law of the attainted Harry, on the ground of his misnomer in the early proceedings of the Council.

I DO hereby CERTIFY, That JOHN SIMPSON
hath voluntarily taken and ſubſcribed the Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance and Fidelity, as directed by an Act of General Aſſembly of Pennſylvania, paſſed the 13th day of June, A.D. 1777. Witneſs my hand and ſeal, the 14th day of October A.D. 1777.
(L.S.) JOSHUA ELDER.

Printed by JOHN DUNLAP.

[1] Laws, p. 131.

[2] Arch., vol. xiii. p. 701.

The Legislature, at the session of 1806–7,[1] appropriated ten thousand six hundred and twenty-six dollars to Conyngham and the executors of Holliday, to be apportioned by David Stewart, Andrew Henderson, and John Canan, according to the value of the lands at the time of Holliday's purchase, and one thousand two hundred dollars to Martin as compensation for his eviction from the three hundred and twenty-five acre tract.

Hare's real estate consisted of four adjoining tracts of land, situated on the south side of the Juniata River, including the borough of Mapleton, and extending therefrom up the river and up Hare's Valley. These tracts, containing over four hundred acres, were confirmed to Frances Reed by patents issued in June, 1794.

CHAPTER XII.

FORMATION OF HUNTINGDON COUNTY—ERECTION OF COUNTY BUILDINGS.

STANDING STONE, afterwards known as Huntingdon, on the Juniata and on the traders' road, became in a few years a point of considerable importance. Settlements were made along the river and in the adjacent valleys. Population in the northern half of Bedford County had so increased as to warrant the inhabitants in demanding from the Assembly the setting off of a new county, and a bill for that purpose was introduced into the Assembly in 1787. When under consideration, on the 19th of September, it was opposed by Messrs. Whitehill, of Cumberland, and Findlay, of Westmoreland, and advocated by Messrs. D Clymer, Fitzsimmons, Canan (of Bedford), and G. Clymer. Mr. Findlay failed in an effort to have the measure postponed, and on a test vote, reached that day, it was passed by a decided majority. It appeared in the discussions that twelve hundred and fifty of the inhabitants of the proposed new county prayed for its erection, and sixty-nine remonstrated against it. On the next day, September 20th, the bill was compared and finally enacted. A part of the text of the bill is as follows:

"SEC. I. Whereas, It hath been represented to the General Assembly of this State, by the inhabitants of that part of Bedford County which lies on the waters of the Frankstown Branch of Juniata, the lower part of the Raystown Branch of the same, the Standing Stone Valley, part of Woodcock Valley, the waters of the Aughwick Creek, and other the northeasterly parts of the said county of Bedford, that they labor under great hardships from their distance from the present seat of justice, and the public offices for the said county, now in the town of Bedford: for remedy whereof,

"SEC. II. Be it enacted, etc., That all and singular the lands lying within the bounds and limits, hereinafter described and following, shall be, and are hereby, erected into a separate county, by the name of Huntingdon County; namely, beginning in the line of Bedford and Franklin Counties, where the new State road, (by some called Skinner's road) leading from Shippensburg to Littleton, crosses the Tuscarora Mountain; thence in a straight course or line, to the gap in the Shade-Mountain, where the road formerly called Potts' road crosses the same, about two miles north of Littleton; thence by a straight line to the Old Gap, in Sideling Hill, where Sideling Hill Creek crosses the mountain; thence in a straight line by the northerly side of Sebastian Shoub's mill, on the Raystown Branch of Juniata; thence on a straight to the Elk Gap, in Tussey's Mountain, computed to be about nineteen miles above or southwesterly of the town of Huntingdon, (formerly called the Standing Stone), and from the Elk Gap, in a straight line, to the gap at Jacob Stevens' mill, a little below where Woolery's mill formerly stood, in Morrison's Cove; thence in a straight line by the southerly side of Blair's mill, at the foot of the Allegheny Mountain; thence across the said mountain, in a straight line, to and along the ridges dividing the waters of Conemaugh from the waters of Clearfield and Chest Creeks, to the line of Westmoreland County; thence by the same to the old purchase line, which was run from Kittanning to the West Branch of Susquehanna River; and along the said line to the said West Branch, and down the same to the mouth of Moshannon Creek, and along the remaining lines or boundaries which now divide the county of Bedford from the counties of Northumberland, Cumberland and Franklin, to the place of beginning."

The town of Huntingdon, on the river Juniata, was fixed upon as the seat of justice for the new county, and Benjamin Elliott, Thomas Duncan Smith, Ludwig Sell, George Ashman, and William McElevy[2] appointed trustees, who, or any three of whom, were authorized to take assurance and conveyance of and for the land and grounds proposed to be appropriated in said town for the site of a court-house and jail. Courts were to be held on the first Tuesday in the months of December, March, June, and September. The voters of the county were authorized to choose one representative to serve in the General Assembly.

It becomes a matter of some interest at this day, nearly a century after the passage of the bill to create this new county, the eighteenth of the commonwealth, to note the views thereon expressed by contemporaneous writers. In The Pennsylvania Packet and Daily Advertiser, a leading paper of Philadelphia, in the issue of Sept. 21, 1787, under the heading, "General Assembly, Wednesday, Sept. 19th," the measure was thus treated:

"The bill for erecting part of Bedford County into a new county, which was under consideration yesterday, was resumed, when it was argued that it was too late at this time to pass the bill into a law, as it would be impracticable to warn the county against the approaching election. Upon general principles, indeed, the bill was thought to be inexpedient and premature. It would be the means of encreasing the burthens of government by erecting an additional number of representatives, a member for the executive council, and two members for the council of censors; and it would encrease the expences of the county, by introducing the necessity of a double pannel of jurors, and all other officers incidental to county establishments, when it was evident that the charges were already as great as could be well borne by the people. It is true twelve hundred and fifty petitioners have solicited the division of this county, but if we could even be assured that these were all taxable inhabitants, it would be a number too small to bear the weight of a separate establishment, and smaller than have ever yet prevailed upon the Legislature in so important a measure. We know, however, that petitions are easily obtained, and when the views of a particular district are to be accomplished, we are sure to find a greater number of inhabitants than are ever to be found when a tax is to be levied. Upon the whole, we conceive that we are not bound to comply with every petition that is presented to us, but are to judge upon the propriety of the measure proposed as it respects the general interests of the commonwealth. If we acquiesce upon this occasion, we must be prepared to acquiesce with every similar request, and experience will teach us to anticipate an infinite train of divisions and subdivisions in every county.

[1] Act of Feb. 10, 1807.

[2] By act of April 2, 1790, Andrew Henderson and Richard Smith were added to the trustees to supply vacancies caused by death and removal.

To the Inhabitants of Huntington County in Pennsylvania

Gentlemen

The day you selected to express to me, your Sentiments, on the afflictive, and hazardous situation, in which the United States are placed, gives them a peculiar Solemnity—

When on that serious day you declared, that you discovered in the conduct of Government, after an attentive consideration, the most sincere and ardent desire, to preserve a strict and honorable Neutrality, and to cultivate in an especial manner, Peace and Harmony with the French Nation the world will entertain no doubt of your Sincerity

Although with you I deprecate ~~yet~~ War, yet I cannot but think that there are, many other Mischiefs Still greater— a depravation of general principle, Submission to a restless, insidious, perfidious, foreign influence, National dishonor and disgrace are calamities more deplorable—

Philadelphia May 24th 1798— John Adams

"The friends of the bill observed that it had originated in the first sessions of this house, and if it has been at all disagreeable to the citizens who were to be affected by it, counter petitions would certainly have been presented. But, in truth, it was a measure highly favoured by the people, and would be equally advantageous to the State at large and to the particular district comprised within the proposed boundaries,—to the State, by improving our internal commerce and facilitating our trade with the western countries; to the people (who in some instances were obliged to travel eighty miles to the county town), by bringing the courts of justice nearer to their homes. With respect to the expence incurred by the State upon the division of countries, that was an evil engendered by the Constitution, which ought not to counteract the rights and conveniences of the citizens, and the expence incurred by the county would be counterbalanced by the advantages. It was surely sufficient upon that head that those who were to defray the cost did not object to it, and in the present instance the burthen would be considerably diminished, as Dr. Smith presented a lot of ground for the scite of a court-house and gaol, and the greater part of the money necessary to erect these buildings would be furnished by a voluntary subscription.

"The question being put, the bill was taken up by paragraphs, and, after a few amendments in describing the boundaries of the new county, called HUNTINGDON, it was ordered to be engrossed."

Early Election Districts.—At the time of the separation from Bedford County, the territory of Huntingdon was embraced in three districts, to wit: the third, fifth, and sixth. The fifth and sixth were divided in the formation of the new county, but the voting-place for each fell within its limits.

The fourth district was formed in 1794, and consisted of the townships of Woodberry and Frankstown and that part of Allegheny township that lies west of the Widow Edington's. The elections were to be held at the store-house of Alexander McDowell, in Frankstown township.[1] The third district was to comprise Franklin, Tyrone, and Morris townships and that part of Allegheny that lies east of the Widow Edington's, and the elections were to be held at the house of Capt. Alexander Ramsey, in Franklin township.[2] The fifth and sixth districts were formed in 1797.[3] The former embraced Woodberry and Morris townships, and the place of elections fixed at the house of Robert Smith, in Williamsburg; the latter included all the territory of the county lying between Sideling Hill and Tussey's Mountain and south of the following bounds, to wit: from the path on the summit of said mountain leading from Hartsock's fort, by a straight line to and including John Freate's house; thence by a straight line to Forshey's Gap in Terrace Mountain; thence northward along the summit of said mountain to the wagon-road leading from Little Trough Creek to Huntingdon; thence by a straight line, so as to include the inhabitants of Little Trough Creek, to the summit of Sideling Hill. Isaac Crum's house, on the Raystown Branch, was appointed as the place for holding elections.

Barree and West townships in 1798[4] were made the seventh district, and the elections directed to be held at the house of William Murray. That portion of Morris township lying northeast of the Fox Tavern Run was taken from the fifth and added to the third district. The eighth district, formed in 1799,[5] was to consist of Shirley township and that part of Springfield lying west of the Black Log Mountain. John Palmer's house in Shirleysburg was named as the voting-place. Dublin township and the remaining part of Springfield was thereafter to form the second district, and the right of suffrage was to be exercised at the house of George Hudson. The ninth district, erected in 1800,[6] consisted of that part of the township of Allegheny lying west of the summit of the Allegheny Mountain. Cornelius McGuire's house was named as the voting-place. At the same time that portion of the sixth district lying northeastward of the following lines, to wit: Beginning in Forshey's Gap in Terrace Mountain, thence by a straight line to the mouth of Little Trough Creek; thence up Big Trough Creek to Philip Curfman's saw-mill; thence by a straight line to the line of the eighth district so as to include the house of Joshua Chilcoat, Jr., was added to the first district, and the elections ordered to be held in the court-house in the borough of Huntingdon. A part of West township was also added to the first district, being the part lying south and west of the following bounds, to wit: beginning at Tussey's Mountain opposite the head of Nelson's Run, thence down said run to Shaver's Creek; thence up said creek to the road leading from McCormick's mill to the borough of Huntingdon; thence along said road to the line of Huntingdon township.

Court-Houses.—The first courts of the county were held in the public-house of Ludwig Sell, a long two-story log house that stood on the northern side of Allegheny Street, on lot No. 7, west of the Pennsylvania Railroad freight station. The property afterwards passed into the possession of Abraham Haines, and the lot is now owned by Thomas Fisher. It is probable that after the completion of the jail and temporary court-house on Second Street, the sessions of the court were held there until the building was burned. The first permanent structure for the accommodation of the courts and county officers, a substantial brick edifice, was built on Third Street, south of Penn, fronting northward. Third, then called Smith Street, was originally ninety feet wide. To afford a sufficient passage-way at each end of the structure, seven feet was taken from the lots adjoining Third Street, making the entire width one hundred and four feet, and leaving the passage-ways about thirty feet each. A yard in the rear, extending towards Allegheny Street, was set with trees and inclosed by a fence. A hall ran half-way through the basement story from an entrance on the southern side. From this hallway a door led to the office of the register and recorder on the east, and one to the

[1] Changed in 1799 to the house of Frederick Crissman, in Hollidaysburg.

[2] Act of Sept. 22, 1794.

[3] Act of March 21, 1797.

[4] Act of April 4, 1798.

[5] Act of June 16, 1799.

[6] Act of Dec. 17, 1800.

office of the prothonotary on the west side. The court-room occupied the whole of the second story, and was reached by a flight of a dozen or more steps from the Penn Street side. The "bench" was formed by a wooden annex supported by two stout wooden pillars, one standing on each side of the hallway leading to the offices on the lower story. About one-half of the floor area was fenced off for the accommodation of the judges, lawyers, jurors, and suitors. In the space allotted to the bar were semicircular tables, used lately in the prothonotary's and recorder's offices. The room was heated by two immense six-plate stoves, cast at the Bedford Furnace at Orbisonia. These were long enough to easily admit a four-foot stick of wood. At the western side of the door a flight of stairs running westward reached the third story. On the southern side of the hallway were three jury-rooms; on the north side and at the end of the hallway were two rooms occupied by the county commissioners. The building was surmounted with a dome, in the ceiling of which was placed the bell used in calling the courts and other assemblages in the house below, and it was rung by means of a rope attached to a lever on the bell-shaft. This bell weighed two hundred and fifty-four pounds, and bore the following inscription: "Cast by Samuel Parker, Phila., 1798. William Smith, D.D., to the Borough of Huntingdon, Juniata."[1] After the completion of a new court-house in 1842 the old building fell into the possession of the borough authorities, who permitted it to be used for religious and public meetings until it was demolished in May, 1848, when the street it so long obstructed was again opened to its full width.

By 1839, the population and wealth of the county had so increased as to justify the erection of a new building better proportioned to the business of the courts and the necessities of the public offices. A location on Penn Street near Fifth was proposed, but the county authorities finally decided to locate upon a plot two hundred feet square, being lots 31, 32, 33, and 34, extending from Penn to Washington Street, east of Third Street.

John Cadwallader, an early settler and prominent member of the bar, owned and resided on the last three lots. Stephen Drury, a clock and mathematical instrument maker, owned lot No. 31. On the 6th of August, 1793, in the days of the State loan-office, Cadwallader executed a mortgage to the commissioners of the county for the use of the commonwealth on his lots for three hundred dollars, and on the 31st of the same month, Drury executed a similar mortgage for one hundred dollars. In 1839 the Legislature passed a resolution, which was approved by Governor Porter on the 25th day of June in that year, transferring the "lien, right, title, and claim of the commonwealth of, in, and to" the lots, under the mortgages to the "county of Huntingdon, for the use and purpose of building by said county of a court-house and other necessary buildings for the said county, therewith and thereon, and for such other uses as the commissioners of said county shall hereafter determine." A writ of scire facias had been issued on the Cadwallader mortgage in 1810, and judgment obtained, which had been revived at various times before the transfer to the county. It was again revived in 1839, when the debt amounted to one thousand nine hundred and forty-three dollars and twenty-five cents. The lots were then sold at sheriff's sale, and bought by the county commissioners for one thousand dollars. A scire facias was issued on the Drury mortgage in the same year, and judgment obtained for three hundred and twenty-five dollars and fifty cents, on which the lot was sold, and bought by the commissioners.[2] A court-house was erected upon these lots, the front line being in the rear of the Cadwallader mansion, which was used by the carpenters during the progress of the new building as a work-shop. The old well, from which water has been drawn for more than fourscore years, is yet in use. This building, two stories in height, completed and occupied in August, 1842, was constructed in the shape of a T, and had a court-room and offices for the prothonotary and register and recorder on the lower floor, the offices being in the wings. The commissioner's office was on the second floor, immediately over the recorder's office, and the grand jury room over the prothonotary's office. Other rooms on the second floor were appropriated to the use of the treasurer, sheriff, county surveyor, and traverse juries. James and Robert Stitt were the contractors. Most of the bricks used in the construction of the building were made and burned on the grounds.

The subject of enlarging and modernizing the court-house and providing greater security for the county records had been discussed for several years, and several times was included in the recommendations of the grand inquest. At November sessions, 1881, on a petition presented to the court and referred to the grand jury, the following presentment was made:

"The Grand Inquest of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, inquiring for the county of Huntingdon, upon their respective oaths and affirmations, do present: That the building now used as a court-house is deficient in the following particulars:

"1st. The court-room is entirely too small to properly accommodate suitors, witnesses, jurymen, and the public, and is poorly lighted and ventilated.

"2d. The arrangement of the bench, witness stand, the bar, and jury boxes is very inconvenient.

"3d. The offices of the Prothonotary and Register and Recorder, and the vaults connected therewith, are too small and deemed insecure.

"4th. The offices of the Sheriff, Treasurer, and Commissioners are not properly arranged for the use of the officers and the public.

[1] This bell, claimed, as the inscription shows, as a donation to the "borough of Huntingdon," was removed on the demolition of the court-house in May, 1848, to the public school house, and was there used for many years. It was cracked in ringing on a frosty morning, Dec. 12, 1861.

[2] Lytle, p. 97.

THE NEW COURT-HOUSE AT HUNTINGDON, PA.

"5th. Witness-rooms, jury-rooms, and convenient out-buildings are deemed a public necessity.

"It is believed, in view of the above facts, and to secure the speedy and proper administration of justice and the preservation of the public records, that such changes, by repair, enlargement, and building of additions, be made as may be deemed necessary to relieve the above-stated objections, and they do so recommend.

"D. CLARKSON, Foreman."

This report was indorsed by the grand jury at January sessions, 1882, and concurred in by the court. Of the several plans submitted, the commissioners adopted one prepared by M. E. Beebe, of Buffalo, N. Y. At the letting six bids were received, ranging from $71,300 to $93,140.50. The contract was awarded to Henry Snare & Co. at the first-mentioned sum. Temporary quarters for the public offices were provided in the Morrison House, northeast corner of Third and Allegheny Streets, in the month of June, and the work of removing the old building commenced. At present writing (November 24th) the brick-work of the new court-house has been carried almost to the top of the second story.

County Buildings.—THE JAILS.—The act erecting Huntingdon County authorized the commissioners to raise by taxation a sum of money not exceeding £200 ($533.33), to be put into the hands of the trustees named in the law, for the purpose of building and finishing a court-house and jail. This sum, together with about £200 more, chiefly subscribed by the inhabitants of the town, making an aggregate sum of $1066.66, was expended by the trustees in building a substantial house as a permanent jail, with provision for a temporary court-house over the same. It was erected on lot No. 41, donated for the purpose by William Smith, D.D., located on the eastern side of Second Street, being the ground now occupied by the eastern extension of Penn Street. Before it was fully completed, it took fire and was destroyed. A prisoner, confined therein, was with some difficulty rescued from the flames. The trustees representing to the General Assembly that they were under the necessity of contracting a considerable debt for erecting a new stone jail, capable of further enlargement as occasion may require, by an act passed April 19, 1794, the Governor was authorized to loan to the trustees the sum of £800 ($2133.33) for that purpose, and the commissioners were empowered and required to levy and collect by taxation a sufficient amount annually so as to repay the loan and interest in seven yearly installments. The act of March 9, 1796, authorized the commissioners to levy the further sum of £600 ($1600) for "erecting and completing the public buildings."

A second prison, constructed of stone, was erected in Third Street, near the southern line of Church Street. This building served its purpose for over thirty years. Some years thereafter, the erection of a new and third jail was agitated, and the centre of Third at the northern line of Mifflin was preferred by the county authorities as a site, by reason of its being in full view of the court-house, which then stood in the same street below Penn, fronting northward. Although some kind of consent had been obtained from the citizens of the borough for the occupancy of a part of the public street by the old structure, the commissioners were unwilling to commence the erection of a new building on the ground proposed, without the formal approval of the citizens and authorities of the borough, and accordingly presented their request to the Burgesses and Town Council. At a meeting of that body held Feb. 20, 1827, it was "moved by Mr. Miles, seconded by Mr. McCahan, that a committee be appointed to inquire into the expediency of granting the privilege to the county commissioners of building a jail on Smith (now Third) Street. Whereupon, Messrs. Jackson, Vantries, and Whittaker were appointed for that purpose, and make report at next meeting." At the next meeting, held March 3, 1827, the committee reported that the citizens had almost unanimously testified their approbation of granting the desired privilege, as is proved by a paper signed by the said citizens and filed with the report, and presented the following resolution:

"Resolved, By the Burgesses and Town Council aforesaid, that the consent and approbation of the said Burgesses and Town Council are hereby given to the said commissioners to build a county jail at the place and on the ground above described, so far as the corporation is concerned or is enabled to do by the powers vested in them."

The petition bears the names of eighty-eight citizens.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS OF 1776, 1790, 1838, AND 1873.

CONGRESS having by resolution adopted on the 15th of May, 1776, recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of the several United Colonies where no government sufficient for the exigencies of their affairs had been established, to adopt such government as should, in the opinion of the representatives of the people, best conduce to the happiness and safety of their constituents in particular, and America in general, the Committee of Safety of the city and liberties of Philadelphia issued a circular letter to the people of the several counties, inclosing a copy of the resolution, and requesting the appointment of deputies to meet in Philadelphia on the 18th of June. On the day appointed, ten of the eleven counties then formed were represented, Cols. David Espy and John Piper and Samuel Davidson appearing for Bedford County. An organization being effected, Col. Thomas McKean was chosen president. In the deliberations of this conference, which continued its sessions until the 25th, inclusive, the resolutions of Congress were approved, the existing government of the province declared insufficient for the exigencies of the times, and the calling of a provincial convention, for the express purpose of forming a new government on the authority of the people only, determined upon. The representation for each county was fixed at eight; Monday, July 8th, named as the time for the election, the qualification of voters prescribed, judges appointed, and Monday, July 15th, the date ordered for members chosen to meet in convention in the city of Philadelphia. A patriotic address to the associators of the province, to whom the right of suffrage was confined, received unanimous approval. Want of space forbids its entire reproduction, and a single paragraph must be taken as an index of the whole: "It is now in your power to immortalize your names by mingling your achievements with the events of the year 1776, . . . a year which, we hope, will be famed in the annals of history to the end of time for establishing upon a lasting foundation the liberties of one-quarter of the globe."

At the election held in Bedford County, Thomas Smith, Benjamin Elliott, Joseph Powell, John Bard, John Wilkins, Thomas Coulter, Henry Rhoads, and John Cessna were chosen delegates. One only of this number, Benjamin Elliott, resided in Huntingdon County. Mr. Smith never resided in this county, but, being a half-brother of Dr. Smith, proprietor of the town of Huntingdon, and having made when deputy surveyor a number of surveys in the county, as well subsequently sat as president judge of the courts therein, he is identified with its history. A brief sketch of both these gentlemen will be found in the chapter on the Bench and Bar.

The convention concluded its labors on the 28th day of September, and the Constitution adopted was signed by the members present. The signatures of all the representatives from Bedford County are appended with the exception of that of Henry Rhoads. The change from a proprietary government, to one based upon popular suffrage, was such a marked departure from the old order of things as to provoke much criticism and some dissatisfaction. The legislative power was lodged in a single house of representatives called the "General Assembly of the Representatives of the Freemen of Pennsylvania," the members of which were to be chosen annually on the second Tuesday of October, and meet on the fourth Monday. The supreme executive power was conferred on a President and Council, the latter consisting of one member from each county, to be chosen triennially by the freemen thereof. The President and a Vice-President were to be chosen annually by a joint ballot of the Assembly and Council. The President and Council were authorized to appoint and commission judges of the courts, attorney-generals, and all other officers, civil and military, except such as were authorized to be chosen by the Assembly or the people. The terms of judges and justices of the peace were seven years, sheriffs one year, but they might be re-elected three years in succession. The people elected two persons in each ward, township, or district for justices, and two in each county for sheriff and for coroner, and one for each office was commissioned by the President in Council. Another body was authorized, called the Council of Censors, to be composed of two members from each city and county, and chosen at the general election in 1783, and in every seventh year thereafter. The duties enjoined on this Council were to inquire whether the Constitution has been preserved inviolate, and whether the several branches of government have performed their duties as guardians of the people, or assumed to themselves other or greater powers than they are entitled to by the Constitution; to ascertain if taxes have been justly laid, revenues properly expended, and the laws duly executed. This body was also empowered to call a convention for the purpose of amending the Constitution when necessary.

Constitution of 1790.—In the Assembly, March 24, 1789, resolutions declaring that amendments to the Constitution were necessary, were adopted by the decided vote of forty-one ayes to seventeen noes. These resolutions, which contained a request to the Supreme Executive Council to promulgate the recommendations to the people of the commonwealth were considered by that body on the 28th, and the request declined. In September following, the Assembly passed resolutions calling for the election of delegates to a convention. Representatives were accordingly chosen, and the convention met in Philadelphia on the fourth Monday of November, choosing Thomas Mifflin president. After a protracted sitting, an adjournment until the next year, and reassembling, a new Constitution was adopted, Sept. 2, 1790. In this convention Huntingdon County was represented by Andrew Henderson.

Sweeping changes were made in governmental machinery. A second legislative branch, the Senate, was created, the Supreme Executive Council and Council of Censors abolished, and the chief executive authority conferred upon a Governor to be chosen by the electors, who could exercise a negative upon bills passed by the General Assembly; the tenure of the judges extended during "good behavior," and the Legislature required to meet annually on the first Tuesday of December, and directed to provide for the education of the poor. The Senate was to consist of eighteen members, elected for four years. Northumberland, Luzerne, and Huntingdon constituted one district. Thomas Mifflin, who had served his fellow-citizens as member of the Assembly for Philadelphia, delegate to the first Continental Congress, major-general in the Revolution, delegate to and President of Congress, member and Speaker of the Assembly, member of the Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787, president of the Supreme Executive Council and of the Constitutional Convention of 1790, was in the year last named chosen the first Governor, and was twice re-elected.

Constitution of 1838.—On the 14th of April, 1834, the Legislature passed an act authorizing a popular vote on the question of calling a convention to revise the Constitution. Eighty-seven thousand five hundred and seventy votes were cast in favor, and seventy-three thousand one hundred and sixty-six against the proposition. The next year a law was approved directing the people to choose delegates to a convention which began its sessions at Harrisburg, May 2, 1837, and, after adjournments, completed its labors Feb. 22, 1838. Samuel Royer and Cornelius Crum represented Huntingdon County. The amendments proposed were adopted by popular vote at the October election. Among the important changes were reducing the senatorial term to three years; making the Governor ineligible for election more than two terms in succession; fixing the time for the assembling of the Legislature on the first Tuesday of January; the appointment of prothonotaries, recorders, registers, and justices of the peace taken from the executive and authority to elect these officers conferred upon the qualified voters, and life tenure in office abolished.

At the election at which the amendments were adopted, David R. Porter, of Huntingdon County, was chosen Governor, and, in conformity with the altered Constitution, was inaugurated on the third Tuesday of January, 1839.

The new Constitution contained a provision authorizing its amendment if the proposed change should receive the approval of two Legislatures in succession, followed by an affirmative vote of the qualified electors of the Commonwealth. By the method thus prescribed the organic law was three times amended, in 1850, 1855, and 1864. The first amendment, adopted in 1850, authorized the election of the judges by the people for the terms as prescribed in the Constitution, to wit: of the Supreme Court, fifteen years; president of the Court of Common Pleas, and all other judges learned in the law, ten years; associate judges of the Common Pleas, five years. The first election for judges was in October, 1851. In 1857 four amendments were added. The first limited the power of the Legislature to contract debts; required the creation of a sinking fund for the gradual extinguishment of the State debt; prohibited the loaning of the credit of the commonwealth to any individual, company, corporation, or association, and the Legislature from authorizing any county, city, borough, township, or incorporated district from becoming a stockholder in any company, association, or corporation, or loaning its credit thereto; the second restricted the power to erect new counties; the third provided for a septennial apportionment of the State into representative and senatorial districts; and the fourth conferred upon the Legislature power to change or revoke any charter of incorporation thereafter granted whenever it may be injurious to the people. The amendments of 1864 authorized any of the voters of the commonwealth in actual military service to exercise the right of suffrage; prohibited the passage by the Legislature of any bills containing more than one subject, except appropriation bills, or granting any powers or privileges in any case where such authority has been conferred upon the courts.

The policy of choosing the judges by popular vote was warmly discussed, and many good men held opposite views. Public sentiment demanded the change, and at the election of 1850 the amendment was adopted by the decided vote of 144,594 to 71,995. The disposition to scatter the public revenues instead of husbanding them for the payment of the public obligations met a wholesome restraint in the amendments of 1857, while under those of 1864 the practice of passing bills embracing a variety of subjects in a single enactment was terminated, and the Legislature relieved to a very great extent from the consideration of "special bills."

Constitution of 1873.—While these changes in the organic law of the commonwealth restrained to a great degree vicious and unnecessary legislation, the rapid increase of wealth and population created new interests, and the ingenuity of man devised new methods of perverting the law-making power to personal ends and private or corporation aggrandizement. The people demanded a remodeling of the Constitution and the engrafting upon the fundamental law, such additional changes as the experience of nearly a third of a century had demonstrated would contribute to the public good. The General Assembly, June 2, 1871, acting in accord with the sentiment of the people, passed a resolution submitting the question of calling a convention to the voters at the following general election. The feelings of the citizens were expressed with great emphasis by casting 328,354 votes in favor of a convention, to 70,205 against. Huntingdon County contributed 5453 ballots for the proposition, while only 5 were recorded against it, and in Blair County the vote stood: for, 6214, and 16 against. Backed by such an expression of the popular will, the Legislature passed an act, approved by the Governor, April 11, 1872, making provisions for the election of "delegates to a convention to revise and amend the Constitution of the State" at the following October election. For the Twenty-first Senatorial District, composed of the counties of Bedford, Fulton, Blair, and Somerset, Samuel L. Russell, of Bedford, and James W. Curry and Augustus S. Landis, of Blair, were chosen delegates; and the Twenty-second District, composed of Centre, Juniata, Mifflin, and Huntingdon Counties, was represented by John M. Bailey and John McCulloch, of Huntingdon, and Andrew Reed, of Mifflin. The convention began its sessions at Harrisburg, November 12th; adjourned, November 27th, to meet in Philadelphia, Jan. 12, 1873, and completed its labors in that city on the 3d day of November following. The Constitution adopted by the convention was submitted to a vote of the people at a special election held on the 16th day of December. It was ratified by 253,744 votes being cast in its favor, while only 108,954 were polled against it. In Huntingdon County the poll stood: for the adoption, 2468; against, 494; and in Blair: for, 1782; against, 2248.

The new Constitution went into effect Jan. 1, 1874. Among the changes provided for by this instrument were increasing the number of representatives to two hundred, and the senators to fifty; biennial sessions of the Legislature after 1878; extension of representatives' term to two, and senators to four years; method of enacting laws prescribed, and legislative authority still further restricted; gubernatorial term extended to four years and incumbent declared ineligible for the succeeding term; a Lieutenant-Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs to be chosen by the people for four years; the pardoning power of the Governor limited to such cases as may be recommended by a board of pardons; term of supreme judges extended to twenty-one years; municipal debts limited; prohibition of special legislation, etc.

CHAPTER XIV.

IRON MANUFACTURE.

Bedford Furnace.—At an early day in the history of this region its iron ores began to attract attention, and projects for their utilization were discussed. Few of the inhabitants possessed sufficient capital to embark in the erection of establishments for the manufacture of iron, and those who had surplus money were inclined to use it in other directions. It became necessary to enlist capital from outside, which in due time was secured. In the fall of 1785, George Ashman and Thomas Cromwell began to take warrants for vacant lands in the valleys in the vicinity of Orbisonia, and, associating with themselves Edward Ridgely, about the same time commenced the erection of "Bedford Furnace," the first iron-smelting establishment west of the Susquehanna. Its location was shown to the writer some years ago by one of the old residents of Orbisonia, on the bank of the run a short distance southeast of the eastern end of Ashman Street of that borough. Its size is said to have been: bosh five feet, with a stack either fifteen or seventeen feet high.[1] The capacity in production was from eight to ten tons of pig metal per week. It was run by either an overshot or undershot wheel, or both, for there were two races, one coming from Black Log Creek, near Orbison's mill-race, which would in any event be undershot, and the other starting at almost the head of Camp-Meeting Run, and twisting and winding through twenty hills, passing in its course under two bridges, and reaching the furnace grounds at such a point and in such a manner as would call forth the admiration of modern engineers.[2]

The main room of the court-house that stood in Third Street, in the borough of Huntingdon, was heated by two large-sized six-plate stoves that bore the inscription "Bedford Furnace." At the Centennial Exposition a stove-plate cast at this furnace in 1792 was among the relics of the past. The Bedford Company, a few years after the erection of the furnace, built a forge on the Aughwick Creek above Orbisonia. The product of the furnace was run into stoves and other castings, or converted at the forge into bar-iron of shapes suitable for blacksmiths' use. The surplus was at first carried overland to Pittsburgh, and it has been claimed that the first bar-iron made in this country that found its way to the market of that city was produced at this forge. On the 10th of September, 1793, Thomas Cromwell, for the company, advertised in the Pittsburgh Gazette that castings and bar-iron were for sale at the Bedford Furnace. There now remains scarcely a trace of the location of this pioneer furnace.

Barree Forge.—The next establishment erected was Barree Forge, on the north side of the Little Juniata, about nine miles northwest of Huntingdon, then in Barree, now Porter township, Huntingdon Co. In the spring of 1794, Edward Bartholomew, of Chester County, purchased from Lazarus Brown McLane several tracts of land on the Little Juniata, and with his son-in-law, Greenberry Dorsey, commenced the erection of Barree Forge. Its supply of pig metal was drawn from Centre Furnace for many years. This establishment was carried on with great success. A forge is still at work, and a few years ago a furnace was added. Both are yet run on charcoal. These are near the site of the ancient Minors' mill.

Huntingdon Furnace.—About the year 1796 a company was formed by Mordecai Massey, Judge John Gloninger, of Lebanon, and George Anshutz to erect a furnace called "Huntingdon," on the Warrior's Mark Run, in Franklin township, Huntingdon Co. The first named was the owner of the land, the second contributed money, and the third skill, acquired in the manufacture of iron in Europe. It has been said that the company commenced with one horse and a pair of oxen at the "old seat." The location was not favorable, and after some time was abandoned, and another furnace was built about a mile farther down the run. Besides the persons named, Martin Dubbs and George Shoenberger were subsequently members of the company, which was known as "John Gloninger & Co.," and as "Gloninger, Anshutz & Co." This establishment, run on charcoal until the scarcity of wood led to its abandonment in 1870, was conducted with great prudence, and enriched its owners. In its early days many stoves were cast, and the familiar legend "Huntingdon Furnace" may yet be seen in localities where wood is still used as fuel. Out of the necessities and profits of this establishment there grew, from time to time, a forge on Spruce Creek, built about 1800, the upper and lower Tyrone Forges, rolling-mill, slitting-mill, nail-factories, saw- and grist-mill, and Bald Eagle Furnace. As early as 1819 the furnace estate had spread over an area exceeding forty thousand acres.

[1] Lytle's Huntingdon County, p. 304.

[2] Lytle, p. 304.

Other Early Iron-Works.—Juniata Forge, on the Juniata below Petersburg, was built about 1804 by Samuel Fahnestock and George Shoenberger. It was in operation during the last year (1882). Coleraine Forge, on Spruce Creek, was commenced by Samuel Marshall in 1805. Subsequently the group of three was designated Coleraine Forges. Cove Forge was built in 1810 by John Royer. Etna Furnace and Forge were begun in 1805 by Canan, Stewart & Moore. They were located near the Juniata, in Catharine township, Blair Co. This furnace was the first erected within the limits of that county. Knoblough's bloomery, near the site of Paradise Furnace, on Trough Creek, Tod township, Huntingdon Co., was in operation early in the present century. About 1810 or 1811, Union Furnace, on the Little Juniata, Morris township, was built by Edward B. Dorsey (grandson of the projector of Barree Forge) and Caleb Evans. Allegheny Furnace, near Altoona, the second in age in Blair County, was built in 1811 by Allison & Henderson. In 1813, Pennsylvania, on Spruce Creek, Franklin township, was erected by John Lyon, Jacob Haldeman, and William Wallace. Springfield was built in 1815 by John and Daniel Royer, and Rebecca in 1817 by Dr. Peter Shoenberger. Both these are in Blair County. By this date the reputation of "Juniata iron" had become so well established in the markets of the country, that its manufacture became and continued for many years a leading industry, and many additional works were built.

The following schedule of prices of nails at the Tyrone Works in June, 1819, is interesting in these days of improved machinery: Per hundred-weight, three-penny, $25; four-penny, $20; six-penny, $15; eight-, ten-, twelve-, sixteen-, and twenty-penny, $12.

The production of these works was estimated in February, 1826, as follows:

Furnaces.

	Annual Production, in Tons.
Huntingdon	1300
Pennsylvania	1200
Springfield	1100
Rebecca	900
Etna	600
Total	5100

Forges.

	Annual Production of Bar-Iron, in Tons.
Tyrone	500
Juniata	300
Barree	300
Sligo and Coleraine	450
Cove	280 to 300
Etna	300
Total	2150

Maria Forge was then in operation, but did not make bar-iron.

At Millington Forge, on Spruce Creek, the manufacture of steel was commenced by William McDermott, a Scotchman, some time between 1810 and 1820, and carried on with success until his death, which occurred about the last-named year. Here David R. Porter, afterwards Governor of the commonwealth, then engaged in the iron business, married Josephine, daughter of Mr. McDermott.

Harris' "Pittsburgh Directory" for 1837 contains a list of iron-works in Huntingdon County, as follows: On the Little Juniata.—Elizabeth Furnace and Mary Ann Forge, owned by Edward Bell; Antes Forge, by Graham & McCamant; Cold Spring Forge, by John Crotzer; forge by A. R. Crane (not finished in 1837); Union Furnace, owned by Michael Wallace, occupied by Dorsey, Green & Co.; Barree Forge, owned by Dorsey, Green & Co.; Tyrone Forges (two), by William Lyon & Co.; Juniata Forge, by G. & J. H. Shoenberger.[1] On the Frankstown Branch.—Allegheny Furnace, by E. Baker & Co.; Etna Furnace and Forge, by H. S. Spang; rolling-mill and forge, by G. Hatfield & Co. (not completed in 1837); furnace by H. S. Spang (not completed in 1837); Cove Forge, by Royer & Schmucker. On the Raystown Branch.—Frankstown Furnace, by Daniel Hileman;[2] Clinton Forge, by William Hopkins & Beightel. On Stone Creek.—Greenwood Furnace, owned by Rawle & Hall; forge owned by W. & A. Couch, leased to Rawle & Hall. On Spruce Creek.—Elizabeth Forge, by G. & J. H. Shoenberger: Pennsylvania Furnace and three Coleraine Forges, by Shorb, Stewart & Co.; Elizabeth Forge, by Robert Moore; Franklin Forge, by C. Wigton; Millington Forge, by, William Hopkins; Stockdale Forge, by John S. Isett. On Shade Creek.—Rockhill Furnace, by J. M. Bell; Winchester Furnace, owned by T. T. Cromwell, occupied by J. M. Allen. On Aughwick Creek.—Chester Furnace and Aughwick (Forge), erected in 1837. On Warrior's Mark Run.—Huntingdon Furnace, by G. & J. H. Shoenberger. On Little Bald Eagle Creek.—Bald Eagle Furnace, by William Lyon & Co. On Big Trough Creek.—Mary Ann Furnace and Forge, owned by John Savage, conducted by George Thompson. On Piney Creek.—Springfield Furnace and Franklin Forge, by Samuel Royer & Co. On Clover Creek.—Rebecca Furnace, owned by Dr. Peter Shoenberger. In all, 16 furnaces, 24 forges, and 1 rolling-mill, making 13,750 tons of pig metal and 9309 tons of blooms annually.

In 1855 the iron establishments of the two counties were as follows:

Huntingdon County.

Name.		Location.	Owners or Lessees.
Huntingdon Furnace		Franklin	G. & J. H. Shoenberger.
Paradise	"	Tod	Trexler & Co.
Rockhill	"	Cromwell	Isett, Wigton & Co.
Greenwood (2)	"	Jackson	A. & J. Wright.

[1] On the Juniata River. [2] Should read Frankstown Branch.

Name.	Location.	Owners or Lessees.
Edward Furnace	Shirley	Beltzhoover & Co.
Mill Creek "	Brady	Irvin, Green & Co.
Monroe "	Barree	George W. Johnston & Co.
Rough and Ready Furnace	Hopewell	Wood, Watson & Co.
Melinda Furnace and Forge	Springfield	Sheffler & Son.
Barree Forge	Porter	Joseph Green & Co.
Coleraine Forges (3)	Franklin	Lyon, Shorb & Co.
Stockdale Forge	"	John S. Isett.
"	"	G. & J. H. Shoenberger.
Elizabeth "	"	Martin Gates' heirs.
Rolling-Mill and Puddling Forge	Porter	S. Hatfield & Son.
Juniata Rolling-Mill and Forge	West	B. Lorenz.
Alexandria Foundry		Israel Graflus.
Eagle "	Tod tw'p	John & David Hamilton.
Huntingdon "		J. M. Cunningham & Co.
Petersburg "		Henry Orlady.
Shirleysburg "		John Lutz.
Spruce Creek "		Henry L. Harvey.
Water Street "		Job Plympton.

Blair County.

Name.	Location.	Owners or Lessees.
Allegheny Furnace	Logan	Elias Baker.
Springfield "	Woodberry	D. Good & Co.
Etna Furnace and Forge	Catharine	Isett, Keller & Co.
Rebecca Furnace	Huston	E. H. Lytle.
Bald Eagle Furnace	Snyder	Lyon, Shorb & Co.
Blair "	Logan	H. N. Burroughs.
Elizabeth "	Antes	Martin Bell.
Sarah "	Greenfield	D. McCormick.
Gap "	Juniata	E. F. Shoenberger.
Frankstown "	Frankstown	A. & D. Moore.
Harriet "	Allegheny	Blair Coal and Iron Co.
Hollidaysburg "	Gaysport	Watson, White & Co.
Chimney Rock "	Hollidaysb'g	Gardner, Osterloh & Co.
Gaysport "	Gaysport	Smith & Caldwell.
Portage Works (rolling-mill, etc.)	Duncansville	J. Higgens & Co.
Maria Forges (2)	Juniata	J. W. Duncan.
Lower Maria Forge	"	D. McCormick.
Gap "	"	Musselman & Co.
Elizabeth "	Antes	John Bell.
Tyrone Forges (2)	Snyder	Lyon, Shorb & Co.
Cove Forge	Woodberry	J. Royer.
Franklin Forge	"	D. H. Royer.
Cold Spring Forge	Antes	Isett & Co.
Allegheny "	Allegheny	E. H. Lytle.
Hollidaysburg Foundry and Machine-Shop	Hollidaysb'g	J. R. McFarlane & Co.
Gaysport Foundry and Machine-Shop	Gaysport	McLanahan, Watson & Co.
Tyrone Foundry	Tyrone	J. W. Mattern & Co.
Williamsburg Foundry	Williamsb'g	Loncer & Hileman.
Martinsburg "	Martinsburg	Crawford & Morrow.
Pennsylvania Railroad Foundry	Altoona	Pennsylvania Railroad Co.
Duncansville Foundry	Duncansville	J. M. Gibboney.
Axe and Pick Factory	Allegheny	J. Colclesser.

These establishments, chiefly run on charcoal, made such rapid inroads upon the forests, that each succeeding year it became more difficult and expensive to provide the necessary supply, and from time to time such as proved unprofitable were abandoned, and others were run on coke. Many of the stacks enumerated in the above lists are cold, and will never again be put to the uses for which they were built. A few, more favorably located, continue the manufacture of the celebrated brand of "Juniata Charcoal Iron."

CHAPTER XV.

List of Marriages by Rev. John Johnston, 1787 to 1823, 349 Couples.[1]

REV. JOHN JOHNSTON was born near the city of Belfast, Ireland, in 1750, and came to America about 1784. He was installed pastor of the Hart's Log and Shaver's Creek Presbyterian congregations in November, 1787, and of Huntingdon soon thereafter. He married Jane McBeth, of Cumberland County, and for a short time resided in Shaver's Creek Valley. Soon thereafter he moved to Huntingdon, and resided at the southeastern corner of Second and Penn Streets, where he died Dec. 16, 1823.

1787. Sept. 11, John Ewing and Elizabeth McCormick.
" 18, John Barton and Susan Ferguson.
" 27, James Parks and Jane Entrican.
Oct. 4, John Shepherd and Elizabeth Bell.
Nov. 20, George Montgomery and Rebecca Johnston.
" 20, James Hustan and Katharine Ewing.
Dec. 18, William Nielson and Elizabeth Rickets.
1789. Jan. 1, James Dermont and Esther Long.
" 13, David Caldwell and Rebecca Dean.
" 15, Walter Carswell and Margaret McClure.
Feb. 17, Thomas Crownover and Rachel Rickets.
Aug. 11, Thomas Henderson and Sarah Porter.
Dec. 22, James Dermont and Rebecca Finley.
1790. March 9, Robert Moffat and Ann Ferguson.
" 16, James Jones and Eleanor Morton.
June 15, James Alexander and Nancy Armitage.
Dec. 19, John Campbel and Jean Ralston.
1791. July 12, Thomas Parks and Ann Kerr.
Dec. 22, Hugh McKaleb and Mary Stewart.
" 29, Nathaniel Gossage and Tempe Kelly.
1792. Jan. 26, Thomas Rickets and Jane Whetzel.
May 1, James Hunter and Margaret Montgomery.
" 8, Hugh Means and Margaret Dean.
Nov. 27, David Hunter and Catharine Gray.
1793. April 2, William Starr and Mary Armitage.
Sept. 17, Robert Glenn and Mary Cunningham.
1794. Feb. 25, James Stewart and Jane Johnston.
March 3, James Drury and Mary Reynolds.
April 24, Robert Dean and Abigail McCune.
May 29, Jacob Armitage and —— Maxwell.
June 12, William McCoy and Drusilla Browning.
Oct. 28, Andrew Porter and Ann Lowry.
Dec 22, William Millar and Elizabeth Law.
1795. Feb. 19, John Palmer and Elizabeth Ashman.
March 10, William Eacons and Phebe Perry.
April 2, —— Brown and —— Weakley.
" 7, Joseph Cox and Jean Law.
June 9, Charles Caldwell and Isabella Stitt.
" 16, Patrick Gwin and Margaret Foley.
" 23, Jonathan Johnston and Margaret Finley.
July 28, Patrick Coulter and Nancy Findley.
Oct. 2, David McMurtrie and Martha Elliot.
1796. Jan. 29, John Davis and Rebecca Browning.
March 8, Samuel Galbraith and Ann Morrison.
April 27, Nathaniel Bryan and Jane Taylor.
May 3, Samuel Ewing and Nancy Cotton.
June 27, Andrew Bell and Margaret Martin.
July 2, Daniel Baloo and Poll Murray.
Aug. 2, John Dean and Elizabeth Smith.
Oct. 16, Thomas Porter and Jane Montgomery.
Nov. 1, John Forrest and Martha Wilson.
" 8, Joseph Oburn and Elizabeth Logan.
Dec. 29, Benjamin Patton and Phebe Dwyer.
1797. Jan. 13, John Davis and Elizabeth Wilson.
" 31, John Rosenburg and Elizabeth Dickson.
March 2, David Stewart and Margaret Hunter.
April 6, Robert Young and Margaret Dean.
May 16, James Smith and Margaret Hartford.
Aug. 15, Joseph Potter and Rachel Jackson.
Sept. 11, John Hewit and Elizabeth Grove.
" 12, Christian Musselman and Mary Shultz.
Nov. 28, Samuel Caldwell and Margaret Dean.
Dec. 5, John McConnell and Jane Armitage.
1798. January, George Cunningham and Jane Moore.
March 6, Thomas Chapman and Mary Moore.
April 3, Robert Simpson and Nancy Moore.
" 5, Joseph Moore and Hannah Davis.
" 24, Robert Campbell and Rebecca Robinson.
" 30, Bartholomew Davis and Margaret Cluggage.

[1] Copied, March 15, 1879, from entries in the handwriting of Rev. Johnston, now in the possession of his grandson, A. P. W. Johnston.

May 18, Robert Ried and Elizabeth Allison.
" 24, Alexander Lynn and Rosanna Warnock.
Aug. 7, John Ross and Agnes McKittrock.
" 23, Joseph Henderson and Jane Elliot.
Sept. 17, William Eastep and Emelia Wright.
Oct. 1, Caleb Armitage and Catharine McCabe.
" 2, Samuel Stewart and Ann Wilson.
Nov. 15, David Moore and Elizabeth Davis.
Aug. 31, James McMurtrie and Elizabeth Elliot.
1799. Jan. 3, Andrew Boyer and Susannah Heistan.
" 8, William Laird and Ann Drennan.
Feb. 7, Robert Johnston and Mary Johnston.
" 7, Edward Bell and Mary Ann Martin.
June 25, William Corbet and Sarah Roberts.
" 26, Samuel Postlethwait and Nancy Corbet.
Dec. 5, Samuel McClelland and Jane McDonald.
1800. Sept. 16, Thomas Lloyd and Nancy Moore.
Oct. 1, Robert Orr and Ann Huston.
" 7, Rev. Alexander McIlwaine and Catharine Canan.
Nov 13, James Robinson and Margaret McLaughlin.
" 25, John Hennen and Elizabeth Johnston.
Dec. 11, David Newingham and Susan Kurtz.
" 16, Samuel Linn and Margaret Warnock.
" 23, John Gahahan and Elizabeth Watson.
1801. Jan. 13, Adam Corry and Margaret Eakin.
" 20, John Spencer and Elizabeth Caldwell.
March 10, George Barnet and Dolly Davis.
April 16, John Patton and Rebecca Simpson.
" 23, Samuel Fisher and Rebecca Dorland.
July 7, Samuel King and Ann Marshal.
Sept. 11, Griffith Evans and Jane Maxwell.
" 11, Abraham Sharron and Isabella McLaughlin.
" 11, James McLaughlin and Nelly McCall.
Oct. 20, John Stewart and Margaret Wilson.
" 22, Hugh McConnaughy and Margaret McCune.
1802. Jan. 4, Peter Igow and Sarah McLene.
Feb. 9, J. P. McKnight and Polly Adams.
" 16, James Watson and Sarah Grey.
" 23, Charles Moore and Mary Reed.
" 25, Jacob Brenniman and Eleanor Johnston.
April 1, Thomas Postlethwait and Mary Drake.
" 19, John Eagle and Catharine Spencer.
" 22, Thomas Beatty and Rachel Fee.
June 1, William Ward and Elizabeth Moore.
" 3, John McCabe and Polly Kurtz.
Sept. 13, William Hains and Sarah Dorland.
" 21, Robert Allison, Esq., and Polly Elliott.
1803. Feb. 16, Robert Connor and Elizabeth Scott.
March 10, Thomas King and Martha Norris.
May 10, John McCahan and Martha Anderson.
" 19, Peter Hughes and Rachel Davis.
" 21, James Orbison, Esq., and Mrs. Patterson.
" 24, John Crawford and Grace Cadwallader.
June 23, William Jackson and Fanny Simonton.
Aug. 4, Thomas Laird and Mary Ann Lapsley.
Sept. 15, Henry Coy and Christena Kerns.
Dec. 1, Alexander Powers and Sarah Armitage.
" 6, —— Stirk and —— Duncan.
" 8, Joseph Gilmore and Polly Chambers.
" 29, Alexander Wylie and ——Grady.
1804. March 20, Samuel Hemphill and Sally Laird.
" 22, Samuel Fisher and Polly Lyon.
April 3, Abraham Robison and Margaret McCune.
May 17, —— Humphrey and Margaret Wright.
June 7, John Postlethwait and Martha Campbell.
" 21, Robert Trotter and Elizabeth Brindle.
Oct. 29, William McCulloch and Jane Calhoon.
Nov. 20, William Moore and Elizabeth Barber.
1805. Jan. 10, Caleb Armitage and Jane Simpson.
Feb. 26, Isaac Cambell and Mary F. Thompson.
March 12, Maxwell Kinkead and Deborah Cadwallader.
" 28, Benjamin Elliot and Susan Hains.
April 30, Dutton Lane and Elizabeth Parkinson.
May 9, Robert Morrow and Polly Brenniman.
" 16, John Patterson and Nelly Hays.
June 12, David Laird and Ann Law.
July 4, William Flemming and Sarah Saggett.
Aug. 29, Patrick Coulter and Sarah Jones.
Oct. 1, James Stewart and Jane Gray.
" 1, Rev. Mr. Haas and Elizabeth Miller.
Nov. 14, James Simonton and Sarah Johnston.
" 26, Peter Link and Catharine Lamont.
" 27, John Yocum and Sarah Dowler.
Dec. 12, William Stewart and Catharine Spier.
" 19, John Carothers and Jane Bole.
" 27, Hezekiah Patterson and Mary Taylor.
1806. Jan. 28, Samuel Fulton and Margaret Gahagan.
Feb. 13, William Robb and Polly Livingston.
" 27, John Cunning and Martha Fergus.
" 27, John Sloan and Widow Canan.
April 3, Jonathan Wall and Eleanor Hutchinson.
" 8, Peter Hughes and Mary Stevens.
" 23, Samuel Vance and Rosanna Brown.
" 23, William Alexander and Nancy Davis.
" 24, James Armstrong and Elizabeth Drake.
May 6, George Anshutz and Martha Simpson.
" 21, George Dowler and Miriam Carter.
June 3, John Thompson and Sophia Davis.
" 12, Dr. George Fisher and Sally Chambers.
" 26, Robert Adams and Margaret Crawford.
" 27, Joseph Dorland and Elizabeth Woodburn.
July 1, John Wright and Mary Fee.
Oct. 16, Joseph Scott and Sarah Davis.
Dec. 16, John McCarty and Emelia Roberts.
" 16, Philip Shultz and Catharine Grafus.
1807. Jan. 8, Samuel Lowry and Matty Frost.
" 27, William States and Catharine Lloyd.
April 7, John Thomas (Barber) and Lucy Brindle.
" 9, Samuel McGlathery and Elizabeth McDowell.
June 16, Patrick Hays and Elizabeth Dorland.
July 7, Jeremiah Cunningham and Eleanor Bowers.
Sept. 3, Henry Hanawalt and Mary Caughey.
" 8, Moses Canan and Mary Henderson.
" 30, John Dunlap and Nelly Davis.
Oct. 15, Thomas Rees and Nancy Roller.
Dec. 1, Abraham Shockey and Polly Steel.
1808. Feb. 2, Jacob Hewit and Margaret Gray.
April 25, Thomas Martin and Mary Johnston.
May 12, David Tussey and Elizabeth Means.
" 24, Thomas Hemphill and Ann Laird.
June 9, David Lloyd and Mary Moore.
Aug. 11, James Maguire and Deborah Scott.
Oct. 6, William Orbison, Esq., and Eleanor Elliott.
Nov. 3, Matthew Buchanan and Susan Moore.
Dec. 1, William Spencer and Elizabeth Jackson.
1809. April 18, James Drake and Elizabeth Postlethwait.
" 25, Leonard Cochlin and Rachel Steel.
" 27, Abraham Crafus and Fanny Gray.
May 12, Charles Trepier and Peggy Hammil.
" 16, Harry Miller and Margaret Hoover.
" 23, James Stewart and Rachel Roberts.
Aug. 31, Peter Cornelius and Elizabeth Armstrong.
Nov. 14, Daniel Huyett and Polly Swope.
" 21, John Henderson and Margaret Brennan.
" 23, Samuel Anderson and Mary Tussey.
1810. Jan. 11, Robert Boyd and Hannah Fay.
" 23, Joseph Fay and Mrs. Fluke (widow).
" 23, George Moritz and Eve Prough.
Feb. 20, William Moore and Mary Ann Stewart.
May 1, William Simpson and Jean Dean.
" 15, Shipley Priestley and Jean Magee.
June 12, James Elliott and Eleanor Macartney.
" 26, Michael Moratz and Elizabeth Prough.
Sept. 27, John Campble and Mary Macdonald.
1811. Jan. 26, William Spier and Jane Lindsay.
Feb. 26, David Lindsay and Rose Startzman.
" 26, Isaac Dorland and Jane McNamara.
March 12, John Roberts and Margaret Caughey.
" 19, Diemar Burd and Fanny Lowrey.
April 11, Robert Hazlet and Mary Forster.
" 18, Dr. John Henderson and Elizabeth Allison.
" 30, John Miller, Esq., and Patty Armitage.
July 26, Brice Stephens and Elizabeth Tanner.
Aug. 20, Jacob Miller and Harriet Elliott.

Oct. 15, Joseph Williams and Rachel Beatty.
" 29, Joseph Adams and Mary Crumm.
1812. Jan. 9, Thomas Kerr and Widow Hill.
" 21, William Brown and Elizabeth Mytinger.
" 30, Thomas Jackson and Catharine McIlwaine.
April 16, James Robinson and Elizabeth Allen.
June 9, Aaron Allen and Hannah Thomas.
Sept. 10, Samuel Flemming and Polly Henry.
" 29, David Leonard and Sarah Kyle.
Oct. 29, William McElroy and Abigail Spencer.
Nov. 12, Christian Hewit and Polly Roller.
" 26, David Allen and Elizabeth Caldwell.
1813. Jan. 12, Thomas Lloyd and Catharine Moor.
Feb. 4, Josiah Clawson and Margaret Scott.
" 18, George Brenizer and Elizabeth Burrell.
March 9, David Davies and Mary Alexander.
May 11, Frederick Brooks and Hannah Mickle.
" 13, Thomas Owen and Margaret Means.
" 27, Matthew Glasco and Sarah Drake.
Nov. 2, James McClellan and Elizabeth Wilson.
" 16, Jacob Vandevender and Lydia Fee.
" 25, James Cherry and Actias Musgrove.
1814. March 3, William Johnston and Elizabeth Caldwell.
" 8, Samuel Brisbane and Catharine Mytinger.
" 8, Samuel Bard and Margaret McCarter.
" 10, Jonathan Doyle and Elizabeth Postlethwait.
" 17, William P. Elliott and Emily H. Smith.
" 24, Jacob Igow and Agnes Scott.
April 12, —— Hazlett and Jane Wright.
" 19, John Canan and Mary Walker.
" 29, John Mitchell and Mrs. Nancy Miles.
June 28, Francis Smith and Ann Brennan.
July 28, John Lower and Isabella Leney.
Sept. 22, Robert McNamara and Jane Hollingshead.
" 29, John Dorland and Jane Postlethwait.
Nov. 1, John Crum and Mary McAlevy.
Dec. 13, William McAlevy, Jr., and Jane Wilson.
" 22, Edward Patton and Anna McMurtrie.
" 22, James Porter and Sarah Ray.
1815. Jan. 5, James Robinson and Nancy Lang.
" 19, George Mahood and Margaret Simonton.
" 26, John Wilson and Susan Grafius.
March 2, Thomas Wallace and Eleanor Crawford.
" 16, James Barbour and Polly Ramsey.
" 28, Henry Henyet and Margaret Cresswell.
" 28, Joseph Michael and Eleanor Wilson.
April 20, Philip Silknitter and Mary Ann Dowler.
May 11, Thomas Postlethwait and Ann Dorland.
" 16, Andrew Neff and Elizabeth Grove.
" 18, William Patton and Henrietta Anthony.
" 25, William Stewart and Anna Gray.
June 15, Henry Irwin and Elizabeth Cromwel.
" 20, Samuel Batton and Polly Macauley.
Aug. 3, John Sexton and Margaret Laird.
Nov. 2, William Donaldson and Elizabeth Nesbit.
Dec. 21, Alexander A. Anderson, Esq., and Jane Patton.
1816. Jan. 18, John Parks and Jane Parkinson.
Feb. 1. John Walker, junior, and Susanna Blair.
" 6, Thomas M. Galbraith and Nancy Scott.
" 15, Alexander Ramsey and Elizabeth Ridenour.
March 13, Benjamin R. Stevens and Margaret Moor.
" 14, John Brotherline and Margaret Macnamara.
" 21, Samuel Duncan and Margaret Kyle.
" 21, Robert Elder and Elizabeth Reed.
" 28, Dr. James Stewart and Matilda Elliott.
April 24, Lazarus Lowry and Sidney Holliday.
June 27, George Armitage and Sarah Vandevender.
Sept. 24, John Barry and Mary Anshutz.
Oct. 3, Samuel Miller and Charlotte Grafius.
Nov. 5, Samuel Woods and Lily Ker.
Dec. 5, Jonathan Hartsock and Elizabeth Sell.
1817. Jan. 21, John McCabe and Mary Glazier.
March 20, William Ingram and Mary Nicholson.
April 17, Hugh Hazlett and Jane Star.
" 24, George Marshall and Jane McDermot.
May 15, Vincent Robison and Susanna Hess.
June 5, Andrew Couch and Rebecca Green.
Sept. 18, William Wilson and Jane Eynghart.
" 18, John Johnston and Catharine Johnston.
Oct. 23, John Stitt and Martha Galbraith.
Nov. 20, William Dorris and Nancy Stitt.
1818. Jan. 15, John Jacobs and Dorcas Vandevender.
Feb. 12, Gilbert Cheney and Ann Dearmont.
March 12, Andrew Newell and Margaret Doris.
" 12, Andrew Armstrong and Jane Nielson.
April 2, John Martin and Jane Maxwell.
June 11, Robert Canan and Jane Reigart.
July 16, John Port and Polly Fox.
Aug. 13, John Dunn and Elizabeth Montgomery.
Dec. 3, Benjamin Warrick and Amy Bye.
" 31, John Henderson and Jane Kyle.
1819. Jan. 7, John Leffard and Margaret Jones.
" 26, Charles Raymond and Mary Gwin.
Feb. 18, John Anderson[1] and Grace Reighart.[2]
March 11, John Yocum[3] and Margaret White.
May 27, James Dysart and Elizabeth Roller.[4]
1820. Feb. 17, George Fee and Jane Porter.
Oct. 31, Joel Isenberg and Margery Canan.
Dec. 12, John Crawford, Esq., and Mary Patterson.
" 28, Rev. David Blair and Margaret Steel.
1821. March 1, Alexander Ennis and Rebecca McIlwaine.
" 8, James Simpson and Lydia Simpson.
May 17, Joseph Dowler and Elizabeth Simpson.
" 17, Tobiah Lang and Elizabeth Hawn.
June 28, Henry Swope and Nancy Neff.
Sept. 6, Hugh H. Brady and Sarah Smith Evans.
Oct. 30, John Scott, Esq., and Nancy Irvine.
Nov. 22, Harry Miller and Ann Miller.
1822. March 19, Evan Crane and Sarah Means.
" 21, David Hazard and Sarah Miller.
" 26, William Copeland and Mary Simpson.
May 28, David Stewart and Sarah Walker.
June 20, James Ferguson and Margaret Bratton.
" 27, Moses Canan and Polly Moore.
Aug. 22, Robert Simpson and Sarah Jackson.
July 11, John Williamson, Esq., and Elizabeth Steel.
Oct. 8, Samuel Eckberger and Ann Vandevender.
Nov. 25, John Swan Blair and Sarah Lambert.
Dec. 12, William Galbraith and Nancy Gahagan.
" 31, David Thompson and Martha Porter.
1823. Jan. 2, George Wilson and Nancy Cunningham.
" 14, George Householder and Mrs. Ridenour.
" 16, Peter Nail and Mary Africa.
May 1, Joseph Stewart and Judith Lloyd.
" 20, Rodman Wilcox and Rosanna Gwin.
" 29, Peter Swope and Martha Vandevender.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE PRESS OF HUNTINGDON COUNTY.

THE first newspaper enterprise in the county not in the valley of the Juniata, was The Huntingdon Courier and Weekly Advertiser, "Printed and published by Michael Duffey, at the corner of Allegany Street & the Public Square; Where Advertisements, articles of useful intelligence, and Essays having the Public wellfare for their objects, will be thankfully received and carefully inserted." The initial number was issued July 4, 1797, from the house then owned by John Cadwallader, that stood at Nos. 305 and 307 Allegheny Street, and afterwards by David Snyder and his son-in-law, John W. Mattern. The only copy of the paper known to be in existence is one of No. 6, dated Tuesday, Aug. 8, 1797, in the possession of the writer hereof. It contains foreign intelligence from Londonderry of May 6th; Dublin, May 19th; Cork, May 6th; London, May 10th; and Vienna, May 26th; and domestic items from Philadelphia, Lexington, Ky., Cincinnati, and other places. The solitary item of local news is as follows:

[1] Gazette says of Spruce Creek and [2] of Woodcock Valley. 18th February was Thursday.

[3] Both of the borough of Huntingdon.

[4] Daughter of Philip Roller, Esq. All of Sinking Valley. 27th was Thursday.

"HUNTINGDON, August 9.

"The publication of this Paper was unavoidably protracted till this day, by which delay we are enabled to notice; that this morning about 1 O'clock, the Borough of Huntingdon was alarmed with the Cry of Fire! which, broke out in a back building, the property of Mr. George Householder; and threatened destruction to the adjacent buildings, but by the generous exertion of our fellow Citizens that devouring element was conquered without doing any other damage, except the tearing down of the building in which the fire originated."

Among the advertisements is a notice from Johonus Tob, complaining that people from the borough of Huntingdon and elsewhere have made a practice of passing through his fields and throwing down the fences, and warning trespassers that they may depend they will be dealt with as the law directs. Arthur and William Moore request all persons indebted to their store in Alexandria to settle off their respective accounts. John Cryder offers himself as a candidate for sheriff at the following election. Jacob Weaver gives notice that the lottery for the lots in his town of Georgetown, in Hopewell township, Woodcock Valley, took place on the 7th of July. John Hughes, United States excise officer, publishes regulations relative to the entry of stills. John Keller offers a reward of ten pounds for the capture of the thief and recovery of a horse stolen from his pasture-field in Canoe Valley, on the night of the 2d of August. Robert Hubbell forewarns persons against trusting his absconding wife Jane. John Cadwallader informs subscribers to the fund of the public grammar school, incorporated for the town and county of Huntingdon, that they are required to make payment to him as treasurer without delay, and that proposals in writing will be received for erecting a school building of brick, twenty-four by thirty-six feet, two stories in height. The printer publishes his prospectus, and informs the public that he has a valuable collection of books for sale. The price of the paper was two dollars per annum. It was well printed for the times, and contained four columns on a page. The form measures nine and one-half by sixteen inches on each page. Among the patrons of this paper residing out of town whose names have been preserved are: James Champion, Philip Lauman, William McKillip, William Mulhallin, Samuel Marshall (Spruce Creek), William Moore (Woodcock Valley), John Gloninger, Joshua Lewis, Mr. Gahagin, of Hart's Log, Benjamin Laughead, Jacob Van Gilder, William Holliday, Francis Smith, Henry Caldwell, Joseph Galbraith, Samuel Galbraith, Samuel Kerr, Thomas Durbin, Thomas Phillips, John Storm, John Byrnes, Capt. Richard McGuire, John Burgoon, John McCoy, Thomas Scott (Shaver's Creek), Lawrence Dempsey, John Culbertson, Daniel McConnaughy, Michael Skelly, Andrew Bell, Angus Sinclair, Robert McCartney, Joseph Cadwallader, Hugh Dalrymple, Alexander McGeehan, James Ross, Robert Riddle, Thomas McMillan. Duffey continued the publication of the paper for about seven months, until February, 1798, when from insufficient patronage, owing doubtless to the difficulties attending the delivery of his issues in the absence of mail facilities, he was compelled to quit.

The next venture was The Guardian of Liberty and Huntingdon Chronicle, by John R. Parrington, commenced in the fall of 1799, and continued about a year. The size and price was the same as the Courier. In No. 38, of the date Aug. 14, 1800, George Guthrie, jailer, offers a reward of eight dollars for an escaped prisoner committed for forgery. Apprentices are wanted by Stephen Drury to the clock- and watch-making business, by William Hannegan to the tailoring, by John Yocum to the blacksmithing, by Archibald Thompson to the saddling, and by Christopher Steel to the cut- and hammer-nailing business. David Newingham offers a reward for the recovery of a watch lost between "this borough and Patrick Leonard's farm." The editor, in a standing advertisement dated Jan. 30, 1800, informs his readers that a paper-mill is building about twenty miles distant from the borough that will keep in the county thousands of dollars that would otherwise go elsewhere, and that will consume large quantities of rags. He urges the people to save these otherwise useless articles for sale to the paper-mill and thus assist the enterprise.

On the 12th of February, 1801, John McCahan commenced the publication of The Huntingdon Gazette and Weekly Advertiser. The size and price was the same as its predecessors. It was "printed by John McCahan, Washington Street, opposite to Gwinn's Alley." In 1802 the office was on Hill Street, "second door to Mr. Samuel Steel's tavern." Mr. McCahan was born in a small village called Drumnahaigh, in the north of Ireland, in November, 1780, and landed in the United States in August, 1792. He commenced his career as a printer with the firm of Steel & McClain, of Carlisle, as an apprentice, in 1795. The establishment failed the next year, and in 1797 he worked as a journeyman on the Courier, in Huntingdon, for Michael Duffey. After that paper died he followed Mr. Duffey to Baltimore, and in 1799 worked for William Pechin on a "Digest of the Laws of the United States." He conducted the Gazette from its establishment in 1801 until July 9, 1828, over twenty-seven years, when he transferred the control and management of it to his son, John Kinney McCahan. Mr. McCahan was identified with many of the improvements and institutions of his time, and acquired a large estate in lands situated in various parts of Huntingdon and Blair Counties. He remained a resident of the borough of Huntingdon until about 1843, when he removed to the "Log Cabin Farm," in Walker township, opposite the borough of Huntingdon, on which he had just completed the brick residence now owned and occupied by a grandson bearing his name. He was a man of great industry, energy, and tact, and manifested remarkable firmness and decision in all his business affairs. While he led an active life, always taking an interest in matters of public concern, and participating in the political contests of the times, he never sought nor held any official positions other than those connected with the borough government. He died Sunday morning, March 22, 1857, in his seventy-seventh year, and his remains rest in the Huntingdon Cemetery. One son, James A. McCahan, who resides near Hollidaysburg, is the only one of his children now living. John Kinney McCahan conducted the Gazette until April 23, 1834, when he disposed of the establishment to Alexander Gwin, and removed to the Laurel Springs Mills, a short distance above Birmingham. Some time after the death of his father he returned to Huntingdon, and for many years resided in the house on the northeast corner of Washington and Fifth Streets, where he died Jan. 16, 1883, aged seventy-nine years.

While the Gazette when under the direction of its founder and his son advocated the election of Jackson and other Democratic candidates, it was not as distinctively Democratic as it became under the management of Alexander Gwin. In the Democratic split of 1835, when George Wolf and Henry A. Muhlenberg were nominated by opposing factions of the then dominant party in Pennsylvania, and which resulted in Joseph Ritner, the Anti-Masonic candidate, receiving a plurality of votes, and being inaugurated Governor, the Gazette warmly advocated the election of Muhlenberg, the candidate of the "Young Democracy." In the spirited gubernatorial contest of 1838 it earnestly supported David R. Porter. On the 6th of February, 1839, Mr. Gwin retired from the editorial chair, and was succeeded by P. S. Joslyn. A short time thereafter the material was removed to Hollidaysburg, and the Gazette, long a weekly visitor to many households in the county, ceased to exist. One of the incidents connected with this newspaper worth recording is the fact that for many years it was printed on paper manufactured at the "Laurel Springs" paper-mill, near Birmingham, the establishment referred to in the Guardian of Liberty.

The American Eagle was in existence in 1811, but the dates of its birth and death have been lost to history. In September, 1813, James Barbour commenced the publication of The Huntingdon Intelligencer, a Democratic-Republican weekly. In October, 1814, the name was changed to The Huntingdon Republican. Barbour continued to publish the paper until August, 1819, when the last number was issued, and the establishment became the property of James S. Patton, who had been one of the editors of the Lewistown Mercury. Another newspaper effort called the Village Monitor was not successful. From its material the publication of the Republican Advocate was commenced in the summer of 1820 by —— Underwood and John Mullay. Underwood subsequently retired from the firm, and John W. Shugert became the junior partner. Sept. 8, 1827, Mullay disposed of his interest to Shugert, who conducted the paper alone until Feb. 7, 1829, when he sold out to Robert Wallace. The size of the pages, four columns in width, was ten by seventeen and one-half inches until July 30, 1828, when it was enlarged to five columns in width. Augustus Banks became joint editor and proprietor with Mr. Wallace, June 15, 1831. The latter disposed of his interest to Thomas P. Campbell, and on the 28th of March, 1832, the firm became Banks & Campbell, and continued one year. Mr. Banks conducted the paper alone until May, 1835, when he transferred it to George Taylor and Mr. Campbell. With the number issued Dec. 30, 1835, the Republican Advocate expired. The material was united with that of the late Hollidaysburg Sentinel, published by William R. McCay, and a new paper called the Advocate and Sentinel issued by Mr. McCay, who continued its issue under the new title until about the middle of the year 1841, when the establishment changed hands, and a new candidate for public favor was issued by E. V. Everhart, under the name of the Democratic Watchman, and continued by him and Robert Woods for about two years, and then finally abandoned. The material was stored in a house on Allegheny Street, and a few years later was used in the publication of the Messenger.

The Huntingdon Courier and Anti-Masonic Republican was commenced by Henry L. McConnell, June 2, 1830. Before the close of the first volume the firm-name became McConnell & McCrea. In February, 1833, W. A. Kinsloe succeeded as publisher; a month later the firm was changed to N. Sargent and W. A. Kinsloe; July 3d, Mr. Sargent retired and Dr. Jacob Hoffman and W. A. Kinsloe became publishers. About the close of the year J. Hoffman & Co. were announced as publishers, who continued until September, 1834, and were succeeded by William Yeager. Hamilton Semple soon after mounted the editorial tripod, and on the 20th of May, 1835, he published his valedictory and announced that he had united the subscription list with that of the Hollidaysburg Aurora, which would thereafter be called the Aurora and Courier.

The Huntingdon Bote, a German Anti-Masonic paper, was commenced about 1834 by Dr. Jacob Hoffman and continued for a short time.

The material of the Courier was purchased by A. W. Benedict & Co., and the publication of a six-column Anti-Masonic paper, called the Huntingdon

Journal, commenced Sept. 25, 1835. In April, 1836, Mr. Benedict became sole proprietor, and continued as such until Feb. 2, 1842, when he sold to Theodore H. Cremer. Under the management of the latter the typographical appearance of the paper was much improved by the use of new type and a new heading, June 7, 1843. Up to this time its motto was, "One Country, One Constitution, One Destiny." The Anti-Masonic party having, some years before, become merged into the Whig organization, the Journal became the Whig organ. Mr. Cremer sold out to James Clark, of Harrisburg, who assumed editorial control Aug. 13, 1845. The appearance of the paper was again improved in September, 1846, and in June, 1848. Mr. Clark died March 23, 1851, and the vacant editorial chair was assumed by William H. Peightal on the 10th of April. J. Sewell Stewart became editor and proprietor Aug. 1, 1851. May 20, 1852, J. A. Hall became a partner, and on the 30th of September following Mr. Hall became sole owner, and, securing the services of Adin W. Benedict, the founder of the paper, as political editor, he continued the publication until March 23, 1853, when Samuel L. Glasgow purchased the establishment. On the 11th of May an enlargement to seven columns was made. On the first day of March, 1854, William Brewster succeeded to the editorial control as well as proprietorship of the establishment, and on the 2d of May, 1855, Samuel G. Whittaker became associated with him. Mr. Whittaker retired Dec. 23, 1857. Nearly two years later, Dr. Brewster sold out to John Lutz, of Shirleysburg, and in the issue of Nov. 30, 1859, announced the severance of his connection with the paper. With the material of the Journal, Lutz recommenced the Shirleysburg Herald; the subscription list he disposed of to Mr. Whittaker, who, uniting with John A. Nash, the founder of the Huntingdon American, commenced May 9, 1855, the firm of Nash & Whittaker continued the publication of a six-column paper under the united names of the Huntingdon Journal and American until Dec. 6, 1865, when Mr. Whittaker retired, and Mr. Nash and Robert McDivitt, under the firm-name of John A. Nash & Co., became publishers. In the beginning of 1867 an enlargement to seven columns was made. On the 29th of May following, Mr. Nash became sole proprietor, but Mr. McDivitt remained as one of the editors until the close of 1870, when he retired and was succeeded by J. R. Durborrow, of Bedford, who had purchased and added to the establishment the material and subscription list of the Republican. At the beginning of the new year the paper was enlarged to eight columns, the old name The Huntingdon Journal restored, and the typographical appearance greatly improved. The style of the firm was J. R. Durborrow and John A. Nash, publishers and proprietors, until May 24, 1878, when Mr. Nash became sole proprietor and editor, and yet continues in that relation. The Journal, one of the old-established newspapers of the Juniata Valley, has now (January, 1883) entered upon its forty-sixth volume.

After the death of the Watchman, the Journal remained for a time the only paper printed at Huntingdon. In the fall of 1843 new material was purchased, and the Huntingdon Globe commenced by Lewis G. Mytinger and G. L. Gentzel on the 24th of November. Mytinger owned the office, and after a few months Gentzel's name was dropped. About 1st of June, 1845, he sold to Thomas P. Campbell, under whom the paper was issued for some time by J. Welsh Brewer, and then by Lyons Mussina as editor and publisher. In the spring of 1846, William Lewis purchased the establishment and issued the paper as editor and publisher. After the retirement of Mr. Mytinger a new series was begun. On the 25th of June, 1858, the Globe, which was always clearly and distinctly printed, appeared in an entirely new and attractive dress. The word "Huntingdon" was omitted from the heading. Up to the close of 1860 it was continued as a six-column sheet, but with the first issue of 1861 an enlargement to seven columns was made and new type used. In the following April semi-weekly issues of half a sheet were begun and continued until June, 1862. The rise and progress of the great Rebellion excited a desire on the part of the people for the latest news from the seat of war, and to supply this popular demand many weekly newspapers throughout the State adopted the policy of the enterprising publisher of the Globe. On the 5th of November, 1861, Alfred Tyhurst became associate editor, and continued until the semi-weekly issues were abandoned. Hugh Lindsay became associate editor Jan. 4, 1865, and on the 3d of April, 1867, in addition to editorial duties, shared with Mr. Lewis the responsibilities of publisher. This arrangement continued until April 1, 1872. On the 1st of January, 1871, the paper was enlarged to eight columns. Alfred Tyhurst became, April 1st, a member of the firm, which was known as The Globe Printing Association, with William Lewis, A. Tyhurst, and Hugh Lindsay as editors and business managers. Four months afterwards Mr. Tyhurst retired, and Messrs. Lewis and Lindsay remained, the former as publisher, proprietor, and political editor, and the latter as business manager.

On the 10th of December, 1872, in the twenty-seventh year of his ownership of the Globe, during which the paper had become one of the permanent and prosperous ones of the valley, Mr. Lewis sold out to Professor A. L. Guss, who, as publisher and proprietor, immediately assumed possession of the establishment, and continued to conduct the paper until July 24, 1877, when he was succeeded by Alfred Tyhurst as editor and proprietor. Five years later Mr. Tyhurst was compelled by ill health to rest from editorial labor. After his death the establishment was sold by his executors to Howard E. Butz on the 9th of January, 1883, the gentleman who had editorial charge during several preceding months. On the 15th of August, 1877, the original name, The Huntingdon Globe, was restored to the head of the paper and has properly remained there since.

The Messenger.—George W. Whittaker and George Raymond purchased the press and type of the defunct Advocate and Sentinel and Watchman, and with them on the 15th of April, 1846, commenced the publication of a five-column paper called The Messenger, neutral in politics. One year later an enlargement to the extent of one column per page was made, and the name amended to Huntingdon Messenger. At the end of the second year the partnership was dissolved with the view of discontinuing the publication of the paper; but a few weeks later Mr. Whittaker reconsidered the idea of abandoning the profession, and on the 17th of May commenced the third volume, reducing the sheet to the original width, five columns, and continued to issue the paper until the spring of 1849, when he sold the material to Samuel McElhose, who removed it to Brookville, Jefferson Co., and there commenced the Jefferson Star.

The Standing Stone.—In the summer of 1853, J. Simpson Africa and Samuel G. Whittaker purchased a new press, type, and material, and commenced the publication of a six-column weekly independent paper called The Standing Stone Banner. The initial number was issued June 11th, and the title was subsequently abridged to The Standing Stone. The enterprise met a fair measure of financial success, and it would doubtless have become one of the permanent establishments of the borough, but circumstances directed the material interests of the proprietors into other channels. The senior having been elected county surveyor, the duties of that office engrossed his attention, and the junior desired to gratify an inclination to seek a home in the West, which, however, was not accomplished until some years later. Failing in the effort to dispose of the establishment to a party who would continue to publish the paper, it was sold to a company of gentlemen in Altoona, under whose patronage a paper was commenced, out of which has grown the Altoona Tribune.

The Union.—The material of the Shirleysburg Herald was purchased, and on the 3d of August, 1859, a new Democratic six-column weekly was commenced, with R. Milton Speer as editor and proprietor. In the Presidential contest of 1860 it supported Breckinridge, while the Globe adhered to Douglas. The editor, Jan. 15, 1861, in announcing that thereafter the issue of the paper would cease, remarked, "The Union has been self-sustaining, but the time required to conduct it properly is more than I can spare from a profession the practice of which I like, and to excel in which is my ambition."

The People's Defender, commenced in September, 1860, by William Summers, proprietor, and William F. Shaw, editor, was continued a few months.

From the Union establishment William F. Shaw and Benjamin F. Miller commenced, March 20, 1861, to issue The Workingmen's Advocate, which was continued a few months.

The Local News was begun by Hugh Lindsay, March 10, 1874. The pages, eight and three-quarters by eleven and one-half inches, were four columns wide. For the first six months it was issued weekly and afterwards semi-weekly. Frank Willoughby became associated with the founder of the paper Feb. 15, 1875, as one of the publishers. With the first number of the fifth volume, March 11, 1878, an enlargement was made and "the patent inside" introduced and used until June 11, 1879, when by the introduction of an improved press the publishers were enabled to have all the work on the paper performed at home.

Mr. Willoughby retired June 14, 1880, leaving Mr. Lindsay sole publisher.

The Monitor.—The Globe, the old Democratic paper, having allied itself with the Republican party, a press and type were purchased by a number of the citizens of the county, and the publication of a six-column weekly called The Monitor was commenced in the borough of Huntingdon, Aug. 30, 1862. Rumors were circulated that members of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers from this county, then in actual service, had held a meeting and resolved upon the destruction of the establishment on their return, in retaliation for some alleged grievance. Letters were written to members of different companies of the regiment before its return to Harrisburg, and on its reaching there they were interviewed for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of these rumors, and assurances were invariably given that no such meeting had been held, and that the preparations making for the defense of the property were unnecessary. The thirty-eighth number of the first volume was issued May 14, 1863. Six days later the press, type, and all other property that could be destroyed was broken up or scattered by a mob. The next day the following circular was issued and distributed:

"MONITOR EXTRA.

"HUNTINGDON, PA., May 21, 1863.

"To the Democracy of Huntingdon County:

"An important hour in the history of our country is upon us. The question which presses itself home to every freeman now is, Shall the rights and the liberty of the citizen be preserved, or shall the violence of a bloody mob override the majesty of the law and destroy both property and life? In a crisis like this we appeal to the sovereign people,—they are alike the source of virtue and of power, and their will to be obeyed needs but to be known. True to the sublime cause of constitutional liberty in the early struggles, they will not desert it now when the fires of persecution light its grand march to victory!

"Feeling deeply, as all citizens who love law and order must feel, the outrage committed on the office of The Monitor on Wednesday, the 20th inst., we hereby unite in a call for a mass-meeting of the Democrats of Huntingdon County, to be held in the court-house on Friday, the 29th of May, at one o'clock P.M., to give expression to our utter abhorrence of such violence and brutality, and to renew our allegiance to the rights of the citizen and the Constitution of the Union.

"Freemen of Huntingdon County, shall your voice be hushed by the mob? Shall your property be destroyed, and your persons endangered, and that, too, in the name of liberty? Never! By the sacred altars of our fathers, we swear, never!

"Then come in numbers and in power to the mass-meeting, and in obedience to the law of the land, let us both assert and maintain our rights. The Monitor must be re-established, and every moment of delay broods peril to our cause. Let there be a thousand Democrats in council. There is no man who loves liberty that cannot devote one day to its holy cause.

"John S. Miller, R. Bruce Petrikin, W. P. McNite, A. Johnston, J. Simpson Africa, E. L. Everhart, F. Hefright. F. B. Wallace, William Colon, A. P. Wilson, G. Ashman Miller, John H. Lightner, George Mears, R. Milton Speer, Joseph Reigger, Daniel Africa, Valentine Hoover, A. Owen."

Pursuant to this call a large meeting assembled at the court-house on the day appointed. Gen. George W. Speer presided, assisted by fifty vice-presidents and twenty-two secretaries, representing each township and borough in the county. From the lengthy report of the committee on resolutions the following extract was taken:

"WHEREAS, The Constitution of the United States declares 'That Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances;' and

"WHEREAS, The Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania declares 'That the printing-presses shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the Legislature, or any branch of government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and every citizen may freely speak, write, and print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty.'

"AND WHEREAS, The Monitor newspaper, the organ of the Democratic party of Huntingdon County, in and for the exercise of these rights, was, on Wednesday, the 20th inst., entirely destroyed by a lawless mob, excited by partisan prejudices; therefore,

"Resolved, That this flagrant outrage upon the dearest rights of the American citizen merits and receives our fullest condemnation, and should receive the stern disapproval of every man who loves order or values liberty.

"Resolved, That, relying, as heretofore, on the virtue, intelligence, and patriotism of the people, and believing that the thickening emergencies of the crisis and the perpetuation of the government requires the triumph of correct constitutional principles, we will immediately re-establish The Monitor upon a firm and permanent basis, and yield it a generous support as the organ of our political faith."

On the 2d of July The Monitor reappeared enlarged to seven columns, with J. Irvin Steel as editor and publisher. It contained the following account of the "Destruction of the Monitor:"

"On the 20th of last May, as our readers will remember, the office of the Monitor was entered by a band of lawless men, and the press, materials, etc., were thrown into the street and entirely destroyed. No cause for this outrage was given, and the ruffians who committed it have no shadow of palliation to offer. An attempt has been made to create the impression that the soldiers of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Regiment, indignant at the course of the Monitor, sought to appease their patriotism in the destruction of the office. But the parties who have studiously circulated this story know, or ought to know, that it is a base falsehood. The soldiers of this regiment, the men who had won immortal honor upon many a bloody field, and who, on their return, received the warm welcome of glad hearts, had no part in this cowardly outrage, and condemned its perpetrators in the severest terms. The Monitor has always been the friend of the soldier and the soldiers' cause, and the scarred veterans of Antietam and Chancellorsville, resting upon the laurels of their own valor, don't seek glory by destroying the property of private citizens at home. They leave this species of bravery to the men who ran whenever a foe appeared, and who are loudest in their professions of heroism when danger is farther from them.

"We will do our citizens the justice to say that we believe there are very few respectable men in this community who do not denounce the mob violence committed upon the Monitor. A small number—and that number composed of persons who have neither property nor character—instigated, and now, of course, approve the outrage. We pass them by in silence and contempt, and leave them to their merited disgrace."

Criminal proceedings were commenced against a number of the participants and abettors of the outrage. The grand jury at August sessions found a true bill against seventeen of the rioters. Six had not been taken, and the recognizance of another was forfeited. The trial proceeded against six soldiers and four civilians. Four of the soldiers were convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of five dollars each, and to undergo an imprisonment of six months. On the evening before the October election a pardon was received from the Governor for the persons convicted. About three o'clock on Saturday morning, July 25th, a panel of one of the front doors was broken out, through which some persons entered the office and destroyed three cases of type, and pied seven columns of matter. The noise aroused some of the neighbors, and the rioters fled.

With the first number issued in 1865 a reduction in the size of the paper was made. At the beginning of the fourth volume, October 4th, Mr. Steel retired, and the editorial management was assumed by S. A. McKenzie, who was succeeded by Joseph S. Cornman, December 13th. One year later the old size of seven columns was resumed. On the 16th of July, 1872, the typographical appearance of the paper was improved, the sheet enlarged to eight columns, and the heading changed to Huntingdon Monitor. Sept. 22, 1874, Mr. Cornman retired and was succeeded by Samuel E. Fleming and M. M. McNeil as editors and proprietors. The latter withdrew June 12, 1876, when the name of the publishing firm was changed to S. E. Fleming & Co., and such it yet remains.

The Republican was established by Theo. H. Cremer, Sept. 15, 1869. With the eighth issue the title was changed to Huntingdon County Republican. The material having been sold to J. R. Durborrow, who had become one of the owners of the Journal, the last number was issued Dec. 3, 1870.

The material of the People's Defender, of Huntingdon, was purchased by Alfred Tyhurst, who moved it to Coalmont, and there, in February, 1861, commenced a weekly called The Broad Top Miner, and continued its publication until the 14th of June, when, owing to the then disturbed condition of the country, work was suspended thereon and never resumed. Its material subsequently became a part of the first Monitor establishment.

The Orbisonia Leader was commenced about November, 1876, by R. J. Coons, and continued a few years. The vacant place is now ably filled by the Orbisonia Dispatch.

The Pilgrim, a religious paper issued in the interest of the German Baptists or "Brethren," by some called "Dunkards," was begun at Marklesburg in January, 1870, by Henry B. and J. B. Brumbaugh. In the fall of 1874 the establishment was moved to Huntingdon. Two years later the Primitive Christian, a paper of the same denomination that had up to that time been published at Berlin, Somerset Co., was united with it, and thenceforward the paper was issued under the latter name by Quinter & Brumbaugh Bros. It has a very large circulation over many of the States of the Union. The establishment, located at the northwest corner of Washington and Fourteenth Streets, runs its presses by steam, and has a book-bindery attached.

A monthly called The Huntingdon Literary Museum and Monthly Miscellany became a candidate for public support early in 1810. It was conducted by William R. Smith and Moses Canan, and printed in a creditable manner at the Gazette office. It expired after the issue of the twelfth number.

Young America, Business Journal, Home Monthly, and several other papers were started at different times in the borough of Huntingdon, continued for a while, and then suspended.

The Herald, a weekly independent paper, was started at Shirleysburg, Feb. 1, 1855, by John Lutz. At the end of the first year it passed into the hands of John G. Long, and subsequently to Benjamin F. Miller. Under the management of the latter its publication was suspended for a short time, until on the 7th of January, 1858, Mr. Lutz again assumed the editorial management, with his son Benjamin as assistant editor and printer. Until the 25th of March the size was five columns, when it was increased to six. On the 28th of July, 1859, the establishment having been sold to R. Milton Speer for removal to Huntingdon, and The Union started, Mr. Lutz bade adieu to his readers. A few months later, in the arrangements that resulted in the consolidation of the Huntingdon Journal and American papers, Mr. Lutz obtained the material of the Journal office, with which, on the 4th of January, 1860, he resumed the publication of The Herald. From the 30th of April until the 5th of November, 1861, the paper was issued twice a week.

Mount Union Times.—The first paper published in Mount Union was called the Mount Union Times, and was issued weekly by Adam Harshberger and John S. Bare, about 1867, with Benjamin Lutz as foreman. The press was the one previously used at Shirleysburg in the publication of the Shirleysburg Herald. The Mount Union Times was a six- or seven-column paper, with a "patent" inside, printed in Chicago, and was the first paper with a "patent" inside published in this part of the State. Before the Times had been published a year, Lutz, who by some means retained an ownership in the press and materials, sold out the office to W. P. McLaughlin, who started a weekly, the Mount Union Herald, with Lutz as compositor and foreman. Messrs. Harshberger and Bare completed the year by getting their papers printed at the Altoona Tribune office, and at the end of the year the paper suspended. Mr. McLaughlin ran the Herald for a short time and sold it to Rev. Howard B. Jeffries, now of Denver, Col. Jeffries was a son of Rev. Cyrus Jeffries, a noted Spiritualist and the founder of a denomination known as the "Resurrectionists," of which the son Howard was a minister. (This is the same Howard B. Jeffries who married a couple in a balloon at Cincinnati some years ago, an account of which was published in all the papers.)

Some time after, probably in the latter part of the year 1868, John Dougherty bought the Herald from Jeffries and imported an editor named Seaman from Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa. Mr. Seaman and Mr. Dougherty not agreeing, the latter took editorial charge of the paper himself, and continued its publication until September, 1869, when Theodore H. Cremer, of Huntingdon, bought out the establishment, and taking it to Huntingdon started the Huntingdon Republican.

No paper was published in Mount Union from the last issue of the Herald, in August, 1869, until February, 1873, when H. E. Shaffer started the Mount Union Times, a seven-column weekly, with new material and imported outside. Mr. Shaffer continued the Times successfully until the summer of 1875, when Dr. G. W. Thompson, Rev. Cyrus Jeffries, Joseph Bardine, B. F. Douglas, and John H. Miller formed a company under the firm-name of Dr. G. W. Thompson & Co., and bought the office and paper for fourteen hundred dollars. They changed the name of the paper to The People's Era, and continued it as a weekly for some months with Rev. Cyrus Jeffries as editor, and John H. Miller as local editor. In a few weeks Joseph Bardine took the place of the latter as local editor, but the paper was far from being a success, and in the fall of the same year John M. Bowman, of Johnstown, bought the paper, and rechristened it the Mount Union Times, and printing both sides at home, ran it until August, 1877, when the paper was sold to W. T. Bair, of the Shirleysburg Herald. (W. T. Bair had started the Mount Union Herald, a three-column weekly folio, in September, 1875, and after a year moved it to Shirleysburg.) Mr. Bair published the Times (part of the time printing both sides and then the inside only) until August, 1879, when it was bought by Dr. A. R. McCarthy, who, after a cessation of seven weeks, revived it as a weekly, Sept. 25, 1879, with John S. Bare as local editor, and afterwards in succession, W. E. McCarthy, Millard T. Whittaker, and V. B. McCarthy. Except from January to April, 1882, when the paper was published as a semi-weekly, the Times has been issued regularly as a weekly since under the control of the present editor, who has kept it going longer than any previous owner.

The Mountain Voice, a four-page weekly, commenced by B. F. Gehrett, M.D., at Broad Top City, June 22, 1876, who was succeeded Jan. 27, 1877, by Joseph J. Morrow, was in existence some time over a year. The Home Monthly, an eight-page paper "for the family circle," commenced in January, 1879, by E. B. Swane, in the borough of Huntingdon, had reached several numbers, when, on the night of the 28th of June, some persons entered the office, carried off the type, and threw them into the canal. As the paper was exempt from anything like personalities, no reason could be found for this outrage.

CHAPTER XVII.

BENCH AND BAR.

List of Attorneys admitted to the Bar from the Organization of the County to the present date, December, 1882.

	Term Admitted.[1]
George Wharton,	prior to 1789.[1]
Charles Smith,	prior to 1789.
James Hamilton,	prior to 1789.
—— Bradford,	prior to 1789.
James Riddle,	prior to 1789.
George Fisher,	June, 1789.
W. M. Brown,	Dec. 1789.[2]
John Cadwallader,	Dec. 1789.
David McKeehan,	Dec. 1789.
Thomas Nesbit,	Dec. 1789.
Jacob Nagle,	June 1, 1790.
Galbraith Patterson,	June, 1791.
Samuel Riddle,	Dec. 1791.
Richard Smith,	Dec. 1791.
Jonathan Walker,	April, 1792.
Thomas Nesbit,	Aug. 1792.
John Clark,	Aug. 1792.
Robert Duncan,	Aug. 1792.
Jacob Carpenter,	April, 1793.
William Ross,	April, 1793.
Henry Wood,	April, 1793.
Jona. Henderson,	April, 1793.
Thomas Elder,	Nov. 1793.
Thomas Collins,	Aug. 1794.
Abrm. Morrison,	Aug. 1794.
James Morrison,	Jan. 1795.
John Lyon,	April, 1795.
George Duffield,	April, 1795.
Thomas Hadden,	Aug. 1795.
Thomas Anderson,	April, 1796.
Charles Huston,	Aug. 1796.
R. Duncan,	Aug. 1796.
William Reynolds,	Aug. 1796.
Jesse Moore,	Nov. 1796.
Evan Rice Evans,	April 17, 1797.
Robert McClure,	April 17, 1797.
Robert Allison,	April, 1798.
Thomas Duncan,	April, 1798.
David Watt,	April, 1798.
Elias White Hale,	Aug. 1798.
John Lyon,	Nov. 1798.
Wm. A. Patterson, of Mifflin County,	April, 1799.
Andrew Tulloh,	Nov. 1800.
John Rose,	Jan. 1801.
W. A. Thompson,	Aug. 1801.
L. W. Culbertson,	Aug. 1801.
William Orbison,	Aug. 1801.
W. Lee Hannum,	Aug. 1801.
James Kedie,	Nov. 1801.
David Irwin,	Nov. 1801.
John Miles,	Jan. 1802.
John Shippen,	Jan. 1802.
Thomas Gemmill,	Aug. 1802.
Josiah Espy,	Nov. 1803.
Thomas Burnside,	April, 1804.
Samuel Massey,	Aug. 1804.
Andrew Boggs,	Jan. 1805.
William Ward,	Jan. 1805.
Walker Reed,	Aug. 1805.
Moses Canan,	Jan. 1806.
Isaac B. Parker,	April, 1806.
James M. Riddle,	Aug. 1806.
William Norris,	Aug. 1806.
A. Henderson, Jr.,	Jan. 1807.
John Carpenter,	Nov. 1807.
James M. Russell,	Nov. 1808.
Wm. R. Smith,	Nov. 1808.
John Tod, of Bedford,	Aug. 1809.
William Dean,	Nov. 1809.
George Burd,	Aug. 1810.
John Johnston,	Aug. 12, 1811.
Alex. A. Anderson,	Aug. 15, 1811.
Thos. Montgomery,	Nov. 1811.
Dan. S. Houghton,	Aug. 1814.
Wm. W. Potter,	Aug. 1814.
John Blanchard,	April, 1815.
Thomas Blair,	Jan. 1816.
William W. Smith,	April, 1816.
Alex. Thompson,	Nov. 1816.
James M. Kelly,	Dec. 1816.
Duncan S. Walker,	April 14, 1817.
David Huling,	April 15, 1817.
James Steel,	Aug. 18, 1818.
James McDowell,	Nov. 1818.
Josiah E. Barkley,	Nov. 1818.
Gratz Etting,	Nov. 1818.
Charles B Seely,	April, 1820.
Hugh Brady,	Aug. 1820
William Patton,	Aug. 1820
John Williamson,	April, 1821.
John G. Miles,	Aug. 15, 1821.
William Swift,	Nov. 12, 1821.
Barton McMullen,	April 9, 1822.
Isaac Fisher,	April 11, 1822.
Abram S. Wilson,	Aug. 13, 1822.
Ephraim Banks,	Aug. 13, 1822.
Samuel M. Green,	Aug. 13, 1822.
William J. Christy,	Aug. 13, 1822.
John A. Blodget,	Aug. 17, 1822.
McClay Hall,	Aug. 11, 1823.
T. Nixon Vandyke,	Nov. 12, 1823.
Richard B. McCabe,	Jan. 12, 1824.
John J. Henderson,	Aug. 9, 1824.
Stewart Steel,	Aug. 9, 1824.
James M. Bell,	Aug. 10, 1824.
Andrew J. Cline,	April 11, 1825.
Jonathan Carlisle,	Aug. 8, 1825.
Robert Wallace,	Jan. 12, 1826.
Bond Valentine,	Nov. 15, 1826.
Moses Maclean,	April 10, 1827.
Andrew Parker,	April 10, 1827.
James P. Hepburn,	April 10, 1827.
Calvin Blythe,	May 30, 1827.
M. D. Mageehan,	Aug. 14, 1827.
Nath. P. Fetterman,	Aug. 14, 1827.
Matthew D. Gregg,	Nov. 12, 1827.
Andrew P. Wilson,	April 16, 1828.
Ezekiel S Dunbar,	Aug. 11, 1828.
James A. Petrikin,	Aug. 15, 1828.
Alexander King,	April 15, 1829.
Samuel M. Barklay,	April 15, 1829.
Alexander Gwin,	Nov. 9, 1830.
Charles W. Kelso,	Nov. 9, 1830.
Samuel S. Wharton,	April, 1831.
Hamilton Semple,	Aug. 9, 1831.
Benj. Patton, Jr.,	Nov. 4, 1831.
Nathan Sargent,	Aug. 16, 1832.
James T. Hale,	Nov. 13, 1832.
James Crawford,	Jan. 14, 1833.
Espy L. Anderson,	April 9, 1833.
John McGee,	Aug. 16, 1833.
James Burnside,	Jan. 14, 1834.
Reuben C. Hale,	Nov. 11, 1834.
A. B. Norris,	April 15, 1835.
Wm. P. Orbison,	Nov 12, 1835.
Samuel Calvin,	April 12, 1836.
George Taylor,	April 12, 1836.
David Blair,	Aug. 8, 1836.
Thos. P. Campbell,	Nov. 15, 1836.
David Candor,	April 11, 1837.
R. A. McMurtrie,	April 15, 1837.
John P. Anderson,	April 9, 1838.
Thos. C. McDowell,	June 19, 1838.
H. N. McAllister,	Aug. 13, 1838.
John Fenelon,	Aug. 12, 1839.
George W. Barton,	Aug. 12, 1839.
Thaddeus Banks,	Nov. 12, 1839.
Gen. J. B. Anthony,	Jan. 15, 1840.
Wm. M. Stewart,	Jan. 15, 1840.
Adolphus D. Wilson,	Jan. 15, 1840.
Jeremiah S. Black,	Aug. 17, 1840.
Joshua F. Cox,	Aug. 17, 1840.
Aug. K. Cornyn,	Nov. 9, 1840.
William C. Logan,	Jan. 12, 1841.
Robert L. Johnston,	April 13, 1841.
E. V. Everhart,	June 21, 1841.
P. Frazer Smith,	June 23, 1841.
Theo. H. Cremer,	Aug. 10, 1841
John W. Shaw,	Aug. 11, 1841.
William Ayres,	Jan. 10, 1842.
John Cresswell, Jr.,	April 12, 1842.
Daniel Gant,	Jan 17, 1843.
James S. Stewart,	April 17, 1843.
William Dorris,	Aug. 15, 1843.
John S. McVey,	Aug. 24, 1843.
Samuel M. Linn,	Jan. 19, 1844.
Adin W. Benedict,	April 9, 1844.
John Brotherline,	April 10, 1844.
Joseph Kemp,	Aug. 14, 1844.
David Duff,	Jan. 14, 1845.
Jedediah Jack,	M'ch 12, 1845.
Girart Hewit,	April 16, 1845.
Edward A. Leslie,	Aug. 12, 1845.
James K. Kelly,	Aug. 13, 1845.
A. P. Jacobs,	Aug. 13, 1845.
William H. Irvin,	Aug. 14, 1845.
William I. Jacobs,	Aug. 16, 1845.
R. G. Dunbar, of Bellefonte,	Aug. 21, 1845.
Titian J. Coffey,	Jan. 14, 1846.
Samuel Steel Blair,	Jan. 21, 1846.
John Scott,	Jan. 23, 1846.
David Cooper,	April 14, 1846.
J. Roberts Lowrie,	April 15, 1846.
John W. Thompson,	April 19, 1847.
John Reed,	April 17, 1848.
Gregg A. Madson,	Aug. 18, 1848.
Joseph Alexander,	Jan. 11, 1849.
R. Bruce Petrikin,	Aug. 13, 1849.
George W. Watson,	Aug. 14, 1849.
Edmund Blanchard,	Dec. 5, 1849.
Edmund S. Doty,	Jan. 13, 1850.
David H. Hofius,	Nov. 12, 1850.
George W. Elder,	Jan. 22, 1851.
Sam'l C. Wingard,	April 14, 1851.
Samuel L. Glasgow,	Jan. 13, 1852.
John N. Prowell,	April 12, 1852.
Samuel T. Brown,	April 12, 1852.
H. Bucher Swope,	April 14, 1853.
William P. Schell,	Aug. 11, 1853.
Thomas L. Fletcher,	Nov. 17, 1853.
John Armitage,	Nov. 21, 1853.
John W. Mattern,	April 14, 1854.
Daniel H. Huyett,	Aug. 15, 1854.
A. V. Parsons,	Aug. 15, 1854.
Daniel J. Neff,	Jan. 10, 1855.
Lewis M. Stewart,	Jan. 10, 1855.
Jonathan Duff,	April 14, 1855.
D. Walker Woods,	Jan. 12, 1856.
George M. Houtz,	April 13, 1857.
Erskine H. Miles,	Aug. 10, 1857.
John R. Edie, of Somerset,	Aug. 11, 1857.
Morde. McKinney	Nov. 12, 1857.
Henry G. Smith,	Nov. 13, 1857.
J. S. Robison,	Jan. 13, 1858.
John Cessna, of Bedford,	Jan. 15, 1858.
Wm. A. McGalliard,	Nov. 15, 1858.
Andrew Reed,	Nov. 19, 1858.
Wm. H. Woods,	Jan. 12, 1859.
M. H. Jolly,	April 11, 1859.
Henry T. White,	April 14, 1859.
James D. Campbell,	Nov. 14, 1859.
R. Milton Speer,	Nov. 14, 1859.
J. H. O. Corbin,	Nov. 14, 1859.
T. M. Cornpropst,	Aug. 16, 1860.
Samuel J. Murray,	Aug. 21, 1860.
E. Hammond,	Jan. 21, 1861.
John Dean,	Aug. 16, 1861.
Warren Raymond,	Jan. 15, 1862.
Rud'h. McMurtrie,	April 16, 1862.
Joseph Parker,	April 21, 1862.
Samuel L. Russell,	April 23, 1862.
John M. Bailey,	Aug. 11, 1862.
P. Marion Lytle,	Aug. 11, 1862.

[1] The first court was held on the second Tuesday in December, 1787. The dockets which contained the proceedings of the Court of Common Pleas from that time to December term, 1788, inclusive, were, according to tradition, destroyed by Gen. McAlevy and his men, therefore the respective dates of the admission of members of the bar prior to 1789 cannot be given. The names, however, of all who appear to have been practicing are given at the head of this list.

[2] The earliest dockets extant are very meagre, scarcely amounting to respectable minutes of the proceedings of the courts. No account was taken of days in the entry of suits or judgments, nor in the admission of attorneys; everything appears to have been referred to the term, and the date of that is often obscure. Hence the term and not the day of the month is given in this list down to about the year 1817. From that time on more attention is given to dates, as will appear by reference to the list.

	Term Admitted.
Wm. A. Wallace,	Aug. 14, 1862.
Wm. A. Stephens,	Nov. 9, 1862.
S. M. Woodkok,	Nov. 11, 1862.
Jos. G. Isenberg,	April 12, 1864.
John A. McCanles,	Aug. 8, 1864.
Kenzie A. Lovell,	Aug. 10, 1864.
Mord. B. Massey,	Nov. 14, 1864.
Joshua M. Comley,	Nov. 21, 1864.
W. M. Williamson,	Jan. 17, 1865.
John F. Freauff,	April 11, 1865.
Jas. G. D. Findlay,	Aug. 14, 1865.
William A. Sipe,	Aug. 14, 1865.
G. B. Armitage,	Aug. 14, 1865.
Thomas M. Utley,	Aug. 14, 1865.
E. J. Osborne,	Aug. 15, 1865.
Milton S. Lytle,	Aug. 13, 1866.
E. S. McMurtrie,	Aug. 13, 1866.
J. Rand'h Simpson,	Aug. 15, 1866.
P. H. Sangree,	April 8, 1867.
John Williamson, of Carlisle,	April 15, 1867.
Henry E. Shafer,	April 13, 1868.
H. M. Baldridge,	June 15, 1868.
Samuel E. Fleming,	Aug. 10, 1868.
Miles M. McNeil,	Aug. 10, 1868.
Andrew J. Riley,	Aug. 10, 1868.
J. Sylvanus Blair,	Aug. 10, 1868.
Thomas W. Myton,	Aug. 12, 1868.
B. F. Fisher, of Philadelphia,	Nov. 11, 1868.
J. Hall Musser,	April 12, 1869.
J. J. Cunningham,	Nov. 11, 1869.
David Caldwell,	Jan. 20, 1870.
Wilson C. Speck,	April 11, 1870.
W. H. Akers,	April 11, 1870.
R. Speer McIlduff,	Aug. 8, 1870.
Miles Zentmyer,	Aug. 8, 1870.
Frederick Jeakel,	Aug. 8, 1870.
H. C. Madden,	Nov. 14, 1870.
J. R. Durborow,	Jan. 10, 1871.
Wm. A. Fleming,	April 10, 1871.
Robert A. Orbison,	May 25, 1871.
W. H. H. Young,	Jan. 10, 1872.
J. F. Schock,	June 20, 1872.
J. C. Jackson,	Nov. 11, 1872.
L. S. Geissinger,	Jan. 15, 1873.
Robert Johnston,	Aug. 13, 1873.
David S. Krebs,	Feb. 20, 1874.
O. E. McNeil,	April 22, 1874.
John H. Fisher,	Aug. 10, 1874.
James B. Riddle,	Aug. 10, 1874.
Jas. S. Leisingring,	Jan. 20, 1875.
George B. Orlady,	M'ch 23, 1875.
W. S. Alexander,	M'ch 23, 1875.
W. D. Horning,	April 21, 1875.
Edward J. McCoy,	Aug. 18, 1875.
Herman H. North,	Aug. 19, 1875.
J. D. Hicks,	Nov. 8, 1875.
Thomas M. Pollock,	Nov. 15, 1875.
T. W. Jackson,	Dec. 21, 1875.
Ezra D. Parker,	Jan. 10, 1876.
Chas. A. Barnett,	Jan. 11, 1876.
Jas. J. Chamberlin,	April 10, 1876.
William W. Dorris,	April 12, 1876.
A. A. Anderson,	April 12, 1876.
Frank Love,	Aug. 21, 1876.
S. P. McDivitt,	Oct. 3, 1876.
F. B. Tierney,	Nov. 13, 1876.
John Cornman,	Jan. 15, 1877.
C. S. Marks,	June 14, 1877.
S. L. Glasgow,	June 16, 1877.
Davis J. Zeigler,	April 10, 1878.
J. Frank Corbin,	April 10, 1878.
John A. Hewitt,	April 10, 1878.
Jesse R. Smith,	Aug. 19, 1878.
John Berry,	Aug. 21, 1878.
George H. Spang,	Nov. 12, 1878.
J. B. McPherson,	Nov. 18, 1878.
B. J. Devor,	Nov. 26, 1878.
James A. Beaver,	Jan. 13, 1879.
D. M. De Vore,	Jan. 16, 1879.
J. M. A. Passmore,	Jan. 17, 1879.
Edward L. Cox,	April 7, 1879.
James A. Fleming,	Aug. 18, 1879.
A. Porter Huey,	Aug. 18, 1879.
Lemuel H. Beers,	Sept. 20, 1879.
John D. Dorris,	Sept. 27, 1880.
Charles G. Brown,	April 11, 1881.
Dan'l McLaughlin,	April 18, 1881.
Charles Hower, of Snyder Co.,	April 20, 1881.
W. H. Oram, of N'humberl'd Co.,	June 20, 1881.
J. L. Spangler,	July 11, 1881.
M. R. Shaffner,	Oct. 25, 1881.
Heber McHugh,	April 10, 1882.
Howard E. Butz,	April 10, 1882.
Clement Dale,	April 10, 1882.
John Y. Woods,	April 12, 1882.
William S. Taylor,	Oct. 1, 1882.

It is the purpose now to give a brief history of the bench and bar of Huntingdon County from the organization of the courts down to the present time. To this end the records of the courts have been searched and the preceding list of all persons who were admitted to become attorneys of the several courts of the county made out, with the date of their admission as they appear of record. This forms the basis upon which our history must necessarily be constructed. Of course this list contains a large number of names of persons who never were residents of the county; of persons who had pursued their legal studies here, but left soon after their admission to locate permanently at some other chosen place; of persons who merely studied law as an accomplishment, not intending to practice it as a profession; and many more who were already established in practice in other counties, who seldom or never appeared in our courts after the term at which they were admitted. And of those that were residents of the county many left no monument in court except the brief record of their admission; their deeds are forgotten, and all that can be done now is to save their names from oblivion. But there are a few names standing out as landmarks, historic names that have outlived their day and generation, names that have not fallen a prey to the tooth of Time and yet survive in the century that succeeded their own, and these shall form the subjects of sketches of such length as the prominence of each may demand.

The county was organized on the 20th of September, 1787, by an act of Assembly of that date, the organic law itself fixing Huntingdon as the seat of justice, and directing the terms of the courts to commence on the second Tuesdays in December, March, June, and September of each year. Lazarus B. McClean was commissioned prothonotary of the Court of the Common Pleas and clerk of the Courts of Quarter Sessions, Oyer and Terminer, and Orphans' Court; and Andrew Henderson was commissioned register of wills and recorder of deeds in and for the county. McClean was from Franklin County, and was commissioned on the 25th of September, 1787; Henderson was from Chester County, and was commissioned on the 29th of the same month. A sheriff was furnished in the person of Benjamin Elliott, a citizen of the county, who was commissioned on the 22d of October, 1787. Robert Galbraith was commissioned president judge of the county courts on the 23d of November. At the same time the Supreme Executive Council commissioned Thomas Duncan Smith, justice-elect for the town of Huntingdon; John Williams, justice-elect for the district of Huntingdon township; Thomas McCune, justice-elect for the district of the township of Tyrone; and William Phillips, justice-elect for the district of the township of Woodberry, all by one commission. They combined the offices of justices of the peace and associate judges, and under the judicial system then existing they held the courts of the county. Thus we had all the machinery for holding courts,—county officers, a president judge and four associates,—and the people no doubt were happy in the contemplation of this important fact, and rejoiced at the prospect before them. All things were now ready, but there was no court-house. One Ludwig Sell, however, had a house,—a public-house,—and the act of Assembly which breathed the new county into being directed that the courts should be held at his house until a court-house could be built. The house of Mr. Sell stood on the north side of Allegheny Street, between Second and Third, on the lot now owned and occupied by Thomas Fisher, and it changed owners several times during the period which the courts were held in it. The first court-house proper, which stood on Third Street, between Penn and Allegheny, was not completed till about the year 1798.

The first court was held in the house of Ludwig Sell, on the second Tuesday in December, 1787, by the president and associate judges above named, nearly a century ago. At the present date but little is known of most of them, except that they were considered good men in their day, the associates being chosen by the voting portion of the people, and commissioned by the Supreme Executive Council for a term of seven years, not, as afterwards under the Constitution of 1790, for life or during good behavior. From the commission of Robert Galbraith it appears that he was a citizen of Huntingdon County at the date of his appointment. But little is known of him at this remote time. He was learned in the law, and was a justice of the peace, like his associates, also a surveyor. Of the latter fact ample evidence is found in old surveys. He held the position of president judge from Nov. 23, 1787, till Aug. 20, 1791, when he was superseded by Thomas Smith, a law judge, as will be seen farther on. He was also commissioned an associate judge afterwards under the Constitution of 1790, and sat with Judge Riddle on the bench as late as November term, 1802. His death occurred a few years later, as he was never on the bench after that date.[1]

THOMAS DUNCAN SMITH, one of the first justices and associate judges of the county, was a son of William Smith, D.D., the founder of the town of Huntingdon. He was a member of the medical profession, reared in Philadelphia, but had become a resident of Huntingdon, in and around which his father owned a large amount of real estate. He died in the twenty-ninth year of his age. He was born Nov. 18, 1760, and died July 9, 1789, aged twenty-eight years, seven months, and twenty-one days. He was buried in the Huntingdon Cemetery, where a huge marble slab marks his grave and that of his brother Richard.

Other justices and associate judges were afterwards commissioned before the tenure of office was changed by the adoption of the Constitution of 1790. In June, 1789, we had Thomas Wilson and John Little, in addition to the four who had been previously commissioned. The courts held by these gentlemen were called justices' courts. The associates sometimes held sessions in the absence of Galbraith, the president. The chief business of these courts was to examine and discharge insolvent debtors, with whom the prison was at times filled. Even the attorneys were not all free from imprisonment for debt, and some of them had to pass through the ordeal, quaintly termed the "flint-mill."

THOMAS SMITH was the first president judge learned in the law who presided in the courts of this county. On the 20th of August, 1791, he was commissioned by Thomas Mifflin, Governor, as president judge of the several courts in the district consisting of the counties of Cumberland, Franklin, Bedford, Huntingdon, and Mifflin. He continued president judge of this district only for the short period of two years and five months. On the 31st of January, 1794, he was promoted by an appointment to a seat on the Supreme Bench, and he continued to be one of the justices of the Supreme Court until the time of his death, which occurred on the 31st day of March, 1809, fifteen years and two months after the date of his appointment as a justice of the Supreme Court. His brethren of the bench at different times were Chief Justices McKean, Shippen, and Tilghman, and Justices Yeates and Brackenridge. The opinions written by him compare well with those by his brethren, and are contained in 2d, 3d, and 4th Yeates' and 1st Binney's Reports.

At that time the State was divided into circuits, in which the judges of the Supreme Court, one or more by turns, held sessions of the Circuit Courts. Thomas Smith and Jasper Yeates held one of these courts at Huntingdon on the 29th of May, 1805. On the 27th of April, 1807, Judge Smith again held a Circuit Court at Huntingdon. He and his brethren of the Supreme Bench held Circuit Courts here annually for a number of years in April, May, and June of different years. From the decisions of these courts writs of error and appeals could be taken to the Supreme Court in Banc, at the hearing of which the judge who had tried the case on the circuit generally gave no opinion, but left the final decision to his brethren. No causes were originally instituted in the Circuit Courts, but were transferred to it from the Courts of Common Pleas and Quarter Sessions by certiorari or habeas corpus, and appeals were also allowed to them from the Orphans' Courts and Registers' Courts. The first Circuit Courts were established in 1799, and continued ten years. They were abolished in 1809, and in this county all the then pending cases were transferred to the Common Pleas to November term, 1809. They are contained in Continuance Docket F, beginning at page 79.

Judge Smith was a half-brother of William Smith, D.D., the founder of the town of Huntingdon, and the only brother he had in America. He was an Englishman by birth and education, dignified in manner, and upheld the honor of courts and the dignity of the legal profession, and would not permit his most intimate friend to cast even a shadow of contempt upon the judicial ermine. This quality in him is fairly illustrated in the following:

Judge Smith had been a surveyor, and had made many of the early surveys in this part of the State prior to his appointment to a judgeship. In making these surveys he had with him among others one Pat Leonard, as chain-carrier or other assistant, and in camping out, eating, drinking, and sleeping together, an intimacy and familiarity grew up between them, especially on Pat's part, which Leonard could not drop when Smith assumed the dignity which is supposed to inhere inseparably in judicial robes. Leonard was not ashamed of his old associate in the field and at the camp-fire, but rather proud of him, and wished every one to know that he had a friend at court. At the time referred to the courts were held at the house designated in the act of Assembly, kept as a tavern by Mrs. Haines, where the court bar was separated from the other bar and the court-room by poles cut and adjusted for the purpose. Leonard obtained a large bowl from the landlady and a pint of whiskey, which he had made into punch, and thus prepared and presuming upon the familiarity acquired as stated, he approached the judge, and proffering the bowl to him, said, "Here, Tam, take a bleer of this before you charge the jury." The judge, however, would not come down from his dignity nor imbibe from the bowl, however dry he may have been, but looked upon Pat's familiarity as a contempt of court, and ordered him to to be imprisoned in the jail of the county; whereupon Leonard was taken to a little pen made of slabs or puncheons, which stood where Miller's tannery now is, and there imprisoned for a few hours. Thus he was put in "durance vile" for no other offense than his kindness and familiarity towards his former friend and companion the judge.

[1] His will is dated Jan. 15, 1804, and was proven on the 3d of February following.

Thomas Smith went the way of all flesh more than seventy-three years ago, surviving the Circuit Court only four days, but, like his contemporary, Chief Justice Tilghman, who survived him sixteen years, he has left a record behind him more enduring than monumental marble. So long as Pennsylvania has a judicial history the name of Thomas Smith will occupy an enviable position upon its early pages.[1]

James Riddle.—Among the first attorneys who practiced in the courts of Huntingdon County was James Riddle, of Bedford. His name appears first upon the records in 1789, the earliest now extant. He was probably admitted at the first court held in the county, in December, 1787. There is no record of his admission. The dockets containing the proceedings of the Court of Common Pleas prior to 1789 have been destroyed. He was the cotemporary of Hamilton, Charles Smith, Cadwallader, Duncan, Watts, Jonathan Henderson, and Richard Smith, etc. He practiced in our courts until April term, 1794, when he succeeded Thomas Smith on the bench. Governor Mifflin appointed and commissioned him president judge of the Fourth Judicial District, in which Huntingdon County was included. He presided until the year 1804, when he was succeeded by Thomas Cooper.

But little is known of the old judges with any degree of certainty. This is especially the case with Judge Riddle and others who were not residents of the county. He was a brother of Samuel Riddle, a member of the Huntingdon bar. Judge Riddle resided in Bedford, and is said to have lived to be an old and feeble man.

His associates on the bench were David Stewart, Hugh Davison, Benjamin Elliott, and afterwards William Steel.

Thomas Cooper.—Governor McKean appointed and commissioned Thomas Cooper president judge of the Fourth Judicial District, of which Huntingdon County formed a part. His commission is not recorded in this county, and its precise date cannot be given. He held his first court in Huntingdon in November, 1804, and his last in January, 1806, holding but five terms here. In 1806 the State was redistricted into ten districts. Huntingdon County continued in the Fourth District, and Judge Cooper became the president judge of the Eighth District.

Jonathan Walker.—This gentleman made his first appearance in the courts of Huntingdon County at April term, 1792, when he was admitted to practice. He was a resident of Northumberland County at the time of his appointment, but afterwards removed to Bedford. After the redistricting of the State in 1806, which increased the number of the judicial districts from five to ten, he was appointed president judge of the Fourth District, composed of the counties of Mifflin, Centre, Huntingdon, and Bedford. His commission is dated the 1st of March, 1806, issued by Governor McKean. He took the oath of office before Judge Cooper, of the Eighth District, on the 18th of March, 1806. He continued to preside here for a period of twelve years, from April, 1806, till August, 1818, when he was succeeded by Judge Huston.

Judge Walker is said to have been a learned and upright judge and a true patriot. He was the first judge in this district who doffed the wig and robe of the bench and dressed in plain citizen's clothes. Until the time when Judge Walker took a seat on the bench the powdered wig and robe were conspicuous paraphernalia of the judicial office.[2]

At one of Judge Walker's courts an intoxicated old soldier, who had made some disturbance in court, was brought up before him, and ordered to jail. On being led out by the officer, he turned round to the judge and said, "Yer honor, Anthony Wayne would not have said that." The judge not hearing anything but the name of Wayne, inquired what he said, and was told by one of the attorneys that he was one of Gen. Wayne's men, whereupon the judge at once changed his order, and the disorderly man was merely taken out and released.

[1] Thomas Smith died March 31, 1809, aged sixty-four years. His remains rest in the cemetery belonging to Christs Church Philadelphia. His only son, George Washington Smith, died April 22, 1876, and was buried near his father's grave.

[2] The writer was informed some years ago by an old citizen that it was the usual custom in the early days in this county for the sheriff, constables, and tipstaves—the latter with their insignia of office—to escort the judges from their lodgings to the place where the court was held at the appointed hour, and back after the adjournment. This official ceremony was repeated daily until the close of the term. Before a bell was obtained, the courts were called by the drum and fife.

The small salaries paid to the judges in those days did not place them above the annoying embarrassments common to other classes of the community. It appears that Judge Walker was not free from pecuniary embarrassments. The year after his appointment two judgments for considerable amounts were entered up against him, which do not appear to have been satisfied, and it is said that some of his paper, well seasoned by age, could be purchased at a discount similar to that which rules Continental scrip and Confederate currency.

Jonathan Walker was the father of Robert J. Walker, a politician and statesman of prominence, who was Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and afterwards Governor of the Territory of Kansas, appointed by President Buchanan.

This is a brief record of four of the president judges of the county courts, covering a period of twenty-seven years, down to the commencement of the time of Charles Huston, 1818, a time within the memory of men now living. Next will be given sketches of a few of the associate judges, down to about the same period of time.

ANDREW HENDERSON.—One of the imperishable names in the history of Huntingdon County is that of the above-named gentleman, one of its early associate judges. He was appointed on the 29th of September, 1787, for a term of seven years. His commission as associate judge is recorded on the first and second pages of the first book opened in the recorder's office, Docket A, No. 1.

Mr. Henderson appears to have been one of those fortunate men who had office upon office and office after office thrust upon him. At the same time that he was appointed an associate judge, he was also appointed recorder of deeds in and for the county and register of wills, and on the same day he received a commission Dedimus Potestatem, and on the 15th of January, 1788, he received a commission as justice-elect for the town of Huntingdon. On the 13th of December, 1788, he was appointed prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas. He was a member of the convention which framed the Constitution of 1790. After the adoption of that Constitution, while these commissions were all in force, Governor Mifflin, on the 11th of July, 1791, reappointed him prothonotary, clerk of the Quarter Sessions, Oyer and Terminer, and of the Orphans' Court, and on the 13th of January, 1800, Governor McKean reappointed and commissioned him to all these offices, and he continued to hold them until the 28th of February, 1809, when he was succeeded by William Steel in the offices of register and recorder, prothonotary and clerk of the several courts, the appointing power having changed from Governor McKean to Governor Snyder.

Mr. Henderson was on the bench as late as September term, 1790, but not later. His character as associate judge is not so conspicuous as that of a pioneer in the town and county of Huntingdon. He moulded the offices and shaped the practices in them. The offices of register and recorder he held for twenty-two consecutive years, first under the Supreme Executive Council, and afterwards under Governor Mifflin's and Governor McKean's administrations under the Constitution of 1790, and the offices of prothonotary and clerk of the several courts he held for the term of eighteen years.

Mr. Henderson was popular, not only with the appointing powers of the State, but also with the people among whom he lived and associated. He was five times elected chief burgess of the borough of Huntingdon in five successive years, from 1803 to 1807, both inclusive, and again in 1809 and in 1810, thus being the chief ruler of Huntingdon for seven years. Some of the laws of the borough signed by him are still upon the ordinance-book.

He erected the large brick house on the southeast corner of Allegheny and Third Streets, in Huntingdon, long known as the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, prior to its removal a square farther westward. He occupied that large and commodious house with his family down to the time of his death.

Nothing definite is known of the history of Mr. Henderson prior to his advent into Huntingdon. As stated elsewhere, he came from Chester County. It is probable that he had some experience in the offices connected with the courts previous to his appointment in this county, which was probably the reason why he was selected for the various offices which he filled.

In the southeast corner of the cemetery on the hill in Huntingdon is an inclosure surrounded by a massive brick wall, in which rest side by side the mortal remains of Andrew Henderson, who died on the 26th day of June, 1812, in the fifty-first year of his age, and of Mary Henderson, his wife, who died on the 21st of March, 1823, in the fifty-fourth year of her age; and also of John A. Henderson, their only son, who died on the 15th of September, 1824, in the thirty-second year of his age.

Mr. Henderson, like many of the first settlers of Huntingdon, was an Episcopalian.[1]

BENJAMIN ELLIOTT was appointed and commissioned an associate judge of the several courts of the county by the Supreme Executive Council in 1789, of which Council he was at that time a member. He had been sheriff of Bedford County prior to the formation of Huntingdon County, and also the first sheriff of Huntingdon County. He had been a member of the convention that framed the State Constitution of 1776, and a member of the State Convention to ratify the Constitution of the United States. He served as a member of the Supreme Executive Council in 1789 and 1790, until the 20th of December of the latter year, when Thomas Mifflin became Governor and the Council expired. He was lieutenant of the county during the troubles of its early years, and in the old records he is called Col. Elliott.

[1] See notice of Mr. Henderson in the chapter relating to military affairs and in other places in this volume.

As an associate judge, he occupied a seat on the bench with the first three president judges of the county, and with Associate Judges David Stewart and Hugh Davison, and perhaps with others. He was also the first chief burgess of the borough of Huntingdon. In 1796, when the town was incorporated into a borough, he was elected to that office and served in it for three years. In the year 1800 he was elected county commissioner and served in that office a term of three years. Thus Associate Judge Elliott performed an important part in the management of the affairs of the county in its early days. Mr. Elliott was a man of considerable wealth and influence. He was one of the "borough fathers," as the burgesses and Council are called, in a double sense. He had a large family of daughters, who were married to some of the most prominent men of the town in those days, among whom were Robert Allison, David McMurtrie, Sr., William Orbison, and Jacob Miller, all of whom have passed to that "bourne from whence no traveler returns;" but the town contains many of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren, who are proud of their ancestry. Mr. Elliott and his family were members of the Episcopal Church, but some, if not all, of his daughters afterwards became members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Elliott was a man of character and influence and lived to a ripe old age. He died on the 13th of March, 1835, aged eighty-three years. His remains rest in the Huntingdon cemetery.

DAVID STEWART was appointed and commissioned associate judge by Governor Mifflin on the 20th of August, 1791, and served in that capacity till the time of his death, which occurred between the January and the April term in 1826. At the August term of that year he was succeeded by Joseph Adams. Thus it will be seen that Judge David Stewart was on the bench for thirty-five consecutive years, the longest term of service in the county. He was on the bench with Robert Galbraith, first president judge of the county, and with Thomas Smith, Thomas Cooper, James Riddle, Jonathan Walker, and Charles Huston, president judges, through the whole of their respective terms. The associate judges on the bench with him at different times were John Canan (appointed at the same time with Stewart), Hugh Davidson, Robert Galbraith, Benjamin Elliott, William Steel, and Joseph McCune, in the order in which they are here named.

Judge Stewart was a plain, energetic, and practical man. He had been a member of the first board of county commissioners, elected with John Dean and James Sommerville, and he was the head of the board and left his impress upon the office. The first records of that office were kept by him, and they show him to have been an excellent penman, and to have kept a full and satisfactory record or minute of the proceedings of the commissioners.

He was a resident of that portion of Morris township which is now in Blair County and called Catharine township.

In the absence of the president judge, this associate held Courts of Quarter Sessions with other associates on the bench, tried cases and charged juries with intelligence and plain common sense, which is synonymous with common law.

He was the father of John Stewart, who was also a county commissioner about half a century ago, and who was distinguished from other men of the same name as lame John Stewart; and he was also the father of Robert G. Stewart, of Water Street, and of Dr. James Stewart, of Indiana, Pa., all prominent and influential men who died many years ago.

We had two other associate judges of the name of Stewart, Capt. John and Thomas F., of whom we may say a word farther on.

JOHN CANAN was appointed an associate judge in 1791. He had been a prominent man in Bedford County prior to the erection of Huntingdon County, and was a member of the General Assembly at that time. He had also been a member of the Supreme Executive Council from Huntingdon County in 1787 and 1788. In 1791 and 1792 he was elected to the Assembly from Huntingdon County, and in 1794 he was chosen State senator for the district composed of the counties of Huntingdon and Bedford. Among the old archives he also figures as Col. John Canan.

WILLIAM STEEL.—This gentleman was another of the prominent and fortunate men of the county. He was appointed an associate judge on the 2d of April, 1804, by Governor McKean. Of course he was not "learned in the law,"—few of the associate judges are, and Huntingdon County has never had any who were law judges. He was an Irish gentleman of the Covenanter faith. A great portion of his time he kept a public-house and a store, and withal did a considerable amount of surveying, and by reason of these various occupations and his social disposition he became extensively acquainted with the people of the county. His political aspirations did not begin or end with his appointment to a seat on the bench. In 1796 he was elected a county commissioner by three hundred and thirty-six votes, there being only four election districts in the county at that time. In 1800 he was a candidate for the lower branch of the Legislature, and made a respectable poll, but was defeated by James Kerr. In 1802 he was a candidate for the same office and elected, with John Blair, over Arthur Moore and Richard Smith, Mr. Steel having the highest vote of the four candidates. In 1824 he was a candidate for sheriff, and received eleven hundred and fifty-seven votes against eleven hundred and ninety-four cast for William Spear. In 1828 he was again a candidate, this time for State senator, and carried the county by a handsome majority, but Thomas Jackson was elected in the district. Mr. Steel's popularity was continually increasing.

In 1809 (Feb. 28th) he was appointed prothonotary, register and recorder, and clerk of the courts by Governor Snyder, and continued to hold these offices until 1821, when he was succeeded by Richard Smith, a member of the bar.

Judge Steel also had a high military title, that of general, he having been chosen major-general of the militia. Certain it is, however, that while on the bench as an associate judge, and afterwards while acting as prothonotary, he often used a military term of definite meaning. When witnesses had been subpœnaed and did not attend court, he would say, with considerable emphasis, "Send a detachment for them," or "bring them in by a detachment." This was often related by his son, the late Maj. James Steel, as a joke upon his father, and the major would laugh heartily over it.

The writer became personally acquainted with Gen. Steel in 1836, but had no acquaintance with any of the associate judges who preceded him. He was then familiarly known by the name of Gen. Steel. The name of judge, if ever known by it, was entirely superseded and merged in his military title. As associate judge he was succeeded by Joseph McCune.

Mr. Steel was a man of medium height, heavy and erect frame, communicated freely and intelligently, was kind and courteous to all, and to young men in particular, and, like his immediate predecessor, Judge Elliott, he lived to an advanced age. He left surviving him two brothers, namely, Samuel Steel, who had been county treasurer several times and was well known in the county, and Alexander Steel, of West township, a farmer, and two sons, James, who became a prominent member of the bar, a sketch of whom will be given in turn, and William, and six or seven daughters, all of whom are now deceased. Gen. Steel lived in the house now owned and occupied by C. C. North, on the north side of Penn Street, between Third and Fourth Streets, and died at his residence on the 12th of May, 1840, in the eighty-sixth year of his age.

Down to this point in the history of the bench and bar sketches of the president judges and their associates have been given. It now becomes necessary to give an account of the members of the bar down to about the same period of time.

Keeping in view the fact that the counties of Bedford, Franklin, and Huntingdon having then been recently made out of parts of Cumberland, and Cumberland itself out of part of Lancaster, it is readily understood why it was that the first practicing lawyers in Huntingdon were Charles Smith, of Lancaster, James Hamilton, Thomas Duncan, and David Watts, of Carlisle, and James Riddle, of Chambersburg, and others from still more remote counties. These attorneys of the older counties followed up the courts in the new county, and for a while monopolized its legal business. Besides these, William Bradford, Jr., Jared Ingersoll, and others, of Philadelphia, often appeared in official capacities, as United States district attorney and deputy attorney-general of the State, to prosecute cases that fell within their respective provinces as prosecuting officers. Isaac B. Parker, of Carlisle, was sworn in our court as deputy attorney-general as late as April term, 1806, and these deputies performed the same duties that now devolve upon the district attorney.

The first court was held in December, 1787, but the records, the dockets, and minute-books of the Court of Common Pleas between that date and March term, 1789, are missing, and there is a tradition that they were destroyed by Gen. William McAlevy, who ordered them to be burned, for what cause is now not known. But for this unfortunate event we could lay before our readers the names of the attorneys who attended and were sworn and admitted members of the bar at the first opening of the courts of the county. Thirty-six years ago the first court in Blair County was held at Hollidaysburg, and the attorneys from Huntingdon and Bedford flocked there, with smaller crowds from Cambria and other counties, "like doves to their windows," and were sworn in as attorneys of that court under Judge Black, of the Somerset and Bedford District, afterwards chief justice of the State. The opening of the courts in Huntingdon at the organization of the county, fifty-nine years earlier, no doubt presented a similar scene on a smaller scale, but the record of this is gone.

Messrs. Wharton, Bradford, and Ingersoll were Philadelphians, and came to our courts on official business of the State or of the United States. Riddle and Orbison were residents of Chambersburg, the latter an uncle of William Orbison, of Huntingdon. Riddle became president judge in 1794. Hamilton, Duncan, and Watts came from Carlisle, and Smith from Lancaster.

John Cadwallader was the first lawyer resident in Huntingdon. He was admitted at December term, 1789, on motion of James Hamilton, and seems to have had a good practice from the first down to 1807, the time of his death.

He was a man of business outside of his profession as well as in it. He was elected one of the county commissioners in 1790, and served for three years. He was again elected in 1799, and served a term of three years more. In the interim between 1790 and 1799 he served part of the time as clerk to the board of commissioners, and part of the time as auditor, appointed by the court with two other gentlemen, to settle the accounts of the commissioners and treasurer. He was also the first postmaster in Huntingdon. The precise time of his appointment or the length of time that he served as postmaster cannot be ascertained at this late date, as no official record of it remains, the records of the department at Washington being consumed with the general post-office building in the fire of December, 1836. The most definite information that can now be obtained is that the post-office at Huntingdon, Pa., began to render quarterly returns on the 1st of January, 1798, and that John Cadwallader was the postmaster. He was a skillful penman, an excellent clerk, and appears to have been an active, energetic, and useful man.

Of his earlier history nothing is known to the writer. By industry and attention to business he acquired a large landed estate, much of which he disposed of in his lifetime, and his executors conveyed a portion of the residue after his death, in fulfillment of contracts made by him before his death. He owned the lots upon which the court-house was erected completed in 1842, and upon which the new one is now in process of erection, and down to a short time prior to 1842 his widow and his daughter occupied the old homestead, which was removed to give place to the court-house. By some means the family had become poor, and the title to the lots was vested in the commonwealth.

Some interesting facts in the early history of the county might be given in connection with Mr. Cadwallader's administration of its affairs, but two or three must suffice. In the year 1800 the taxables of the county numbered 2559; the slaves, 22; the expenses of the county for that year were estimated at $3600, including $800 to be paid on account of the public buildings (the court-house and jail); and down to the year 1795, or later, the commissioners' office was kept in a room rented from Peter Swoope for the sum of five pounds per annum. When serving as commissioner, Mr. Cadwallader made a trip to Philadelphia, and had the tax-list published for twenty-six weeks in a Philadelphia newspaper, for which the county paid sixty pounds and fifteen shillings to one Francis Bailey. The unseated land list occupied six columns of a daily newspaper. Such were the times in which Mr. Cadwallader lived.

RICHARD SMITH was a son of William Smith, D.D., the founder of the town of Huntingdon. He was born on the 25th of January, 1769, and made his first appearance in the courts of the county in 1791, having been admitted as a member of the bar at the December term of that year. His residence was at the "Cypress Cottage," then in the outskirts of the town. The island and farm connected with the cottage were the property of Mr. Smith. West Huntingdon has since been built on the farm. He was a ripe scholar, had influential connections, was personally popular, and soon occupied a prominent position at the bar. He is described by those who knew him as a large, portly man, fine-looking, and possessing the most attractive social qualities and all the elegance of a gentleman of the old school. He married Letitia Nixon Coakley, a lady of Lancaster, who was highly esteemed by all who knew her.

Mr. Smith was noted for his hospitality, and many of the villagers flocked to the cottage to enjoy the shady walks beside the river for recreation. It was a pleasant resort, where the "latch-string was never pulled in," and few would come away without partaking of the hospitality of his board. Such a man would have many friends.

But there is another side to this picture. While Mr. Smith was borne up by the wave of popularity, his property was gradually swept away from him by his creditors. He was elected to the Legislature, but while on his way to take his seat the sheriff served a summons on him to answer a plea of debt, and he was under the necessity of pleading his privilege, and the service was set aside. He became more and more embarrassed, and judgments were obtained against him, and court after court his real estate was under the sheriff's hammer; at one time lands amounting to eight thousand dollars, at another time eight tracts of valuable lands were sold at an enormous sacrifice. The majestic intended mansion, now the Exchange Hotel, erected by him, the rival of the house erected opposite to it by Andrew Henderson, was sold in an unfinished state, and purchased by the order of Freemasons for about ten per cent. of its original cost. His library, too, had been levied upon and sold.

Mr. Smith's mind was now pursued by a phantom,—is there a man who is not at some period haunted by some phantom or other? Mr. Smith's was the dread of poverty, perhaps the commonest spectre that haunts the human mind. Perhaps poverty was a reality staring him in the face. How few men who have had palmy days can bear up under adversity! He perceived that his property had imperceptibly wasted away, and to increase his terrors there was a lawsuit against him that had been pending many years, now to be tried at a special court. The claimant was a relative of Mr. Smith by marriage. He dreaded the final issue, though convinced that justice was on his side. At length the dreaded day arrived. The cause was called, the jury impaneled, and the trial proceeded. His adversary taunted him and charged him with dishonesty. Mr. Smith rose to repel the insult, while every limb shook, and charged his adversary with falsehood. All was confusion. The judges interfered to preserve order. The excited defendant heard them not. He was commanded to sit down, but he still persisted to vindicate his character. A second and a third time he was called upon to sit down and be silent, which awakened him to a sense of his position. He slowly sank into his seat, and, as if abashed, his head hung over his bosom, and gradually descended till it rested on the desk before him. Order was again restored, and the court proceeded to business. A few moments after, John Williamson, who was sitting near Mr. Smith, approached him, and on raising him he was found to be dead.

The consternation and dismay caused by this death may be imagined, but cannot be described.

Thus died Richard Smith, one of the most prominent of the early members of the Huntingdon bar, a gentleman of learning and ability, of wealth and friends, whose sources of enjoyment were almost boundless, his home a little paradise.

The verdict in the case on trial at the time of the death of Mr. Smith was in his favor. The case was tried September 26th till Oct. 1, 1823; verdict for the defendant. Motion for a new trial overruled Oct. 3, 1823.

Richard Smith was elected to the lower house of the Legislature in 1803. In February, 1821, after he met with his financial embarrassment, he was appointed to the offices of register and recorder by Governor Heister, and served until the time of his death, which occurred on the 1st of October, 1823. His age was fifty-four years, eight months, and six days. He never had any children. He was the brother of Thomas Duncan Smith, M.D., one of the first associate judges, who was about eight years older than Richard, and died in July, 1789. One massive marble slab covers the graves of these two brothers, with this inscription upon it,—

"In life united in brotherly love,
In death they are not divided."

Robert Allison was one of the members of the bar of this county connecting the past with the present century in his career. He was a native of Franklin County, read law with Richard Smith, and was admitted a member of the Huntingdon bar, on motion of Mr. Smith, at April term, 1798. He took up his residence at Huntingdon, became prominent at the bar, and had a large and profitable practice for some thirty years or more.

As a gentleman and lawyer, Mr. Allison justly ranked high. He was a man of considerable wealth and influence, connected by marriage with several of the most influential families in the county. He was a man of good understanding, but he was not eloquent. Neither he nor his cotemporary members of the bar resident in Huntingdon at that period excelled in oratory. In almost all important cases lawyers from abroad were associated in the trial of them with the resident attorneys, and generally the arguments to the juries were made by the attorneys from abroad. Among these were Jonathan Walker and Charles Huston, who were afterwards judges, and Hamilton, Duncan, and Watts, of Carlisle, Elias W. Hale, of Lewistown, and, later, Alexander, of Carlisle, and Potter and Blanchard, of Bellefonte.

Mr. Allison was several times a candidate for Congress, and carried Huntingdon County against John Mitchell and John Brown, and in 1830 he was elected over John Scott. The district was composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Mifflin, Centre, and Clearfield. The vote stood: For Allison, 4776; and for Scott, 3898. John Scott was the father of John Scott, United States senator from March 4, 1869, to March 4, 1875.

While Mr. Allison was filling a high office, assisting in making laws for the nation, he did not despise small things, but was also assisting in making laws for the borough of Huntingdon, and enforcing them in the capacity of chief burgess. He was first elected burgess in 1815, and again in 1817, 1819, and from 1821 to 1824, both inclusive, and again in 1826 and in 1830, thus serving for nine years, the longest period ever served by any man in that office, two years in excess of the service of his brother-in-law, Andrew Henderson.

Mr. Allison was a man of medium size, well proportioned, fair complexion, and fine presence. He married a daughter of Judge Elliott, of Huntingdon, and reared a large family of daughters. In his later years he was afflicted with apoplexy, which affected his speech to such an extent as to render it difficult to understand him. He died on the 2d of December, 1840, aged sixty-five years and eight months. His residence at the time of his death was at No. 523 Penn Street, which at the time of its erection was considered the best in the place.

William Orbison was the son of Thomas Orbison, who resided on a farm owned by him in York (now Adams) County, on the Maryland line, a part of his land extending into that State, and was during the Revolutionary war a captain of militia, and served until the end of the war. His grandfather was also named Thomas. He had emigrated from Ireland about the year 1740, and purchased land in Franklin County (then Lancaster), on which he resided till the time of his death. William Orbison was born in Adams County, Pa., on the 20th of June, 1777, and resided with his family and was engaged in farming until August, 1794, when he commenced to learn "the languages," as it was then called, with Rev. Alexander Dobbins, near Gettysburg; continued at school until January, 1797, having in that time read all the authors usually read at such institutions. The greater portion of 1797 and 1798 he spent in Virginia, teaching "the languages" to children in private families. After successively keeping a small store for Rev. John Breckenridge in Washington City and teaching school in Hanover, he became dissatisfied, and at the solicitation of his uncle, James Orbison, of Chambersburg, he commenced reading law with him in April, 1799; read till Aug. 6, 1801, when he was examined and admitted to the bar on the usual certificates of competency, etc. On the 25th of the same month he arrived at Huntingdon, and on the next day was admitted an attorney in the courts of Huntingdon County. After visiting friends in Chambersburg and in Adams County, he returned on the 19th of October, and from thenceforth he was a citizen of Huntingdon until the time of his death. On the 6th of October, 1808, he married Eleanor, daughter of Benjamin Elliott. Mr. Elliott was one of the associate judges of Huntingdon County.

Mr. Orbison was a good lawyer, entirely safe and trustworthy, and transacted a large share of business without much display in court. Down to the time when his son William P. was admitted to the bar, in November, 1835, the old gentleman kept his place on the list of attorneys, doing his own legal business and that of a few friends, but after that date his son took his place, and has filled it for many years. He was the president of the old Huntingdon Bank.

Mr. Orbison was a fine-looking man, about five feet six inches in stature, of elastic gait, fair and florid complexion, lively, agreeable, and instructive in conversation, an able and piquant writer, and a gentleman of the "old school," the last of our citizens to doff the cue fashionable in olden times. He never aspired to any political position, never was a candidate for the honors or emoluments of office, but he was nevertheless well informed as to all that was involved in party struggles, and took an active part in them, often furnishing the resolutions for political meetings of the Old-Line Whig party, and many a terse and pointed article for the press, both in prose and verse, emanated from his pen.

In 1815, Mr. Orbison commenced the building of the house on the northwest corner of Penn and Third Streets where his son William P. now resides, and in the fall of 1816 he moved into it, and continued to reside there till the day of his death.

In the more advanced years of his life Mr. Orbison was a very exemplary Christian, a member of the Presbyterian Church, and a liberal contributor to the cause of religion. He died on the 23d of August, 1857, at the mature age of eighty years, two months, and three days. His widow died in February, 1865. Of course the loss of such a couple was much lamented.

WILLIAM R. SMITH.—Prominent among the members of the Huntingdon bar admitted in the first decade of the present century and resident in the county was William Rudolph Smith. He was the son of William Moore Smith, and grandson of William Smith, D.D. He studied law with James Milnor, of Philadelphia, who afterwards went to New York, and there became a well-known Episcopal clergyman. He was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon at November term, 1808. He was of a wealthy and influential family, possessed great natural ability, was highly educated, fluent of speech, and in every way well qualified for the transaction of business, and was not long in acquiring a large and lucrative practice. He was, however, but a few years at the bar till he turned his attention to politics, to the evident prejudice of his practice. In 1812, but four years after his admission, he became a candidate for the State Senate. In 1822 he was again a candidate for that office, and was elected in the room of Michael Wallace, resigned. In 1825, Mr. Smith was elected to the House of Representatives over Peter Cassidy at a special election, and at a general election the same year he was again a candidate, with John Ashman, but they were defeated by Matthew Wilson and Joseph Adams. At the special election he was elected by a majority of two votes only, the vote standing: For Smith, six hundred and thirty-three; and for Cassidy, six hundred and thirty-one. A friend of Cassidy, meeting Smith a day or two after the result was known, reproachfully cast it up to him that he had been elected by only two majority. Smith, with the most dignified wave of the hand, and in the blandest manner, replied, "My friend, one is as good as a thousand!" Mr. Smith ranked high as a legislator in both branches of the Legislature.

Although popular at home and abroad as a man and as a politician, he, like other prominent men, had his troubles and his quarrels, as such men have in the present age. In 1826 he found it necessary to institute actions of libel against two printers and editors, but, like many other suits for libel, these were never tried, but permitted to slumber and to sleep that sleep which knows no waking, the mere institution of the suits probably having had the desired effect of silencing the batteries of these disciples of Faust. In the fall of the same year he also prosecuted Charles Raymond for libel, which resulted in a conviction and a small fine and costs. This grew out of articles written by Raymond, and printed in a newspaper called the Republican Advocate, against Mr. Smith while a candidate for Assembly, by reason of which publication he was defeated. He was also a brigadier-general of the militia.

Gen. Smith married Miss Eliza Anthony, a very excellent lady. He resided in the stone house on the northeast corner of Third and Allegheny Streets, which has undergone many changes since, and has been for a long time known as the "Morrison House," in which the county offices are now temporarily located, awaiting the completion of the new court-house. Some years after the death of his first wife, Gen. Smith married Mary Van Dyke, a niece of Mrs. Richard Smith. After he left Huntingdon he lived in Bedford for a number of years. A gentleman who knew him during his long residence in Bedford speaks of him as a dignified, high-toned, and talented old gentleman, but somewhat eccentric. From Bedford he moved to Mineral Point, Wis., where he performed much literary labor, and among other works wrote a history of Wisconsin in four volumes. The whole of this family of Smiths naturally inclined to literary pursuits. Richard Penn Smith, a brother of William R., became a popular dramatist and writer of fiction.

Gen. Smith is said to have been a man of remarkably fine form and features. An old citizen says he was the handsomest man he ever saw, and another pronounced him the most accomplished man that ever lived in Huntingdon. He was cashier of the old Huntingdon Bank.

Subsequently he became involved in debt, and his property passed under the sheriff's hammer, after which he received an appointment as a government official, which took him to Wisconsin, as above stated, where he died in August, 1868.

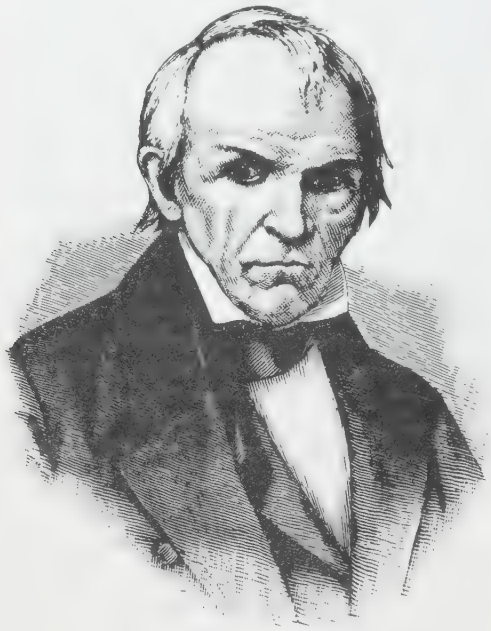
THOMAS MONTGOMERY was enrolled an attorney of the courts of Huntingdon County at November term, 1811. He came from Lancaster, and had probably been admitted there shortly before that date. He occupied a place at the bar of this county for thirty-seven years, yet he never seemed to enter into the practice with his whole heart and soul, as many a young man has been known to do. His name appears to about as many suits as that of any other member of the bar, and yet he never appeared to have had confidence or courage sufficient to try a case without assistance from some of his brethren of the bar, and as he grew older his lack of confidence seemed to grow upon him. A lady from Lancaster, of much intelligence, who knew him in his youth, often spoke of him in the kindest terms. She represented him as a young gentleman who had no taste or inclination for the study or the practice of the law, but his friends and relatives persuaded or forced him into it; that they were proud and influential people, and believed that the road to honor and wealth and distinction led right through the legal profession. This would no doubt account for much in his history that might otherwise be a mystery, and it shows at the same time the error of forcing young men into avocations which are not congenial to their natures.

As a lawyer, Mr. Montgomery never attained much eminence. If he ever had any ambition it led in a different direction. For such a man the bar had no attractions, and his whole nature would have to undergo a change before he could prove a success. He was a most amiable and inoffensive man, and the charcter of his mind could be read in his finely-chiseled countenance by any one who had the faintest conception of physiognomy. In person he was tall and well proportioned, approximating six feet in height, and perfectly erect to the last. In politeness he was unexcelled by Chesterfield himself, and the young man who was studying that master could well afford to lay him aside and learn from the living example. His complexion was pallid to a degree approaching whiteness, and his hair was abundant and of a bright silvery hue, but seemed in harmony with the entire composition of the man; and although he would have changed his hair to any color rather than have it white in his early years, he seemed proud of it in his advanced years, and would habitually run his fingers through it and over it with apparent satisfaction.

He was a bachelor, and lived not by himself, but at some tavern during term time, and often spent his vacations with the farmers on the "Branch," and particularly with the Norrises, whom he esteemed very highly. His favorite beverage was buttermilk, and some of the farmers' wives and daughters whom he visited nicknamed him "Buttermilk Tommy." He could call for this luxury with so much politeness and drink it with such a relish that it was a pleasure to wait upon him, to say nothing of the flattery which he bestowed upon the gift and the giver. Many of the lawyers now do not indulge in this wholesome drink. And then he was so clever and polite at the table that his host, the landlord, could hardly dispense with his services. No man understood the anatomy of a fowl better than he did, and he took delight in carving for all the guests, and a better carver than the "counsellor" never put a knife to a joint or slipped a choice tidbit to his own plate in a more apparently accidental manner. Yet he did it chiefly for the love of the art of carving. He was, to use a word he frequently used, "abstemious," and a man of moderate appetite.



He never was a candidate for any office, and never meddled in politics any further than to vote for his friends, irrespective of party, and to do all he could for his favorites without traducing opposing candidates.

He had many good traits. He had a good heart and a contented mind, and he had none of that selfishness which is so common in bachelors in advanced life. He died at the house of his old friend, Jacob Miller, after a short illness, on Christmas-day, 1848. He left no heirs to dispute about his estate, and no estate to dispute about. Soon after his death a far-out relative inquired "what estate the late Mr. Montgomery had left," and looked disappointed when he was told that the late Mr. Montgomery died his own administrator. The members of the bar, at the instance and suggestion of Messrs. Cremer and Petrikin, put up tombstones to mark his grave, near the southwestern corner of the cemetery. He was born in 1785, and died Dec. 25, 1848, aged sixty-three years.

Mention will now be made of President Judges Huston, Burnside, and Woodward, followed by the members of the bar who flourished while these judges occupied seats on the bench.

CHARLES HUSTON was admitted to practice in the several courts of Huntingdon County in August, 1796, on motion of Jonathan Walker. He had been admitted one year before in Lycoming County, which was then a new county, formed out of part of old Northumberland. Mr. Huston had a large practice as a land lawyer here and in his own and other counties until 1818, when he was appointed to the president judgeship of this district by Governor Findlay. He succeeded Jonathan Walker. The district was the same in which he had practiced, composed of the counties of Bedford, Huntingdon, Mifflin, Northumberland, and Lycoming, and by that time it had become populous, and the lists of causes in each county were large, and he held adjourned courts frequently. He maintained the dignity of the court, and made examples of several disorderly persons in this county. Among others were the following: In 1820 a man was sent to jail for three hours for saying to a prisoner on trial for murder, in the hearing of other persons, "You have a gallows-look." In 1821 a juror impaneled, becoming intoxicated and incapable of serving, was sentenced to pay a fine of five dollars. Two years afterwards a man not a juror was fined sixty-six cents and imprisoned in the jail until the next morning at eight o'clock for disorderly conduct. Judge Huston's associates on the bench were David Stewart and Joseph McCune.

Charles Huston

In 1826 he was placed on the bench of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, appointed by Governor Shulze. His tenure of office was for life, or during good behavior; but the amended Constitution of 1838 changed this, and his commission expired in 1845.

After his commission expired, at the age of seventy-five years, when old age had blunted his mind and enfeebled his body, he wrote his book entitled "Huston on Land Titles in Pennsylvania," which was published in 1849. The book is the most complete history of land titles in Pennsylvania that has been published, but its publication was delayed too long, and the work did not come up to the expectations of the author's friends or of the legal profession.

Judge Huston resided in Bellefonte during his judgeship, and afterwards till the time of his death. In person he was tall and athletic, and possessed more than ordinary power, regular features, and keen dark eyes. He had a remarkable memory, and could in most cases repeat the testimony, word for word, as it was detailed by the witnesses, without notes. He was somewhat eccentric in manner, and blunt and emphatic in expression. Many anecdotes could be told of him, but space will not permit. His character as a jurist is well known to Pennsylvania lawyers, especially to those of advanced age, and it is unnecessary to dwell further upon it. In early life he determined to master the law, and how well he succeeded is fully attested by the record of his riper years.

THOMAS BURNSIDE was a resident of Bellefonte, where he had settled down in his early manhood, having come from one of the eastern counties of the State. He was of Irish descent, but of his parentage and boyhood little is known. He was admitted as an attorney at Huntingdon at April term, 1804, and continued to attend the courts of the county and had a considerable practice until August term, 1826, when he was appointed president judge of the Fourth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Centre, Clearfield, Mifflin, and Huntingdon, and afterwards, when Clinton County was erected, it was added to the district. He was appointed by Governor Shulze to succeed Judge Huston, who had been appointed to the Supreme Court in the preceding April.

Prior to his appointment as judge he had been an active politician in the Democratic party. In 1815 he was elected to Congress at a special election in the district composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Centre, Mifflin, Clearfield, and McKean. In 1824 he was elected to the State Senate from the Thirteenth District, composed of Lycoming, Centre, Clearfield, McKean, and Potter. He was chosen Speaker of the Senate, and filled the chair until the commencement of the session of 1826.

T. Burnside

Judge Burnside succeeded Judge Huston on the bench of the Common Pleas and also on the bench of the Supreme Court, and stepped into his shoes in 1826 and again in 1845, being his immediate successor in both instances. In 1841 he resigned his judgeship here, and Governor Porter appointed him to another in Montgomery County, and George W. Woodward was appointed his successor in this district. On the 2d of January, 1845, Judge Burnside was appointed a judge of the Supreme Court, and he served in that capacity until the time of his death in March, 1851. He was succeeded in that court by Judge George W. Woodward.

As a Common Pleas judge, he was regarded as able, upright, and impartial, and he administered equal and exact justice between man and man, and as a criminal judge he was a terror to evil-doers. But he had no printed rules regulating the practice in his courts. He had a few rules which he carried in his head or in a private book, and a few rules or standing orders were scattered through the dockets, and but few of the attorneys knew anything of them. The business in this county accumulated to such a degree that suits could rarely be reached and tried inside of two years from the time of their institution. His opinions in the Supreme Court were generally brief and pointed.

In manner he was rude and blunt. His personal appearance, too, was against him, and he did not seem to care about improving it by dress or toilet.

He died on the 25th of March, 1851, much lamented by his numerous friends and by the legal profession in general.

GEORGE W. WOODWARD once adorned the judicial bench of Huntingdon County. He succeeded Thomas Burnside in April, 1841, as president judge of the Fourth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Mifflin, Centre, Clearfield, and Clinton. He was regarded as one of the best judges appointed by Governor Porter. The Fourth Judicial District was at that time the largest and most burdensome one in the State, and the pending cases had accumulated to such an extent that the delay occasioned thereby amounted almost to a denial of justice.

At the time of his appointment Judge Woodward was a practicing attorney at Wilkesbarre, Luzerne Co. He had been a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1837–38, and although he was one of the youngest members of that body, he soon gained the honorable distinction of a leader of his party in that connection, and attracted considerable attention throughout the State by the clearness and ability which characterized his speeches.

In 1845 he was nominated for United States senator, and was defeated by Simon Cameron. In December of the same year President Polk appointed him judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, but the Senate rejected him.

While his nomination was pending before the Senate a meeting of the Huntingdon bar was convened, without distinction of party, and resolutions were adopted urging his confirmation. Two of the resolutions were as follows: "1st. That the Huntingdon bar entertains the kindest recollections of the character and example of the Hon. G. W. Woodward while he was with us, no less for his civic virtues than for his judicial firmness and amenity. 2d. That from our knowledge of the man we confidently assure the profession throughout the United States that the recent appointment has added to the bench of the Supreme Court a jurist, a scholar, and a gentleman who will fully sustain the reputation of the high tribunal of which he is now a member."

He appeared to have a tide of ill luck against him in 1845, but in 1852 he was chosen to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and served a full term of fifteen years, ending in 1867 as chief justice. Afterwards he was twice elected to Congress from the Luzerne district, and was an able and prominent member of that body.

His last public position was that of a delegate to the late Constitutional Convention which framed the present Constitution of the State, his first and his last public position being that of a framer of Constitutions for his native State.

Judge Woodward held his first court in this county in April, 1841. At that time he was tall and slender, measuring more than six feet in height, and very erect, with high forehead and blue eyes, evincing depth of thought, and his whole countenance and manner denoted more than ordinary intellect and firmness. He remained here only one year.

Judge Woodward died at Rome, Italy, in May, 1875, while sojourning in that far-off country.

JOHN BLANCHARD was a resident of Bellefonte. He was admitted an attorney in this county at April term, 1815. He had been admitted at York, Pa., on the 31st of March of that year. He was an Eastern man, reared and educated in New England, a graduate of Yale College, and thoroughly imbued with Puritanical principles.

He located in Bellefonte while yet a young man, and secured a good practice in Centre County and soon extended it into adjoining counties. For many years he was an attendant upon our courts, and participated in most of the important trials that took place here. He was one of Robert Campbell's attorneys in the case of the Commonwealth against him for libel upon Governor Porter. His colleagues in that case were Samuel Alexander, of Carlisle, and John G. Miles, of Huntingdon.

Mr. Blanchard had all his life been an opponent of the Democratic party. He had grown gray in that opposition. No wonder, therefore, that he should in 1844 receive the unanimous nomination of the Whig party for Congress. The district was composed of the counties of Centre, Huntingdon, Mifflin, and Juniata, every county being represented. The conference nominated him by acclamation. John G. Miles, who was his brother-in-law, had many friends in this county, and the conferees from this county would have voted for his nomination, but he declined in favor of Mr. Blanchard, thus making a sacrifice which not many men are willing to make. Dr. Joseph Henderson, of Mifflin County, was his competitor. Huntingdon County gave Mr. Blanchard a majority of thirteen hundred and thirty-one, and he carried the district by three hundred and ninety-six majority. In 1846, Mr. Blanchard was again nominated and elected to Congress over A. P. Wilson, of Huntingdon.

Mr. Blanchard was not noted for much speaking in Congress, although he was not entirely silent. He made a speech upon the tariff question which attracted considerable attention at the time. His voice was feeble, but his fellow-members soon discovered that there was something in him, and they gathered around him to hear what he had to say. His speech on that occasion abounded in wit and humor, as well as in sound and forcible argument, characteristic of Mr. Blanchard.

Mr. Blanchard was a man of good talents, but of very ordinary personal appearance. He was a long-headed and long-faced man in a literal and natural sense. He was about five feet eight or nine inches high, thin and pale. For a long time he was in ill health, and labored under bodily and mental depression, but he recovered from this and "was himself again." Towards the latter part of his life his voice in some measure failed him, but his mind remained clear to the last.

WILLIAM W. POTTER was admitted an attorney of the courts of this county on the 10th of August, 1815, while Judge Walker still presided. He was a resident of Bellefonte, and had been admitted in Centre County a short time before he became a member of the Huntingdon bar.

He was of very comely and commanding appearance when his manhood was fully developed, a man of fine features, very black hair, and pleasant address. His weight probably approximated two hundred pounds, and he was well proportioned. He was very earnest and energetic, a good orator, and became very prominent at the bar, and had a full practice in Centre County, and his professional engagements frequently called him to Huntingdon, where he was engaged in many important causes, and he became a very successful practitioner. He often indulged in sophistry so refined and ingenious as to puzzle courts and juries with his plausible but fallacious reasoning, and this sometimes enabled him to make "the worse appear the better cause," and always rendered him a dangerous adversary in the trial of cases.

Some twenty years after his admission to the bar he was called into the political arena, and became prominent and influential in the Democratic party. In 1836 he was a candidate for Congress in the district composed of the counties of Centre, Huntingdon, and Mifflin. His principal competitor was John Williamson, of Huntingdon, a popular politician in what was then denominated the Democratic Anti-Masonic party, the regular nominee of that party. John Ashman, of Three Springs, was also a candidate, being nominated by a small party on what they were pleased to call "the People's ticket." The vote stood in this county: For Potter, 1793; for Williamson, 1922; and for Ashman, 181. Mr. Potter had a majority in the district. His first term in Congress proved satisfactory to his party, and in 1838 he was again nominated and elected by a small majority over James Irvin, of Centre County.

He died in 1839, and a special election was held in November of that year to fill his unexpired term, when George McCulloch was elected.

At August sessions, 1839, the famous prosecution of Robert Campbell for libel was tried. The alleged libel was a letter written by the defendant, Campbell, the successor of Porter in the prothonotary's office, to Ner Middlesworth, a prominent politician of Union County, in March, 1838, while Porter was a candidate for Governor, charging that Porter, the prosecutor, was discharged as an insolvent debtor in 1819, and that he afterwards, while in charge of the records, purloined the schedule of his property, debts, etc. As already stated in the preceding sketch, the defendant was represented by Miles, Alexander, and Blanchard. Governor Porter had employed and brought here George W. Barton, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Potter to assist Alexander Gwin, the prosecuting attorney. Mr. Barton was noted for his eloquence and ability as a lawyer. After the evidence was all in he commenced the opening argument for the commonwealth, and spoke for four hours, pouring out a perfect torrent of declamation, and after Messrs. Alexander and Blanchard argued the case of the defense with their usual ability, Mr. Potter made the concluding speech for the prosecution with such consummate skill and power, and with a glow of eloquence and a vigor of logic that totally eclipsed his city colleague, and left him to the small honors of a tin trumpet sound as compared with the clear bugle blasts of Mr. Potter. The arguments in this exciting case were doubtless the grandest display of oratory ever exhibited in this county. Mr. Potter was then in good health and spirits, and apparently in the full vigor of manhood, but was stricken down suddenly before another court was held in the county.

JAMES STEEL was born on the 13th of January, 1796. After he grew to a proper age he was sent to the school under the tutorship of Rev. John Johnston, where he learned to read Latin,—how little or how much is not known, nor is it now material to know. He was a smart boy, such as in common parlance at this day would be called "fast," and was full of mischievous but not malicious tricks. His father, William Steel, held the offices of prothonotary and clerk of the courts, and James, while yet a lad, was put in as clerk and afterwards as deputy, and did good service in the offices. His father also kept a store and a tavern, and the boy, or young man, as they would now say, had fine opportunities of extending his acquaintance and developing his character, and he improved them.

At times the father would become impatient with the son and rebuke him for his waywardness, and threaten to "bind him out to a trade," and upon one occasion actually took him by the arm and was leading him to the shop of David Snyder, a hatter, to bind him an apprentice to learn that art and trade. But while on the way by the merest accident they met Robert Allison, a gentleman who knew James and liked him. Upon being made acquainted with the mission on which they had started, Mr. Allison interposed and said, "Gen. Steel, let me have the boy, and I will make a lawyer of him." The father thought it hardly worth while,—the boy would not have application enough,—but finally consented to let him try it. After the usual course of study he was duly examined and admitted, on motion of his preceptor, on the 18th of August, 1818. He was well qualified to practice. He was in himself a book of legal forms. Having been clerk in the office of the county commissioners and in the office of an attorney of extensive and varied practice, and clerk in the prothonotary's and register and recorder's offices, he was familiar with all the legal forms, and being at the same time an excellent and expert penman, he proved to be one of the best of scriveners. His professional business consisted chiefly in Orphans' Court practice and scrivening. He had a memory, too, that enabled him to refer to precedents in the courts and in the offices of the county,—an endowment which will save a vast amount of perplexing trouble and time in the preparation of legal documents. In the course of his long practice he was counsel for the county commissioners for many years, and counsel for Sheriffs James Henderson, Thomas Lloyd, and Joseph Higgins, and perhaps others, and made as few mistakes as any other man who ever acted in those capacities. He was always regarded as a safe counselor.

By some means he acquired the name of major, and was better known by that title than by his Christian name. In fact, almost every prominent citizen of the town and county at that time was the happy possessor of some military title, but many of them could not show a commission conferring that distinction.

Maj. Steel had all the elements of popularity within himself. He was generous to a fault, frank, truthful, warm-hearted, easily accessible, and confiding. He was, moreover, full of good nature, wit, and humor, fond of cracking jokes, and he told anecdotes with a great deal of vim and zest.

The first record we have of his political or official life is in 1819, one year after his admission to the bar, when he was elected county auditor over Conrad Bucher. In 1827 he was elected county commissioner over John Owens. In the early part of 1839, Governor Ritner appointed him prothonotary before he left the executive chair, and the incoming Governor (Porter) appointed John Cresswell to the same office. Many similar appointments were made by the outgoing and the incoming Governors, and when the question was taken into court Porter's appointments were sustained. The Constitution of 1838 had just become operative, and this question as to the appointing power grew out of a section in it. Mr. Steel was ousted, and the office was given to John Cresswell. In the fall of the same year (1839) the same two gentlemen were candidates for the same office, nominees of their respective parties, the office having become elective, and Steel was elected over Cresswell by a vote of 2321 to 2159. He served out his third term till December, 1848.

He was more than six feet high, thin in flesh, his eyes were gray and searching, his face always clean shaved, without whiskers, and his hair well set, but gray, and his general demeanor was gentlemanly, polite, and affable.

In his early years he manifested some wildness, but in the flower of manhood he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal communion, and became an exemplary Christian. In or about the year 1834 he married Miss Eliza Rothrock, of Bellefonte, a Methodist lady, whom he met at a camp-meeting some time before. Their home soon became the headquarters of the circuit preachers, and the major and his good lady were noted for their generous hospitality. Many amusing stories could be told about Maj. Steel, but space will not permit. However, one little pious anecdote of which he was the subject must be mentioned. The old Steel family were "Covenanters," and were not pleased that the major had left the faith of his fathers and joined the Methodist Church. Soon after he joined the church he visited his uncle, Alexander Steel, in the country, who asked him to conduct the family worship, which was accordingly done. The next morning his uncle said to him, "Well, Jeems, you made a pretty good prayer, but it was wonderfully scattered."

He never practiced outside of his own county, never traveled much except to camp-meetings and conferences. He was domestic in his habits and tastes and of high social qualities, and took great interest in the cause of temperance and moral reform. He died at his residence in Huntingdon on the 26th day of December, 1868, aged seventy-two years, "retiring in the hope of a glorious resurrection."

JOHN G. MILES was a member of the Huntingdon County bar in active practice for about fifty years. He was admitted on the 15th of August, 1821, and continued in practice till about the year 1871. He also attended the courts in Centre, Cambria, and Blair Counties, and had a large and lucrative practice down to the date of his retirement from the bar. He resided in Huntingdon during all this time, and was a highly-respected citizen and well known throughout the county. He was a close student, an industrious practitioner, and expended a great deal of labor in the preparation of his cases as well as in the trial of them. From July 31, 1837, George Taylor (afterwards judge) was in partnership with Mr. Miles in the practice of law until August, 1843, when Mr. Taylor retired and William Dorris, Jr., took his place, and the law firm continued to be Miles & Dorris until November, 1872, the date of Mr. Miles' retirement and removal to Peoria, Ill.

He was not a politician, but adopted the Anti-Masonic and Whig doctrines in early life, and adhered to them unwaveringly, and in 1856 naturally glided into the Republican party with the body of the Whig party in the North. He was always very decided in his political convictions and preferences. In 1840 his party, without any solicitation on his part, nominated him for the lower branch of the State Legislature and elected him. He received one hundred and twenty-two votes more than Joseph Higgins, his colleague, and was elected over his highest competitor by more than a thousand majority. The next year there was one of those strange periodical revulsions, and he and his colleague were defeated by small majorities. In 1843 he was a member of the State Committee of his party.

Mr. Miles was strictly honest in politics as well as in all things else. In 1856 he was chairman of the Republican County Committee, and conducted the first Republican campaign in the county, that of Fremont vs. Buchanan and Fillmore. At the end of a vigorous campaign he had some of the funds left which had been furnished by the State Committee, which he actually paid over to that committee. This may appear incredible to modern politicians, and especially to chairmen of county committees, but it is nevertheless true; he rendered an account of his disbursements, and accompanied it with the cash on hand all the same as if he had been under bonds to do so.

Perhaps the above will not appear so marvelous to congressional aspirants as the following: In 1844 he was the choice of his party in the county for Congress, and the conferees were instructed for him, but he declined in favor of his brother-in-law, John Blanchard, who received the nomination and was elected.

In the spring of 1841, while returning home from Harrisburg at the end of the legislative session, Mr. Miles met with a serious accident, and narrowly escaped a sudden and awful death. It was published in some of the newspapers that he was so severely injured that he survived but a few moments. He was traveling in a packet-boat, and in entering a lock a sudden jar threw him into the lock, where he was caught between the walls of the lock and the railing of the boat and shoved or rolled by the progress of the boat. The presence of mind and the activity of some of the persons present, however, saved him to continue a life of usefulness. Thus he was one of the few who are permitted to live long enough to see their own death announced in the newspapers.

He was the attorney of the late Dr. Peter Shoenberger, who also appointed him one of his executors. Mr. Miles became the acting executor of that large estate, and devoted much time and attention to the settlement of it. The late firm of Miles & Dorris were the resident counsel and attorneys for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and served the company faithfully and well.

Mr. Miles was born March 13, 1797, in Centre County, and died at the residence of his son, Dr. B. Fullerton Miles, in Peoria, Ill., on the 27th of September, 1877, in the eighty-first year of his age. His remains were brought to Huntingdon. A massive granite rock, weighing eight thousand pounds, marks the spot in the cemetery where his dust is mingled with that of the earth.

Augustus K. Cornyn was a native of Perry County, Pa. He came to Huntingdon in the spring or summer of 1840, prospecting for a good place to locate, etc., and then returned to New Bloomfield until September, when he made his second appearance here and opened an office in McCahan's Row (now Cunningham's), and published a card announcing that he and Isaac Fisher, of Lewistown, were in partnership in the practice of law in Huntingdon.

He was admitted to practice at Huntingdon on the 9th of November, 1840. The partnership announced did not continue long, for in December, 1840, Mr. Cornyn changed his advertisement, and he was doing business alone in the same place; and Mr. Fisher moved his office from Lewistown to Huntingdon in December, 1843, and entered into partnership with John Williamson.

In January, 1842, Mr. Cornyn married Miss Ellen Anderson, sister of John P. Anderson, of Huntingdon, but she died in October of the same year. In September, 1850, he again married, this time a Miss Jacobs, of Harrisburg, and soon afterwards removed to Chambersburg, where he opened a law-office, and remained till he died some years later.

During his residence in Huntingdon he was an active politician in the Whig party, and took a lively interest in the contest between James Irvin and George McCulloch, for Congress, as well as in subsequent political contests. In 1848 he received the nomination for Assembly, and was elected over Robert F. Haslet by a majority of three hundred and forty-six. In 1849 he was again nominated for the same office, and elected over David Duff by a majority of five hundred and fifty-nine votes. In both these years he made vigorous campaigns, and addressed a number of large meetings in various parts of the county. He was a fluent speaker, possessed of a good deal of wit and humor, and spoke with force and effect. At times he was quite eloquent.

In person, Mr. Cornyn was tall and slender, and of prepossessing appearance. He was fond of dress and gilt buttons and parade. He had acquired the title colonel by election,—colonel of militia,—and was elated with it.

It was through his influence that the Twenty-fourth Judicial District was created, and Judge Taylor appointed to preside over it.

Barton McMullen was a native of Pennsylvania. He was born at Mexico, or its vicinity, in Cumberland (now Juniata) County, in the year 1796. He was educated in Mifflin County, and studied law with Elias W. Hale, a very prominent and excellent lawyer of that place. Mr. McMullen was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 9th of April, 1822. He had been admitted in Lewistown a short time before, and probably opened an office there, but he settled in Huntingdon soon after his admission here and opened an office, and immediately entered into a good practice, and continued in it for about six consecutive years. His professional career was short but brilliant. That insidious destroyer, consumption, seized upon him as a victim, and after the usual changes which inspire flattering hopes and depressing fears he finally succumbed on the 20th of March, 1828, at the age of thirty-two years.

He had been married but a few years to Elizabeth, daughter of Patrick Gwin, one of the early and often-elected sheriffs of the county, and sister of James Gwin, afterwards one of the associate judges, and of Alexander Gwin, a member of the bar at a later period. He had but two children, a son and a daughter. The latter is still living. The daughter married John Armitage, who was sheriff, and afterwards a member of the bar. She is the mother of George Barton Armitage, a member of the bar.

Mr. McMullen never held any public office nor coveted any. His ambition seemed to lead him to seek eminence at the bar, and in no other direction.

Isaac Fisher was a native of the State of Delaware, and studied law and was admitted there while yet a young man. From thence he traveled over a large portion of the country, and especially through the Southern States of the Union, where he became thoroughly disgusted with the arrogance and self-importance of the slave-holders as a class, and with the iniquities of the institution of slavery. He finally settled in Pennsylvania. He was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 11th of April, 1822. He had previously been admitted at York and at Lewistown. At the time of his admission at Huntingdon he was a resident of Lewistown, and continued there until the year 1843, when he removed to Huntingdon and opened an office, and was for some years associated with John Williamson, in the law business.

Mr. Fisher was a dignified and aristocratic-looking personage, not over five feet ten inches in height, but with an unusually large abdomen, caused by the combined influence of a tremendous appetite, a sedentary life, and consummate gastronomic abilities. So much was this reservoir in his way that he could not stoop to pick anything off the ground, and, moreover, it seemed to be a burden to all the members of the body, especially to the lower limbs. The contour of his head and the features of his face were also very striking. His organs of veneration were poorly developed, his perceptive faculties were full, his forehead projected over blue or light-gray eyes, protected by heavy brows, his nose somewhat hooked, mouth large and slightly drawn to one side. His temperament, as phrenologists would say, was that in which the bilious predominated, combined with the lymphatic. His language was pure and elegant, his enunciation clear, and his style forcible and emphatic.

He never had a very full practice, and this enabled him to make the most out of every case, and to take every case which he lost in the Common Pleas, if in the least doubtful, to the Supreme Court, where he reversed many cases. He was not fond of authorities, at least not of modern ones, preferring to rest his cases upon general principles and the opinions of the sages of the woolsack and powdered wig.

Some years before he took up his residence in Huntingdon he wrote a book entitled "Charles Ball," somewhat in the style of a novel or romance, his hero being a slave, and the incidents narrated those which the author had picked up while traveling or sojourning in the South. Only a small edition was printed, and it is difficult to obtain a copy of it now. In this effort as an author he was more than a quarter of a century ahead of the times in which he lived. A third of a century later his book might have been as popular as "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Mr. Fisher was an intellectual combatant who rarely failed to command respect and admiration. With his full and imposing figure and resolute face, his severe logic, his correct syntax, in short, with his weighty person and his weighty words, he was always forcible and impressive whenever he addressed a court, a jury, or a public assembly.

He departed this life in August, 1858, at an advanced age.

James M. Bell was a native of that part of Huntingdon County which now forms the county of Blair. He was the son of Edward Bell, one of the pioneers of the upper Juniata. He was educated in Huntingdon, and studied law with Robert Allison. He was admitted to the bar on the 10th of August, 1824, went to Bedford, and remained there a few months, then returned and opened an office in Huntingdon, and continued to practice till the year 1845, when, in anticipation of the erection of Blair County, he removed to Hollidaysburg and made investments there, built a fine mansion, and entered into the banking business, and made the place his permanent home.

In person, Mr. Bell was about five feet ten inches in height and well proportioned, quite athletic, with broad, smooth face and open countenance, black hair, which he lost in early manhood, large, black, rolling eyes, betokening a restless spirit and indomitable energy. He was a man of attractive personal appearance and decidedly talented. When he spoke in public his whole body was in motion, his hands making gestures, and his voice full and clear. He was a man of acknowledged genius and indescribable verbiage. His writings as well as his speeches all had the same verbosity of style, which often made him appear tedious and uninteresting. He had a strong sense of justice, and despised everything that was low and mean; always addressed himself to the mind and conscience, never to prejudice and passion. He was an extremely eccentric character. He was an able lawyer, and could readily see the strong and the weak points in cases, and seize upon them and make the most out of them notwithstanding his laborious and verbose style. His chief power consisted in his ability to seize upon the salient points of a case and fix the attention firmly upon them. From 1835 till the close of his professional career he was retained in nearly all the important cases in the courts in this county, and accumulated some wealth by his practice. He did not rise very rapidly at the bar for the first two or three years after his admission, but he was appointed prosecuting attorney for the county in 1827, and then rose rapidly in his profession, proving himself a careful, industrious, and efficient prosecuting officer for the commonwealth.

In 1838, Mr. Bell was nominated to fill the unexpired senatorial term of David R. Porter, who had been nominated for Governor. The senatorial district was a double one, entitled to two senators, and embraced the counties of Huntingdon, Mifflin, Juniata, Perry, and Union. Mr. Bell had the largest vote in the county, a majority of one thousand and forty-seven, and two hundred and eighty-four majority in the district. It is needless to say that he became a prominent and influential member of the Senate.

Some time after going into the business of banking in Hollidaysburg he engaged in the same business here, and started the banking-house of Bell, Garrettson & Co., which finally grew into the First National Bank, of which he was president from its organization until his death, which took place on the 4th of June, 1870, at his residence in Hollidaysburg.

ROBERT WALLACE.—The first authentic account that we have of this gentleman is that he was a schoolteacher in what is now Juniata County, Pa., a perfect master of the ferule and birch, and that he was afterwards admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 12th of January, 1826. He had previously been admitted to the Mifflin County bar. He appears to have acquired a good share of the business in court in a short time after his admission in Huntingdon.

He married a Miss Hemphill, and reared a family in Huntingdon. Some time after 1836 he moved to Clearfield County, where he resided till the time of his death. His wife died there also many years ago. He was the honored father of William A. Wallace, who was for twelve years State senator and United States senator for six years.

Robert Wallace was a man of small stature, below medium size, of an honest, open countenance, and of a cordial and sincere disposition. He was proud of his social and political standing, and frank and unreserved in the ordinary intercourse of life.

He was also a man of some consequence as a politician in the Democratic party. For a while he owned and edited a newspaper, and editors are generally looked upon as leaders. He was appointed prosecuting attorney under Attorney-General George M. Dallas, during the administration of Governor Wolf, and bore the honor with becoming dignity.

Mr. Wallace was an Irishman by birth, and of the Protestant faith. He lived to the ripe age of eighty-three years, and died on the 2d of January, 1875, at Wallaceton, Clearfield Co., Pa.

ANDREW PORTER WILSON was born two miles from Roxbury, Lurgan township, Franklin Co., Pa., on the 13th day of June, 1806. He was the son of Charles Wilson and Sarah, his wife, of that county. He graduated at Jefferson College in 1823, and entered the law-office of George B. Porter, of Lancaster, studied with him about two years, after which he went to Litchfield, Conn., where he attended the law school under Judge Gould. In April, 1826, he was examined publicly by a committee of the bar in Litchfield, in the presence of the whole bar of the county, where no one could be admitted without a vote of two-thirds of the lawyers who attended the examination. The vote of the bar was unanimous for his admission, and on the 5th of April, 1826, he was admitted in the Superior Court of the State of Connecticut as a lawyer entitled to practice. He returned to Lancaster, and was admitted there in the spring of the same year. In 1828, through the influence of his cousin, David R. Porter, and others, Attorney-General Calvin Blythe appointed him his deputy for Huntingdon County, and thus commissioned he came to Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar on the 16th of April, 1828, from which time his citizenship in Huntingdon County may be dated. Mr. Wilson at once entered upon a successful career of practice, which was uninterrupted through a period of about thirty-five years, running down to about the year 1863, when he retired from active practice. During all this time he never had a law partner except for a few years at the close of his career, when he had associated with him his friend and former student, R. Bruce Petrikin, who still occupies the same office which was occupied by Mr. Wilson during the whole time of his practice. The records of the court show how extensively he was employed in these thirty-five years in the active pursuit of his profession. His name appears to more suits during that time than that of any other attorney at the bar.

His arguments indicated a lack of method. There was no systematic arrangement in them. They were rambling and unstudied, never concise and pithy. He was not quite so verbose nor as roundabout in his speeches as his contemporary, Mr. Bell. Neither of them had studied or practiced the arts and graces of oratory with any degree of success.

Mr. Wilson was not in the county many years until he was chosen a military leader and had the title and epaulets of a general bestowed upon him, and thenceforth he was known by the popular name of Gen. Wilson.

In 1837 he was a candidate for Assembly, and ran forty-one votes ahead of his colleague on the ticket, but was beaten two hundred and ten votes. In 1840 he was again a candidate on the Democratic ticket, his party having nominated him for Congress. He was defeated by James Irvin. In 1846 he was again nominated for Congress, and was defeated by John Blanchard. This result disappointed the hopes of Mr. Wilson, and he never was a candidate afterwards.

Although Mr. Wilson had a full and lucrative practice, he engaged in other business from time to time, especially in carrying mails, in stage-lines, and in transportation companies. He was fond of horses and kept many very good ones, and his fondness for riding and driving blooded horses continued unabated till the close of his life; and at the time of his death he had several fine specimens of them, and was rearing colts to keep up a full supply.

Mr. Wilson was an Episcopalian, and contributed liberally to that church, and attended its ministrations. He also held a pew in the Presbyterian Church, and attended it in the absence of service in his own. He was a gentleman of fine personal appearance, of good social qualities, polite and agreeable in manners and conversation, fond of dress, and quite a beau. He never married, but for many years he kept house, first having an elderly aunt to act as matron, and after her death a youthful niece doing the honors of the household. He accumulated an estate worth some sixty or seventy thousand dollars, and died intestate.

An illness which was not deemed dangerous at first, under which he lingered for some months without much apparent suffering, finally terminated in his death, at his mansion in Huntingdon, on the 28th of February, 1871, aged sixty-four years, eight months, and fifteen days.

ALEXANDER GWIN was born in the borough of Huntingdon on the 29th of December, 1807. He received a collegiate education, graduated at Dickinson College, Carlisle, and afterwards studied law in the office of Robert Allison, and was admitted to the bar on the 9th of November, 1830. His father, Patrick Gwin, had been sheriff of the county for several terms, alternating with John Patton, and had an extensive acquaintance and influence throughout the county. Mr. Gwin came to the bar under highly favorable circumstances, and immediately entered upon a practice, for which he was well qualified by education and habits, but the business committed to his care was chiefly that of his immediate family connections and friends. On account of distaste for the legal profession, or some other cause, he divided his time and attention between politics and the law, seemingly with a preference for the former. Consequently in 1834 we find him at the head of a Democratic newspaper, The Huntingdon Gazette, advocating the election of Henry A. Muhlenberg for Governor. Mr. Gwin was not disheartened by the defeat of his candidate, but renewed his efforts as an editor for several years, and as a politician till the close of his life, and became more celebrated as a political leader than as a lawyer.

In 1839 he was appointed prosecuting attorney for the county, an office which he filled for three years. This office he held at August term, 1840, when he conducted the prosecution of Robert McConaughy for the murder of the Brown family, the most exciting case that was ever tried in the county. In this trial he was assisted by George Taylor, then a young attorney (afterwards judge), and they both distinguished themselves by the arguments they made for the commonwealth. Mr. Gwin, although a plain, matter-of-fact man, who eschewed everything like rhetorical flourishes, made a powerful speech against the prisoner, which called forth the admiration of the audience. It was the concluding argument in the case, and was overwhelming to the prisoner.

His whole course as a prosecuting officer was marked by a serene severity and the strictest regard for the interests of the commonwealth. He discharged the duties of his office without fear, favor, or affection, and thus became a terror to evil-doers and a "praise to them that do well." Political excitement ran high and wild at that period of the history of our county, and at one of the courts the grand jury to whom a bill had been sent charging some offense growing out of the violation of the election laws returned it indorsed "ignoramus, and that Alexander Gwin, prosecuting attorney, pay the costs," etc. Judge Burnside remonstrated, explained the law on the subject of imposing costs upon officers of the law, but the jury were firm, and would not move from their position. Mr. Gwin stood apparently unmoved. Judge Burnside, turning to him, asked whether he had any other bills to lay before the grand jury, when Mr. Gwin promptly replied, "I have no more business for this grand jury!" Thereupon the grand jury was discharged, and the remaining bills were held over to the next sessions for another grand jury. Mr. Gwin never had any trouble with grand juries afterwards.

Mr. Gwin had much to do with the distracting movement in 1841, when the Democrats, under a local organization known as the Workingmen's party, elected a portion of their ticket in the county; but his greatest triumph came off in 1845, when he and Henry L. Patterson were elected to the House of Representatives over Henry Brewster and Adolphus Patterson. The members voted for the division of the county and carried it through the Legislature, but Mr. Gwin retired from politics, and died two years afterwards.

Alexander Gwin was a remarkably fine-looking person, about six feet in height and well proportioned, of highly intellectual features and pleasing manners and address. He was kind-hearted, warm in his friendship, honest and just in his dealings, and highly respected. He died possessed of a considerable estate. He departed this life on the 28th of March, 1848, aged forty years and three months.

SAMUEL S. WHARTON was born in the vicinity of Newton Hamilton, in Mifflin County, in the year 1806. He was the son of Henry Wharton, a respectable farmer, who lived to the remarkable age of ninety-one years, and died in the year 1873. The subject of this sketch was educated in the borough of Huntingdon, and afterwards read law in the office of James M. Bell, and was on the 13th day of April, 1831, admitted to practice. He opened an office in Huntingdon, but, in common with other young attorneys, he experienced that clients with important causes are shy of new and inexperienced lawyers and pass by their offices on the other side of the way, and without waiting long he turned his attention to the field of politics, so tempting to young men of ambition under such circumstances, and in consequence of this he never had a very extensive practice at the bar. He was afterwards admitted to the bar in the counties of Mifflin and Blair, and also in the Supreme Court at Harrisburg. His attention was directed chiefly to politics, and he spent much of his time in the very prime of life in the pursuit of office, in which he was, however, for a long time unsuccessful; but in later years his political fortunes changed and he became one of the most successful politicians that we ever had in the county.

As early as 1835, and perhaps much earlier, he had the title of colonel. Military titles were regarded as stepping-stones to political preferments, and politicians availed themselves of these titles, the higher the grade the greater the honor.

Mr. Wharton was appointed deputy attorney-general for Huntingdon County (or prosecuting attorney, as they were called in those days) by Attorney-General Todd in 1836.

In 1852, when Huntingdon and Blair Counties formed a representative district, Mr. Wharton and James L. Gwin were elected to the Legislature on the Whig ticket. He was again a candidate in 1853 and in 1857, but was defeated. In 1860 he suddenly loomed up again and received the nomination for State senator, and was elected in the district composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Bedford, and Somerset. Before his senatorial term expired he was shaping his course for the congressional nomination in 1862, and would in all reasonable probability have proved successful had he lived until that time, but he was suddenly cut off by death before another nominating season came around. He died at his boarding-house in Huntingdon in the summer of 1862, after an illness of only a few days. His corpse was removed to the residence of his only surviving son, H. S. Wharton, from whence his funeral took place. He died "with the harness on," being at the time of his death a member of the State Senate and a prominent candidate for Congress.

His personal appearance would attract attention in any assembly. He was a fine-looking man, fully six feet high and of symmetrical form. While in the lower branch of the Legislature he was familiarly known as "the handsome member," and while in the Senate his personal appearance was equally attractive. He was attentive to his dress and general personal appearance. He died on the 3d of June, 1862, aged fifty-six years.

JAMES CRAWFORD was a native of West township, in the county of Huntingdon, son of John Crawford, a farmer and justice of the peace in said township. James, the subject of this brief memoir, was born in February, 1809. He received a good education, graduated at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, with second honor, read law for the prescribed period, and was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 14th of January, 1833, and soon afterwards located at Hollidaysburg, opened an office, and immediately entered upon a successful career of practice in that place, which was at that time a small town or village, just leaping into importance on account of being destined to become the connecting link between the Pennsylvania Canal and the Allegheny Portage Railroad. Upon the completion of that great thoroughfare Hollidaysburg became a place noted for business, and especially for law business. Mr. Crawford had made a happy selection. He was Hollidaysburg's first lawyer, and lived long enough to see it become a thriving town and assume a name and a place upon the map of the State, but not long enough to see it become a seat of justice and have courts of its own.

As a lawyer, Mr. Crawford was well read, careful, and true as steel to the interests of his clients. He had, for a young lawyer, a good practice. He was a man of sound common sense, and of tolerable conversational powers. For strict morality and purity of life in private and public stations he had no superior, and in the practice of his profession he lived fully up to the obligation of his oath to act with all good fidelity, to use no falsehood, nor delay any person's cause for lucre or malice.

Such men as Mr. Crawford were not to be found in every household, and the country had a call for such men, which diverted him for a while from the narrow limits which usually confine the employment of a youthful attorney in a village. Mr. Crawford was a Democrat of the old school, and his party honored itself in 1835 by nominating him as their candidate for the Legislature, but as there was at that time an opposition majority of more than eight hundred in the county he was defeated, though he ran more than four hundred votes ahead of his colleague on the ticket. In 1836 he was again nominated for the same office and elected. This was before the division of the county was agitated in political circles, and that question did not enter into the contest It was the personal popularity of Mr. Crawford that carried him into office.

As a member of the Legislature, Mr. Crawford was attentive and industrious, always at his post, but he was not a talking member.

He retired to private life and continued to pursue his profession. He was in delicate health for some years, consumptive, and gradually wasted away. He died at the old homestead, above Petersburg, on the 18th of February, 1840, at the early age of thirty-one years, and was buried at Huntingdon.

BENJAMIN R. STEVENS.—The memories of few men outlive the monumental stone which marks their last resting-place on earth, and yet more fleeting is the memory of him who has not been fortunate enough to have an epitaph to be sullied by the elements and obliterated by the tooth of Time. The memory of the gentleman whose name stands at the head of this brief sketch would have thus faded away if the meagre facts contained therein had not been gathered ten years ago, while some who breathed the same air that he breathed were yet in the flesh, for now but few are found who knew him or anything about him. He was a member of the Huntingdon bar from about the year 1813 to 1827, but no record can be found of his admission. It must, however, have been about the year 1813, as his name first appears to suits as plaintiff's attorney to November term of that year, and he must have practiced here some fourteen or fifteen years. In 1827 his name disappears from the records, the last time it occurs being at August term of that year. He appeared to many suits brought in 1818, and for several years later. He was an Eastern man, from one of the New England States. In person he was thin and tall, of fair complexion, light hair, and regular features. Some say he wore a cue, others deny this. Like many of his professional cotemporaries, he indulged too much in the flowing bowl, which at times impaired his health and usefulness. He married a Miss Moore, of Huntingdon, who is said to have been a very amiable and excellent lady, and he had a son named Nathaniel B. Stevens. After Mr. Stevens died his family removed to Connecticut. The date of his death is not known, probably 1827 or 1828.

As a lawyer, Mr. Stevens ranked high. Judge Huston is reported to have pronounced him the best lawyer in his district.

THOMAS P. CAMPBELL was a native of Henderson township, Huntingdon Co., son of Matthew Campbell; received such education as could be obtained in the country schools and by persevering outside study. He learned the art and mystery of printing in Huntingdon, edited and published the first newspaper printed in Hollidaysburg, called the Aurora, disposed of his printing-office, and studied law in the office of Andrew P. Wilson, in Huntingdon, during which time he and George Taylor (afterwards judge) edited a Democratic newspaper, published in Huntingdon, entitled the Republican Advocate. He was examined, admitted, and sworn in as an attorney on the 15th of November, 1836, practiced in Huntingdon till about the year 1865, then removed with his family to Davenport, Iowa, and remained there till he died, on the 6th of February, 1881.

During all the time that Campbell practiced here he was one of the most eloquent speakers at this bar, and had a good practice.

In January, 1839, his personal and political friend, Governor Porter, appointed him register and recorder in and for Huntingdon County, which offices he filled till the general election in October of the same year. The offices having become elective under the Constitution of 1838, he was a candidate for the same in the fall of 1839, and was defeated by John Reed, who had been his predecessor in the offices. The majority against him was only two hundred and eighteen.

In April, 1842, he was appointed commissioner in bankruptcy under the bankrupt law of 1841, and served until the law was repealed in 1843.

In 1851 he was the competitor of Judge Taylor for the office of president judge.

Mr. Campbell was a Democrat from his youth up until 1861, when the war of the Rebellion broke out; then he with many prominent members of his party became first a war Democrat, and afterwards joined the Republican party.

When the internal revenue law had been passed he was appointed assessor for the congressional district composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Blair, Cambria, and Mifflin, which office he held for several years until he was superseded by the appointment of J. Sewell Stewart.

J. SEWELL STEWART was a native of West township, Huntingdon Co., Pa., born on the 1st day of May, 1819. He graduated with honor at Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., in 1841, studied law in Huntingdon in the office of James Steel, and clerked in the prothonotary's office then held by him, and was admitted to the bar on the 17th of April, 1843, and thenceforth he was actively engaged in the practice of his profession. In 1848 he was appointed deputy attorney-general (prosecuting attorney) for Huntingdon County; and the office being made elective and its name changed to that of district attorney, he was nominated and elected in 1850 and again in 1853, and continued to discharge the duties of that office till the Novenber sessions, 1856.

Mr. Stewart had a taste for literature, to indulge which he purchased the Huntingdon Journal printing establishment and installed himself in the editorial chair in 1851, and at the same time continuing his professional practice, but he soon wearied of editorial felicity, and sold his printing-office the following year and again devoted his whole time to practice.

In 1865 he was appointed assessor of internal revenue in the Seventeenth District, composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Blair, Cambria, and Somerset, which office he held at the time of his death.

He was associated with Adin W. Benedict, as a partner in practice in January, 1866, and in 1867, P. M. Lytle also became a member of the firm, under the name of Benedict, Stewart & Lytle, and was dissolved in April of that year by the death of Mr. Benedict.

As a member of the legal fraternity, Mr. Stewart had established a reputation for strict honesty, careful attention to business, and scrupulous fidelity to his clients; and as a man and citizen, he was highly esteemed. His demeanor was uniformly respectful and gentlemanly. He had fine literary taste and a poetical turn of mind, and was the author of creditable productions in verse as well as prose.

He died at his residence, one door west of the court-house, in Huntingdon, on the morning of the 6th of February, 1871, in the fifty-second year of his age.

JOHN P. ANDERSON was the son of A. A. Anderson, a prominent member of the bar of Mifflin County, Pa. He was born at Lewistown on the 26th day of January, 1818. He studied law in Huntingdon under the direction of J. George Miles, and was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 9th of March, 1838.

Mr. Anderson had been an active politician even before his admission to the bar, and had rendered considerable service to the Democratic party, and especially to David R. Porter in his senatorial and gubernatorial campaigns, and in 1839 he was appointed prosecuting attorney for Allegheny County and district attorney of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania.

The following extract from an article in a Democratic newspaper, announcing his appointment to the above offices, will serve to show the esteem in which Mr. Anderson was held by his personal and political friends:

"Maj. Anderson is a young gentleman of superior mind, of fine legal and literary attainments, and great energy of character, yet firm and dignified, and his eloquence is a rich combination of logic and wit, humor, sarcasm, and pathos."

Numerous other Democratic newspapers of the day were teeming with highly flattering encomiums upon Mr. Anderson, who had thus been provided for with two good offices at once.

Mr. Anderson retired from the practice of the law soon after he was through with these offices, but he did not retire from politics. He was appointed supervisor on the Pennsylvania Canal while it yet belonged to the State. He amassed a large fortune. He died at his residence in Huntingdon on the 10th of February, 1862, aged forty-four years and fifteen days.

ADIN W. BENEDICT was a native of the State of New York. His father, Rev. Joel Benedict, was a Presbyterian minister, who moved from Norwalk, Conn., to Orange County, N. Y., where the subject of this sketch was born on the 29th of January, 1808. His mother's maiden name was Currance Wheeler. He was brought up and educated in Orange County in the common branches then taught in country schools, and was afterwards placed under the instruction of the Messrs. Harper Brothers in New York City to learn the art, trade, and mystery of letter-press printing. In 1830 he married Miss Ann E. Ross, of New York, and subsequently went to Philadelphia with his youthful wife, where he entered into partnership with John Boyle, also a printer, in a book and job printing office, under the firm-name of Boyle & Benedict, and remained in that business and in that firm until September, 1835, when he removed with his family to Huntingdon, where he started the Journal, in the name of A. W. Benedict & Co., the "Co." being his Philadelphia partner, John Boyle. In April, 1836, Mr. Benedict exchanged his interest in the Philadelphia establishment for that of his partner in Huntingdon. Mr. Benedict then continued sole editor and publisher of the Journal until February, 1842, when he sold the establishment to T. H. Cremer.

In 1836, Mr. Benedict was appointed collector of tolls at Huntingdon by the canal commissioners, and he continued in that office until the close of Governor Ritner's administration, in January, 1839.

After Mr. Benedict disposed of his printing establishment he entered the office of Messrs. Bell & Orbison as a law student, at the age of thirty-four years, and was admitted to the bar on the 9th of April, 1844. In 1843, while yet a student, he was appointed by the court a county commissioner, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of Robert Moore, of the borough of Huntingdon.

Mr. Benedict had the faculty of speech well developed while yet a resident of Philadelphia, where he often spoke at political meetings and other popular assemblages, and he kept up this habit in Huntingdon, and took the stump in the several political campaigns, especially in the Presidential campaign of 1840, which resulted in the election of Gen. Harrison. He was a good debater, and an expert and able writer, and these qualities served him well when he came to the bar, and he soon glided into a remunerative practice.

In 1846 the nomination for member of the Legislature was tendered to him by the Whig party of the county in convention assembled, but he promptly declined it on the spot in a neat little speech; but in 1862 he was again nominated for the same office, when he accepted the nomination and was elected. Prior to that date he held the responsible position of deputy-secretary of the commonwealth during Governor Johnston's administration, and that seemed to give him a taste for office, and he sought the Legislature as member or clerk to gratify that taste. He was successful, and served during one session as member and during several as chief clerk, which latter office he held at the time of his death, which occurred on the 28th of April, 1867.

Mr. Benedict was a gentleman of medium size, well-proportioned form, possessed a good deal of muscular power, blue eyes, brown hair, which turned gray prematurely, and a profuse beard, which became snowy white during his residence at Harrisburg while deputy Secretary of the State, and continued so to the time of his death. He was affable and easily accessible, and very popular as an officer. While clerk of the House of Represenatives, the Democratic members manifested their appreciation of him by publicly presenting to him a gold-headed cane, with appropriate inscriptions engraved upon it. This generous gift was highly prized by him, and is carefully preserved by his widow and family as an heirloom.

Mr. Benedict had excellent opportunities to become wealthy, but did not improve them. He never accumulated any property or means until he became deputy Secretary of State. After that date he became more economical and acquired a considerable estate, real and personal. He always lived well, was generous to a fault and hospitable, and took pleasure in entertaining his numerous friends, and was held in great esteem by all who knew him, and those who knew him best esteemed him most. He died at his home in Huntingdon, after a brief illness, in the sixtieth year of his age.

JOHN REED was born in the vicinity of Reedville, Mifflin Co., Pa., on the 22d day of June, 1793. While yet a child his parents removed to Huntingdon County, to the neighborhood of McAlevy's fort, his mother carrying him over the mountain on horseback. He received such schooling as the country at that time afforded, and when grown up to manhood he traveled to the western part of the State and sojourned for a while in Washington and Allegheny Counties. He returned to his adopted county and taught school at various points in Huntingdon and adjoining counties. He also learned the occupation of a miller, and had charge of various mills at different times, among them one at McAlevy's fort, and another at Alexandria, and his time was divided between attending mills and teaching schools till the year 1836, when Governor Ritner appointed him register and recorder and clerk of the Orphans' Court of Huntingdon County to succeed David R. Porter. Until this time he had never held any office except that of county auditor, to which he was elected in 1831. In 1840 he was one of the Presidential electors of Pennsylvania, and cast his vote for Gen. Harrison, at Harrisburg. Mr. Reed discharged the duties of the office of register and recorder and clerk of the Orphans' Court with entire satisfaction to the public until 1839, when David R. Porter, who had been elected Governor, appointed Thomas P. Campbell in his stead; but at the general election in 1839, under the new provisions in the amended Constitution of 1838, Mr. Reed was elected over Mr. Campbell. Upon the expiration of his term in 1842, Mr. Reed was again elected to the same offices. At the end of this term, in 1845, he commenced the study of the law under the instruction of David Blair, and was admitted to the bar on the 17th of April, 1848, when he was nearly fifty-five years of age. He opened an office in Huntingdon, and at once entered upon a good Orphans' Court practice. His long experience in the register's office and as clerk in the Orphans' Court qualified him well for the business, and his extensive acquaintance throughout the county and his fidelity to his duty were the means of bringing him a practice in the Orphans' Court such as would have required the labor and perseverance of a young man for years to have acquired. Mr. Reed was a well-known and well-tried man, and every one who knew him would trust his all to him. He was counsel for the county commissioners for several years, and proved a safe and good counselor.

Mr. Reed stood nearly head and shoulders higher than any other member of the Huntingdon bar except Jas. Steel, who was but little lower than he. Mr. Reed was thin and straight as well as tall, and some rude and impudent boat-boys called him the "shot-tower," because he had given them some wholesome admonition which they did not relish. He was unobtrusive, always civil and pleasing in manner and edifying in conversation. He was fond of mathematics and spent much time in solving problems for amusement,—a good way to keep a man in his office when he has nothing special to do to keep him there.

In all his avocations, whether as a school-teacher, a miller, a public officer, a private citizen, a lawyer, or as a Christian, he was always honest in the discharge of all his duties. He died at the residence of his son, William D. Reed, near Huntingdon, on the 26th of March, 1868, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. Taking Mr. Reed all in all, we shall never look upon his like again.

MORDECAI B. MASSEY was born in Barree township, Huntingdon Co., on the 18th of October, 1835, the son of Robert Massey; went to school at Pine Grove, Centre Co., and graduated from Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Washington Co., Pa., in 1857, with second honor in the largest class ever graduated from that institution; studied law in the office of Messrs. Montgomery & Gibson, in Washington, Pa., and was admitted to the bar at that place in or about the year 1860. He then returned to his father's in Barree township, married Miss Maggie Hunter, of Petersburg, in 1864, and remained among his relatives and friends until the 14th of November of that year, when he was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon. He purchased Andrew P. Wilson's law library, and entered into partnership with R. Bruce Petrikin, and some time after that M. M. McNeil was taken into the firm.

As a member of the legal profession, Mr. Massey was ever mindful of the high obligation of his calling, and was faithful alike to the court and to his clients.

Mr. Massey was afflicted with a lingering bronchial affection, which increased in severity until he finally succumbed and fell a victim to it. In the winter of 1875–76 he went to Florida, where he remained until spring, when he returned considerably improved in health, and he intended to spend the next winter in Florida also, but when the winter set in he was too much enfeebled to undertake the journey.

Mr. Massey was a sportsman as well as a lawyer, an excellent shot, fond of hunting in the mountains, and was very successful in shooting deer and other large game, never troubling smaller game than squirrels, of which he bagged many. At the time of his death he had one of his rooms carpeted with deer-skins tanned with the hair on.

He took a deep interest in scientific subjects and bestowed considerable attention upon them. He visited the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia twice, and examined all the guns that were on exhibition there, and closely inspected other products of the arts and sciences, and appeared to understand them better than the mass of visitors to that famous display of the products of the nations.

Mr. Massey contributed several well-written articles on gunnery and other scientific subjects to the Sportsman, a periodical publication of wide circulation, the name of which has since been changed to Forest and Stream.

Mr. Massey died at his residence in Huntingdon on the 13th day of March, 1877, aged forty-one years, four months, and twenty-three days, and being a member of Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 300, A. Y. M., was buried with the honors of the fraternity.

Henry T. White was born in West township (now Oneida), on a farm about five miles from Huntingdon. He was the son of Henry White, and his mother's maiden name was Esther Ramsey, a full cousin of the late Judge Gwin, of Huntingdon. Henry T. White was the twin-brother of George D. White, who died in the army at Camp Pierpont, Va., on the 8th of February, 1862.

The subject of this memoir was born on the 24th of June, 1833, was educated in the common schools of his native township and at the Cassville Seminary, studied law in the office of Messrs. Scott & Brown, and was admitted to the bar on the 14th of April, 1859, and opened an office in Huntingdon. He turned his attention to politics, was nominated and elected treasurer of the county in October of the same year over Jacob Miller. The term of office was then two years. Mr. White served out his term, but he was in very delicate health, and died within two years after the expiration of his term of office, and in less than four years after his admission to the bar.

He was sober and industrious, and had the confidence of the people, and gave promise of great usefulness at the bar and as a citizen, but these bright prospects and fond hopes were all cut off by his early death. He died of consumption on the 11th of September, 1863, aged thirty years, two months, and eighteen days.

J. H. O. Corbin was born in Cassville in July, 1838, and was educated at the Seminary at that place, studied law in the office of Messrs. Scott & Brown, in Huntingdon, was admitted to the bar on the 14th of November, 1859, and in the fall of 1862 he was nominated by the Republican party for district attorney, and was elected over R. M. Speer, his Democratic competitor, who had then been at the bar less than three years, the two candidates having been admitted on the same day, and both being natives of Cassville, and of about the same age.

Mr. Corbin was a young man of fine talents, and possessed many good qualities of head and heart. He was clever and generous and popular, and was making his way up at the bar.

Abraham S. Wilson made his first appearance in the courts of this county on the 13th of August, 1822. He was a native of Mifflin County, and located at Lewistown, where he resided down to the time of his death. He was a Democrat, and took a deep interest in that old party, and became an active and favorite politician before his accession to the bench. He held the office of prothonotary of Mifflin County for many years by appointment, and afterwards was elected to the Legislature, and became quite prominent in that body.

He was a good lawyer, and had an extensive practice. He bestowed much labor upon his cases, and tried them well, and was remarkably successful. He attended the courts of Huntingdon occasionally, but never had much practice here. He had an extensive circle of relatives and friends, and he was very much given to hospitality, so much so that it kept his exchequer in a low condition.

On the 23d of March, 1842, Governor Porter sent a message to the Senate nominating Abraham S. Wilson judge of the Twentieth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Mifflin, and Union. Previous to that time Huntingdon County was in the Fourth Judicial District, with Centre, Clearfield, Clinton, and Mifflin. Huntingdon and Mifflin were taken from it, and, together with Union, formed the Twentieth District, and Judge Woodward continued in the Fourth, and Wilson was appointed judge of the Twentieth District, as above stated. On the 30th of March, 1842, the Senate confirmed his nomination unanimously.

Judge Wilson held no regular term at Huntingdon in April, 1842; his first regular term was held in the then new court-house in August of that year. The court-house used in Judge Wilson's time was the second one in the county. It was torn down in June, 1882, and stood on part of the ground now covered by the third court-house erected in the county. The following is from the Huntingdon Journal of the 10th of August, 1842:

"The new court-house is now completed, and the courts are holding their sessions in it. The public offices are also removed to the new building. All of the rooms are convenient, comfortable, and commodious. The people generally appear to be well pleased with the new building, the whole cost of which is just $9135.20. The lots, together with two others, cost $1000.

"Besides this we have a new judge, and when all 'get the hang' of the new establishment, we expect matters to move along finely."

A week later we have the following notice of Judge Wilson in the same paper:

"The Hon. A. S. Wilson has assumed the arduous duties of president judge of the Twentieth Judicial District, in which our county is included. The present is the first regular term at which he has presided in this county, and we are pleased to say that, so far as we have been able to learn the sentiments of others, with which our own accord, he gives general satisfaction. The judge is a plain, unassuming gentleman and an able jurist, possessing mildness, deliberateness, and penetration, qualities which enable him to arrive at correct and just conclusions."

All who had the pleasure of an acquaintance with Judge Wilson, and were familiar with his manner of doing business on the bench, will bear witness to the truthfulness of the above.

In September of the same year (1842) his charge to the grand jury at the August sessions was published in the Journal and other newspapers in the district. It covered four closely-printed columns of the newspaper named, and it was conceded on all hands that it was an able production, both as to matter and style, well defining the duties of grand juries, and impressing and urging the full and impartial performance by them of those duties.

In 1849 the Twenty-fourth Judicial District was formed, and Huntingdon County was placed in it, and George Taylor was appointed president judge of the new district, and Judge Wilson continued to preside over the old Twentieth District, then composed of the counties of Mifflin and Union. Our district has remained unchanged from that time to the present, constituted of the counties of Huntingdon, Blair, and Cambria.

On the bench Judge Wilson was dignified, careful, firm, and impartial, courteous and kind to all, especially to the younger members of the bar. There was a magnetism about him that attracted all towards him who came within the circle of his acquaintance. The younger members of the bar were strongly attached to him, and he treated them uniformly with kindness and consideration. He was also a favorite with the judges of the Supreme Court of the State, "a pet," as Isaac Fisher used to say when he found it hard to reverse him in that court. We do not say that he was a pet of the Supreme Court, or that they ever had any pets, but he was personally known to all the judges of that court, and they had entire confidence in his integrity, and reversed him very reluctantly, except for very plain errors.

In person Judge Wilson was about five feet eight or nine inches high, and well proportioned, of fair complexion, blue eyes, light brown hair, heavily sprinkled with gray in his later years. He was a man of fine presence and good conversational powers, agreeable in manners, fond of relating anecdotes, of which he had a large stock, and he was always an entertaining and pleasing companion.

His business was never so pressing that he could not find a few days or weeks each year to devote to the healthful and invigorating pastime of hunting and fishing, of which he was excessively fond, and which afforded him many of his most amusing anecdotes and incidents related afterwards.

He continued to preside in the Twentieth District until the time of his decease. A few years before his death he received an accidental bodily injury which hastened his end. He departed this life some twenty years ago, much regretted by his family and numerous friends.

GEORGE TAYLOR.—The history of those having been eminently successful in life, and especially of those who have been raised to eminence from humble life, is always interesting and instructive. By example it serves to direct while it tends to encourage the faltering and desponding to renewed exertions. Among those to whom the terms "self-made" and "self-taught" peculiarly apply is Judge Taylor. He was a native of Chester County, Pa., born at Oxford, in that county, on the 20th of November, 1812. He was the fourth child of Matthew Taylor and Rebecca, his wife, whose maiden name was Anderson. He could, no doubt, trace his family through a "long pedigree of toil" in his native county and perhaps far back into the mother-country. Like Benjamin Franklin, whose ancestors for generation after generation were the blacksmiths of Eaton, he could trace his back and find that his father was an humble and honest blacksmith of Oxford, and that through a long line of ancestors the anvil and the hammer were the family ensigns, and not the lap-board and the shears, as the name might indicate. His father had a large family and limited means, and consequently he was afforded few facilities for acquiring even the rudiments of an education. While he was a boy he assisted his father in the shop, and while thus engaged met with a very serious misfortune, a fragment of iron or steel striking and lodging in one of his eyes, from which he suffered severely. His eye was disfigured, and he wore blue or green spectacles to conceal it. It was frequently remarked, however, that he could see more with one eye than most persons could see with two.

He was not at any school or other institution of learning after he was thirteen years of age. But several years of his early life were profitably occupied in teaching a country school in this county. During this period he diligently availed himself of all the means of improvement within his reach, greatly increased his scanty stock of knowledge, and in the quiet seclusion of his rural home, unnoticed by those around him, laid the foundation of his future success. While thus engaged he wrote to David R. Porter, prothonotary of Huntingdon County, offering his services as a clerk, and Mr. Porter was so well pleased with the tenor and penmanship of the letter that he took him into his employ. For one destined for the bar there is no better school than a well-ordered prothonotary's office. In 1834 he commenced reading law in the office of Andrew P. Wilson, and was admitted to the bar on the 12th of April, 1836. He was then in his twenty-fourth year. Buoyant with energy and youthful hope, present and past difficulties were forgotten in the anticipation of future success, and, as has been said of another, the horoscope of his destiny gleamed before his young eyes in golden colors. Soon after his admission he gave promise of success in his profession, and by his masterly efforts in a number of important cases he acquired an early reputation as an able lawyer and advocate.

In 1840 he assisted in the prosecution of Robert McConaughy, who was tried in this county for the murder of the Brown family, in Shirley township. The case was one entirely of circumstantial evidence, and in a speech of matchless eloquence, in a clear, logical analysis of the facts, he so traced the murderer through all his windings, and so fastened the evidence of his guilt upon him, that there was no escape. The writer has frequently conversed with the able counsel of the prisoner as to the effect of that argument, and they said it was perfectly electrical and overwhelming, that the jury, the judges, and the audience were so completely carried away with it that any attempt at a defense seemed to be useless, and conviction followed inevitably. This was one of the greatest efforts of his professional life.

In the prosecution of the Flanigans for murder in Cambria County he made another three or four hours' speech in behalf of the commonwealth, which was said to be as powerful as the argument in the McConaughy case, and compared favorably with it in forensic eloquence.

At the time of these trials, and for some time afterwards, he was in partnership with John G. Miles in the practice of the law, under the firm-name of Miles & Taylor.

In October, 1843, he was elected treasurer of the county, and served a term of two years. During this time he had almost abandoned the law, had retired from the firm of Miles & Taylor, and was preparing himself for the Presbyterian ministry. During these two years he made such progress in studying Greek that he could read the New Testament in the original tongue. But he returned to the law, and never entered the ministry.

Judge Taylor was an exceedingly careful man in all his literary efforts. His words were all appropriate, carefully selected, plainly and neatly written, and clearly and distinctly uttered, and his penmanship was characterized by the utmost degree of precision. Every word, syllable, and letter was plainly written and exactly in its proper place, every "i" dotted and every "t" crossed, and his orthography and punctuation were faultless. All his writings were executed with as much care as if they had been intended for the "public eye." And his pronunciation and articulation in public and private discourse were models worthy of imitation, and his emphasis was very energetic and impressive.

In 1835, while a law student, he was also editing a Democratic newspaper, and his careful habit of writing was no doubt cultivated, if not acquired, while writing for the press, well knowing that his editorials would be extensively read and closely and severely criticised.

Early in life he adopted a rule which every young man would do well to practice upon,—that everything that is worth doing at all is worth doing well. And this rule he carried into his professional business, and whatever cases he had he prepared thoroughly and tried well, taking pains first to make himself perfectly acquainted with the facts and the law of each case; and thus he acquired more reputation in a few years than a careless or indolent man could acquire in a lifetime of threescore and ten.

Thus in the thirteen years of his practice he had acquired an enviable reputation as a lawyer. During all the time that he practiced the bar of his own county was crowded with lawyers of ability and eminence, men of character and experience, some in the prime of life, and some in the zenith of their professional course; and the other counties in the district also abounded in able lawyers in full practice. Of course, at such a bar no young lawyer could reasonably have expected much pecuniary success, and for thirteen years young Taylor struggled onward and upward, with barely profit enough to support himself and his family. But to be selected from such a bar to preside over such a district was a distinction and an honor of which any man might well be proud. Thenceforth he had a wider field for the exercise of his legal talents, and speedily his fame spread throughout the commonwealth.

When the Legislature in 1849 passed an act creating the Twenty-fourth Judicial District, he was recommended almost unanimously by the bar of Huntingdon and Blair Counties for the president judgeship of the new district, composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Blair, and Cambria. In April, 1849, Governor Johnson conferred the appointment upon him, which was unanimously confirmed by the Senate. After the amendment of the Constitution making the judiciary elective was adopted, by which the commissions of all the judges terminated in December, 1851, Judge Taylor was unanimously nominated by his party (the Whigs) as a candidate, and elected in October of that year. This election brought him another commission for ten years. After serving the term he was re-elected for another term without opposition. During the twenty-two years of his judgeship he faithfully discharged the duties of his office, and never, from sickness or any other cause, failed to hold the regular terms of court in the district.

There is probably no other position in life which so completely shows and tests the mettle of which human nature is composed as that of president judge. Its duties are delicate, difficult, and responsible in the highest degree. The fortunes and even the lives of men are sometimes suspended upon the strength or weakness of the presiding judge, and temptations beset him on every side to swerve him from the straightforward line of duty. Great, terrible, awful is the responsibility of the position, and all honor is due to the man who can discharge it unawed by fear, unseduced by affection or the hope of gain, with no prompter but conscience, and no guides but truth and law. Judge Taylor was a man of this model.

He had an intense love of justice, and the nerve fearlessly to administer it in the face of all opposition, yet he always tempered justice with mercy.

The judge had a taste for agricultural and horticultural pursuits, and followed them whenever he had leisure to do so without neglecting his official duties.

At the regular term of the Blair County court, whilst charging the jury, on the 24th of October, 1871, he became so ill that he was obliged to leave the court-room. Prompt medical aid gave temporary relief, and he expected to resume his duties on the bench on the following day; but towards evening he was stricken with paralysis (which he had for a long time dreaded) in both his lower limbs, causing entire helplessness of body, whilst his mind retained its vigor. He was brought home on a special train. Notwithstanding the efforts of skillful physicians and careful nursing of his family, he gradually became worse until Tuesday morning, November 14th, when, without a struggle, he gently passed away, at the age of fifty-eight years, eleven months, and twenty-one days.

> "Here the reward stands for thee,—a chief seat
> In Fame's fair sanctuary, where some of old,
> Crown'd with their troubles, now are here enroll'd
> In memory's sacred sweetness to all ages."
>
> —Singleton.

Joseph McCune was appointed and commissioned an associate judge in December, 1810, by Governor Simon Snyder. He resided in the Frankstown district, now in Blair County, where he had been a justice of the peace for about ten years, having been appointed by Governor McKean in the year 1800. He occupied a seat on the bench from 1810 down to the close of 1838, when he resigned in favor of John Ker, who was commissioned by Governor Ritner under the Constitution of 1790, shortly before it gave place to that of 1838. His term was the longest of any in the county, except that of David Stewart.

Judge McCune was, at the date of the writer's acquaintance with him, a very clever old gentleman, who was well booked up in the early history of the Juniata Valley, and of Huntingdon County in particular, and he was very fond of relating the incidents connected with the early history of this part of the State, as well as of the stirring events of the Revolutionary war. He had a retentive memory and had stored it full of interesting facts, which he could call forth as occasion required, and this made him an entertaining and instructive companion.

He was not a "law judge," but a farmer by occupation and education, owning and tilling a two-hundred-acre farm in Frankstown township.

He was not ambitious for political honors after he had a seat upon the bench, but six years earlier, in 1804, he had been elected to the Legislature for one term, which seemed to satisfy his ambition in that direction. He was a large and fleshy man, very good-natured and friendly to all, one of those who would have hosts of friends and few enemies.

Joseph Adams was also a resident of Frankstown township when he was appointed an associate judge of Huntingdon County. He was first commissioned on the 10th of July, 1826, by Governor Shulze, and his commission was renewed on the 15th of March, 1841, by Governor Porter, the term of office having been changed to five years under the Constitution of 1838, and the Legislature of 1838–39, in classifying the associate judges, placed him in the second class, whose term of office expired on the 27th of February, 1841. Having thus been legislated out of office, Governor Porter renewed his commission in March, 1841, as above stated, for five years, which continued him in office until the county was divided, the division leaving him in the new county of Blair.

Judge Adams was a man of diminutive size, black eyes, and regular features. He was well informed and well disposed, having more than ordinary intelligence and a remarkably retentive memory, and he had a high opinion of his own ability, and sometimes transacted business in the absence of the president judge, even to the trying of ordinary cases in the Quarter Sessions. He was a rigid Democrat, and did not deem it out of place in him to preside at public meetings of his party, or to participate otherwise in its meetings. He was at one time in good financial circumstances, but he engaged in a transportation company and other business enterprises which brought financial ruin upon him, from which he never fully recovered.

In 1825 he was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature. He and Judge Burnside were appointed to seats on the bench about the same time, and they always appeared on very intimate and friendly terms.

John Ker succeeded Joseph McCune on the bench

as associate judge in 1838, he being the last of our associate judges appointed under the Constitution of 1790. The new or amended Constitution required the first Legislature convened under it, that of 1838–39, to classify the associate judges into four classes according to seniority of commission, the oldest expiring first, and the youngest last. The first Legislature did classify the judges, and Judge Ker was placed in the fourth class, whose commissions expired on the 27th of February, 1843. But the next Legislature, that of 1839–40, reclassified them, and placed Judge Ker in the first class, whose term expired in 1840, and Governor Porter appointed and commissioned James Gwin to succeed him, who took his seat on the bench in April term, 1840. A considerable number of other judges were in the same predicament, and a case was taken up to the Supreme Court from one of the eastern counties for adjudication and made a test case. While this case was pending Judge Ker took courage to claim and hold his seat, and at one of the terms he dropped into one of the seats just at the moment that Judge Gwin was ascending the steps leading to the bench, and the novel scene was presented of two judges claiming the same seat upon the bench at the same time. At the suggestion of Judge Burnside both claimants withdrew from the bench for that term. The case in the Supreme Court was decided in favor of the appointees of Governor Ritner, and Judge Ker served out his term, which ended in 1843.

Judge Ker was a man above medium size, of fair and florid complexion, blue eyes, and brown hair, slightly mingled with gray in his later years. He was of a very social disposition, affable and easy in conversation and very courteous, and of the most pure and correct morality. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, well booked in ecclesiastical history, well informed in everything concerning Presbyterianism, took great interest in religious matters, and expressed his sentiments very freely and intelligently.

He resided in Walker township, two miles from Huntingdon. His homestead was located upon a slight eminence, commanding a view of the surrounding country and of a portion of the town. He was noted for his hospitality. Nothing delighted him more than a visit from a member of the bar, unless it was a visit from a Presbyterian minister, but all were welcome to his home and his board. He was truly "given to hospitality."

He evidently considered an eldership and a judgeship honor enough for one man, and he never aspired after any other. He bore his honors with becoming gravity and dignity, and discharged his duties with the utmost fidelity. His father, William Ker, was register and recorder and clerk of the Orphans' Court of Huntingdon County, appointed in 1824.

Judge Ker was born on the 1st day of April, 1796, and died on the 30th of July, 1855, aged fifty-nine years and four months.

James Gwin was appointed and commissioned an associate judge on the 20th of March, 1840. The early part of his judicial history is considerably mingled with that of Judge Ker, his immediate predecessor. He was on the bench but a term or two, when the Supreme Court decided that the first Legislature convened under the Constitution of 1838, in classifying the associate judges, had exhausted the power conferred upon it by that instrument, and consequently no subsequent Legislature could legally disturb that classification. This decision ousted Judge Gwin and reinstated Judge Ker. In 1843, Judge Ker's commission expired, and Judge Gwin was again commissioned by Governor Porter, and recommissioned in 1848 by Governor Shunk, and he served till 1851, when the judges became elective by the people under the constitutional amendment of 1850.

Judge Gwin was a tall, slender man, of fine features and dark hair, which had prematurely turned gray. He was dignified and commanding in appearance, and would secure the respect of any assembly in which he might appear. He was the son of Patrick Gwin, who had been elected sheriff of the county three times, and brother of Alexander Gwin, a member of the bar. He acted for some time as deputy sheriff under his father, a good school to acquire business knowledge and habits, and he was one of the best business men in the county. Previous to his appointment to the bench he was in the mercantile business in Huntingdon, conducting a general store.

Being very extensively acquainted throughout the county he became useful on the bench, especially when the president judge resided out of the county.

Judge Gwin resided in Huntingdon all his life, and was a highly-esteemed citizen. He was elected chief burgess of the borough three times,—in 1837 and 1838 and in 1859. At the time of his death he was a director of the First National Bank of Huntingdon. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and died in the faith of that denomination. He was born on the 20th of July, 1800, and lived until the 10th of November, 1863, and was at the time of his death aged sixty-three years, three months, and twenty-one days.

John Stewart, one of the associate justices of Huntingdon County, was born in Dauphin County, Pa., on the 18th of February, 1786. He was not "to the manner born," but we are credibly informed that he "came to the manor" about the year 1800, when he was about fourteen years of age. Not much is known of his early history. In April, 1813, after the war was declared under the administration of President Madison against Great Britain, he was drafted into the service of his country. He went from Alexandria, Huntingdon Co., to Erie, starting on the 6th day of May of the same year, in Capt. Morris' company of Pennsylvania militia, and arrived there in due course of time after fatiguing marches. He, among others of his company, volunteered to go on board of a vesssel to the assistance of Commodore

Perry at the celebrated battle of Lake Erie, which was fought on the 10th of September, 1813, and arrived at the bloody scene about an hour after the battle was over, and was rejoiced to learn that victory had perched upon the American flag. Afterwards he was stationed at Fort Malden, in Upper Canada, a fort which has long since fallen into ruins. At or about the time of his discharge he was promoted to a captaincy, and was commissioned by Governor Simon Snyder, and commanded a company of volunteers about fifteen years. So much for his military career.

Capt. John Stewart was a Democrat of the old school, of the straightest sect, and prominent in his party, probably the most influential man in his township for many years. He was always a host within himself in that Democratic stronghold, "Old Barree," and many of the rank and file looked up to him and learned their political lessons from him. Although a strong partisan, he never appeared to have any hankering after the spoils of victory, that cohesive power by which parties are held together, sometimes, more than by principle.

On the 23d of March, 1846, his military title was exchanged for a civil one. Capt. Stewart now became Judge Stewart. Governor Shunk at that time commissioned him an associate judge of the courts of Huntingdon County, and he served out his term of five years, after which the associate judges were elected. On the bench he was attentive, careful, and conscientious in the discharge of his duties.

In person he was tall, large, and well formed, and of a fair and sandy complexion; a man of remarkable firmness, pure morals, and good habits; an agreeable and entertaining companion, a good neighbor and good citizen. He departed this life on the 16th of October, 1861, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He died at his residence on his farm near Manor Hill, deeply and sincerely lamented by his numerous friends and acquaintances.

Jonathan McWilliams was a native of Spruce Creek Valley, Huntingdon Co., Pa., where he resided from his birth down to within a few years of the time of his death. He represented Huntingdon County in the Legislature of the State two sessions, having been elected in 1842 and in 1843, three years before the organization of Blair County. He was the last associate judge in the county appointed by the Governor, his commission being dated the 4th of April, 1851. The office having become elective, he was elected in the fall of the same year, and served out his term, ending in 1856, when he was succeeded by Benjamin F. Patton.

Judge McWilliams was one of the founders of the Huntingdon County Agricultural Society, and became its first president. He took a great interest in agriculture, and was a warm and consistent advocate of the cause of temperance, as well as of other moral reformation and improvement, a man of very general and correct information. In person he was tall, slender, and erect. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, and manifested a deep interest in church affairs, exemplifying his profession by a Christian walk and conversation. These characteristics shone conspicuously in his judicial life. He removed to McVeytown, Mifflin Co., in November, 1866, and died at that place on the 2d of September, 1870. He was born in Franklin township on the 3d of June, 1797, and was at the time of his death aged seventy-three years and three months.

Thomas Finney Stewart, one of the associate judges of Huntingdon County, was born in Hanover township, Dauphin Co., Pa. His grandfather, Samuel Stewart, was born near Glasgow, in Scotland, and emigrated to this country in 1735 with his family, among whom was Samuel T. Stewart, an infant, born in 1734, who grew up and performed good military service in the Revolutionary war, and became the father of Thomas Finney Stewart, the subject of this sketch. Thomas F. Stewart was born on the 11th of August, 1794. His mother's maiden name was Nancy Calhoun. He was only eight years of age when his father died, and nineteen when his mother and family moved to Spruce Creek, Centre Co., in 1813. He drove a two-horse wagon freighted with the most valuable articles, while his mother and his brother David made the trip on horseback, and his sister Margaret in the stage. His brother William C. had gone there a year or more before the family moved. His elder brothers, William C. and David, became members of the well-known firm of Lyon, Shorb & Co., extensively engaged in the manufacture of iron. His sister, Margaret A., the youngest of the family, was married to John Lyon in July, 1820. Thomas F. Stewart resided on a farm on Shaver's Creek, in West township, and pursued the business of farming. He was elected an associate judge in October, 1851, on the Democratic ticket. He moved to Petersburg, where he spent the latter years of his life in retirement.

Judge Stewart was well informed on all ordinary subjects, had an extensive acquaintance with the people of the upper and middle portions of the county, and was therefore well qualified to perform the duties devolving upon him as an associate judge. His conduct was characterized by uprightness and impartiality, and gave general satisfaction.

He was of Presbyterian ancestry through a long line, but in early life he imbibed the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church and united with that denomination. He was the only one of the family who forsook the faith of his fathers, and he lived a consistent Christian life and retained the new faith to the end of his days.

In 1818 he married Mary, daughter of John and Nancy Bailey, of Penn's Valley. They had fifteen children, seven of whom died in infancy. Of the remaining eight only five are now (September, 1882) living. His widow survived him but a short time, and died in 1866.

Judge Thomas F. Stewart was a man of fine personal appearance, a little over medium size, of regular features, hair turned gray in his latter years, modest and unassuming and pleasant in manner and conversation. He died at his home in Petersburg on the 8th of August, 1864, aged seventy years less two days.

JOHN BREWSTER was elected an associate judge in October, 1856, and served until the time of his death, which occurred late in the fall of 1859. He was a resident of the borough of Shirleysburg at the time of his election and at the time of his death, and was extensively engaged in the business of tanning. In January, 1840, a great calamity befell him which cast a gloom upon him for the remainder of his life. On the 2d of January, in the small hours of the night, his dwelling-house was discovered to be on fire and the flames bursting through the roof. His aged mother and a grandson aged about six years and a female relative of the family all perished in the flames. A very deep snow had fallen in the night, and the fire had made such fearful progress before it was discovered that it was impossible to aid the sufferers sufficiently to make their escape.

Judge Brewster had accumulated a large estate, the greater portion of which he gave to religious and charitable institutions in his lifetime. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and contributed quite liberally to it and institutions connected with it. He was a large man, well informed, attentive to business, and highly esteemed by all who knew him.

JOHN LONG was appointed an associate judge by Governor Packer on the 9th of December, 1859, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of Judge Brewster, and served till the first Monday in December, 1860, when he was succeeded by his brother-in-law, William B. Leas.

His father, Christian Long, came from Maryland to Huntingdon County about the year 1790, and was called to the ministry in the German Baptist Church in early life, and labored faithfully until he was called hence. He was at the time of his death a bishop.

Judge Long was born in this county, and was of the faith of his father. For a while he followed agricultural pursuits successfully, and in 1829 he engaged in the mercantile business in Shirleysburg, and continued in that business for many years, and during this time he was appointed associate judge, as above stated. For some years before his death he had retired from business. His conduct during his brief judicial career gave general satisfaction. He was an honest man, of stately form and presence, and was held in great esteem by all who knew him. He died at his home in Shirleysburg on the 15th of December, 1877, in the eighty-second year of his age.

WILLIAM B. LEAS was born in Perry County, Pa., on the 7th of February, 1812; took up his residence in Shirleysburg in August, 1829, and continued to reside there till the time of his death; was elected an associate judge in October, 1860, succeeding his brother-in-law, John Long, who had been appointed to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of John Brewster, whose term would not have expired until December, 1861. Thus we had three associate judges within a period of five years,—Brewster for three years, Long for one, and Leas for one,—all from Shirleysburg. But Judge Leas was elected for a full term and served it out, ending on the first Monday in December, 1865, and thus we have a precession of one year in the election of our associate judges.

Judge Leas was in business for nearly fifty years, merchandising, farming, and tanning. During this time he also served in many of the borough offices and as postmaster under several administrations. He was also a stockholder and director in the Union Bank of Huntingdon. In July, 1871, he, in company with Rev. Dr. A. K. Bell and Rev. J. W. Evans, started on a tour to Europe, and traveled all through England, Scotland, and Ireland and a great portion of the Continent. He wrote numerous interesting and instructive letters home during his journeyings, which were published in the newspapers and extensively read.

He accumulated a large estate from the profits of his business, which he left to his family after making liberal bequests to the Baptist Church, of which he was a working member, and to other religious and charitable institutions.

As an associate judge, the duties of his office were all discharged with that scrupulous care and attention which characterized all the social and business relations of his life.

He died very suddenly in the cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad, just after entering them at Mount Union, on his way to Huntingdon, on the 17th of February, 1882, aged seventy-years and ten days. He was buried at Shirleysburg.

Next come the living associate and ex-associate judges of the county. The oldest and longest retired of these is BENJAMIN F. PATTON, who was elected in 1856 and re-elected in 1861. He was residing in the village of Warrior's Mark at the time of his election, where he had been a justice of the peace for a number of years and also engaged in the mercantile business. After the expiration of his second term he removed to Altoona, Blair Co., where he is now living at an advanced age.

ANTHONY J. BEAVER, of Penn township, was elected in 1865 and re-elected in 1870. He had served in the Union army, and lost an arm in the war of the Rebellion. He had returned but recently, when he was nominated by the Republican party and elected. He is now engaged in the mercantile business at James Creek. He is apparently about fifty years of age and in good health.

DAVID CLARKSON, of Cassville, was elected in 1866, and again in 1871. He is now living in Cassville, where he is engaged as a cabinet-maker and undertaker. He is active and apparently about sixty-five years old. He had, previous to his election as an associate judge, served as a justice of the peace and as director of the poor.

ADAM HEETER, of Clay township, was elected in 1875. At the end of his term he retired to his farm, in the same township, where he is now engaged in farming. In 1867 he was elected a director of the poor. He is about sixty years of age, in good health, and active.

GRAFFUS MILLER, of the borough of Huntingdon, was elected on the Democratic ticket in 1876, and served one term, ending in 1881. He was engaged in the mercantile business before his election, which business he carried on during his term of office, and continues yet. He had served a term as sheriff of the county from 1856 to 1859.

JOHN LAPORTE, of Franklin township, was elected in 1880, and is now the senior associate judge in commission.

GEORGE W. JOHNSTON was elected from the borough of Huntingdon in 1881, to succeed Judge Miller. He held the office of sheriff of the county from 1862 to 1865. He also served as jury commissioner in 1874 by appointment. He had previously been engaged in the mercantile business successively at Petersburg and at Huntingdon, and was well qualified for the duties devolving upon associate judges. He is in his seventy-fourth year.

Here follow the living members of the bench and bar. Limited space will only allow a few lines to be devoted to each. The associate judges will be introduced in the order of their commissions, and the attorneys in the order of the date of their admission to the bar.

JOHN DEAN, the present able and efficient president judge of the Twenty-fourth Judicial District, resides in Hollidaysburg, and as a chapter is devoted to the bench and bar of Blair County, no further mention is made of him here than to say that he is the immediate successor of Judge Taylor, having been elected in 1871, and re-elected in 1881.

JOHN WILLIAMSON is the senior living member of the Huntingdon County bar. He was born in Washington City, D. C., on the 14th of February, 1796. His father was of Scotch and his mother of German descent. He studied law in the office of James M. Kelley, in Indiana, Pa., and was admitted to the bar at that place in September, 1819. He was admitted at Huntingdon at April term, 1821, and from that time to the present he has been a citizen of Huntingdon, where he has been in active practice ever since down to about the year 1865, with the exception of the interval of his residence in Washington while in office there. His practice continued through some forty years, during a great portion of which time he was concerned in the trial of nearly all the criminal cases in the county, generally for the defense, and was very successful.

He was not long at the bar till he divided his time and attention between law and politics, and in 1830 was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature, with John Blair, over Alexander Dysart and Henry Beaver, as a volunteer candidate.

In 1832 he was a candidate for the State Senate, and received 2170 votes in Huntingdon County to 1650 cast for George McCulloch, his competitor, but he was defeated by the other counties in the district,—Mifflin, Cambria, and Juniata.

In 1836 he was a candidate for Congress, and received 1922 votes in the county, while the opposing candidate, W. W. Potter, received but 1793. This district, too, was Democratic, and Mr. Williamson was defeated by the other counties in it,—Centre and Mifflin.

In March, 1841, President Harrison appointed him recorder of the land office at Washington, in which he served till the end of President Tyler's administration.

Mr. Williamson is a large man, well formed, of fine general appearance, courteous and affable, of good conversational powers and general intelligence, full of keen wit and humor, and a genial and pleasing companion. He can speak the German language, and this makes him popular too among the Germans. He has often been pressed into service in court as interpreter when German witnesses had to be examined who could neither speak nor understand English. He is now (August, 1882) in his eighty-seventh year, in a good state of preservation for an octogenarian, with his mental powers but little, if any, impaired.

WILLIAM P. ORBISON ranks next to Mr. Williamson in point of seniority. He is the son of William Orbison, deceased, a former member of the same bar; was born Nov. 4, 1814, at Huntingdon; attended the Huntingdon Academy, Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa., where he graduated in September, 1832; read law in Huntingdon with the late John G. Miles for two years and a half, entered the law school at Carlisle, where he remained six months, graduating in November, 1835, and was admitted to the bar at Carlisle at November term of that year. He then returned to Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar on Nov. 12, 1835. In the spring of 1836 he entered into partnership with James M. Bell, and continued with him until Mr. Bell removed to Hollidaysburg in 1845. Mr. Orbison afterwards continued to practice by himself. He was president of the First National Bank of Huntingdon from 1871 to 1878, succeeding James M. Bell. He is now, at the close of the year 1882, in a good state of preservation.

DAVID BLAIR was born in Dublin township, Huntingdon Co.; son of the late John Blair, deceased; educated at Washington College, Washington, Pa.; studied law in the same place in the office of William Baird until he died, and then in the office of Messrs. Leet & Atchison, and was admitted to the bar of Washington County in June, 1836. He was admitted to the bar in Huntingdon on the 8th of August, 1836, and has practiced here ever since.

Mr. Blair was appointed county treasurer three times, in 1838, 1839, and 1840. In 1846 he was elected a member of the House of Representatives, and re-elected in 1847. He has also been elected to borough offices, such as school director and burgess, and has lately vacated the office of chief burgess.

THEODORE H. CREMER was born at York, Pa., March 16, 1817; son of Abraham Cremer and Mary M., his wife, whose maiden name was Haller. He attended the best private schools and the York County Academy before the era of common schools. In 1837 he read law in his native town in the office of Robert J. Fisher (afterwards president judge). In 1838–39 he read law in the office of James Armstrong, at Williamsport, Pa. In December, 1839, he read law and clerked in the prothonotary's office in Huntingdon under James Steel, and in the latter part of 1840 entered the law school connected with Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa., and graduated with the class of 1841, went to York, and was examined and admitted to the bar there on the 3d of August of that year, then returned to Huntingdon, and was admitted on the 10th of the same month, from which date to the present he has been a resident of Huntingdon.

In 1848 he was elected prothonotary, and re-elected in 1851. At the end of his second term he resumed practice, and has continued at the bar ever since. In 1856 he was elected district attorney without opposition. He has also been honored with the offices of school director and chief burgess.

WILLIAM DORRIS, only son of William Dorris, merchant, deceased, was born at Huntingdon, on the 10th of September, 1822. After preparing himself in the schools and academy in his native town, he entered Lafayette College, at Easton, Pa., from which he graduated in September, 1840. He then entered the office as a student of Messrs. Miles & Taylor, attorneys in full practice in Huntingdon, and after the usual course of study was admitted to the bar on the 15th of August, 1843. During a portion of his student life and as a part of his training for the bar he clerked in the office of the prothonotary, a good school in which to acquire a knowledge of legal business. Soon after his admission he entered into partnership with John G. Miles, one of his preceptors, taking the place of Mr. Taylor, and the firm practiced under the name of Miles & Dorris from that time until Mr. Miles removed to Peoria, Ill., after which Mr. Dorris continued to practice at his residence at the northwest corner of Fourth and Penn Streets, within two hundred feet of his birthplace, ever since. Messrs. Miles & Dorris were the resident attorneys of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company during the time of its construction, and until the dissolution of the firm, and Mr. Dorris has been continued in that capacity down to the present time.

During the war of the Rebellion, in 1862, Mr. Dorris was appointed colonel of the Third Regiment of Pennsylvania Militia, and served during the threatened invasion which was repelled at Antietam.

JOHN SCOTT was born at Alexandria, on the 14th of July, 1824, and is of Scotch-Irish descent. His father, also named John Scott, was a major of volunteers in the war of 1812, and was elected to Congress in 1828, in the district composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Mifflin, Centre, and Clearfield, and represented said district in the Twenty-First Congress. His son, the subject of this brief sketch, received such an education as the schools of his native village afforded, and afterwards was instructed by private teachers in Latin and Greek.

In 1842 he entered as a student the law office of Alexander Thompson, in Chambersburg, and at the end of the usual course of study was admitted to the bar. He returned to his native county, and was admitted to practice in its several courts on the 23d of January, 1846, and opening an office in Huntingdon, was soon afterwards appointed deputy attorney-general for the county, and discharged the duties of that office for several years with marked fidelity and ability. He possessed talents of such a high order that he was at once recognized as the leader of the Huntingdon bar, and ranked with the ablest lawyers in the interior of the State. His health failing, in 1853 he visited Europe, in company with the elder William Dorris, and was much benefited by his trip.

In 1861, although a Democrat, he was elected to the State Legislature without opposition, the county being Republican. He was a war Democrat, and acted with the Republicans in the organization of the House. He advocated the re-election of Governor Curtin in 1863, and the re-election of President Lincoln in 1864. In the canvass of 1868 he took an active part in the support of the Republican ticket, and his able arguments before the masses of the people attracted public attention towards him as a suitable successor to Mr. Buckalew in the United States Senate, and when the Legislature convened he was elected to that important position, and took his seat on the 4th of March, 1869, and served till the end of his term of six years.

Space will not permit a review of Mr. Scott's senatorial career. The reader is referred to the "Congressional Record" for that, and it will be found that the State and nation suffered no detriment at his hands. He fulfilled the predictions of the Pittsburgh Gazette at the time of his election: "Being a lawyer of great depth and acute discernment, it may be naturally supposed that he will soon take a front rank with the foremost in Congress, peculiarly in questions involving international law and the interest and protection of home manufactures, a subject on which he is well informed and entertains broad and favorable views."

Mr. Scott is at present residing in Philadelphia, but he has never severed his connection with the Huntingdon bar. He still owns his former place of residence here, and has other interests and associations that bring him into our courts occasionally as counsel and attorney. He is at present general solicitor for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

R. V. Bruce Petrikin

When in full practice in Huntingdon, Mr. Scott had associated with him Samuel T. Brown, under the firm-name of Scott & Brown, and after John M. Bailey was admitted to the bar he became a partner, and the firm-name was changed to Scott, Brown & Bailey. Mr. Scott withdrew from the firm in or about the year 1870.

Robert Bruce Petrikin, the subject of this sketch, was born at Muncy, Lycoming Co., Pa., on the 12th day of September, 1826. His father, William A. Petrikin, was born in Bellefonte, Pa., where his paternal grandfather, William Petrikin, a native of Scotland, settled in 1798. The maiden name of his mother was Margaret Montgomery, the eldest daughter of John Montgomery.

He received his academic education at the academy of the Rev. Dr. Shedden, at McEwensville, Pa., and completed his collegiate education at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

He soon afterwards removed to Huntingdon, and on the 17th day of June, 1847, entered on the study of the law in the office of Andrew Porter Wilson, then and for many years afterwards an eminent and successful lawyer. On the 13th of August, 1849, he was admitted to practice law in the several courts of Huntingdon County, and entered at once upon a lucrative practice as a partner with his late tutor, Gen. Wilson. From the outset of his professional career he was noted for his industry, energy, and professional skill.

At the breaking out of the Rebellion he enlisted as a private soldier, and was elected major of the Fifth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers. He served with distinction in the army, and at the expiration of his term of service returned to Huntingdon and resumed the practice of his profession, to which he has ever since devoted his time and energy. He soon afterwards married Mary Pohl, a daughter of Henry Pohl, of Philadelphia, and the result of this union is two daughters and three sons, the eldest of whom is pursuing his studies at Yale College.

Although elected to the Senate of Pennsylvania in the fall of 1870, which position he filled for three years, he has not sought or seemed to desire political preferment. His term in the Senate was marked by a desire on his part to introduce and pass wholesome acts, many of which emanating from his pen became laws, notably among which was the act establishing the fishery system and fishery commission for the State of Pennsylvania, the law prohibiting the frequent changes in school-books, and the law giving to laborers, miners, and others a lien for wages.

He is a gentleman of strong convictions, of pleasant and genial manners, and is intensely devoted to his friends. He detests ingratitude and infidelity. He is a fine scholar and a strong, terse writer. Now past the meridian of life, he is in the possession of excellent health, and with his ripe experience as a lawyer and his love for his books, and with his well-stored and well-poised legal mind, he might justly be styled "the mentor" of the Huntingdon bar.

Samuel T. Brown was born in Mifflin County, Pa., on the 21st of March, 1827. He received his education in schools taught by his father, John Brown, before the era of common schools, and in a private school taught by Rev. James Nourse, in Milroy, Mifflin Co., Pa.

In April, 1849, he commenced the study of law under the instruction of Thomas P. Campbell, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Huntingdon County on the 12th of April, 1852. He then went to Ridgway, Elk Co., with a view to practice there; but finding that region too much of a wilderness, after waiting six months for clients who did not come, he pulled down his "shingle" and came back to Huntingdon, and after teaching school a term or two, and serving in the engineer corps on the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad, he entered into partnership in the practice of law with John Scott in October, 1853, and continued his law partner until his election to the United States Senate, and for about a year afterwards. Mr. Bailey also became a member of the firm soon after his admission to the bar.

In 1868, Mr. Brown was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature, and was an active member of that body at the time that Mr. Scott, his partner, was elected to the United States Senate.

Mr. Brown was elected district attorney in 1858, and served till the close of 1861. He has also served in various borough offices, such as chief burgess, school director, and in other positions. He is now the senior partner in the firm of Brown, Bailey & Brown.

John W. Mattern was born in Franklin township, Huntingdon Co., on the 12th of October, 1821; was educated in the schools of the neighborhood, and partially at Allegheny College, at Meadville; worked with his father, Samuel Mattern, at the woolen manufacturing business in Franklinville until April, 1849. In February, 1852, he commenced the study of the law with John Scott; was admitted at April term, 1854, and has continued in the practice ever since that time. He held the office of deputy United States collector for a part of Huntingdon County in 1862–63, and is now holding a position to which he was recently appointed in the Pension Office at Washington City.

William H. Woods was born at Lewistown, Pa., on the 17th of May, 1829; son of Rev. James Woods, for many years pastor of the Presbyterian Church in that place; attended the academy at Lewistown; entered the college at Princeton, N. J., from which he graduated in 1848; read law with his brother, Samuel S. Woods, late president judge of Lewistown, now deceased, and was admitted to the bar of Mifflin County in 1858. He came to Huntingdon, and was admitted to practice on the 12th of January, 1859, opened an office, and has been in successful practice ever since. Prior to his admission as an attorney he conducted Milnwood Academy, at Shade Gap, in this county, for several years, and had also been engaged as a teacher in other institutions of learning.

ROBERT MILTON SPEER was born on the 8th of September, 1838, at Cassville, Huntingdon Co., and was educated at Cassville Seminary. After teaching school for several terms he commenced the study of the law in April, 1857, with Messrs. Wilson & Petrikin, in Huntingdon, and continued with them until the 14th of November, 1859, when he was examined and admitted to the bar. In the spring of 1860 he opened an office in Huntingdon, where he has been in full and successful practice ever since.

In January, 1863, he was elected assistant clerk of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg.

In 1870 he received the Democratic nomination for Congress and was elected, and in 1872 he was renominated and re-elected, the district being composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Blair, Cambria, and Mifflin, and he served and represented this district in the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses to the satisfaction of his constituents.

In 1872, Mr. Speer was a delegate to the National Convention which met at Baltimore and nominated Horace Greeley for President, and in 1878 he was chairman of the State Democratic Committee, and in 1880 he was a delegate at large from Pennsylvania to the National Democratic Convention that nominated Gen. Hancock for President.

Mr. Speer has also served his neighbors and fellow-citizens in the Borough Council, and two successive terms as school director, the last term as president of the board.

Mr. Speer has had associated with him, his brother-in-law, E. S. McMurtrie, in the practice of law, since August, 1866.

JOHN MUMPER BAILEY, whose paternal ancestry was of English and his maternal of German descent, was born in Dillsburg, York Co., Pa., July 11, 1839. His father, Samuel N. Bailey, represented York County in the State Legislature for three consecutive terms, and was also lieutenant-colonel of the Twelfth Pennsylvania Reserves.

Mr. Bailey was educated in the common schools of his day, and also attended several terms of the Tuscarora Academy in Juniata County, then in charge of Professor J. H. Shumaker. Before completing his academic education he was under the necessity of earning money with which to pay his tuition fees, and in the fall of 1857 commenced teaching the district schools in the townships of Walker, Porter, and Franklin in Huntingdon County, which he continued during the winter terms until the spring of 1860, when, as a student, he entered the law-office of Scott & Brown, in Huntingdon, composed of John Scott, who subsequently became a United States senator, and is now general solicitor for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Philadelphia, and Samuel T. Brown, with whom he is now associated in the practice of the law.

He continued to teach school during the winter seasons and study law the balance of the year till Aug. 11, 1862, when he was admitted to the bar. Soon after his admission to the bar he became associated with his former preceptors, under the firm-name of Scott, Brown & Bailey, which relation continued uninterruptedly and with the utmost harmony until the election of Mr. Scott to a seat in the United States Senate in 1869, after which the business was continued under the firm-name of Brown & Bailey until 1882, when Charles G. Brown, a son of his partner, became a member of the firm, and the partnership name changed to Brown, Bailey & Brown, as it is still continued.

Mr. Bailey has devoted his whole time to his profession, and but little or none of it to politics, and has never been a candidate for any political office except for delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1872–73, when he was nominated by the Democratic party and elected to represent in part the counties of Huntingdon, Centre, Mifflin, and Juniata, these constituting the Twenty-second Senatorial District.

In the convention he served on the committees of "revenue, taxation and finance," "commissions, offices, oaths of office, and incompatibilities of office." He has also served his townsmen in the councils of the borough of Huntingdon.

Mr. Bailey was married in the spring of 1869 to Miss Lettie Fisher, daughter of Thomas Fisher, of Huntingdon.

P. M. LYTLE, son of Nathaniel Lytle, was born in Franklin township, at the village of Spruce Creek, on the 6th of February, 1840. He was educated in the common schools of his native township and of the adjoining township of Morris, and at Tuscarora Academy, Academia, Pa. At about the age of twenty he entered the office of Messrs. Wilson & Petrikin as a student, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Huntingdon County on the 11th of August, 1862. He has continued in practice in Huntingdon ever since.

WILLIAM MCK. WILLIAMSON, son of Rev. McKnight Williamson, was born in Juniata County, Pa., on the 29th of June, 1840, educated at Milnwood Academy, at Shade Gap, Huntingdon County, Pa., read law in Huntingdon, in the office of his brother-in-law, William H. Woods, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of the county on the 17th of January, 1865. He immediately entered into partnership with Mr. Woods, his preceptor, and continued

R. M. Greer.

Jno. M. Bailey

in that relation until his appointment to the office of prothonotary by Governor Hartranft, on Nov. 22, 1877, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Lewis M. Stewart, and was nominated and elected to the same office in 1878, and again in 1881, and is the present incumbent.

G. Barton Armitage was born at Huntingdon, on the 6th of February, 1846. He is the son of John Armitage, who was elected sheriff in 1844, and had been deputy sheriff during the whole term of Sheriff Shaver, and read law afterwards and was admitted to the bar on the 21st of November, 1853, and died in the spring of 1857. He was educated in the select schools of Huntingdon and at the Huntingdon Academy, studied law in the office of Messrs. Scott & Brown, and was admitted to practice on the 14th of August, 1865.

Milton S. Lytle, son of Nathaniel Lytle, and brother of P. M. Lytle, was born in Franklin township, Huntingdon Co., Pa., on the 19th of October, 1842, educated at the public schools and at the Pennsylvania State College, read law in the office of R. M. Speer, and in the office of Messrs. Benedict, Stewart & Lytle, in Huntingdon, and was admitted to practice on the 13th of August, 1866. He was elected district attorney in 1869. He is the author of the "History of Huntingdon County," published in 1876, a work of merit.

K. Allen Lovell was born in Cass township, July 20, 1841. He received his education in the common schools, supplemented by study at J. B. Kidder's seminary in Shirleysburg and State Normal School at Millersville. He studied law with Messrs. Scott & Brown at Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar Aug. 10, 1864. He commenced practice in November, 1865, and was appointed district attorney in 1866, was re-elected, and served in this capacity for three years. In 1877 was elected chief burgess of Huntingdon borough, and also served as chairman of the board of health. (For a more complete biography see Huntingdon borough.)

E. Stewart McMurtrie, son of William E. McMurtrie, was born in Huntingdon on the 13th of August, 1842, graduated at Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., on the 4th of September, 1864, studied law in Indiana, Pa., with Messrs. Stewart & Clark, and was admitted there in June, 1866, and in Huntingdon on the 13th of August following, and immediately formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, R. M. Speer, under the firm-name of Speer & McMurtrie, and has continued in that relation ever since.

J. Randolph Simpson, son of John Simpson, was born in Huntingdon, Dec. 13, 1841, educated in the public schools of the borough at intervals between working on his father's farm, in a carpenter-shop, and clerking in a book-store. He entered the army and was sworn into service 16th of August, 1862, became sergeant of Company C, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, was wounded Sept. 17, 1862, at the battle of Antietam. His brother, George W., of the same company, color-sergeant, was killed in the same battle. Mr. Simpson, after being in the hospital and home on furlough, was discharged on the 6th of April, 1863, on account of disability, afterwards taught school two years in Huntingdon, commenced the study of law with A. W. Benedict in March, 1864, took charge of the prothonotary's office for W. C. Wagoner in August, 1865, and was himself nominated and elected to the office of prothonotary the following year, receiving a majority of ten hundred and thirty-five over his competitor, and the largest vote of any candidate on the ticket. He acted as prothonotary to the end of his term, and declined a renomination.

He was admitted to the bar on the 15th of August, 1866. On the 23d of January, 1869, he formed a law partnership with G. Barton Armitage, under the name of Simpson & Armitage, and in December of the same year a partnership in the insurance business, under the name of G. B. Armitage & Co.

H. E. Shaffer was born in Lewisburg, Union Co., Pa., Aug. 21, 1844, was educated in the common schools, and at Airy View Academy, Port Royal, Juniata Co., under the care of Prof. David Wilson, began reading law on the 21st of August, 1862, with James S. Linn, in Lewisburg, father of John Blair Linn, and continued with him until August, 1864, when he went to Mansfield, Ohio, and read law in the office of Senator M. M. May until June 24, 1866, when he was examined and admitted in the District Court in session at Bucyrus, Crawford Co., Ohio, to practice in all the courts in Ohio, and on the 13th of April, 1868, he was admitted to practice in the several courts of Huntingdon County.

In 1868, Mr. Shaffer moved to Fulton County, and for four years practiced law, and at the same time edited the Republican. In 1872 he removed to Mount Union, opened an office there, and has been in practice ever since. He has been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and in the District Court of the United States.

Samuel E. Fleming, son of James Fleming, late of the borough of Huntingdon, deceased, was born at Manor Hill, Huntingdon Co., on the 31st of January, 1845. He was educated in the common schools of Barree township and at Tuscarora Academy, Academia, Juniata Co., read law with R. Milton Speer, and was admitted to the bar on the 10th of August, 1868, and has been in practice ever since, and has also been editor of the Huntingdon Monitor for over eight years, and joint owner of it with Mr. Speer.

M. M. McNeil was born near Three Springs, Jan. 9, 1847. At the age of fourteen years he was sent to the academy at Martinsburg, Blair Co., Pa.; at sixteen commenced teaching common schools during the winter and attending the State Normal School at Millersville during the summer, until the fall of 1866, when he entered the office of R. Milton Speer as law student, and remained with him until the time of his admission to the bar, on the 10th of August, 1868.

In 1869 he was elected prothonotary and clerk of the Courts of Quarter Session and Oyer and Terminer for the term of three years. After the expiration of his official term he entered into partnership with R. Bruce Petrikin and M. B. Massey, which partnership continued until the fall of 1875, when Mr. Massey, on account of failing health, withdrew, and the remaining partners have continued to practice under the name of Petrikin & McNeil.

JOHN SYLVANUS BLAIR was born Jan. 31, 1848, in Harrisburg; son of David Blair; educated at Princeton College, New Jersey, where he graduated in 1866; studied law in Huntingdon, in the office of his father and in the office of William Dorris, and was admitted to the bar on the 10th of August, 1868, and practiced in Huntingdon until 1873, since which date he has been in the office of the Department of Justice at Washington City as assistant attorney. .

THOMAS W. MYTON is a native of West township, Huntingdon Co., born Feb. 13, 1842; was educated in the common schools; studied law in the office of J. Sewell Stewart, and was admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 12th of August, 1868.

He served in the war of the Rebellion, and lost an arm at Chancellorsville.

Mr. Myton was elected treasurer of the county in 1865, and prothonotary and clerk of the criminal courts in 1872. In November, 1882, he was elected to the House of Representatives at Harrisburg to represent Huntingdon County for the next two years. Mr. Myton and J. F. Schock are partners, practicing under the name of Myton & Schock.

J. HALL MUSSER was born in Jackson township, Huntingdon Co., on the 14th of January, 1844; son of William Musser, deceased, of said township. He attended the common schools, and at the age of sixteen years entered the academy at Pine Grove Mills, Centre Co., and left said academy and entered the army on the 21st October, 1861, and remained in the military service until the close of the war. He again entered the same academy, and remained there about two years. In the spring of 1867 he entered the office of Messrs. Scott & Brown as a law student, and was admitted to practice on the 12th of April, 1869. In the fall of 1873 he was appointed by the court to act as district attorney during the protracted illness of H. C. Madden, who had been elected to that office. In the spring of 1874, while still acting district attorney, he was appointed postmaster at Huntingdon, which position he held until the fall of 1881, when he resigned.

DAVID CALDWELL was born at Water Street, Huntingdon Co., and was educated in the common schools of his native village, and in Alexandria and the old Hook school near Spruce Creek, after which he went to Hollidaysburg and learned the trade of tanning with his uncle David. In 1849 he came to Huntingdon, where his father, Samuel Caldwell, then resided, and being still in his minority, he entered the public school at Huntingdon as a pupil, and finished his education, as far as the schools were concerned, in 1850. While at the Huntingdon school he studied surveying, and afterwards assisted his father, who was then deputy surveyor of the county. In the winter of 1850–51 he taught the Hook school, in Franklin township, where he had himself been a pupil from 1842 to 1846. During the next six years, from 1851 till 1857, he devoted his time and attention to clerking and managing at iron-works for Dr. Peter Shoenberger and others in the counties of Huntingdon and Bedford, and in the lumber and coal business in Cambria, until called home by the death of his father in May, 1857, to undertake the settlement of his estate. In October of the same year he was elected prothonotary and clerk of courts, and served three years. He was admitted to the bar on the 20th day of January, 1870, since which time he has continued in active practice. (For a sketch of his ancestors, see Porter township.)

H. CLAY MADDEN was born at Maddensville, Huntingdon Co., on the 13th of March, 1845; educated in common schools, and one term at Milnwood Academy, afterwards at Academia, Juniata Co. Attended Law Department of the University of Iowa City, Iowa, and was admitted in that State on the 30th of June, 1869, and of Huntingdon on the 14th of November, 1870, and has been in practice here continuously ever since. Mr. Madden was elected district attorney in 1872, for a full term of three years. He is now counsel for the county commissioners.

WILLIAM A. FLEMING was born in Clarion County, Pa., on the 17th of September, 1845; educated two years at Dayton Union Academy, graduated October, 1866; attended during a two years' course in the Law Department of Michigan University, and graduated March, 1869. Afterwards studied law in the office of Judge McEnally, in Clearfield, Pa., for one year, and was admitted to the Clearfield bar in 1870, and to the Huntingdon bar on the 10th of April, 1871.

ROBERT A. ORBISON, son of William P. Orbison, was born in Huntingdon on the 31st of January, 1849, and received his education at the Huntingdon Academy and Washington and Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa., from which he graduated in 1868; read law in his father's office in Huntingdon for two years, after which he went to the Albany Law School one year, where he graduated, and was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of New York at Albany. He then returned to Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar on the 25th of May, 1871, and practiced here till 1877, when he went to Minnesota, and was admitted to practice in that State, and remained there for about one year, then returned to Huntingdon, and remained in his father's office till July, 1880, when he went to Washington City, having been appointed assistant to the assistant attorney-general who had charge of defending claims against the United States in the Court of Claims. In August, 1882, he returned to Huntingdon, and has continued in practice with his father.

D. Baldwin

J. F. SCHOCK was born in Oneida township, Huntingdon Co., on the 13th of October, 1849. He is the son of William Schock, a prosperous farmer of that township. J. F. Schock was educated in the common schools and at the academy at Pine Grove, Centre Co., and at the seminary at Williamsport, Pa., and became a teacher in the common schools himself, teaching graded and other schools; afterwards studied law in the office of Messrs. Scott, Brown & Bailey, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Huntingdon County on the 20th day of June, 1872. Afterwards he was appointed deputy prothonotary under Thomas W. Myton, and also under his successor, Lewis M. Stewart, and after the death of the latter he held the office as acting prothonotary for a month or two, until a successor was appointed.

Mr. Schock is the junior partner in the law firm of Myton & Schock.

J. CHALMERS JACKSON, son of George Jackson, a highly-respected farmer of Jackson township, was born in said township on the 11th of November, 1847. He is a graduate of Jefferson College, of the class of 1871, and read law with Messrs. Petrikin & Massey, in Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar on the 11th of November, 1872.

Mr. Jackson was elected district attorney in 1875 for the term of three years.

L. S. GEISSINGER was born in Juniata township on the 15th of February, 1851. He is the son of William Geissinger, an honored farmer of that township. He was educated in the common schools of Juniata and Walker districts, at Rainsburg six months, six months at Millersville Normal School, and three years at Mercersburg College, Franklin Co., Pa. He studied law in Huntingdon in the office of Messrs. Scott, Brown & Bailey, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of the county on the 15th of January, 1873.

Mr. Geissinger was appointed notary public by Governor Hartranft in 1876, and reappointed by Governor Hoyt in 1879, and United States commissioner on the 20th of March, 1882. He was counsel for the county commissioners in 1876–78.

GEORGE B. ORLADY, son of Dr. Henry Orlady, was born at Petersburg, Huntingdon Co., Pa., on the 22d of February, 1850. He received a common school education, after which he entered the State Agricultural College, May 10, 1864, entered Bell's Mills Academy in December, 1866, and Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., in August, 1867, and graduated in August, 1869. Read medicine with his father, entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in September, 1869, and graduated M.D. in March, 1871. Practiced medicine at Petersburg a short time. Studied law with Samuel S. Blair, Hollidaysburg, and was admitted to the bar of Blair County in January, 1875. Came to Huntingdon, and was admitted to practice in the several courts on the 23d of March, 1875, and continued here and was elected district attorney in 1878, and re-elected in 1881.

WILLIAM W. DORRIS, son of William Dorris, was born at Huntingdon on the 1st of March, 1852. After attending the academy at home, he entered Mantua Academy, West Philadelphia, from 1868 to 1870. Entered Lafayette College, class of 1874, at Easton, Pa., and remained there one year. Commenced reading law in the office of his father and with George B. Orlady, and was admitted to the bar on the 12th of April, 1876. He continues in the office with his father.

ALEXANDER AUGUSTUS ANDERSON, son of the late John P. Anderson, was born at Huntingdon on the 23d of April, 1854. Studied law with William Dorris, in Huntingdon, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Huntingdon County on the 12th of April, 1876, also admitted to the Philadelphia bar in January, 1877, and opened an office there for a short time, but returned again to his native town.

SAMUEL L. GLASGOW was born in the year 1827, in Huntingdon County (now Blair), near the spot where the city of Altoona afterwards assumed a name and a place on the map of the State and nation. He graduated from Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, in 1849. Afterwards taught the high school in Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pa. Read law in Huntingdon, in the office of Andrew P. Wilson, and was admitted Jan. 13, 1852. After being at the bar a while he left it and followed other pursuits, but resumed the law after being examined and again admitted on the 16th of June, 1877.

DAVIS G. ZEIGLER, son of Adam Zeigler, was born at Marklesburg, Huntingdon Co., Pa., on the 12th of February, 1850, educated in common schools and Huntingdon Academy, and one year at Ursinus College.

He read law in Huntingdon, with Messrs. Brown & Bailey, and was admitted to practice on the 10th of April, 1878.

B. J. DEVOR was born in Path Valley, Franklin Co., Pa., on the 29th of October, 1829, was educated in the common and select schools in all the English branches. He also studied geometry, surveying, and civil engineering, and is a practical surveyor. He also studied theology, and was examined before the board of examination of applicants to the ministry met at Johnstown, Pa., and was admitted to that body of ministers of the United Brethren in Christ's Church, Allegheny Conference, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Devor read law with H. E. Shaffer, Mount Union, and was examined and admitted to the bar at Huntingdon on the 26th of November, 1878. He has an office in Mount Union, and does some surveying in connection with his legal practice.

JAMES A. FLEMING, son of James Fleming, late of the borough of Huntingdon, deceased, and brother of Samuel E. Fleming, was born at Manor Hill, Jan. 22, 1856, educated at the Huntingdon Academy and Chambersburg Academy, read law in Huntingdon with R. Milton Speer, and was admitted to the bar on the 18th of August, 1879. Mr. Fleming is an accomplished phonographer.

L. H. BEERS was born in Cromwell township, Huntingdon Co., on the 25th of August, 1852. He received his education in the common schools and at Milnwood Academy, Shade Gap, Allegheny Seminary, Bedford, and at Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, Pa., and graduated at the last-named institution. He studied law in Huntingdon, in the office of Messrs. Brown & Bailey, and was admitted to the bar on the 20th of September, 1879.

JOHN D. DORRIS, second son of William Dorris, was born at Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 14, 1858, and was educated at the Huntingdon Academy and at Lafayette College, Easton, from which he graduated June 26, 1878; studied law with his father in Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar of Huntingdon County on the 27th of September, 1880.

CHARLES G. BROWN, son of Samuel T. Brown, was born at Huntingdon on the 10th day of July, 1858. After attending private and select schools he entered the Huntingdon Academy, then in charge of Professor James A. Stephens, and there prepared for college, entered the freshman class at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., and pursued the regular classical course for four years, graduating in June, 1879, with the degree of A.B. He then entered the law-office of Messrs. Brown & Bailey, in Huntingdon, as a law student, and after the usual course of study and the prescribed time was admitted to practice on the 11th of April, 1881, and on the 1st of January following became associated as a partner with his father and John M. Bailey in the practice, under the name of Brown, Bailey & Brown.

M. R. SHAFFNER was born near Roxbury, Huntingdon Co., on the 5th of October, 1856, was educated in the common schools, and taught common schools for five years, registered as a law student with Messrs. Brown & Bailey on the 1st of April, 1879, and was admitted to the bar on the 25th of October, 1881.

HOWARD E. BUTZ was born near Allentown, Lehigh Co., Pa., Nov. 30, 1859, educated in the public schools of Reading, and after graduating from the same, entered Union Seminary, at New Berlin, Pa., where upwards of three years more were spent in acquiring an English and classical education; commenced to read law with Richmond L. Jones, at Reading, in February, 1880, and completed his course with Messrs. Petrikin & McNeil, at Huntingdon, and was admitted to the bar on the 10th of April, 1882. Mr. Butz is at present (Dec. 12, 1882) editing the Huntingdon Globe.

WILLIAM S. TAYLOR, youngest son of the late President Judge Taylor, was born at Huntingdon, Aug. 25, 1853, educated at the common and select schools and academy at Huntingdon and Mantua Academy, Philadelphia, read law with Hon. J. R. Ludlow, in Philadelphia, and with his father in Huntingdon, also attended law lectures at University of Pennsylvania; admitted to the bar in Linn County, Iowa, Jan. 11, 1879, and to the bar of Huntingdon County Oct. 1, 1882.

H. H. WAITE was born in Tyrone township, Blair Co., Jan. 27, 1852. His parents removed to Warrior's Mark township, Huntingdon Co., in 1859. He received a common-school education, and subsequently followed the profession of teacher for nine years. He read law with George B. Orlady, and was admitted to the bar Jan. 8, 1883.

HARRY A. BROWN, son of James A. Brown, was born March 30, 1861, in the borough of Huntingdon. Was educated at the public schools and the academy in his native borough, and afterwards attended Lafayette College. Read law in the office of Messrs. Brown & Bailey, and was admitted to practice in the courts of Huntingdon County, Jan. 8, 1883.

CHAPTER XVIII.

MILITARY.

IN the military service of the province, before the Declaration of Independence, there were a number of officers connected with the territory now composing Huntingdon and Blair, either as residents for a time, or as owners of land therein. Of these may be named,—

1755. Capt. George Croghan, "at Aughwick."
" Dr. Mercer, "at Fort Shirley."
1756. First Battalion, Lieut. Hugh Crawford.
Second Battalion, Capt. Hugh Mercer, wounded in Armstrong's expedition to Kittanning.
Second Battalion, Capt. Edward Ward[1] (was in Kittanning expedition).
Third Battalion, Lieut. Asher Clayton,[2] of Capt. Saltar's company, afterward promoted to adjutant.

Governor Denny's Command.

1757. Dec. 1, Clayton became captain lieutenant of the provincial forces.
Dec. 4, Hugh Mercer, capt.; Thomas Smallman,[3] lieut.; Hugh Crawford, ensign of Hamilton's company.
Dec. 13, Edward Ward, capt.
1758. Jan. 10, William McAlevy, enlisted as private in Capt. James Patterson's company.

In the Pennsylvania regiment, consisting of three battalions, commanded by Lieutenant-Governor Denny as colonel-in-chief:

[1] Afterward owned the Big Spring tract at McConnellstown, land on Aughwick, and at other places.

[2] Afterward owned a part of the land in the Fourth Ward, Huntingdon.

[3] Afterward owned a large tract in Woodcock Valley.

First Battalion.

1758. May 5, Thomas Smallman, q.m.
1757. Dec. 4, Hugh Mercer, capt.
1758. March 11, Hugh Crawford, ensign of Hamilton's company.
1757. Dec. 13, Edward Ward, capt. 1759. April 26, maj. of Third Battalion.

Second Battalion.

1758. Jan. 9, Asher Clayton, capt.; q.m. June 8th; wounded at Grant's defeat near Fort Du Quesne, September 14th.
1759. March, Thomas Smallman (from First Battalion).

Third Battalion.

1758. May 29, Hugh Mercer, col.
1759. April 23, Hugh Mercer, col.

In 1760, April 12th, Asher Clayton was major of the First Battalion; April 13th, Hugh Mercer, colonel, and Thomas Smallman, major of the Second Battalion.

The Pennsylvania Regiment.—Second Battalion.

1763. July 2, Asher Clayton, capt. 1764. July 2, lieut.-col. commandant.
July 19, John Brady, capt.
" 20, John Piper, lieut.

In August, 1764, the regiment mustered 912 men. Lieut.-Col. Clayton's company contained 47, and Capt. John Brady's, 48.

The Revolution.—The oppressions and exactions of the mother-country were becoming more and more odious to the people, and were acting as educators to prepare the colonists for the impending contest, which, under Providence, was to result in their emancipation from foreign rule. At a meeting of deputies chosen by the people of the several counties, held at Philadelphia, July 15, 1774, in which Bedford County was represented by George Woods, the Boston port bill and other Parliamentary measures affecting the people of the colonies were denounced, and a congress of deputies from the several colonies to consult together and adopt some measures for the relief of grievances recommended. In the Assembly, June 30, 1775, it was resolved "That this House approves the association entered into by the good people of this colony for the defense of their lives, liberties, and property." A Committee of Safety, consisting of twenty-five citizens, was appointed and authorized to call into actual service such number of the associators as they may judge proper. Organizations of "associators" were formed in most, if not all, the counties. The committee organized July 3d by the choice of Benjamin Franklin, president. Congress, July 18th, recommended that all able-bodied effective men between sixteen and fifty years of age should immediately form themselves into companies of militia, to consist of one captain, two lieutenants, one ensign, four sergeants, four corporals, one clerk, one drummer, one fifer, and about sixty-eight privates. The companies to be formed into regiments or battalions, officered with a colonel, lieutenant-colonel, two majors, and an adjutant or quartermaster. All officers above the rank of captain to be appointed by the provincial authorities.

Congress, June 14, 1775, authorized the raising of six companies of expert riflemen in Pennsylvania, two in Maryland, and two in Virginia, to join the army near Boston. On the 22d the "colony of Pennsylvania" was directed to raise two more companies, making eight in all, which were to be formed into a battalion. Lancaster County furnished two companies instead of one, and thus the battalion, which was commanded by Col. William Thompson, was swollen to nine companies. Besides the companies from Lancaster there were two from Cumberland, and one from each of the counties of York, Northumberland, Bedford, Berks, and Northampton. This command passed the Hudson above West Point about the 1st of August, and a few days thereafter reached Cambridge. Thacher, in his "Military Journal of the Revolution," under date of August, 1775, thus describes this battalion:

"They are remarkably stout and hardy men, many of them exceeding six feet in height. They are dressed in white frocks or rifle-shirts and round hats. These men are remarkable for the accuracy of their aim, striking a mark with great certainty at two hundred yards' distance. At a review, a company of them, while on a quick advance, fired their balls into objects of seven inches diameter at the distance of two hundred and fifty yards. They are now stationed in our lines, and their shot have frequently proved fatal to British officers and soldiers who expose themselves to view, even at more than double the distance of common musket-shot."

By a return made at Cambridge on the 18th of August, three field-officers, nine captains, twenty-seven lieutenants, the adjutant, quartermaster, surgeon, and mate, twenty-nine sergeants, thirteen drummers and fifers, and seven hundred and thirteen rank and file were present fit for duty. This battalion was designated the Second Regiment (and after Jan. 1, 1776, the First Regiment) "of the army of the United Colonies, commanded by His Excellency George Washington, Esquire, general and commander-in-chief." Two of the companies—one from Lancaster and one from Cumberland—were ordered to join the detachment sent under Arnold to Quebec. The battalion was stationed on Prospect Hill, and subsequently on Cobble Hill. At first it was under the command of Gen. Lee, but subsequently became a part of Gen. Putnam's department. The British abandoned Boston March 17th, and soon after the regiment, under Lieut.-Col. Hand, marched to New York, and was stationed at New Utrecht during May and June. The term of enlistment was for one year, and would soon expire. Washington wrote the president of Congress on the 22d of April from New York,—

"The time for which the riflemen enlisted will expire on the 1st of July next, and as the loss of such a valuable and brave body of men will be of great injury to the service, I would submit it to the consideration of Congress whether it would not be best to adopt some method to induce them to continue. They are, indeed, a very useful corps, but I need not mention this, as their importance is already known to the Congress."

On the 1st day of July this body entered its second term of service as the "First Pennsylvania Regiment" of the Continental line. The enlistment was for two years, but was subsequently changed to

"during the war." Col. Hand wrote to Washington, asking him to recommend to Congress the appointment of a major for his regiment, and for his information named his captains according to rank, as follows: Robert Clugage; Matthew Smith, James Ross, Henry Miller, Charles Craig, James Grier, David Harris, James Parr, James Hamilton. On the 25th of September Congress appointed James Ross, the third captain, to the position of major. Clugage and Smith, learning that a junior captain had been appointed over them, resigned on the 6th of October. Capt. Clugage's dignified resignation, which is accompanied with hearty wishes for the success of the cause, will be found in "Force's Archives," 5th ser., vol. ii. page 921.[1] This regiment participated in various battles during the continuance of the war up to its close.

ROLL OF CAPT. ROBERT CLUGAGE'S COMPANY.

Captain, Robert Clugage; First Lieutenant, John Holliday,[2] commissioned July 25, 1775; Second Lieutenants, Robert McKenzie (died Feb. 12, 1776), Benjamin Burd,[3] from third lieutenant; Third Lieutenant, Benjamin Burd, October, 1775, promoted second lieutenant; Sergeants, James Holliday,[4] Daniel Stoy,[5] Querinus Meriner, David Wright; Corporals, Angus McDonald, Joseph McKenzie, William Lee, Aquila White; Drummer, Timothy Sullivan.

Privates.

Anderson, Adam.[6]
Beckey, Philip.
Bowman, John.[7]
Broughdon, Thaddeus.[8]
Brown, Thomas.
Bruner, George.
Campbell, John.
Casek, Thomas.
Cessna, Stephen.
Clark, Patrick.
Conner, Philip.[9]
Corrowan, James.
Craig, Joshua.[10]
Crips, John.
Crugen, Alexander.
Cunningham, Thomas.
Curran, James.
Davis, John.
Dilling, Cornelius.
Donelin, William.[11]
Dougherty, Matthew.[11]
Dowling, Lawrence.
Franks, Daniel.
Freeman, George.
Garrett, Amariah.
Gemberland, Daniel.
Gillespy, Reuben,
Hardister, Richard.
Hanning, Conrad.
Jamison, Francis.[11]
Johnston, Andrew.[11]
Judry, Matthias.
Kelly, John.
King, Peter.
Knight, James.
Laird, William.[12]
Lenning, Charles.
Leonard, Robert.
Lesley, John.
McCartney, Henry.[13]
McClain, Daniel.[14]
McCune, John.[14]
McDonald, John.
McDonald, Patrick.
McFarlane, Thomas.
Magee, Thomas.[14]
Mangum, Daniel.
Miller, Michael.
Piatt, Robert.
Pitts, John.
Plumb, Samuel.[14]
Reynolds, Martin.
Rhoads, Daniel.
Ritchie, Philip.[14]
Shehan, Thomas.
Shives, Francis.
Simonton, Alexander.[15]
Smith, Emanuel.
Smith, Henry.
Stoy, Daniel.[16]
Stuart, John.
Taylor, Jonathan.
Thompson, John.
Turmoil, James.
Tweed, Andrew.
Vanzandt, James.
Vanderslice, Daniel.[17]
Vaughn, Thomas.[18]
Wallace, Samuel.[19]
Walker, Solomon.
Warford, James.
Ward, Thomas.[19]
Wilson, Alexander.
Whitman, George.[19]
Woodward, Samuel.

Besides those whose names appear in the above lists there were many other persons residing in "Old Huntingdon" who participated in the Revolutionary struggle. Some enlisted here and never returned; others joined commands raised elsewhere, and became citizens here afterwards. Of the latter, those named below were residents in 1820, and applied for pensions under the act of Congress passed March 18, 1818:

1. John Hutchinson, enlisted in 1776, in Capt. Parr's company, 1st Pa. Regt.; wounded at Long Island and Paoli; discharged January, 1781.
2. John Boyle, aged 69; served two years in Capt. William Cross' company and two years in Capt. Benjamin Fishbourne's company, 4th Pa. Regt.
3. Robert Dunkin, aged 65; enlisted for the war in Capt. Bette's company, 7th Md. Regt.
4. John Treese, enlisted April 20, 1776, in Capt. Henry Shade's company of Col. Miles' Pa. Rifle Regt.; served one year and nine months.
5. Alexander Campbell, aged 73; served three years in Capt. Thomas Rabarg's company, in Col. James Malcolm's regiment of the New York line.
6. Alexander King, aged 68; enlisted in 1776 in Capt. Henry Darby's company of Col. Haslett's Del. Regt., and served one year; re-enlisted Feb. 1, 1777, in Capt. Fishbourne's company, 4th Pa. Regt.; discharged January, 1781.
7. Joseph Geddes, aged 75; enlisted Jan. 20, 1776, in Capt. David Grier's company, 6th Pa. Batt.
8. Adam Smith, second lieutenant of Capt. William Hyser's company of the German regiment; enlisted in 1776, and served sixteen months.
9. Martin Clabbaugh, aged 77; enlisted in 1775; was at Boston; was in Capt. Cresap's company of Maryland.
10. Henry Clemens, Warrior's Mark township, aged 62; enlisted in Capt. James Maxwell's company, Col. Shreeve's regiment New Jersey line; was in the battle of Short Hills; taken prisoner at Germantown; exchanged at New York and rejoined his company; drafted to go out after the Indians in Capt. Bowman's company, under Gen. Sullivan; discharged after the war.
11. Michael Fink, aged 63; enlisted for three years in Capt. John Bankson's company, 2d Pa. Regt.; discharged January, 1781.
12. Peter Fleck, aged 65; enlisted Jan. 8, 1776, in Capt. Thomas Craig's company, 2d Pa. Batt.; wounded.
13. William Newel, aged 66; served three years in Capt. Harris' company, called the "Delaware Blues," Pennsylvania line.

[1] Pa. Archives, Second Series, x. 305.

[2] Promoted to captain of Ross' company Sept. 25, 1776; resigned after 1778; died in Frankstown township Aug. 19, 1823, aged seventy-six years. Supposed to be the John Holliday who owned a farm in "Love's Valley," Shirley township.

[3] Promoted first lieutenant Sept. 25, 1776; from Fort Littleton or vicinity.

[4] Promoted ensign July 27, 1776; killed at the battle of Brandywine Sept. 11, 1777.

[5] Discharged at expiration of enlistment July 1, 1776, at Long Island. Resided in Somerset County in 1818, aged seventy-five.

[6] Resided in Westmoreland County in 1818.

[7] Resided in Frankstown township in 1785.

[8] Discharged Feb. 10, 1776.

[9] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment.

[10] Resided in Cumberland County, 1820.

[11] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment.

[12] Second lieutenant March 24, 1778; quartermaster Oct. 2, 1778, to rank from June 2, 1778; first lieutenant May 12, 1779; wounded in left leg at Paoli and in the right leg at Monmouth; discharged April 1, 1783.

[13] Discharged at expiration of enlistment July 1, 1776, at Long Island. Resided in Lycoming County in 1820, aged seventy-five.

[14] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment.

[15] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment; sergeant, 1776; wounded at Brandywine; discharged, 1781; lived in Washington County in 1803.

[16] Promoted sergeant.

[17] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment.

[18] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment; lived in Barree township in 1774.

[19] Re-enlisted in First Pennsylvania Regiment.

14. Adam Stonebraker, aged 70; Franklin township; enlisted at Hagerstown in Capt. William Heyser's company of the German regiment; died Nov. 1, 1827.
15. Jacob Moyer, aged 62; enlisted in 1777 in Capt. Henry Bicker's company, 4th Pa. Regt.; discharged 1782.
16. William Andrew McMannes, enlisted in Hagerstown February, 1776, in Capt. James Nelson's company, 1st Md. Regt.; discharged in New York Feb. 20, 1777.
17. John Irvine, enlisted in 1775; served one year under Col. Anthony Wayne in 4th Pa. Batt., and three years in 5th Pa. Regt.; in 1835 was aged 84.
18. Peter Ox, aged 55; enlisted in 1782, in Capt. Van Hair's company.
19. Andrew Sands, aged 66; Dublin township; enlisted June 7, 1777, in Capt. John Holliday's company, 1st Pa. Regt.; discharged Aug. 13, 1783; was in the battles of Brandywine, Paoli, Germantown, Monmouth, Stony Point, at the siege of Yorktown when Cornwallis was taken, at the Green Spring, and in sundry skirmishes.
20. James Gray, aged 65; enlisted 1776 in Capt. Joseph Steadham's company of Delaware Blues.
21. John Hamilton, aged 74; served three years and seven months, three years of this time in Capt. John Palmer's company of the German Regiment.
22. James Dunkin,[1] aged 67; enlisted for three years in Capt. William Hyser's company of the German Regiment.
23. James Steed, chair-maker, aged 80; enlisted in Capt. Richard Brown's company of Col. Miles' Pa. Rifle Regt.; discharged July 11, 1776; re-enlisted in Capt. James Francis Moore's company of the 13th Pa. Regt., and was transferred to the 2d Regt., and discharged November, 1781. Was in the battles of Long Island, White Plains, Trenton, Brandywine, and Germantown.
24. John Holliday, enlisted as a lieutenant in Capt. Clugage's company. (See above.)
25. Peter Bricker, Franklin township, aged 63; went out in militia under Col. Joseph Heister, and afterwards was in Capt. Richard Findley's company, 6th Pa. Regt., and served three years; was in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown.
26. Andrew McPherran, aged 62; enlisted in Capt. Thomas Church's company of the 4th Pa. Battalion, and subsequently attached to the 5th Pa. Regt.; served five years.
27. Thomas Smith, Barree township, aged 62 in 1818. His declaration reads: enlisted with Capt. Thomas Templeton; taken prisoner at the battle of Fort Freeling, and suffered three years' imprisonment. Col. John Murray commanded the regiment (2d Pa. ?).
28. Leonard Toops, aged 60; enlisted for three years; was in Capt. Hetrick's company of Col. Hampton's regiment. He was living in 1835.
29. Rev. Deitrich Ourhand (Aurandt), aged 60 in 1818; enlisted by Lieut. Jacob Snyder, 13th Pa. Regt., Col. Walter Stewart, and after the battle of Monmouth transferred to Capt. John Bankson's company in the 2d Regt.; discharged January, 1781.
30. Samuel Lewis, Franklin township, aged 79; served six years and four months; discharged at Carlisle, Sept 27, 1783. He was still living in 1835.
31. Isaac Rosebrough, blacksmith, aged 68 in 1823; enlisted in 1776, in Capt. James Moore's company, 4th Pa. Battalion.
32. David Nicholson, tailor, aged 65 in 1823; enlisted in the spring of 1776 in Capt. James Dunn's company, Del. Regt.; re-enlisted in Capt. Robert Kirkwood's company for one year. Was in the battles of Trenton and Princeton, and in several small engagements with the enemy.

The remains of four of the soldiers named in the preceding list, to wit: Alexander King, John Irvine, James Duncan, and Martin Clabaugh, who died June 15, 1822, aged about eighty, rest in the Huntingdon cemetery. It is also the place of interment of other Revolutionary soldiers, to wit:

Conrad Frederick Kurtz, who died Feb. 17, 1805.

John Simpson, who died Jan. 27, 1807, aged about 60 years; was commissioned Aug. 15, 1775, second lieutenant of Capt. James Murray's company in the 4th Battalion of Lancaster County. Served in 1776 and 1777 in the Continental army.

Maj. William Henderson, who died Sept. 9, 1811, in his 56th year, was taken prisoner at the battle of Long Island, Aug. 28, 1776, and after a confinement of five months in a British prison-ship was exchanged, and immediately rejoined the army and served to the end of the war.

John Dorland, who died Aug. 9, 1813.

Andrew Henderson, who died June 21, 1812, in his 51st year, at the age of 17, was appointed an officer, and served until the close of the war. (See Bench and Bar of Huntingdon County)

There were many other participants in the struggle for independence who resided at the time of their death in the two counties, and it is to be regretted that their names have not been obtained.

Pursuant to the resolutions of Congress adopted July 18, 1775, and the regulations of the Council of Safety made in conformity therewith, John Piper became colonel of the Bedford County battalion.

Congress, May 15, 1776, in resolutions adopted, declared it to be irreconcilable to reason and good conscience for the colonists to take the oaths required for the support of the government under the crown of Great Britain. They also declared it necessary that the exercise of every kind of authority under the crown should be suppressed, and all the powers of government exerted "under the authority of the people of the colonies for the preservation of internal peace, virtue, and good order, as well as for the defense of their lives, liberties, and properties, against the hostile invasions and cruel depredations of their enemies."

Copies of the resolution of Congress were transmitted to the battalion officers, and by them to the captains of companies within their respective commands. In tearing down the old Simpson mansion, a log and weather-boarded house that stood on the northwestern corner of Penn and Second Streets in the borough of Huntingdon, a letter was found, July 13, 1876, from Capt. (afterwards Gen.) McAlevy, addressed,—

"To Col.
John Piper of the Batalion in Bedford County."

of which the following is a copy:

"BARREE TOWNSHIP 9th July, 1776.

"COLONEL PIPER

Respected sir:

"I take the pleasure to Acquaint you that on the Eight of this instant at a full meeting of my Company that I made the Resolve of the Congress of the fifteenth of May fully known to them. And they unanimously Gave me their opinions that all Powers and authority Derived from the Crown of Great Britain Should be totaly Dissolved. And are fully Resolved to Risk all that is Dear and valuable.

"I am sir your Most Humble Servant,

"WILLIAM MCALEVY.

"SIR:

"I would Be Glad how Soon you Could Send Drum and Cullers."

In December, 1776, the commandants of the several battalions of militia were directed by the Council to march with their "Battalions to succor General Washington." From the meagre records remaining it appears that Capts. William McAlevy, Clugage, and Parker responded with their companies. Of the first-named company Thomas Holliday was ensign. On the 31st of that month Col. Piper informed the Committee of Safety that, pursuant to the orders received, a number of men are now on the march. On account of the depth of the snow it was difficult for the men to assemble in one body, and he therefore gave each captain orders to march his party the nearest and best way to Philadelphia.

[1] He died Wednesday, Aug. 29, 1832, and was buried with appropriate military honors by the Huntingdon Volunteers on Thursday. He enlisted at an early age, and participated in the battles at Trenton, Princeton, Germantown, and Brandywine, in the last of which he received a wound, the effects of which were visible until his death. His name was usually written "Duncan."

On March 17, 1777, an act was passed to regulate the militia of the commonwealth, by which the president of the Supreme Executive Council was authorized to appoint one lieutenant and not more than five sub-lieutenants in each county, and provision was made for organizing the male inhabitants between the ages of eighteen and fifty-three into companies and battalions, as well as the adoption of a general strict military code. In 1780 another militia law was passed supplanting the enactment of 1777, but retaining many of the provisions of the former laws. The office of sub-lieutenant was abolished after April 1, 1783.[1] Under the first-mentioned acts the officers of Bedford County, prior to the erection of Huntingdon, were:

Lieutenant.

John Piper, appointed March 21, 1777.
George Ashman, appointed Nov. 21, 1780.
George Woods, appointed Sept. 17, 1784.

Sub-Lieutenants.

Richard Brown, appointed March 21, 1777.
Abraham Cable, appointed March 21, 1777.
William Holliday, appointed March 21, 1777.
Hugh Davidson, appointed March 21, 1777.
Edward Coombs, appointed March 21, 1777.
Thomas Urie, appointed Sept. 12, 1777.
James Martin, appointed Sept. 12, 1777.
Thomas Holliday, appointed Dec. 3, 1777.
James Martin, appointed June 2, 1780.
Robert Culbertson, appointed June 2, 1780.
Benjamin Elliot was appointed lieutenant of Huntingdon County, Nov. 23, 1787.

Among the officers of the militia of Bedford County in August, 1773, were:

First Battalion.—Colonel, Thomas Smith; captains, William Tissue, Oliver Drake; first lieutenants, Christy Agency, William Nicholls; second lieutenants, George Bruner, Henry Abrams; ensigns, George Shaver, David Standiford.

Second Battalion.—Captain, John Galloway; and Third Battalion, captain, Samuel Thompson.

Gen. Putnam, placed by Washington in command of a cantonment at Princeton after the battle there, writing under date of Feb. 18, 1777, to the Council, giving an account of a skirmish that occurred the preceding night between a party he had sent out and a small detachment of British, says, "I shall forward the prisoners on in a day or two to you; fifty of the Bedford County riflemen of your State, which I detached from this place, were with Col. Neilson; the whole, officers and men, both belonging to that county and the militia of this State, behaved with great bravery, such as would do honor to veteran soldiers."

On the 18th of May, 1781, Lieutenant George Ashman and his sub-lieutenants divided Bedford County into three battalions. The townships of Dublin, Shirley, Barree, Hopewell, Frankstown, and Huntingdon, then embracing all of the area now constituting Huntingdon and Blair and parts of adjoining counties, composed one battalion, and the other part of the county was divided into two. The citizens of the county subject to military duty numbered fourteen hundred and fifty-six.[2] In 1785 the white male inhabitants of these townships between the ages of eighteen and fifty-three were as follows:

Barree township	75
Dublin township	90
Frankstown township	219
Hopewell township	113
Huntingdon township	96
Shirley township	145
	738

John Cadwallader was commissioned brigade inspector for Huntingdon County April 11, 1793.

An act passed April 9, 1799, materially changed the militia system of the commonwealth, and provided for its more complete and efficient organization. The white male inhabitants between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, made subjects of military duty, were arranged into divisions, brigades, regiments, battalions, and companies. Mifflin and Huntingdon Counties formed a division, the Tenth. The regiments of this county were numbered as follows: the one commanded by Lieut.-Col. Moore, No. 14; Lieut.-Col. Fee's, No. 33; Lieut.-Col. Cromwell's, No. 46; Lieut.-Col. Holliday's, No. 58; and Lieut.-Col. Spencer's, No. 119. Provision was made for arranging the officers and men into classes preparatory to drafts when necessary to call the militia into actual service. The commissioned officers were chosen for a term of seven years. The elections held under this law for the higher military posts were often warmly contested.

The act of April 9, 1807, made further changes. Huntingdon, Mifflin, and Centre were united in one division and numbered the Eleventh. The commandants of the Huntingdon County regiments at this time were: No. 14, Lieut.-Col. James Moore; No. 33, Lieut.-Col. Andrew Henderson; No. 46, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Cromwell; No. 58, Lieut.-Col. —— Kellup; No. 119, Lieut.-Col. James Entrekin.

Regimental training days were named for the month of May and battalion days in October, on which all those persons subject to military duty were required to be present in their respective companies, or in default be subject to the payment of a fine. The officers and men composing each company were arranged into eight classes, and in case it became necessary to call any part of the force into actual service, the requisition was made for one or more classes as necessity required. Although changes were made from time to time in the militia system of the commonwealth, the main features of this enactment were retained until the militia establishment was dissolved in 1849. In the war of 1812 a call for militia required William Morris,[1] captain of the first company of the Thirty-third Regiment, to march with classes called upon. He was then imprisoned for debt. The captain of the second company, James Simpson, took his place and marched the men to Alexandria, the place of rendezvous for the militia called from this section. Before the departure of the command for Erie, Capt. Morris was released from prison, assumed his place, and served in the army with great credit.

[1] Act of March 21, 1783.

[2] Pa. Archives, ix. 152.

The regimental training places in 1803 and 1812 were:

Fourteenth Regiment, Mr. Porter's, near Birmingham; Thirty-third Regiment, Huntingdon; Forty-sixth Regiment, Gaven Clugage's, near Bedford Furnace; Fifty-eighth Regiment, Hollidaysburg; One Hundred and Nineteenth Regiment, Jacob Grove's, Woodcock Valley.

War of 1812.—On Monday, May 4, 1812, the "Huntingdon Light Infantry," a volunteer company officered by Robert Allison, captain, and Jacob Miller, first lieutenant, voted unanimously to tender their services to the President in the then impending war with Great Britain, more than a month in advance of the formal declaration of war, which was issued June 18th. It is to be regretted that a list of the members of this company cannot be obtained. The tender was accepted, and on Monday, September 7th, the company marched from Huntingdon to Niagara via Petersburg, Spruce Creek Valley, and Bellefonte, and reached Buffalo on the 2d of October.

Governor Snyder, by general orders dated May 12th, directed a draft, in the manner prescribed by law, of fourteen thousand militia, to be formed into two divisions, four brigades, and twenty-two regiments. The quota of the Eleventh Division, Huntingdon, Mifflin, and Centre Counties, was as follows:

First Brigade.—Artillery		13
	Cavalry	13
	Infantry and rifle corps	229
		255
Second Brigade.—Artillery		21
	Cavalry	21
	Infantry and rifle corps	389
		431

On the 9th of June, Moses Canan, captain of "The Juniata Volunteers," a light infantry company shortly before organized at Alexandria, and attached to the One Hundred and Nineteenth Regiment, tendered the services of the company to the Governor, and some time later, Isaac Vandevander, captain of a rifle company at McConnellstown, and Jacob Vanderbelt, also a captain of a rifle company, also tendered the services of their respective commands. The Governor, in general orders, dated respectively August 25th and September 5th, accepted these companies. The companies of Capts. Canan and Vandevander marched from Alexandria for Meadville, Friday, September 11th.

The rolls of two of the drafted companies from Huntingdon County, as they stood in November, 1813, are as follows:

Captain, William Morris.

Lieutenants, Daniel V[illegible]aver, William Isgrig, Cornelius Crum, resigned June 5th; John McIlroy, promoted from ensign June 5th.

Ensign, William Love, promoted from sergeant June 5th.

Sergeants, Alexander Cresswell, pro. ord.-sergt. June 5; disch. Nov. 5; Henry Newingham; John Stratton, disch. Nov. 5; Joseph Metzbaugh; William Wilson, pro. from corp. June 5; John Brotherland, pro. from corp. June 30; Joseph Eckley, pro. from corp. Sept. 5.

Corporals, Samuel Hollinshead, disch. Nov. 5; John McNamara, disch. Nov. 5; John B. Riddle, disch. Oct. 13; John Mack, pro. from private June 5; Benjamin Scott, promoted from private June 5; John Galbraith, pro. from private Sept. 5.

Privates.

Ellsworth, Samuel.
Kelly, William.
Gutrie, William.
McCammon, John.
Dean, George.
Ewing, David.
Dearmet, William.
Thomson, Matthew.
Shoup, George.
Fagin, Asaph, disch. Oct. 13.
Weston, Joseph.
Wilson, George.
Wharton, Samuel.
Shaw, James.
McGiffin, Samuel.
Flenner, Jonathan.
Strong, Daniel.
McKeehan, Samuel.
Burns, Isaac.
Kimberlin, Henry.
Duncan, Daniel, disch. Oct. 13.
Nelson, William.
Walls, Jacob.
Cornelius, Jacob.
Bingham, John.
Williamson, Hugh.
David, William.
Clark, Samuel.
Bolinger, Jacob.
Long, John, disch. Oct. 13.
Black, Robert.
Dun, John, disch. Sept. 15.
Stewart, William, disch. Nov. 5.
Thomson, Rees.
Getties, Robert.
McKeehan, David, died 15th.
Swetchal, Jacob.
Taylor, William Wilson.
Larrimore, Thomas.
Boweroock, Jacob.
Camberlin, John.
Hyte, James, disch. Oct. 13.
Fitzimons, Henry.
Long, Henry.
Glen, James, disch. Oct. 13.
Bingham, Hugh.
Lightner, Matthias.
Scott, John.
Hewet, Henry.
Shade, George.
Logan, Robert.
Johnson, Hugh, disch. Oct.
King, Patrick.
Swartz, Michael.
Shotthill, Thomas.
Grady, George, volunteered on board, Aug. 11.
Griffin, John.
Irwin, Samuel.
Forsley, Thomas.
Kint, Nicholas.
Fleming, John, July 16.
Ralston, Thomas.
Rickets, Hezekiah.
Booth, Thomas, disch. Aug. 18.
Clabaugh, Henry.
Johnston, Thomas, died May 29.
Hanen, William, disch.
Smice, John.
Campbell, Hugh.
Rudy, Daniel, disch. Oct. 13.
Morehead, Samuel.
Stewart, James, disch.
Hollis, William, disch. Nov. 15.
Dougherty, Edward.
Clemens, Robert.
Stewart, John, disch. Oct. 13.
Hawkenbery, Adam, July 16.
Johnson, Anthony, on furlough till the end of term.
Baugher, Henry.
Lennox, John.
Gooshorn, Samuel.

"I certify, on honor, that the within pay-roll is just and true, and the remarks set opposite the men's names are correct, to the best of my knowledge.

"W. Morris, Captain.
"Rees Hill,
"Colonel Commanding."

[1] He resided on lot Nos. 420 and 422 Penn Street.

ROLL OF CAPT. EDMUND TIPTON'S COMPANY.

Captain, Edmund Tipton; First Lieutenant, John McCabe; Second Lieutenant, Isaac Vantrees; Third Lieutenant, John Cox; Fourth Lieutenant, Christian Deulinger; Ensign, Patrick Madden; Sergeants, John Calderwood, Benjamin McCune, Jesse Moore, Peter Hewit, Jacob Shafer; Corporals, James Mathers, Thomas Rees, Abraham Law, James Parks, Zaduck Westover; Drummer, Elisha Ross.

Privates.

McLin, John W.
Harlst, John.
Welsh, William.
Sackett, Azarah.
McWilliams, James.
Williamson, James.
Cahr, Joseph.
Patton, Samuel.
Wilson, James.
Shank, John.
Metzenbaugh, Daniel.
Moore, Abraham.
Tipry, Abraham.
Moore, Ephraim.
McMillen, John.
Luckart, George.
Burgart, Samuel.
Buell, Joseph.
Laughlin, Hugh.
Parker, Ira.
Walls, Jonathan.
Emy, John.
Baily, George.
Thompson, William.
Bumbarger, Joseph.
Kelly, Davis.
Newell, Joseph.
Gardner, William.
Gearhard, John.
Gallagher, James.
Hopkins, James.
Elliott, John.
Doil, Dennis.
Jones, James.
McClelland, James.
Johnston, David.
Vanpoll, Henry.
Jamison, John.
McClelland, Joseph.
Willerman, Jacob.
Raub, Henry.
Mavry or Maurer, Jacob.
Burns, Daniel.
Kephard, Henry.
Kemberling, Ludwig.
Baily, William.
Smith, John.
Sharp, Thomas.
Ellis, William.
Dunn, Alexander.
Lanzer, Abraham.
Miller, Henry.
Gibson, Jesse.
Shoener, Solomon.
Daly, Henry.
Hyle, John.
Wilson, Abraham.
Fulton, Henry.
Ganoe, Samuel.
Mung, Henry.
Ganoe, James.
Hunter, John.
Hunter, Samuel.
Smithly, Martin.
Smock, Abraham.
Smithly, Stofel.
Keighly, Jacob.
Brown, Joseph.
Boyd, Alexander.
McClelland, Nathaniel.
Stewart, Isaac.
Gibson, Gideon.
Dixon, Samuel.
Dellinger, George.
Fox, Jacob.
Gaul, William.
Aurand, John.

March 28, 1814, another general militia law was approved by the Governor. Sixteen divisions were created. The Tenth embraced Mifflin and Centre, constituting the First Brigade, and Huntingdon and Clearfield, the Second Brigade.

The officers of militia in this division and brigade during the period of the war of 1812 (but not in actual service as such) were:

Major-Generals.

XI. Division, James Banks, Mifflin County, 1812–13.
X. Division, William Steel, Huntingdon County, 1814.

Brigadier-Generals.

XI. Division,[1] First Brigade, Ezra Doty, Mifflin County, 1812.
XI. Division, First Brigade, Lewis Evans, Mifflin County, 1814.
XI. Division, Second Brigade, William Steel, Huntingdon County, 1812.
XI. Division, Second Brigade, Arthur Moore, Huntingdon County, 1814.

Brigade Inspector.

XI. Division, First Brigade, John Young, Centre County, 1812.
XI. Division, Second Brigade, William Moore, Huntingdon County, 1812.

[1] Afterwards numbered X.

After the completion of the vessels that were to constitute Commodore Perry's squadron on Lake Erie, in the fall of 1813, volunteers were solicited to complete the required force on board. A number of the Pennsylvania militia tendered their services, and were accepted. The Legislature, by resolutions approved Jan. 31, 1814, after expressing the thanks of the government of the commonwealth to the commodore, his assistant commandants, and the Pennsylvanians who volunteered on board the squadron, directed the Governor to present to each of the latter, "in compliment of their patriotism and bravery, a silver medal of the weight of two dollars," with his name thereon. George Grady, a member of Capt. William Morris' company, a resident of Henderson township, was the recipient of one of these medals.

In 1812, Dr. Joseph Henderson, Dr. James Stewart, and John Larkin were appointed lieutenants of infantry in the "new army." Dr. Alexander Dean, of the borough of Huntingdon, was chosen surgeon of the Second Pennsylvania Regiment, commanded by Col. John Purviance.

Mexican War.—Congress, May 13, 1846, declared that "by the act of the republic of Mexico a state of war exists between that government and the United States." Troops were called for, and the President made a requisition on the Governor of Pennsylvania for six regiments. Over ninety volunteer companies, numbering eight thousand three hundred and seventy-four men, responded to the call. Among them were:

No. 57. Warrior's Mark Fencibles.—Captain, James Bell; First Lieutenant, James Thompson; Second Lieutenant, James A. Gano. 82 non-commissioned officers and privates; whole number, 85.

No. 60. Williamsburg Blues.—Captain, Thomas K. Fluke; First Lieutenant, James M. Kinkead; Second Lieutenant, Alexander McKamey. 76 non-commissioned officers and privates; whole number, 79.

No formal call was made upon the volunteers until in December, when ten companies were ordered to rendezvous at Pittsburgh on the 7th of that month, to be mustered into the service of the United States. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, 10th, 11th, and 12th days of December, 1846, eight of the companies, being from the eastern part of the State, passed Huntingdon by canal. They were entertained by the citizens of the borough during a brief stop on their journey. William T. Wilson, a former employé of the Journal office, joined Capt. Dana's company of Wyoming Artillerists. James Ellis, William Sullivan, Robert M. Jones, John Condo, Robert Woods, George W. Yeager, and Samuel Holliday left the same week to join the regiment at Pittsburgh. These companies were organized as the First Regiment, and Francis Murray Wyncoop, of Pottsville, was chosen colonel; Samuel W. Black, of the Pittsburgh Blues, lieutenant-colonel; and F. L. Bowman, of the Wyoming Artillerists, major. Messrs. Sullivan, Condo, Woods, and Yeager joined the Pittsburgh Blues. The Second Regiment was organized soon after.

The Wayne Guards, mustered into the service at Pittsburgh, May 19, 1847, was officered as follows:

Captain, James Caldwell; First Lieutenant, Dr. A. McKamey; Second Lieutenant, Dr. C. Bowers; Third Lieutenant, John A. Doyle; Sergeants, George Filey, J. L. Madison, W. A. McMonigle, William Westhoven; Corporals, J. L. Kidd, Jacob Shade, C. B. Wilson, A. W. Clarkson.

This company was raised from citizens of the upper end of Mifflin and southeastern part of Huntingdon Counties, and it is to be regretted that a full roster is not accessible. Besides those named above, David Duff, Henry Hazzard, Jacob Hawn, and David McMurtrie enlisted from Huntingdon, and at the same time William Snare and John Johnston were in the regular service.

A detachment from Huntingdon and Blair, raised in the fall of 1846, joined the "American Highlanders," a uniformed company which had been organized in Cambria County before the opening of the war, and of which the captain was John W. Geary, afterwards Governor of Pennsylvania, but at that time employed at the "Summit" (now Cresson), in the office of John Snodgrass, superintendent of the old Portage Railroad.

Capt. Geary offered the services of his company to the Governor of Pennsylvania and they were accepted, but as the strength of the "Highlanders" was considerably below the standard required, he desired to fill their ranks by recruitment, and in order to do this he proposed to William Williams, of Hollidaysburg (who afterwards, during the war of 1861–65, was appointed and commissioned major in the Fourteenth United States Infantry), to raise twenty-five men for the company, and for which service he (Williams) was to receive the appointment of sub-lieutenant in the "Highlanders." Under this agreement twenty-two or twenty-three men were enlisted in Hollidaysburg and vicinity, among which number Maj. Williams now recollects only Thomas Hurd, Frederick Hesser, James Mealy, Washington Stone, Andrew Dripps, Don Revalon, Robert McNamara, and John Campbell.

The detachment of men raised at Hollidaysburg and vicinity left that place in December, 1846, and joined Geary's "Highlanders," the strength of which company was raised by this accession to about eighty-five men. At Pittsburgh it was assigned to duty as Company B of the Second Pennsylvania Regiment, of which Capt. William B. Roberts was elected colonel and Capt. John W. Geary lieutenant-colonel. Upon the promotion of Capt. Geary to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the regiment the following named were elected to the commissioned offices of Company B, viz.: captain, John Humphreys; first lieutenant, Samuel W. Black; second lieutenants, Elisha Luckett and William Williams.

The company embarked at Pittsburgh on the steamer "Cambria," and with the regiment proceeded down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans, encamping for a time at Plaine Chalmette, a place some miles below the city, and where Gen. Jackson fought the British forces under Packenham, Jan. 8, 1815. Here the Second Pennsylvania lay encamped adjoining a Mississippi regiment commanded by Col. Jefferson Davis, afterwards notorious as President of the so-called Confederate States of America. From this camp the regiment embarked on sailing-vessels bound for Mexico: Companies B (Capt. Humphreys), D (Capt. Murray), and G (Capt. McWilliams) taking passage on the ship "Gen. Veazie," Capt. Fairfield. The "Veazie" was driven from her course to the coast of Cuba and was at sea twenty-five days, during which time the smallpox broke out among the men on board, and in consequence they were landed at Lobos Island, while the other transports, with the remainder of the regiment, proceeded to Vera Cruz.

The three companies which were landed at Lobos Island from the ship "Gen. Veazie" remained there in quarantine for about a month, at the end of which time, the smallpox having disappeared, they sailed for Vera Cruz, where on their arrival they found that that strongly-fortified city had surrendered to Gen. Scott, who had already marched with the main body of his army on the road to the city of Mexico. The Second Pennsylvania had marched inland with Scott's forces, but the three companies which had been quarantined at Lobos (under command of Lieut.-Col. Geary) joined the division of Gen. Quitman (which had not yet left Vera Cruz), and marched with it to Cerro Gordo, where they arrived after Gen. Scott's battle and victory at that place. The army had moved on from Cerro Gordo towards Jalapa, where it was overtaken by Quitman's division, and where the three companies of the Second Pennsylvania, under Lieut.-Col. Geary, rejoined their regiment, encamping about three miles from the city. When the army moved on towards Orizaba, the three companies of the Second which had come on the "Gen. Veazie" remained at Jalapa, being ordered into the city on garrison duty. Here Lieut. Williams was in command of the company, Capt. Humphreys and Lieuts. Black and Luckett being on the sick-list. Williams afterwards became first lieutenant of the company by the resignation of Lieuts. Black and Luckett, First Sergeant Frank McKee being at the same time promoted to second lieutenant. From Jalapa Lieut. Williams was ordered to Pennsylvania on recruiting service, and did not return to the army. On his way home, when in New Orleans, he met two companies, respectively commanded by Capts. Taylor and Caldwell, who were on their way to join the Second Pennsylvania Regiment in Mexico.

With regard to the two companies above mentioned as having gone forward to join the regiment in the field, the following information has been obtained from Mr. Ira Jenkins, of Huntingdon borough, who was a member of the Wayne Guards, which was composed of men from Mifflin, Huntingdon, and Blair Counties, the largest part being from Mifflin, with about fifteen men from Huntingdon, and about twenty-five from Williamsburg, Blair Co., and vicinity. Among those who went from Huntingdon County he recollects William A. McManigal, Anthony Colabine, Joseph A. Madison (sergeant), Jacob F. Sneigh, Thomas Richardson, of Coffee Run, Joel L. Hoover, of Mount Union, Robert McCarrel, of Mapleton, the last mentioned four being still living.

The other company referred to was raised principally in Bedford County, but contained several men from Hollidaysburg and the southeast part of Blair County, also a number from Huntingdon County, among whom were Robert Woods, Henry Hazard, and Jacob Hawn. The company was raised in the spring of 1847, and organized under command of Capt. Taylor, of Bedford. In May, 1847, it proceeded by march and by transportation on the canal, to Pittsburgh, where it was immediately joined by Capt. Caldwell's (M) company, and the two embarked on board the steamer "Col. Yell," and moved down the river to New Orleans, where they arrived early in July, and were there met by Lieut. Williams on his return from Jalapa, as above mentioned. They encamped at Plaine Chalmette (Camp Carleton), below the city, where large numbers of men in other commands were sick with measles. The disease, however, did not spread to any great extent among the soldiers of the two Pennsylvania companies. After a short stay at Plaine Chalmette the companies of Capts. Caldwell and Taylor embarked on the ship "Florida," and proceeded to Vera Cruz, whence they marched with the division of Gen. Franklin Pierce (afterwards President of the United States) to Puebla, where the division joined the army of Gen. Scott, and where the companies of Capts. Taylor and Caldwell were assigned to the Second Pennsylvania, the former being designated as L and the latter as M company.

The Second Pennsylvania Regiment having marched with its division (Gen. Quitman's) from Jalapa, by way of Orizaba, to Puebla, where it received the two new companies, as above noticed, moved thence with the army of Gen. Scott towards the Mexican capital. During the campaign that succeeded it took part in all the principal battles, including those of Contreras, Churubusco, Molino del Rey, San Pascual, and at the storming of the Belen Gate (in which last-named engagement, as also in that of Chapultepec, it lost very heavily in killed and wounded), and was the first regiment to enter the city of Mexico after its surrender, Sept. 13, 1847. The commanding officer of the regiment, Col. W. B. Roberts, died in the city on the 3d of October following, and upon his death Lieut.-Col. Geary was promoted to the colonelcy. Not long after the occupation the Second Regiment was moved outside the city, and was posted successively at several neighboring points in the valley of Mexico, where it remained until May, 1848, when it marched to Vera Cruz, embarked, and proceeded by sea to New Orleans, and thence by steamers up the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers to Pittsburgh, where the men were mustered out of service on the 29th of July following.

The War of the Rebellion.—In the great conflict of 1861–65, known as the war of the Rebellion, the people of Huntingdon and Blair Counties exhibited the greatest patriotism and promptness in furnishing and forwarding men for service in the Union armies. From the time when the first call for troops was made known until the surrender of the principal hostile army made further calls unnecessary, the young men, the middle-aged men, and not infrequently the old men of these counties responded to each appeal with a patriotic alacrity not excelled in any other part of the State or Union.

The war was commenced in the harbor of Charleston, S. C., at daylight in the morning of Friday, April 12, 1861, by the opening of a heavy fire on Fort Sumter from the formidable Confederate earthworks which encircled it. The bombardment was continued incessantly during all that day and the forenoon of the next, and at about one o'clock P.M. on the 13th the fort surrendered, the buildings within its inclosure being on fire. On Monday, the 15th of April, the President of the United States issued a proclamation declaring certain Southern States to be in a state of rebellion, and calling for a force of seventy-five thousand men to suppress it. Of this number the quota of Pennsylvania was placed at sixteen regiments, and on the afternoon of the same day on which the President's proclamation was issued, the Secretary of War telegraphed to Governor Curtin asking for two regiments to march from Pennsylvania within three days to the defense of Washington, this State being the only one lying near the capital which could be relied on to furnish troops for its protection. The President's call, with a strong appeal from Governor Curtin, was telegraphed to every part of the State, urging men to come forward with all possible speed.

In response to this appeal the Ringgold Light Artillery, of Reading, the Logan Guards, of Lewistown, the Washington Artillery and National Light Infantry, of Pottsville, and the Allen Rifles, of Allentown, promptly offered their services, and being as promptly accepted, marched at once for the national capital, passing through Baltimore on the 18th of April in the midst of the wildest excitement and the most menacing demonstrations from the violent Southern sympathizers of that city, who had assembled for the avowed purpose of preventing (by force of arms if need should be) the passage of the troops. The Pennsylvania soldiers, however, preserved their coolness, and marched through the city without molestation, and arrived at Washington at seven o'clock the same evening.

In Huntingdon and Blair the response was not less prompt and patriotic than in the counties which sent forward the first five companies. Within a few hours from the time when the call of the President and the appeal of Governor Curtin were flashed westward over the telegraphic wires, men of these two counties were preparing to march to the defense of the capital, and within three days six companies from Blair and one company from Huntingdon were on their way to the general rendezvous at Harrisburg. A few days later another company from Blair, and also another from Huntingdon, went forward to the State capital to join the ranks of their country's defenders.

The six companies embraced in this first contribution by Blair County of men for the national armies had previously existed as independent organizations, and they became incorporated with the Third Regiment of Pennsylvania in the three months' service. The Huntingdon County company (which also had a previous existence as an independent organization) was then known as the "Standing Stone Guards," and became a part of the Fifth Regiment, though the date of its muster into the service was the same as that of the Blair County companies which entered the Third. These companies of Blair County men which joined the Third Regiment were designated in the regimental organization and commanded as follows: Company A (of Hollidaysburg), Captain, John R. McFarlane, of Hollidaysburg; First Lieutenant, John McKeage; Second Lieutenant, Thomas McFarlane. Company B, of Altoona, Captain, Henry Wayne (killed at Pocotaligo, S. C.); First Lieutenant, Joseph W. Gardner; Second Lieutenant, John M. Clarke. Company C (of Williamsburg), Captain, William L. Neff; First Lieutenant, Jacob C. Yingling; Second Lieutenant, Robert Johnston. Company D (of Tyrone), Captain, James Bell; First Lieutenant, William B. Darlington; Second Lieutenant, Francis M. Bell. Company E (of Altoona), Captain, Jacob Sczink; First Lieutenant, Richard J. Crozier; Second Lieutenant, Frederick Shillinger. Company H (of Hollidaysburg), Captain, Alexander M. Lloyd; First Lieutenant, Christian N. Snyder; Second Lieutenant, Stephen C. Potts. All these six companies were mustered into the service on the 20th of April, 1861, which was also the date of the organization of the Third Regiment, of which these companies formed the principal part.

The rendezvous of the Third Regiment was "Camp Curtin," at Harrisburg, that historic camp being first occupied and used as such by G company (from Johnstown, Cambria Co.) of the Third, on the morning of April 18, 1861. The organization and muster of the regiment was effected here, as stated above, on the 20th of the same month, its field and staff officers being: Colonel, Francis P. Minier (of Hollidaysburg); Lieutenant-Colonel, John M. Power (of Johnstown); Major, Oliver M. Irvine (of Pittsburgh); Adjutant, James C. Noon; Quartermaster, Jacob M. Campbell; Surgeon, R. S. M. Jackson. On the evening of the day of muster the regiment received marching orders, and immediately departed from Harrisburg by railroad for Baltimore, but did not reach that city, being stopped at Cockeysville, Md., by the destruction of a bridge a little farther on, and also at that point receiving orders from Gen. Scott to halt at Cockeysville and not attempt the passage through Baltimore, which had been made at the cost of bloodshed by the Massachusetts Sixth Regiment on the 19th. On receipt of these orders the Third encamped near Cockeysville, and remained there until the 22d, when it returned to York, Pa., reaching there in the morning of the 23d, and remaining there four days, during which time the officers and men of the regiment were recipients of most liberal hospitality from the citizens of the town. On the 27th the Third moved from York to Chambersburg, where it was assigned to duty in the Second Division, Second Brigade, commanded by Brig.-Gen. George C. Wynkoop, the other regiments composing the brigade being the First and Second Regiments of Pennsylvania, commanded respectively by Cols. Samuel Yohe and Frederick S. Stumbaugh. The regimental camp was about three miles from the town, and named "Camp Chambers." At this camp the Third remained until the 7th of June, when it moved with its brigade by railroad to Hagerstown, thence marched immediately to Funkstown, at which place orders were expected to march on Harper's Ferry, Va., where there was a considerable body of the enemy's forces in position, commanded by Gen. Joseph E. Johnston. The expected orders, however, were not received, and the regiment remained at this camp, quietly engaged in drill and other routine duty, for more than three weeks, and on the 1st of July moved with Keim's division (of which it was a part) to Williamsport, Md., on the left bank of the Potomac. On the 2d it crossed the river to the "sacred soil" of Virginia, and advanced with the troops to Martinsburg, in that State, arriving there on the 3d. The camp of the regiment was made near the town, to the northward; but after a short stay at this place the Third was ordered back to Williamsport, as a guard to the depot of supplies which had been established at that point for the use of the forces of Gen. Patterson at Martinsburg and neighboring points in Virginia. On this duty, and in the guarding of communications with Williamsport, the regiment remained until after the expiration of its enlistment, when, on the 16th of July, it was ordered to Harrisburg. Moving by way of Hagerstown, Md., it reached the capital of Pennsylvania on the following day, and there, on the 29th of July, 1861, was mustered out of service.

THIRD REGIMENT.

COMPANY A.

(Mustered in April 20, 1861.)

John R. McFarlane, captain; John McKeage, first lieutenant; Thomas McFarlane, second lieutenant; Jonathan Derno, first sergeant;

Henry Keely, second sergeant; David Stitler, third sergeant; John Barr, fourth sergeant; Andrew Leap, first corporal; Joseph Eckle, second corporal; Henry Barr, third corporal; Joseph Zouker, fourth corporal; John Weighaman, William Weighaman, musicians.

Privates.

Albert, Francis.
Allaugh, Henry A.
Ainsworth, James W.
Barr, Samuel C.
Boggs, Alexander.
Clauss, George F.
Charles, Samuel W.
Cochran, John.
Cahoe, John.
Crum, William.
Dunn, Joseph M.
Davis, Amos D.
Elder, William S.
Eastman, William H.
Evans, Charles.
Fox, John F.
Fortney, Matthias.
Filie, George.
Ferry, Joseph.
Garrett, William L.
Gibson, David.
Graft, William P.
Hunter, Matthew S.
Helwig, John G.
Hoffman, Anthony.
Jones, James.
Johnson, James M.
Kephart, Calvin M.
King, William H.
Lyons, Michael.
Ledger, Joseph J.
Mufty, John.
Martin, Robert N.
McCormick, James J.
McKeehan, James A.
McGinnis, William.
Michaels, John H.
McFalls, Benjamin F.
McIntire, Eli.
Murray, John H.
McIntle, Henry.
Orr, William L.
Orr, James A.
Piper, George.
Peight, Emanuel S.
Redding, John J.
Reighard, Julius.
Richter, George S.
Rodgers, James.
Sanders, Albert.
Smith, John.
Thompson, William F.
Tierman, Thomas.
Varnes, Louis H.
Wiggan, Henry.
Weaver, George W.
Watson, George M.
Weaver, Albert J.
Young, Peter.

COMPANY B.

(Mustered in April 20, 1861.)

Henry Wayne, captain; Joseph W. Gardner, first lieutenant; John M. Clark, second lieutenant; John S. Calvert, first sergeant; Levi McGlathery, second sergeant; John Lafferty, third sergeant; William Wilkes, fourth sergeant; Thomas C. Yingling, first corporal; Henry Shatts, second corporal; William Hook, third corporal; William W. Reed, fourth corporal; Thomas Coleman, musician; William Rees, musician.

Privates.

Arbee, James.
Boyles, Martin.
Bartlebaugh, David.
Baker, Samuel.
Boyle, William.
Boyle, George.
Bowers, Abraham.
Brown, Joseph.
Burkett, Ephraim.
Brown, James.
Boyle, John A.
Charters, William M.
Cassidy, Solomon.
Cahoe, David.
Cashier, Adolphus.
Clark, Robert.
Cayatt, Lewis P.
Cannon, John F.
Detwiler, George.
Davis, William.
Dougherty, John.
Delaney, Daniel.
Emheiser, George W.
Esterline, John.
Eckley, Joseph.
Fritz, William D.
Fink Frederick.
Ferguson, William.
Funk, David.
Gusher, David.
Gwinn, George H.
Gwinn, Alexander C.
Greer, Adam J.
Gaylord, George.
Hamilton, George.
Houseman, Andrew.
Hall, Adolphus.
Hempfield, George.
Johnson, Samuel.
James, Jesse.
Kelly, Leonard.
Leehr, John.
Miller, Henry.
Matthews, James.
Miller, John.
Morgan, Thomas.
Messimer, George.
Moore, David A.
Moore, Warren H.
Nixon, Albert H.
Plumer, Henry E.
Reed, William, Jr.
Rinehart, Samuel W.
Read, Alonzo.
Simelton, Thomas.
Staub, John.
Staub, Stephen.
Stevens, William.
Sheloe, William.
Trout, James.
Tipton, George.
Thompson, David.
Thompson, William.
Trees, James C.
Templeton, Roland.

COMPANY C.

(Mustered in April 20, 1861.)

William L. Neff, captain; Jacob C. Yingling, first lieutenant; Robert Johnston, second lieutenant; David P. Irvine, first sergeant; George W. Patterson, second sergeant; Albert B. Flood, third sergeant; John C. Wilson, fourth sergeant; Isaac N. Brenneman, first corporal; Garain Shellenberger, second corporal; David Fay, third corporal; David C. Yingling, fourth corporal; James C. Roller, John A. McKamy, musicians.

Privates.

Allender, James D.
Bell, William H.
Brenneman, Michael.
Bittle, Charles.
Baker, Samuel G.
Cooper, James M.
Craig, John.
Cary, James.
Dell, Henry H.
Erbe, William.
Eicholtz, Henry S.
Estep, Elijah.
Frederick, Benjamin F.
Fluke, William.
Garland, Moses K.
Guiser, George J.
Griffin, John.
Garrett, Alexander A.
Guiser, James.
Hewitt, Calvin C.
Houck, James H.
Hinds, Joseph S.
Huyett, Ulysses S.
Harnish, John.
Houck, Dorsey B.
Hoffman, William J.
Hicks, Alexander C.
Johnston, Robert M.
Jones, William W.
Kane, John.
Kelly, John.
Kidd, Joseph L.
Lower, Isaiah P.
Lang, Robert H.
Lucas, Abraham.
Louis, Peter.
Metz, George M.
Morgan, George W.
Miller, James.
Myers, Henry W.
Mantell, Joseph.
McCahan, John.
McElwee, William.
McDonald, James.
Nunnemacker, Samuel.
Neville, John H.
Neff, Albert J.
Noel, Daniel F.
Noland, Thomas.
Powell, Milton P.
Parks, Amos.
Riley, William A.
Riley, James.
Slonaker, Lemuel A.
Smith, Benjamin F.
Sies, Joseph.
Stineman, Albert A.
Smith, Patrick.
Sheller, James S.
Shaffer, Samuel B.
Taylor, Alexander.
Temple, James.
Taylor, George W.
Wolf, John.
Yerger, George.

COMPANY D.

(Mustered in April 20, 1861.)

James Bell, captain; William B Darlington, first lieutenant; Francis M. Bell, second lieutenant; Caleb R. Burley, first sergeant; John L. Burley, second sergeant; George W. Burley, third sergeant; Jeremiah Ganoe, fourth sergeant; David M. Jones, first corporal; Thomas C. Henshey, second corporal; John W. Manning, third corporal; John M. Berlin, fourth corporal; Franklin B. Stewart, Jonathan Ginter, musicians.

Privates.

Burley, Francis M.
Bell, James C.
Beatty, Oscar.
Bressler, Mahlon W.
Barnes, John A.
Barnicle, John.
Clark, David.
Cunningham, William F.
Deters, William.
Denny, John.
Denny, Joseph.
Davidson, John A., Jr.
Davidson, Rees J.
Falkender, John L.
Funk, William.
Gilhouser, Albert E.
Goss, Joseph.
Gates, David H.
Irvin, William.
Kupp, Joseph.
Kinney, Perry.
Kinney, John P.
Kern, Peter.
Kuhn, George.
Kaltrider, Geo. W.
Kistler, John S.
Ligo, Martin W.
Lightner, John.
Mattern, Sanford D.
Mattern, Taning S.
Merryman, John.
Miles, Joseph A.
Madison, Joseph W.
Mulberry, William H.
Miller, William.
McIlvaine, Castleton B.
Maxwell, Martin.
McIntyre, John A.
McCahen, Thomas C.
Myers, Joseph R.
McKinney, Daniel.
Owens, James T.

Owens, James H.
Owens, William J.
Pruner, Joseph D.
Price, Albert H.
Quinn, Jacob.
Roach, Robert A.
Stewart, John P.
Shive, William C.
Schmidt, John.
Straithoof, Henry H.
Smith, Oliver G.
Scofield, William.
Sneath, Robert.
Stonebraker, Sanford M.
Stonebraker, Sanford.
Schell, Alfred.
Thompson, James E.
Watson, Jeremiah S.
Watson, Samuel A.
Wurtz, James.
Wilson, Joseph L.
Youtz, John.

COMPANY E.

(Mustered in April 20, 1861.)

Jacob Sziuk, captain; Richard J. Crozier, first lieutenant; Frederick Shillinger, second lieutenant; Robert M. Messmer, first sergeant; David Counsman, second sergeant; Alexander H. Stewart, third sergeant; Jacob J. Smith, fourth sergeant; John Flanagan, first corporal; William B. Bartley, second corporal; Washington Foust, third corporal; Joseph Noel, fourth corporal; Charles Inherst, musician.

Privates.

Anderson, Samuel T.
Anderson, Henry M.
Aiken, Matthew.
Attick, James H.
Bush, John H.
Beatty, Franklin M.
Barker, Gilbert A. R.
Beals, Jacob R.
Bearns, John.
Baer, Harrison D.
Bartow, Thomas.
Boyles, William T.
Brickner, Frederick
Cutler, William B.
Cruse, George W.
Clark, John A.
Divine, John N.
Duffy, Francis.
Fechter, Ignatius.
Fichel, Paul.
Fry, Robert.
Fay, Andrew J.
Finney, Francis.
Glenn, William F.
Ginter, David M.
Garden, Robert B.
Griffith, Napoleon B.
Gunkle, Joseph.
Hubert, John.
Hammond, James.
Hogentogler, Nath'l F.
Isenberg, Daniel, Jr.
Isett, Washington.
Kelley, John A.
Kipple, George H.
King, Hezekiah.
Loudon, David M.
Lynde, Elihu S.
Laughlin, John M. C.
McFadden, John E.
Myers, Joseph.
Marshall, Alexander W.
McMahan, Mordecai.
Montgomery, Robert B.
Marshall, William H.
Miller, Gabriel.
Moore, James T.
Marshall, Winfield S.
Miller, Samuel H.
Nightwine, James.
O'Rourke, Richard.
Price, William H.
Parker, Joseph L.
Parker, Samuel D.
Quinlan, Patrick.
Reeves, George.
Rook, Joseph H.
Stoddard, Thomas.
Shandelmeyer, Jacob.
Stocksleger, Peter W.
Schiednagle, Anthony.
Smith, William C.
Sisler, William.
Tipton, Samuel B.

COMPANY H.

(Mustered in April 20, 1861.)

Alexander M. Lloyd, captain; Christian N. Snyder, first lieutenant; Stephen C. Potts, second lieutenant; Augustus Batton, first sergeant; Frank Vogle, second sergeant; Simon B. Barr, third sergeant; Nicholas Stephens, fourth sergeant; David K. Yoder, first corporal; Caleb M. Kephart, second corporal; James T. Pendergast, third corporal; David Barr, fourth corporal; George Weighaman, John Miller, Jr., musicians.

Privates.

Barr, Thomas M.
Beales, John T.
Boell, Harry.
Boell, William.
Byers, Walter P.
Black, George W. Z.
Bradley, William J.
Blain, William J.
Blackstone, Dill.
Barr, James.
Bryan, Harry.
Craig, James.
Curry, Charles.
Cruse, Charles W.
Curry, John.
Cooper, Benjamin.
Clark, John.
Dorsey, William C.
Frank, Christian.
Fenton, Charles M.
Green, Thomas.
Graffius, Abraham.
Garden, John R.
Gates, Joseph.
Gates, John.
Garber, George C.
Griffin, Russell.
Henshey, John B.
Henshey, Thomas.
Hicks, William.
Hughes, Joseph.
Hileman, William.
Halloway, Michael.
Howe, James M.
Hawksworth, George W.
Huff, Henry.
Keech, Joseph.
Keogh, Edward.
Krees, George G.
Kinkead, David P.
Loesh, John W.
Long, John D.
Lear, William.
Lane, John.
Lane, George.
Mason, Robert.
Maloy, Thomas.
Miller, George.
McClure, Alexander.
Murray, John.
McIlvaine, William.
Mack, George.
Ream, Charles.
Russ, Joseph C.
Roush, George.
Shrader, Frederick.
Sc rs, George.
Spade, George.
Thompson, James E.
Tipton, Caleb.
Ullery, Daniel.
Vogle, Jacob.
White, Benjamin.
Wildes, Tillinghast.
White, Edward.
Wingate, J. Russell.

The Fifth Regiment of Pennsylvania in the three months' service included (as has already been mentioned) a previously-organized independent company of Huntingdon known as the Standing Stone Guards. It was designated in the regimental organization as D company of the Fifth, and was mustered into the service of the United States April 21, 1861.

This company, it was stated, left for Harrisburg in advance of all other troops from Huntingdon and Blair Counties, but if so, the priority of departure was only a matter of a few hours, and the men and officers of all the companies that then moved in response to the appeal of Governor Curtin were equally anxious and eager to reach the scene of action, though facilities of transportation were not equally favorable to all.

The Fifth Regiment was rendezvoused and organized at Camp Curtin, where its companies were mustered into the service of the United States on the 20th and 21st of April, 1861. Its field-officers were Col. R. P. McDowell, of Pittsburgh; Lieut.-Col. Benjamin C. Christ, of Schuylkill County; and Maj. R. Bruce Petrikin, of Huntingdon. The regiment was armed and ammunitioned (but not fully equipped in other respects) at the State arsenal, and on the evening of the 21st of April left the State capital by the Northern Central Railway for Baltimore, but was intercepted by counter orders and returned to Harrisburg, whence on the 22d it moved by railroad to Philadelphia, reaching there in the afternoon of the same day. On the 23d it was embarked on steamers for Annapolis, Md., where it duly arrived, and remained until the 26th, when it took up the line of march along the railroad leading to Annapolis Junction, which was reached on the same evening, and made its bivouac in the full expectation of an attack from a hostile force which, as it was rumored, was advancing from Baltimore. But the night passed without the expected demonstration, and on the following day the regiment moved by rail from the Junction to Washington.

The Fifth Pennsylvania formed a part of Franklin's (First) brigade, in the division of Col. (afterwards Gen.) S. P. Heintzelman, the other brigades of the division being commanded respectively by Cols. O. O. Howard and O. B. Wilcox. In the forward movement of the army upon Centreville and Manassas, the Fifth Pennsylvania remained under orders at Alexandria, and consequently did not participate in the battle and defeat of Bull Run on the 21st of July. Its term of service expired on the day of the battle, and immediately afterwards it was ordered to Harrisburg, where on the 25th of July it was mustered out of service and disbanded.

FIFTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY D.

Benjamin F. Miller, captain; George F. McCabe, first lieutenant; James D. Campbell, second lieutenant; Addison J. Moore, first sergeant; James S. Campbell, second sergeant; William H. Flenner, third sergeant; George A. Simpson, fourth sergeant; James McCahan, first corporal; Robert B. Smith, second corporal; William S. Westbrook, third corporal; George W. Cypher, fourth corporal; A. Kinney Buoy, Edwin W. Thomas, musicians.

Privates.

Barrick, Jacob.
Black, George A.
Bradley, John W.
Cannan, John.
Coder, William B.
Clark, Jacob S.
Couch, W. A. B.
Clark, Alfred.
Cullison, John.
Cunningham, J. D.
Deffenbach, Samuel S.
De Armet, John.
Donahoo, John.
Deeter, John A.
Dean, George W.
Estep, William.
Fink, John.
Fleck, Augustus.
Forshey, Henry.
Gibbs, John.
Glazier, William H.
Gilliland, John W.
Gilliland, William D.
Harvey, George W.
Hoffman, Theophilus.
Heffner, David J.
Hoffman, John.
Kneegan, Thomas.
Lytle, John M.
Long, William H.
Montgomery, George W.
McFarland, Theodore.
Miller, W. A.
McCabe, Edward.
McMurtrie, Samuel M.
McMurtrie, James.
McGee, Charles W.
Mangle, Adam.
McCall, Jacob.
McKean, James.
McAllister, Alfred.
Miller, Adam P.
Nash, E. K.
Prim, William H.
Rinard, Samuel.
Roulett, James,
Staubs, Nathaniel.
Shaw, William H.
Stamm, John.
Stevens, William.
Sturtsman, William.
Steel, Jacob.
Shaffer, Peter.
Sneath, George.
Sneath, Richard.
Souder, John.
Thompson, Robert E.
Tobias, Calvin.
Thompson, Joseph H.
Vandevender, M. M.
Williams, B. Franklin.
Wagoner, William H.
White, Anthony.
Wise, William H.

The Tenth Regiment of three months' troops contained one company from Huntingdon County, designated as Company I, and mustered into the service of the United States April 26, 1861. The rendezvous of the Tenth Regiment was at Camp Curtin, where its organization was effected, and its several companies mustered into the service from the 22d to the 29th of April, 1861. The field-officers of the regiment were Col. Sullivan A. Meredith, Lieut.-Col. Oliver J. Dickey, Maj. Richard White. On the 1st of May the regiment moved by railroad from Harrisburg to Chambersburg, Pa., where it was assigned to the Third Brigade of the Second (Cadwallader's) division, under the command of Brig.-Gen. E. C. Williams.

On the 8th of June the regiment with its brigade moved to Greencastle, where it remained engaged in drill and camp duties until the 15th, when it moved southward with Gen. Patterson's column, and arrived at Williamsport on the 16th. Here it remained guarding the fords of the Potomac in the vicinity and on other duty until July 2d, when the command crossed the river into Virginia and moved towards Martinsburg, where it arrived in the afternoon of the 3d, having been slightly engaged (but without loss) in a skirmish with the enemy's cavalry on the route. It was the expectation that Gen. Patterson's column would move from Martinsburg to Winchester, Va., to attack the Confederate forces under Gen. Johnston, but an order which had been given to that effect was countermanded, and the Tenth remained at Martinsburg until the 15th, when it moved to Bunker Hill, Va., and thence two days later to Charleston. Here and in this vicinity the regiment remained until the 23d, when it moved to Harper's Ferry. News had been received of the disastrous result of the battle of Bull Run two days before, and Gen. Patterson's position was no longer tenable. The term of enlistment of the three months' men had also expired, and on the 24th the Tenth with other troops crossed the Potomac into Maryland. The regiment marched to Hagerstown, and thence moved by railroad to Harrisburg, where it was mustered out of service on the 31st of July.

TENTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY I.

Henry M. McConnell, captain; William Linton, first lieutenant; Martin V. B. Harding, second lieutenant; Henry Dunbauch, first sergeant; George W. Speese, second sergeant; John E. Bryant, third sergeant; Andrew E. Ingersoll, fourth sergeant; George W. Trite, first corporal; John Hoffman, second corporal; Thomas Ellis, third corporal; George D. Mengher, fourth corporal; George W. Brady, John Dawson, musicians.

Privates.

Baily, John.
Bish, Henry.
Bald, Henry.
Beatty, John.
Bouchter, Charles.
Bosswell, William.
Culton, Edwin F.
Crane, Nathaniel.
Crauch, Andrew.
Cruman, John.
Conrad, James M.
Cohoe, John.
Davis, John.
Dawson, Henry N.
English, Michael.
Foulk, John.
Fulkner, William.
Finit, John.
Finn, Patrick.
Gallagher, Daniel.
Herberson, Jacob.
Hobson, Thomas.
Heckley, Allen.
Hevin, Thomas.
Keller, William.
Kiner, Matthias.
Martin, Solomon.
Meynard, Peter.
Martin, Henry.
McManivay, Patrick
McReere, Edward.
McIntire, John.
McElIray, John.
McElIray, John.
Neff, Jacob H.
Neal, David.
Neal, Daniel.
O'Harra, Thomas.
O'Hemenay, John.
Paughett, Charles.
Patch, William.
Patch, Thomas.
Paulsen, John.
Rusk, Thomas.
Rettoun, Joseph
Rutter, John J.
Rogers, William.
Repple, John.
Ramsey, Benjamin.
Smith, Joseph I.

Sander, Andrew.
Smith, John W.
Smith, Thomas.
Solomon, John.
Treadgold, Vehera.
Turtnean, Thomas.
Vocht, Leonard.
Vocht, John.
Vull, Edward W.
Wilson, Andrew.
Wilson, Frederick.
Wert, Alpha.
Wetherill, William.
Young, William.

In the Fourteenth Regiment (three months' service) was a Blair County company, chiefly from Martinsburg and vicinity. This company, designated as H company of the regiment, was mustered into service April 24, 1861. Company I of the Fourteenth also contained a number of men from Blair and Huntingdon Counties. Its commissioned officers were Capt. Alexander Bobb, First Lieut. J. C. Saunders, Second Lieut. John H. Typher.

This regiment was organized at Camp Curtin in the latter part of April, 1861, under the following-named field-officers: John W. Johnston, colonel; Richard McMichael, lieutenant-colonel; Charles N. Watts, major. It was mustered into the United States service as a regiment April 30th. On the 9th of May it was moved from Camp Curtin to the fair grounds at Lancaster, and there remained until the 3d of June, when it moved to a camp about five miles from Chambersburg, and was there assigned to the Fifth brigade (Gen. James S. Negley) of Gen. William H. Keim's (Second) division.

After a stay of about two weeks at the camp near Chambersburg, the regiment moved (June 16th) to Hagerstown, Md., and thence on the 20th to a camp near Sharpsburg. At this place it remained until the 2d of July, when it moved with the column under Gen. Patterson across the Potomac into Virginia, and on the 3d (having encountered Ashby's Confederate cavalry on the march of the previous day) arrived at Martinsburg, where it remained on provost and other duty until the 15th of July, when it moved with the forces of Gen. Patterson to Bunker Hill, Va., upon a report that the enemy was in force at that place. No enemy was found, however, but only his deserted camps, and on the 18th the regiment marched to Charlestown, Va., and on the 21st (the day of the Bull Run battle) to Harper's Ferry, where, two days later, the news was received of the great disaster to the Union arms. This ended the Virginia campaign, and soon afterwards, the term of service of the Fourteenth having nearly expired, it crossed the Potomac, marched to Hagerstown, where it arrived on the 26th, was moved thence by rail to Chambersburg, and from there to Carlisle, where after a stay of eleven days it was mustered out and disbanded on the 7th of August.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY H.

Thomas Holland, captain; William McGraw, first lieutenant; Samuel A. Andrews, second lieutenant; David Gildea, first sergeant; John H. Robertson, second sergeant; Joseph Mauk, third sergeant; George S. Hoover, fourth sergeant; David Ligenfeldt, first corporal; Jacob W. Andrews, second corporal; Mahlon B. Hamilton, third corporal; John H. Black, fourth corporal; Daniel B. Hicks, Thomas Lloyd, musicians.

Privates.

Breeze, Samuel.
Boring, Henry J.
Burkey, Aaron.
Brubaker, Emanuel.
Burke, Patrick.
Bartlebaugh, Philip.
Christian, John G.
Dallas, John.
Dibert, Michael H.
Davis, George W.
Davis, Joshua.
Donahay, David A.
Dillman, Simon P.
Dougherty, Michael.
Engle, Henry.
Emeigh, Charles.
Fleck, John.
Fry, Solomon W.
Flinn, Samuel.
Fether, Michael.
Gibboney, James H.
Gibboney, Luther M.
Gates, Martin.
Grooms, David.
Hainsey, George.
Henderson, William.
Hammond, Edward.
Hodge, Patrick F.
Hammers, James J.
Hammond, Greenbury.
Hughes, John.
Hall, George.
Ickis, Adam.
Isett, Aaron B.
Keith, William.
Laise, John H.
Mowry, William R.
Miller, Edward B.
Miller, Henry.
Mangus, Abraham.
Mountain, William.
Myers, Peter.
McConnell, William J.
McInay, John.
McKenzie, Robert.
McCartney, James.
Malone, Christian.
Nofsker, William.
Osner, George A.
Perkins, George W.
Robinson, James.
Rotherick, Davis B.
Robinson, William.
Reffner, James.
Rough, Andrew.
Ruggles, Joseph.
Smith, William.
Smith, John.
Smith, David.
Stiffler, William.
Shanck, Joshua.
Vaughn, George.
Wilt, Joseph.
Williams, James.

COMPANY I.

Alexander Bobb, captain; J. C. Saunders, first lieutenant; John H. Typher, second lieutenant; William Knee, first sergeant; David Brenneman, second sergeant; James McFadden, third sergeant; David McKee, fourth sergeant; Johnson C. Ackers, first corporal; George Strayer, second corporal; John Grimes, third corporal; Peter Barley, fourth corporal; Thomas Campbell, H. Boner, musicians.

Privates.

Brenizer, John.
Brown, Washington.
Brown, William.
Bartlebaugh, M.
Bird, George.
Bartlebaugh, Silas.
Brown, Jacob.
Barr, Reuben.
Burket, George.
Bossler, Henry.
Brenner, Amos.
Coleman, James.
Campbell, Lawrence.
Cook, Charles.
Carman, Henry.
Conrad, Isaac.
Dunlap, John.
Dilser, Lawrence.
Daniels, Edward.
Fore, Yost.
Fink, Jacob.
Firth, John.
Fight, William.
Fighter, Clemens.
Firth, Jacob.
Fite, Abraham.
Funk, David.
Geitly, Jacob.
Guilard, George.
Greenleaf, Buiner.
Grove, Amos.
Himes, John.
Hoover, George.
Houck, Joseph.
Henry, Frederick.
Himes, John.
Hoover, George.
Herrington, Horace.
Kuehall, Richard.
Kemmerer, Samuel.
Kiehl, Theodore.
Kolb, Henry.
Kurtz, George.
Kurr, William.
Kissler, John.
Lyman, Charles.
Lingle, Jerome.
Leidig, Daniel.
Lytle, John.
Little, James.
Loose, Samuel.
Miller, Edward.
McGinley, Thomas.
Muckler, George.
Mordus, Samuel.
Mausaus, George.
McChesne, John.
Moore, George.
Metzgar, John.
Mortis, Samuel.
Miller, Samuel.
Moore, Lewis.
Mortzer, Samuel.
Moss, Edwin.
Nickeson, Charles.
Ruggles, John.
Roberts, William.
Rhodes, Christian.

Ross, Jacob.	Futer, John.
Rice, Joseph.	Williams, John.
Sheffler, Emanual.	Wykoff, Samuel.
Spencer, James.	Washing, James.
Shoeman, David.	Winn, Henry.
Solida, John.	Winn, William.

The Fifteenth Regiment contained one company which, though credited to Cambria County, was made up largely of men from Huntingdon, which county furnished all its commissioned officers, as will be found in the roll. This company—designated as H of the Fifteenth—was mustered into service on the 23d of April, 1861. The Fifteenth Regiment was organized at Camp Curtin, its field-officers being Col. Richard A. Oakford, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Biddle, Maj. Stephen N. Bradford. It was brigaded with the Fourteenth, under Gen. James S. Negley, and its history from muster in to muster out is essentially the same as that of the Fourteenth.

A considerable number of men of Huntingdon and Blair Counties served in other companies and regiments, but the companies which have been mentioned above were all which were distinctively of these counties in the three months' service. During their first enlistment they saw nothing of actual war, but the greater part of them afterwards entered regiments raised for three years, and in that term of service became veteran soldiers. Many of them gave up their lives on the battle-field, many others died in Southern prisons, and hundreds who came back from the conflict to their homes in the valley of the Juniata will bear to their graves the scars and wounds received in the service of their country.

Below are given lists of officers and enlisted men of the companies from Huntingdon and Blair Counties serving in the three months' regiments mentioned in the preceding military sketches, viz.:

FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY H.

Joseph Johnson, captain; Michael McNally, first lieutenant; William H. Simpson, second lieutenant; George W. Barkley, first sergeant; Andrew McAlwane, second sergeant; David Wilson, third sergeant; Patrick McAteer, fourth sergeant; John P. Murphy, first corporal; William Wharton, second corporal; Arthur Jones, third corporal; Adam Garber, fourth corporal; George Jenkins, Denseth Cooper, musicians.

Privates.

Altman, Gustavus.	Harvey, Samuel.
Brewster, McGinley.	Haney, Levi.
Baird, William.	Hagans, John.
Barnicle, Timothy.	Heckendon, Henry.
Breninger, George.	Heidler, James.
Bodaly, Mark.	Heidler, William.
Benson, William.	Heidler, Thomas.
Baldwin, Alexander T.	Hoffman, Daniel.
Cornelly, Thomas.	Hefright, Henry.
Duffy, Austin.	Koch, Leo.
Dixon, William.	Kinsel, Thomas.
Davis, William H.	Kinsel, Henry M.
Davis, Henry.	Kaige, Joseph.
Dorland, William.	Lego, Abraham.
Elliott, Benjamin M.	Lewis, William G.
Estep, James.	Myers, John A.
Emmet, James.	Murphy, S. A.
Firebaugh, Jacob.	Mulvany, Hugh.
Martin, John.	Turman, Grier.
Miller, William.	Temple, Thomas.
McCook, John.	Temple, Isaac H.
McDowell, Matthew.	Turman, Royer.
Nelson, William.	Vanorman, William.
Port, Henry.	White, Thomas.
Richerson, George.	Worley, William M.
Randolph, George.	Wilson, Alfred.
Steinman, Matthew.	Wilson, Samuel.
Stehley, Henry.	Weight, John E.
Stanly, Joseph B.	Welsh, John.
Shriver, Frederick.	Weight, John.
Sellers, Jacob.	Watson, Eugene.
Stevens, Isaac.	Withington, William.

CHAPTER XIX.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

THE THREE YEARS' TROOPS—THE TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

AFTER the filling of the first quotas the War Department changed its policy and ceased to accept three months' men, the term of service required being three years or during the war, with some exceptions of regiments enlisted for shorter times. During the long struggle Huntingdon and Blair Counties furnished large numbers of troops for the armies of the United States. Of the movements and services of those regiments in which Huntingdon and Blair men served separate historical sketches will be given, with lists of their Huntingdon and Blair County members. It is admitted, however, that the lists given are not entirely accurate or complete, but they are as nearly so as it is practicable to make them from the records of the adjutant-general's office.

The Twenty-eighth (three years) Regiment of the Pennsylvania line was raised and organized in the summer of 1861, principally through the efforts, and largely at the expense, of its original colonel, John W. Geary, who was a veteran officer of the Mexican war, and who afterwards became a general in the United States service and Governor of the State of Pennsylvania. The other field-officers of the Twenty-eighth were Lieut.-Col. Gabriel de Korponay and Maj. Hector Tyndale. The regiment was of unusual size, embracing fifteen companies,[1] of which one (Company O) was recruited in Huntingdon County; its commissioned officers will be found in the muster-roll. The rendezvous of the regiment was a camp at Oxford Park, Philadelphia, where the organization was effected, and the regiment brought up to the usual strength of ten full companies prior to the battle of Bull Run, July 21st. Under the urgent call for reinforcements resulting from that disaster to the Union arms, Col. Geary, with the ten completed companies of the Twenty-eighth, left the rendezvous on the 27th of July, and proceeded by railroad to Harper's Ferry, Va.; the other five companies (not then completed) being left at camp under Maj. Tyndale, with orders to join the command at the front at the earliest possible time.

[1] Above the number of men necessary to form these fifteen companies there was an overplus which was formed into a battery, known as Knapp's Battery of the 28th, and for a time attached to the regiment under Col. Geary.

The main body of the regiment on arrival at Harper's Ferry was assigned to the brigade of Col. (afterwards major-general) George H. Thomas, in the corps of Gen. N. P. Banks. From Harper's Ferry the Twenty-eighth moved to Sandy Hook, a short distance lower down the Potomac, on the Maryland side, from which latter place it marched on the 14th of August to Point of Rocks, sixteen miles lower down and on the same side of the river, where the regimental headquarters were established; but the command (divided into detachments, and being joined not long afterwards by the five other companies) occupied a line nearly thirty miles long on the Potomac (above and below the Point), with picket-posts established at about every quarter of a mile the entire distance; the duty being to guard the numerous fording-places and ferries, to prevent the crossing of bodies of the enemy, and also to stop communication between the disaffected people of that part of Maryland and the Confederates on the Virginia side.

In these and other duties the Twenty-eighth held the line of the Potomac for more than six months, during which time its detachments frequently participated in minor engagements with the enemy across the river, and captured in the aggregate a large number of prisoners. On the 15th of September, at a point above Harper's Ferry, the posts of the regiment were attacked by the enemy, who was driven back with a loss to them of nearly one hundred killed and wounded, and four light artillery pieces taken by Geary's men. Nine days afterwards the position of the regiment at Point of Rocks was furiously but ineffectually assailed by artillery and infantry from the south side of the river, the fight continuing for more than two hours. A similar affair occurred about the 28th, in which the enemy was driven from a fortified position opposite Berlin, Md., and again, on the 2d of October, they were dislodged from their defenses on the south side of the river below Weaverton. On the 16th Col. Geary, with parts of the Twenty-eighth, the Third Wisconsin, and the Thirteenth Massachusetts Regiments, crossed the river above the mouth of the Shenandoah, and fought a brisk battle with the enemy's forces under Col. "Shanks" Evans, of South Carolina, and Turner Ashby, of Virginia, defeating them with a loss estimated at one hundred and fifty killed and wounded, and capturing one heavy piece of artillery and ten prisoners.

The Huntingdon County company (O) participated with the regiment and different divisions to which it was attached in the many engagements of the several campaigns, among which the following were most prominent: Nolan's Ferry, Md., Oct. 30, 1861; Berlin, Md., Nov. 10, 1861; Harper's Ferry, Va., Nov. 24, 1861; Bolivar Heights, Va., Feb. 25 and 26, 1862; Lovettsville, Va., March 1, 1862; Wheatland, Va., March 7, 1862; Leesburg, Va., March 8, 1862; and from that time to the next April the company participated in engagements with the enemy at Upperville, Ashby's Gap, Rectortown, Piedmont, Linden, Front Royal, Middleburg, Salem, White Plains, and on April 14, 1862, at Catlett's Station. May 15, 1862, a part of the company was captured at Linden, Va., and on July 10th the company and regiment were assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Second Corps, under Gen. Banks. Sept. 17, 1862, the company and regiment was engaged in the battle of Antietam, and on the 23d crossed the Potomac in pursuit of the enemy. Oct. 28, 1862, the company was transferred to the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment, and with that command mustered out of the service.

TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY O.

(Mustered in Aug. 17, 1861. Date of transfer to Company B, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, Oct. 28, 1862, except where noted.)

George F. McCabe, captain; J. Addison Moore, first lieutenant; A. H. W. Creigh, second lieutenant; Wm. W. Willett, first sergeant; R. E. Thompson, S. S. Deffenbaugh, M. M. Vandevander, William H. Glazier, Edwin McCabe (pro. to sergt. Jan. 1, 1862), sergeants; James Moore, David Heffner, Thomas Keegan (trans. to Knapp's Pa. Battery Oct. 5, 1861), Wilkins Briggs (reduced Oct. 17, 1861), John Witherspoon, Samuel Rinard (reduced Feb. 28, 1862), John Donohue, John Shoemaker (pro. to corp. Feb. 28, 1862), corporals; Jacob McCall, Josiah M. Funk, musicians.

Privates.

Barber, Alex. R.
Barr, John, disch. on surg. cert. Dec. 27, 1861.
Brown, Asel.
Bowersox, George W.
Black, Wm. H., pro. to sergt. Nov. 1, 1861.
Bruce, Charles, trans. to Knapp's Pa. Battery Oct. 5, 1861.
Baker, Ephraim. Bard, Thomas.
Brown, Washington. Clark, Benj. F.
Cannon, Thomas, wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Cane, William.
Cronan, Dennis, trans. to Knapp's Pa. Battery Oct. 5, 1861.
Copeland, William P. Corbin, Matthew.
Cossart, William H. Corbin, Washington.
Cedars, Joseph. Dambuskey, H.
Clark, Amos.
Davis, James W., wounded, with loss of leg, Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862.
Duffy, John P., wounded, with loss of leg, Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862.
Dittus, George W.
Farraday, Thomas.
Griffin, Thomas.
Gibson, Wm. H., trans. to Knapp's Pa. Battery Oct. 5, 1861.
Green, James A. Hoffman, John.
Herskey, Frederick. Hinchman, Isaac.
Hughes, W. H., pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1861; to sergt. Nov. 1, 1861.
Henkleroad, J. W.
Hughes, James.
Jones, Richard.
Johnson, Thomas, pro. to corp. Jan. 10, 1862; reduced May 10th.
Johns, Jesse, killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Kearney, Michael.
Klepser, Andrew, killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Lowery, Samuel.
Lowery, David.
Lamp, David, killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Leighty, George.

Long, William H.
Martin, John H., trans. to Co. —, 147th Regt. P. V., Oct. 28, 1862.
Marks, Benjamin F. — Malouey, Samuel C.
Mogle, Adam. — Murphy, James.
Miles, Albert. — Mehan, Matthew.
Morgan, Adam. — Morgan, Thomas.
Maxwell, Curtis.
Morningstar, John, wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
McRay, Jacob. — McCarron, Edwin.
McLaughlin, Neal. — Neally, David.
McCullen, Alex. — O'Neal, James.
McAvoy, William.
Phillips, James, trans. to Knapp's Pa. Battery Oct. 5, 1861.
Patterson, W. H. — Roupe, Thomas.
Paulding, Worthington. — Riley, John.
Richards, T. H. — Rankin, William.
Robinson, Edward, disch. on surg. certif. June 30, 1862.
Smiley, Wm. A.
Sutherland, James.
Scott, Adam.
Sneath, George C., killed at Linden, Va., May 15, 1862.
Shinn, William.
Snyder, John.
Snyder, George W.
Tillotson, John, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 26, 1861.
Taylor, Solomon S. — Thomas, Jacob.
Teeter, Samuel. — Turley, Hugh.
Thorance, Joseph. — Tobias, Calvin.
Thompson, Wm. M.
Tolan, James, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 17, 1861.
Witherspoon, William.
Williams, Richard, wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Wilson, Hugh.
Wineburg, John H.
Weaver, John V., died at Frederick, Md., Feb. 26, 1862.

The Fifth Reserve, or Thirty-fourth Regiment.—The Fifth Reserve Regiment, numbered the Thirty-fourth of the Pennsylvania line, was organized at Camp Curtin on the 20th of June, 1861, being made up of companies previously formed and filled in Lycoming, Northumberland, Clearfield, Union, Huntingdon, Centre, Bradford, and Lancaster Counties. Huntingdon County furnished two companies, viz.: the "Huntingdon Infantry," Capt. Andrew S. Harrison, and the "Scott Infantry," Capt. George Dare. The first named of these companies was designated as G company, and the latter as I company of the regiment. The original field-officers of the Fifth Reserve were Col. John I. Gregg, of Centre County, Lieut.-Col. Joseph W. Fisher, of Lancaster County, and Maj. George Dare, of Huntingdon County, promoted from captain of I company, and succeeded in the command of that company by Capt. Frank Zentmyer.

On the 21st of June, the day following the organization of the Fifth under the above-named field-officers, Col. Gregg resigned in order to accept a captaincy to which he had been appointed in the Sixth United States Cavalry. He was succeeded in the colonelcy of the Fifth by Capt. Seneca G. Simmons, of the Seventh Regular Infantry, and in the morning of the 22d the regiment, with Battery A, First Pennsylvania Artillery, and the "Bucktail" regiment, under Col. Charles J. Biddle, left Camp Curtin under orders from Gen. Scott to proceed to Cumberland, Md., to relieve the Eleventh Indiana Regiment, under command of Col. Lew Wallace at that point. The route of the command was from Harrisburg by the Pennsylvania Railroad to Huntingdon, thence southward by the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad to Hopewell, where it arrived on the night of the 22d, the men having been profusely feasted during their stop at Huntingdon, where "an ample dinner had been provided for the coming soldiers, of which they partook most freely, and filled their haversacks with the choicest dainties."

From the night camp of the 22d at Hopewell the command moved early in the morning of Sunday, the 23d of June, and took the road for Bedford Springs, near which place it encamped on the same evening. This was named "Camp McCall," and the two regiments and battery remained there three days. From "Camp McCall" the command marched to the Maryland line, where a camp was formed called "Camp Mason and Dixon." There it remained until the night of the 7th of July, when it moved forward and occupied Cumberland, this being done at the urgent request of the citizens of the town, who desired it for protection against a rumored raid of the enemy's cavalry. The attack was not made, being prevented doubtless by the presence of the Pennsylvania troops. On the following day the regiments took possession of the camps previously occupied by Col. Wallace's Indianians. On the 13th of July the command moved to a camp about two miles from New Creek, Va., and twenty miles above Cumberland, where a railroad bridge had been destroyed by the enemy. The town of New Creek was occupied immediately afterwards by the troops, and on the 20th the Fifth moved to Piedmont, to hold the town and afford protection to its Unionist citizens. At this place some of the men of the regiment took possession of the office of the Piedmont Independent (the editor of which journal had been driven away by the rebels) and from it issued a paper called the Pennsylvania Reserve," which was the first of a great number of similar publications issued during the war by the editors and printers in the volunteer army."

This campaign of the Fifth and the Bucktails at Cumberland, Piedmont, New Creek, and neighboring parts of Virginia was of forty days' duration, in which time they had frequent skirmishes with bodies of the enemy's cavalry and infantry, afforded protection to the Union people of that region, and by repairing the railroad bridges which had been destroyed by rebels reopened railroad communication between Baltimore and Wheeling. Their campaign was closed on account of the urgent need of more troops in the vicinity of Washington to protect that city against the expected advance of the enemy after the battle of Bull Run. In conformity to orders recalling this command the regiments and battery took up their line of march northward on the 27th of July, and moving to Hopewell, proceeded thence by railroad through Huntingdon to Harrisburg, where they arrived on the 31st. There the companies were recruited to near the maximum strength, and on the 8th of August the Fifth was moved by rail to Washington, and thence marched to the camp established for the reserve division at Tenallytown, Md., as before mentioned.

In the organization of the division at the Tenallytown camp the Fifth was assigned to Brig.-Gen. John F. Reynolds' (First) brigade, of which the other regiments were the First, Second, and Eighth Reserves, commanded respectively by Col. R. Biddle Roberts, Col. William B. Mann, and Col. George S. Hays.

The regiment remained at Tenallytown about two months, a period which was passed in camp routine, picket duty, and frequent alarms along the line of the Potomac, and on the 9th of October moved with its brigade and division across that historic stream and took position in the line of the Army of the Potomac at Langley, Va., at which place the Reserve division made its winter-quarters. In the battle of Dranesville, which was fought on the 20th of December by the Third Brigade (Gen. Ord's) of the Reserves, neither the Fifth Regiment nor any part of Reynolds' brigade took part, having been delayed at Difficult Creek by orders of Gen. McCall.

On the 10th of March, 1862, the Fifth, with the entire division, moved from the winter-quarters at Camp Pierpont (Langley) to Hunter's Mills, Va., with the expectation of joining in a general advance of the army on the Confederate position at Manassas. But it was found that the enemy had evacuated his line of defenses and retired towards Gordonsville, and thereupon the plan of the campaign was changed by the commanding general, McClellan, and the Reserve regiments were ordered back to the Potomac. On the 14th the retrograde march was commenced, and continued through mud, darkness, and a deluge of rain to Alexandria, where it was expected that the division would embark with the rest of the Army of the Potomac for the Peninsula; but this was not the case. The division of McCall was assigned to duty with the First Corps under Gen. McDowell, which, with the exception of Franklin's division, was held between the Potomac and Rappahannock Rivers for the protection of the city of Washington.

From Alexandria the Fifth, with its brigade, marched back (April 9th) to Manassas, thence to Catlett's Station, thence to Falmouth, and (May 26th) across the Rappahannock to Fredericksburg, of which place Gen. Reynolds was appointed military Governor. An advance from Fredericksburg along the line of the railroad towards Richmond was intended, but this was found to be inexpedient, and as Gen. McClellan was calling urgently for reinforcements to the Peninsula, Reynolds' brigade was recalled from its advanced position on the railroad, the entire division was marched to Gray's Landing, and there (June 9th) embarked for White House, on the Pamunkey River, where it arrived on the 9th of June. There had been a vast quantity of stores collected at White House for the use of the army on the Chickahominy, and the timely arrival of the Reserves prevented the destruction of those stores by a strong detachment of Confederate cavalry under Fitzhugh Lee, who was then on his way towards the Pamunkey for that purpose. From White House the Fifth marched with its division by way of Baltimore Cross-Roads to join the Army of the Potomac in the vicinity of Gaines' Mill. Thence the division was moved to the extreme right, where it took position at Mechanicsville and along the line of Beaver Dam Creek.

On Thursday, the 26th of June, was fought the battle of Mechanicsville, the first of that series of bloody engagements known collectively as the "Seven Days' Fight," and also (with the exception of the severe skirmish at Dranesville in the previous December) the first engagement in which the infantry of the Pennsylvania Reserves took part. The Fifth had been that morning ordered across the Beaver Dam Creek to guard the Mechanicsville and Meadow Bridges, and four companies advanced to Mechanicsville. At one o'clock P.M. the enemy appeared and drove in the advanced pickets to the creek. At two P.M. Reynolds withdrew his brigade and occupied the light works which had been thrown up behind the creek. The Fifth occupied the left centre of the brigade line, being posted in the partial cover of a belt of woods on the left of the road. The enemy, advancing in strong force, attacked with great impetuosity, the Georgia and Louisiana troops wading Beaver Dam Creek where the water reached up to their belts, and charging again and again with fierce determination. Reynolds' brigade on the right received and repelled the severest assaults in the conflict, which raged through the whole afternoon, and only ceased when darkness closed down on wood and stream. The entire loss of the Reserve division was two hundred and ten killed and wounded and two hundred and eleven missing, of which number the Fifth Regiment sustained a loss of fifty killed and wounded.

Through the night succeeding the battle the men of the Pennsylvania Reserves slept on the field of conflict. At daylight on the morning of the 27th of June the Fifth, with its companion regiments, withdrew from the line of the Beaver Dam, and moved down parallel with the Chickahominy, some two or three miles, to Gaines' Mill, where Gen. Fitz John Porter's corps (of which the Reserves formed a part) was placed in line of battle for the renewed conflict, which was inevitable. Butterfield's brigade occupied the extreme left, Sykes' division of regulars the right, and McCall's Pennsylvanians were placed in the second line, Meade's brigade being on the left, near the Chickahominy, and Reynolds' brigade on the right of the line of the Reserves. Approaching the Union lines from the direction of Cold Harbor and Dispatch Station were the Confederate commands of Gens. A. P. Hill, Longstreet, D. H. Hill, and (farther away, but moving up with all possible speed) the corps of the redoubtable "Stonewall" Jackson, in all more than fifty thousand men, against half that number on the Union side. The battle was opened by a furious attack on the regulars composing Porter's right. These, after having repulsed the enemy in his first attack, finally gave way before a renewed assault. The battle raged furiously during the afternoon, the Fifth, and other regiments of the Reserves in the second line, being constantly under a severe artillery fire. Between four and five o'clock the Second and Third Brigades were advanced to the first line, and at once became heavily engaged, the enemy making a furious and most determined assault at that point of the line. "The Fifth Regiment, on my left," said Maj. Stone, of the Bucktails, in his official report, "the conduct of which afforded a constant example of courage and discipline, answered the enemy with the most terrific fire." In that perilous position the regiment stood fast, and held its ground against repeated charges, until the men had exhausted their ammunition, when they retired before a flank assault made by the veterans of Stonewall Jackson.[1] Just then the famous Irish Brigade moved past them rapidly to the front, poured in a destructive volley, and bravely held the enemy in check, while the wearied men of the Fifth fell back with empty cartridge-boxes, but without panic or disorder, to the Chickahominy. During the afternoon of the battle the command of the Fifth devolved on Lieut.-Col. Fisher, Col. Simmons being in command of the brigade. The heroic Gen. Reynolds, the brigade commander, became separated from his troops, and was captured by the enemy on the following morning. The losses of the Fifth Regiment in this engagement were not reported separately from those of the succeeding four days.

The day of Gaines' Mill closed in blood and defeat to the Union forces, and during the night the shattered Pennsylvania Reserves, with the other troops, succeeded in crossing the Chickahominy and destroying the bridge behind them, though two bridges farther down the stream (Bottom's and Long Bridges) still remained; and it was not long after sunrise on Saturday morning when the Confederate force under the indomitable Jackson was massed at the upper one of these and preparing to cross to the south side. Other hostile forces were also advancing, and in view of this rather alarming situation of affairs the general had, as early as Friday morning, decided on a retreat by the whole army to James River, where a base of supplies could be held, and communication on the river kept open by the Union gunboats. The troops were informed of the proposed change by an apparently triumphant announcement (intended merely to encourage the soldiers, and lighten in some degree the gloom of the great disaster) that a new flank movement was about to be executed that would surely and swiftly result in the capture of Richmond. No such assurance, however, could conceal from the intelligent men who formed the Army of the Potomac that their backs, and not their faces, were now turned towards the Confederate capital, and that the "change of base" was made from necessity rather than choice.

During the day succeeding that of the Gaines' Mill battle the Fifth Reserve lay in quiet on the south side of the Chickahominy, near the York River Railroad. On Sunday, the 29th, it moved with the other regiments to and across White Oak Swamp, and at evening came to the vicinity of Charles City Cross-Roads, where on the following day a fierce battle was fought, in which the Fifth took gallant part. The first assault of the enemy at Charles City Cross-Roads was received at about one o'clock in the afternoon of the 30th. At about three o'clock the Fifth became heavily engaged, and, with the Eighth, charged the Seventh and Seventeenth Virginia Confederate Regiments, putting them to complete rout, and capturing many prisoners. Later in the day the Fifth fought desperately, repelling repeated assaults of the foe, and losing its commander, the brave Col. Simmons, who was mortally wounded, taken prisoner, and died in the hands of the enemy. No abler or more gallant officer than Col. Seneca G. Simmons ever led a regiment to battle. The division commander, Gen. McCall, was also taken prisoner in this engagement.

In the terrible battle of Malvern Hill, which was fought in the afternoon of the following day (July 1st), the Fifth being held with the division in reserve, did not become actively engaged, though it lay for hours under a heavy fire of artillery. The battle opened about four o'clock P.M., and from that time until darkness closed the roar of musketry, the crash of artillery, and the howling of canister was unintermitting. Finally the carnage ceased, and the men of the North lay down on the field (as they supposed) of victory. But at about midnight orders came to fall in for a march, and the Pennsylvania Reserves, with other commands of the Army of the Potomac, moved silently down the hill and away on the road to Berkeley (or Harrison's Landing), where they arrived and camped on the 2d of July. The loss of the Fifth Reserve Regiment in the seven days' battles from the Chickahominy to Malvern Hill was one hundred and thirty-three killed and wounded, and one hundred and three taken prisoners. By the death of Col. Simmons, Lieut.-Col. Fisher was promoted to colonel, Maj. George Dare to lieutenant-colonel, and Capt. Frank Zentmyer to major of the regiment.

[1] A Confederate officer who was present at the battle of Gaines' Mill, in writing of it afterwards, paid a high compliment to the gallant conduct of the Pennsylvania Reserves on that field, and said, "It was only when the news came that Jackson was upon them in their rear that, about eight o'clock, they retired before our advance."

After a dreary stay of about six weeks at Harrison's Landing the Fifth broke camp, and from that time to the final muster out Companies G and I participated in the several battles in which the regiment was engaged, among which were the second Bull Run, Aug. 20, 1862, in which Lieut. R. W. Smith, of Company G, was killed; South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862. In February, 1863, was sent to Washington to rest and recruit. In battle of Gettysburg, Pa., in July, 1863; Warrenton, Bristoe Station, Mine Run, and then stationed at Alexandria through the winter of 1863–64. In battle of Wilderness, Perkin's Store, Fredericksburg, and Orange Turnpike, May 6, 1864; Spottsylvania Court-House, North Anna River, Bethesda Church, May 30, 1864, which was their last battle. They left the field June 1, 1864, and proceeded to Holmesburg, Pa., where the whole regiment was received with joyous demonstrations by the people of its native State.

THIRTY-FOURTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY G.

(Mustered in June 21, 1861, except where noted. Date of muster out with company June 11, 1864, except where noted.)

A. S. Harrison, capt., disch. Oct. 24, 1862.
John E. Wolfe, pro. from 1st lieut. Co. D to capt. Jan. 12, 1862; disch. April 11, 1863, for wounds recd. at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
C. M. Hildebrand, pro. from 1st lieut. to capt. Aug. 25, 1863; brevet major March 13, 1865.
George Thomas, 1st lieut., disch. Oct. 24, 1862.
Thomas Conpropst, 1st lieut., res. May 15, 1862.
J. A. Willoughby, 1st lieut., pro. to 1st lieut. Aug. 25, 1863; to adjt. May 7, 1864; to brevet capt. March 13, 1865.
William F. Thomas, 2d lieut., disch. Oct. 14, 1862.
Joel Thompkins, 2d lieut., res. Aug. 15, 1863.
Robert W. Smith, 2d lieut., pro. from sergt.-maj. to 2d lieut. Aug. 8, 1862; killed at Bull Run Aug. 20, 1862.
R. McC. Alexander, 2d lieut., pro. to 2d lieut. Aug. 25, 1863; brevet 1st lieut. March 13, 1865.
H. Stonebraker, 1st sergt.
Richard Meredith, 1st sergt., wounded and prisoner at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862; died at Richmond, Va., Dec. 21, 1862.
Jacob Hawn, sergt.
Patrick Kelly, sergt.
David Shoutz, sergt.
Henry Eckley, sergt.
Thomas Given, sergt., died Oct. 1, 1862, of wounds recd. at Antietam September 17th.
Alexander Shannon, sergt.
David Decker, corp.
Peter L. Posten, corp.
Anderson Stewart, corp.
Robert McCarrell, corp., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Franklin Couts, corp., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
John S. Henderson, corp., disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 11, 1862.
John C. Smith, musician.
W. H. Wickerman, musician.
Allison, Steel, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 21, 1862.
Brewster, James C.
Brinder, David, killed at Wilderness May 7, 1864.
Cox, William, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Couts, George, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Cairns, John, died of wounds recd. at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864.
Corbett, Luther, killed at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
Couts, Henry, killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Corbin, Harrison, killed at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
Couch, Cyrus.
Corbin, George.
Campbell, Charles.
Dean, John, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Davis, John E., died at Warrenton Junction Dec. 19, 1863.
Ely, John, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 16, 1862.
Edwards, George W., killed at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
Everett, Walter H., died Dec. 17, 1862, of wounds recd. at Fredericksburg.
Foust, Frederick.
Fisher, Franklin, trans. to Co. E Oct. 10, 1861.
Fowler, Samuel, killed at New Market Cross-Roads June 30, 1862.
Geissenger, D. H.
Garrett, Bernard, disch. on surg. certif. April 2, 1863.
Gilliland, William, disch. on surg. certif. May 4, 1863.
Green, Charles, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863.
Hinkson, Jacob.
Hawn, Augustus.
Hite, Thomas M., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Hall, Thomas, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Hoover, Joel, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 13, 1862.
Herbert, Michael.
Irvin, Samuel.
Irvin, Daniel, killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Johnson, John, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 2, 1862.
King, John P., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Keith, Andrew, killed at New Market Cross-Roads June 30, 1862.
Keith, Stillman H.
Lloyd, Eleazer.
Leightner, John.
Lloyd, Thomas, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 10, 1862.
Louther, William, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863.
Moyer, John.
Miller, David H., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Moore, James, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Morgan, Franklin, disch. by order War Dept. Dec. 10, 1862.
McCabe, Samuel S.
McDonald, Henry.
Nash, George H.
Nash, Daniel G., disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 4, 1862.
O'Brien, John, disch. by order of War Dept. Dec. 10, 1862.
Powell, Ephraim.
Pope, Daniel.
Pope, Edward.
Prough, Samuel, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Pope, John, killed at New Market Cross-Roads June 30, 1862.
Parks, John, killed at New Market Cross-Roads June 30, 1862.
Rowland, James.
Ramsey, John, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 4, 1862.
Rupert, George, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 23, 1862.
Shoutz, Jonas B., on detached service at muster out.
Shoutz, Christian, wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House May 13, 1864; absent in hosp. at muster out.
Stehley, Benjamin.
Stewart, Asbury.
Swivell, John, disch. on surg. certif. March 5, 1863.
Sweeney, John, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Stewart, Joseph, killed at Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.
Stewart, Abraham, killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Sheeder, William.
Weston, Simon.
Wicks, William.
Westbrook, David.
White, Thomas, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Williamson, Samuel, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 6, 1862.

COMPANY I.

(Mustered in June 21, 1861, except where noted. Date of muster out June 11, 1864, except where noted.)

Frank Zentmyer, capt., pro. to maj. Aug. 1, 1862.
James Porter, capt., pro. from sergt. to 2d lieut. July 1, 1862; to capt. March 5, 1863.
Robert B. Frazer, 1st lieut., dismissed Sept. 25, 1862.
David Zentmyer, 1st lieut., pro. from 1st sergt. to 1st lieut. Oct. 1, 1862; killed at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
Granville P. Swoope, 1st lieut., pro. from sergt.-maj. to 1st lieut. March 4, 1863; brevet capt. March 13, 1865.
J. A. McPherran, 2d lieut. June 17, 1861; pro. to capt. Co. F July 1, 1862.
Israel D. Kinch, 2d lieut., pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Oct. 1, 1862; killed at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.

Thomas L. Guyer, 2d lieut., pro. from corp. to 2d lieut. March 5, 1863.
John B. McKean, 1st sergt., pro. to corp. Feb. 1, 1862; to sergt. Sept. 2, 1862; to 1st sergt. Oct. 1, 1862.
Martin W. Fink, sergt.
William C. Patterson, sergt., pro. to corp. Sept. 2, 1862; to sergt. Oct. 1, 1862.
George W. Speaker, sergt., pro. to sergt. Sept. 7, 1863.
George Gensamore, sergt.
J. F. Bathurst, sergt., disch. Dec. 19, 1863, for wounds received at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
J. J. Paterson, sergt., trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, 1863.
James A. Alburn, corp.
Alexander Dickson, corp.
David Knee, corp.
Samuel Spangler, corp., disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 28, 1862.
N. H. Lee, corp., disch. on surg. certif. Jan 20, 1863
John W. Ayres, corp., disch. Aug 17, 1863, for wounds received at South Mountain Sept. 14, 1862.
Miles Moore, corp. Jan. 24, 1861; trans. to 191st Regt. P.V. June 6, 1864; veteran.
James R. Worts, corp. March 1, 1864; trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Richard H. Dare, musician June 21, 1861.
William Black, musician, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Ayres, James P.
Aurandt, Jonathan.
Albright, David, must. in June 8, 1863; trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Ainsworth, James, must. in June 8, 1863; died at Alexandria, Va., Feb. 23, 1864; burial record Feb. 25, 1864, grave 1380.
Akley, John.
Albright, George B., must. in June 8, 1863.
Barton, John, trans. to 119th Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Bohew, John, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.
Chamberlain, D.
Chronister, Jacob.
Campbell, Alex.
Cornealy, John, trans. to Battery D, 5th U. S. Art., Nov. 26, 1863.
Cornealy, Christ.
Caldwell, David, must. in Aug. 22, 1862; trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Clark, Lewis L., died at Camp Tenally, D C., Aug. 21, 1861.
Crum, James, killed at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
Crogan, Henry J.
Dickson, Samuel, disch. Oct. 20, 1862, for wounds received at White Oak Swamp June 30, 1862.
Dixon, William, died at Camp Tenally, D. C., Aug. 27, 1861.
Frank, David, must. in July 19, 1861; disch. March 3, 1863, for wounds received at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.
Feltenberger, J.
Garland, Joseph.
Geist, Martin.
Giles, James E.
Garvoe, Gideon.
Griffith, Joseph.
Griffith, Benjamin, trans. to 191st Regt. P V. June 6, 1864.
Gilland, W. Y., died at Chesapeake Hospital Nov. 25, 1862.
Hampton, David D.
Huey, William.
Hamilton, Thomas.
Henry, John, disch. on surg. certif. March 11, 1863.
Hollman, Mahlon T., disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 29, 1862.
Howard, James H., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Harpster, Jacob, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Harpster, Thomas, died at Camp Pierpont, Va., January, 1862.
Hastings, Joseph, killed at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
Householder, Samuel, killed at Mechanicsville, Va., June 26, 1862.
Huyett, Aaron.
Isenberg, George W., wounded at North Anna River May 29, 1864.
Keith, Joseph.
Kelly, William.
Klepper, John, disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 10, 1862.
Kinch, Emminger, trans. to Signal Corps, date unknown.
Knee, Henry, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Laird, Milton.
Louis, Marshal H., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Laport, Samuel, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 28, 1862.
Leper, George.
Miller, Leander.
Maguire, Luke.
Morrow, William, killed at Mechanicsville, Va., June 26, 1862.
Nash, John.
Nash, Alexander, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Patterson, William H.
Rice, Jacob.
Raybold, Gottlieb.
Parks, James.
Rice, John C.
Reader, Daniel.
Romberger, George A., trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864; vet.
Romberger, B. F., disch. on surg. certif. August, 1861.
Shannon, William.
Stewart, David D.
Shannon, Peter, trans. to Battery C, 5th U. S. Art. Nov. 21, 1862.
Swisher, Henry, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Schuch, Benneville, died at Windmill Point, Va., Feb. 4, 1863.
Shollenberger, C., killed at Mechanicsville, Va., June 26, 1862.
Simpson, Oliver, killed at Charles City Cross-Roads June 30, 1862.
Smith, James W.
Stewart, William.
Sailor, Samuel.
Staines, W.
Strepler, Jacob.
Tate, Edward.
Thompson, John P., died at Forage Station, Va., June 18, 1862.
Tremberg, Peter M.
Taylor, Samuel, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 11, 1862.
Watson, George.
Weston, Jeremiah, disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 20, 1862.
Wills, Samuel, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 15, 1863.
Wilson, George C., disch. by Gen. Order Oct. 10, 1862.
Worts, Thomas, trans. to Battery C, 5th U. S. Art. Nov. 21, 1862.
Wilson, Abraham, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
White, Henry, died at Camp Pierpont, Va., Jan. 21, 1862.
Young, David, trans. to 191st Regt. P. V. June 6, 1864.
Yingling, Martin.

Twelfth Reserve Regiment,—the Forty-first of the Pennsylvania line,—was made up of companies which had been raised for the three months' service but failed to secure acceptance, one of them being the Huntingdon Guards, from Huntingdon County, which became Company I of the regiment, the original commissioned officers being Capt. James C. Baker, First Lieut. Perry Etchison, and Second Lieut. Samuel J. Cloyd. The Twelfth was organized at Camp Curtin, where it was mustered into the United States service Aug. 10, 1861, its field-officers being Col. John H. Taggart, of Philadelphia; Lieut.-Col. Samuel N. Bailey, of York County; and Maj. Peter Baldy, of Northampton County. On the day of muster the regiment left Camp Curtin, and proceeded by way of Baltimore and Washington to the camp of the Reserve division at Tenallytown, Md., where it was assigned to the Third Brigade.

The history of the Twelfth is much the same as that of the Fifth Reserve Regiment, both being in the same division (though for more than a year in different brigades) during their terms of service. For the general movements of the Reserves, therefore, reference may be had to the history of the Fifth already given. The latter regiment, however, was not in the battle of Dranesville, Dec. 20, 1861, where the Twelfth took part in the engagement, but without loss. In March, 1862, the regiment moved with the division to Hunter's Mills, Va., thence to Fairfax Court-House, to Centreville, to Manassas Junction, and to Fredericksburg, Va. The Huntingdon company (I), which had been stationed at Manassas Junction, marched thence with the Fifth Reserve Regiment, and arrived at Falmouth, opposite Fredericksburg, on the 11th of May.

At Fredericksburg the Twelfth joined the forces of Gen. Irwin McDowell, and Gen. Ord was succeeded by Gen. Truman Seymour, in command of the Third Brigade. From that place it moved with the division to the Virginia Peninsula, marching from White House Landing to Mechanicsville, where it became a part of the corps of Gen. Fitz John Porter.

In the battle of Mechanicsville, June 26, 1862, the Twelfth occupied the extreme left of the line, where, at about four o'clock P.M., the enemy made a desperate attempt to flank by sending a heavy force down the Ellerson Mill road. In the desperate conflict which followed the attempted execution of this movement the Twelfth fought with unsurpassed bravery and determination, expending one hundred rounds of ammunition, and holding the ground against a greatly superior force until darkness closed the fight. Between three and four o'clock on the morning of Friday, the 27th, the regiment retired with the division to Gaines' Mill. In the battle which was fought there on that day it was posted in support of Easton's battery, and remained on that duty and under a tremendous artillery fire for more than three hours. At about half-past five o'clock the enemy assaulted in very heavy force, but was held in check for a time, with heavy loss on both sides. At dark the Twelfth with other Reserve regiments retired to the Chickahominy, and before midnight had crossed that stream by the Woodbury bridge. The loss of the regiment in the battle of the 27th was thirty-one killed and wounded. On the 28th (the day following the battle) the Twelfth was on picket along the Chickahominy. At three o'clock A.M. on Sunday, the 29th, it marched as guard to the reserve artillery train, moving on the road leading across White Oak Swamp to the James River. In the afternoon of the 30th it was engaged, as was also the Fifth Reserve, in the battle of Charles City Cross-Roads, receiving a sudden and tremendous attack by a heavy force of the enemy, losing sixty-five killed, wounded, and missing. At midnight the Twelfth marched from the field on the road to James River, halting at Malvern Hill, where Gen. McClellan massed the reserve artillery, and made his dispositions for a determined stand against the advancing enemy. In the battle of Malvern Hill, July 1st, the Twelfth was held in reserve and not actively engaged, though being for hours under a heavy fire of artillery. In the latter part of the night succeeding the battle it marched with the division for Harrison's Landing, where it arrived in the forenoon of July 2d. This was the end of the series of battles known as the Seven Days' fight, in which the Twelfth lost seventy-three killed and wounded and thirty-six missing.

On the evacuation of the position at Harrison's Landing the regiment moved to the Rappahannock, and fought under Gen. Pope in the second Bull Run battle, August 29th and 30th, losing forty-three killed and wounded. Crossing into Maryland, the Twelfth fought in the battle of South Mountain, losing twenty-five killed and wounded. The men fought here with the greatest gallantry and determination, forcing their way up the mountain-side in the face of the enemy, and bivouacked for the night on the summit. At Antietam, on the 16th and 17th of September, the regiment was again engaged, fighting with its accustomed bravery, and sustaining a loss of sixty-one killed and wounded and three missing.

In the great battle of Fredericksburg, on the 13th of December, the Twelfth suffered the severe loss of eighty-three killed and wounded and thirty-four taken prisoners. Its position was with its brigade on the extreme left, three miles below the town of Fredericksburg, where it crossed the river on pontoons. On the 13th a fierce assault was made on the enemy's works and they were carried; but no support was at hand, and the brigade was forced back, with the above-stated loss to the Twelfth. After the battle the regiment recrossed the river with the army, and reoccupied its previous camp. It took part in the dreary "mud march" made in January, 1863, by the army under Gen. Burnside, and was soon after ordered to the defenses of Washington, and to rest and recruit its decimated ranks.

From Washington Company I, of Huntingdon County, moved with the regiment in all its marches and participated with it in all the battles in which it was engaged to the close of the war, among which were the Gettysburg campaign, where it took an active part in the struggle. It was engaged with the enemy at Broad Run, Va., Rappahannock Station, Oct. 14, 1863, New Hope Church, Nov. 26, 1863, battle of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., Gurnea Station, Jericho Ford, and Bethesda Church.

The re-enlisted men and recruits of the Huntingdon company were transferred to the One Hundred and Ninetieth Regiment, which was actively engaged until the close of the war.

FORTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

COMPANY I.

(Mustered out March 17, 1862, except where noted.)

There is no muster-out roll of this company on file at adjutant-general's office.

Capt. James C. Baker, must. in Feb. 6, 1862; died July 7, 1862.

Capt. Chill W. Hazzard, must. in July 30, 1861; pro. to capt. April 20, 1863; brevetted maj. March 13, 1865; must. out with company June 11, 1864.

First Lieut. Perry Etchison, res. July 18, 1862; must. in March 17, 1862.

First Lieut. William H. Myers, must. in July 24, 1861; pro. from sergt.-maj. to 1st lieut. April 20, 1863; brevetted capt. March 13, 1865; must. out with company June 11, 1864.

Second Lieut. Samuel J. Cloyd, must. in March 17, 1862; disch. Jan. 7, 1863.

Second Lieut. Frank D. Stephens, pro. from private to 1st sergt. April 24, 1862; to 2d lieut. April 24, 1863; prisoner at Gaines' Mill June 27, 1862; wounded at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862; trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864.

First Sergt. Andrew J. Demming, captured at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864.

First Sergt. William W. Woods, must. in Aug. 10, 1861; must. out with company June 11, 1864.

Sergts. Thomas M. Kelly, David Long, John C. Rinker, R. Y. Askin, Seth Alexander (must. in April 5, 1862).

Corps. Joseph Beers, David Hancock, Elias B. Wilson, David W. Stevens, John B. Chilcoat, William H. Harris, William D. Hancock, Abraham D. Long, Henry C. Lyon (captured at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864; died a prisoner, date unknown), Charles H. Martin (captured at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864).

Musicians, John Harvey, George W. Weight.

Albert, Henry, must. in April 5, 1862.

Allen, Robert J., must. in April 5, 1862.

Barker, George S.

Baker, Josiah.

Butts, John F., must. in Aug. 10, 1861; must. out with company June 11, 1864.

Black, John, trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1861; died, date unknown.

Briggs, John A.

Bypuss, Herman, must. in March 27, 1862.

Carother, William H., trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864; died, date unknown.

Cornelius, John.

Copenhaven, William.

Cloyd, Thomas, must. in April 5, 1862.

Duffield, James R., must. out with company June 11, 1864.

De Armitt, John C., trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864.

Durboran, Isaac H., must. out with company June 11, 1864; must. in Aug. 10, 1861.

Elliott, James A.

Giles, James P., trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864.

Gluch, John.

Hancock, Aquilla.

Flick, George W.

Huntsman, James H.

Hamman, Peter.

Hancock, Jeremiah.

Harvey, William.

Hicks, Thomas J.

Hudson, Augustus B., must. in April 5, 1862.

Johns, John E.

Knobb, James.

Kelly, Alfred.

Leerd, Adam.

Kelly, Thomas S.

Livinghouse, B. F., trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864; died, date unknown.

Leerd, George.

Locke, Jonathan, must. in March 29, 1862; trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864; died, date unknown.

Locke, Daniel, must. in March 29, 1862.

Livinghouse, J. C., must. in March 29, 1862; trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864; died, date unknown.

Linch, Michael, must. in June 15, 1861; captured at Weldon Railroad.

Madden, Oliver C.

Myers, John J.

Malone, William.

Montgomery, Jacob.

Martin, Benjamin R., must. in March 29, 1862.

McMullen, John, must. in March 29, 1862.

Neff, Porter, must. in June 15, 1861; must. out with company June 11, 1864.

Need, George M., must. in March 29, 1862.

Naugle, Isaac, must. in March 29, 1862.

O'Neil, Henry, must. in March 29, 1862.

Palmer, Lafayette, must. in March 14, 1862.

Rutter, Alfred.

Rutter, Elisha.

Richart, William.

Ramsey, Thomas, Jr.

Ramsey, Robert.

Roberts, David, trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864.

Ramsey, Austin, must. in April 5, 1862.

Smith, Jesse P.

Shaffer, Henry.

Shaffer, Edward H.

Smith, Willis C.

Snyder, Elias.

Shaffer, George F.

Speer, George W.

Sneath, John S., must. in April 7, 1862.

Speaker, James A., must. in March 29, 1862.

Swartz, Daniel, must. in March 29, 1862.

Thomas, Joseph, must. in March 29, 1862; captured at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864; died a prisoner, date unknown.

Taylor, George B., must. in April 5, 1862.

Vaughn, Thomas W.

Wright, Henry C., trans. to Co. D, 190th Regt. P. V., June 1, 1864; prisoner at Weldon Railroad Aug. 19, 1864.

Whitman, John A.

Young, Jacob A.

Walls, William H.

Young, George.

CHAPTER XX.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

The Forty-ninth and Fifty-third Regiments.—In the organization of this regiment there were included two companies from Huntingdon County, viz., C company, Capt. John B. Miles (afterwards promoted to major and to lieutenant-colonel, and killed at Spottsylvania May 10, 1864), and D company, Capt. James D. Campbell. The other companies of the regiment were recruited in Chester, Centre, Mifflin, and Juniata Counties. The rendezvous of the Forty-ninth was at Camp Curtin, where it was organized in September, 1861, under the following-named field-officers: Colonel, William H. Irwin; Lieutenant-Colonel, William Brisbane; Major, Thomas M. Hulings. The regiment left Harrisburg on the 22d of September and proceeded to Washington, D. C., where it was assigned to Brig.-Gen. W. S. Hancock's (First) brigade of Gen. "Baldy" Smith's division of the Fourth Corps, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Erasmus D. Keyes. After being assigned, the regiment was encamped with its brigade at Lewinsville, Va., where and in which vicinity it was employed in camp and picket duty till March 10, 1862, when it moved forward with the army toward Manassas, and thence (when that place was found to have been evacuated by the enemy) back to Alexandria, Va., where, on the 24th of March, it embarked and proceeded to Newport News, where it arrived on the 26th. On the 4th of April it moved with the Army of the Potomac up the Peninsula, and on the 5th arrived in front of the enemy's position on the line extending from Yorktown to the James River. It held its position along the left bank of the Warwick River until Sunday, May 4th, when it moved forward with the other troops of the army in pursuit of the enemy, who had evacuated his Yorktown line and was retreating towards Richmond. The Confederate forces were overtaken that night, they being in a strong position near the town of Williamsburg, where a heavy battle was fought on the following day, the fight being opened by Hooker's division at daylight, in the midst of a drenching rain, which continued through the day. Hancock's brigade occupied the right, the Forty-ninth being on the left centre, with the Sixth Maine on its right, and the Forty-third New York on its left. It was ordered into the fight at about eleven o'clock A.M., and moved forward unflinchingly, encountering the Confederate brigade of Gen. Jubal Early. At the first shock Hancock's men recoiled and retired a short distance, then rallied, charged, and drove the enemy back in disorder and with heavy loss, including about three hundred prisoners taken by the brigade of Hancock. Many of the prisoners were of the Fifth North Carolina Regiment, which confronted the Forty-ninth Pennsylvania, which fought with unexcelled bravery, and, with the other regiments of Hancock's command, was highly commended by Gen. McClellan for gallant conduct in this engagement.

During the night succeeding the battle the enemy retreated from his strong line at Williamsburg, and two days later the Army of the Potomac moved forward in pursuit. The Forty-ninth advanced by way of Old Church and Cold Harbor to the Chickahominy in the vicinity of New Bridge. It remained on the north side of the Chickahominy until the 5th of June, when it crossed that stream by the "Grapevine" bridge, and moved to Garrett's Hill. On the 26th it stood in line of battle to take part in the expected movement on Richmond, led by Hooker's division. On the 26th was fought the battle of Mechanicsville by the Pennsylvania Reserves on the extreme right, the Forty-ninth taking no part, being on the opposite side of the Chickahominy. During the day of the battle of Gaines' Mill (June 27th) the regiment was in line waiting orders, and towards evening was briskly attacked by a Confederate force from Richmond under Gen. Magruder, but sustained little loss. In the night of the 27th it moved to Golding's farm, and on the following day became warmly engaged at Peach Orchard with a force of the enemy under Gen. Robert Toombs. The loss of the regiment in the actions of the 27th and 28th was thirty-three killed and wounded. On the 29th it repulsed the enemy handsomely in a minor action at Savage Station, on the York River Railroad, and on the same night took up its line of march for James River, which it reached (at Harrison's Landing) on the 2d of July, not having taken active part in the battle of Charles City Cross-Roads, on the 30th of June, nor in that of Malvern Hill, July 1st.

At Harrison's Landing the regiment (which suffered there very severely from sickness) remained until the 16th of August, when it marched thence down the Peninsula by way of Williamsburg to Fortress Monroe, where it was embarked on the 23d and proceeded up the Chesapeake and the Potomac River to Alexandria. On the 27th it marched from Fairfax Seminary with Franklin's corps to the relief of Gen. Pope, who was then hard pressed by the enemy south of Manassas. It reached Centreville, but did not go beyond that point, and consequently was not present at the second Bull Run battle. On the night of August 31st it marched from Centreville back to its previous camp at Fairfax Seminary. On the invasion of Maryland by Gen. Lee, it moved from Fairfax (September 5th), crossed the Potomac, and took part in the engagement at Crampton's Gap on the 14th. On the 17th (the day of the great battle of Antietam) the regiment marched from Pleasant Valley, Md., to the scene of action, reached the field, and formed line of battle, but was not ordered into the fight, though it lost several men by the fire of the enemy's artillery.

On the 19th the regiment moved from Antietam to the Potomac, which it crossed a few days later, and advanced by successive marches to Warrenton, to Stafford Court-House, to Belle Plain, and to Falmouth, on the Rappahannock, opposite Fredericksburg. In the great battle at that place on the 13th of December, it crossed the Rappahannock with Franklin's grand division on the extreme left, and was posted in support of batteries, but was not engaged against the enemy's infantry. On the 16th it recrossed the river, and soon after went into winter-quarters. On the 9th of January the regiment was consolidated into four companies, and Maj. Miles and other supernumerary officers were ordered on recruiting service, by which means the regiment was nearly filled during the winter.

In the reorganization of the Army of the Potomac after Gen. Hooker assumed command of it, the Forty-ninth was assigned to Sedgwick's (Sixth) corps, First Division, Third Brigade, commanded by Gen. Russell. Marching on the campaign of Chancellorsville, the regiment crossed the Rappahannock on the 29th of April, placing the pontoons in position for the passage of Sedgwick's corps, and losing several men in performing that service. From the south bank of the river it moved with its division to the heights in the rear of Fredericksburg, where the enemy was found strongly fortified. The regiment remained in front of these works until the 30th, when it moved to the river and remained till May 3d, when it again moved forward and lay under a heavy artillery fire for several hours. On the same day it moved through the town, and became sharply engaged in skirmishing near Salem Church. Again on the 4th it was engaged in skirmishing until nightfall, when it sustained a fierce attack by the enemy until forced to retire towards the river. On the 5th it recrossed the river at Banks' Ford, and returned to its old camp-ground at White Oak Church, having experienced but light loss in the campaign of Chancellorsville. Moving northward on the campaign of Gettysburg, the men suffered terribly, marching day after day in excessively hot weather and through clouds of dust raised by the myriad feet and hoofs and wheels of the advancing column. The regiment crossed the Potomac at Edwards Ferry, and advanced to Westminster, Md., whence it marched towards Gettysburg. It arrived on the field at about 2 o'clock P.M. on the 2d of July, and was placed in position in support of the Fifth Corps. On the morning of the 3d it was placed on the extreme left, but, with its corps, was changed during the day to the right of Round Top, where it stood in line ready to enter the fight, but was not ordered in, suffering only a slight loss from the artillery fire. After the battle it moved (July 5th) in pursuit of the enemy, but did not become engaged except in a skirmish on the 12th.

Crossing the Potomac into Virginia, the Forty-ninth was employed in various movements and marches during the succeeding summer and fall. In the morning of November 7th, it marched with its corps from Warrenton to a point near Rappahannock Station, where the enemy was found strongly intrenched near the river. Late in the day the position was attacked by Russell's brigade (including the Forty-ninth Regiment), and just as the twilight fell the work was carried at the point of the bayonet. The effective force of the charging brigade was but about thirteen hundred men, while the works were well supplied with artillery, and held by fully sixteen hundred Confederates, who were taken prisoners, including one hundred and twenty-eight commissioned officers, of whom two were commanders of brigades; and among the material captured were four pieces of artillery with caissons and a large quantity of ammunition, eight battle-flags, and nineteen hundred stand of small-arms. For the carrying of the intrenched line with the bayonet, and the seizing of the enemy's pontoon-bridge, the Forty-ninth and other regiments of the assaulting column were warmly complimented in general orders by Gen. Sedgwick, who said they deserved "especial honor" for their steadiness and gallantry. The loss of the Forty-ninth in this engagement was thirty killed and wounded. Afterwards, in the affair at Mine Run, the Forty-ninth lay for some hours under artillery fire, but was not engaged, and, retiring with the other troops, went into winter-quarters at Hazel Run, where about two hundred and sixty men re-enlisted for the war, and where, during the winter, the regiment received large accessions of recruits and drafted men from Pennsylvania. On the 23d of April following Maj. Miles was promoted to the grade of lieutenant-colonel.

In the spring campaign of 1864 the regiment marched with its division, crossed the Rapidan at Germania Ford on the 4th of May, and on the following day was engaged in the first of the battles in the Wilderness, losing thirty-four killed and wounded, but repulsing the enemy and holding the field. In the early morning of the 6th the battle was reopened and kept up during the day, the heaviest fighting being in front of the Forty-ninth and its division. During the night it moved to the left, and was engaged in heavy skirmishing through the following day. Still moving by the left, it arrived before noon of the 8th at Laurel Hill, where a brisk action ensued. On the 9th Gen. Sedgwick, the corps commander, was killed, while selecting a position on the left. He was succeeded in the command by Gen. H. G. Wright. Gen. Russell, of the brigade, now took command of the division, and was succeeded as brigade commander by Gen. Eustis. On the 10th the regiment was continually under fire, and late in the day charged with the divison, carrying the enemy's works in its front, and taking several pieces of artillery and more than eight hundred prisoners, but afterwards being compelled to abandon the position and the captures, retiring before a heavy reinforcement. In the charge and subsequent retreat across open ground swept by artillery and musketry, the regiment lost sixty-five killed (among whom was Lieut.-Col. Miles) and two hundred wounded and missing. Among the wounded were Lieut. B. H. Downing, of D company, and Lieut. Hilands, adjutant of the regiment. The dead and many of the wounded were necessarily left in the hands of the enemy, and the bodies of Col. Hulings and Lieut.-Col. Miles were not recovered.

On the 12th of May the regiment was again engaged near Spottsylvania Court-House, charging with other troops on that part of the Confederate works known as the "Bloody Angle." The fight raged all day, and the slaughter was terrible, but the works were carried and occupied by the Union forces on the following day. Up to this time, in the nine days which had elapsed since the regiment crossed the Rapidan, its losses had been three hundred and ninety-one killed, wounded, and missing, reducing its numbers to about one hundred and thirty-five effective men, with which it entered the engagement of June 1st at Cold Harbor, where it fought for two days; then, with the other troops, left the position, marched to and crossed the James River, and moved to the front of Petersburg, where it remained posted at several different points in the lines encircling the beleaguered city till the 11th of July, when, with the other commands of the Sixth Corps, it was embarked and transported to Washington City, where it arrived on the 12th, and was at once marched out to meet the Confederate column, which, having entered Maryland across the Upper Potomac, was moving under command of Gen. Early to the assault of the works around the national capital by way of Monocacy. The invading force made a precipitate retreat before the advance of the grim and battle-scarred Sixth Corps, which kept up the pursuit until it had crossed the Potomac and reached Berryville, Va. It then returned to the vicinity of Washington, when it was soon learned that Early had commenced vigorous hostilities in the Shenandoah Valley against the forces of Gen. Philip H. Sheridan. The Sixth Corps then marched rapidly to Harper's Ferry, where it crossed the Potomac, and, advancing up the valley, joined Gen. Sheridan's Army of the Shenandoah.

At Winchester, on the 19th of September, the Forty-ninth took part in the battle by which the enemy's forces were routed and sent "whirling up the valley." In that action the regiment lost forty-nine killed and wounded. "In the heat of the engagement," says Bates, "a shell burst near the top of the color-staff, scattering to the winds the few remaining shreds of the flag." A new State flag was presented to the regiment on the 26th of October.

After the battle at Winchester the Forty-ninth with its brigade remained in the town, guarding prisoners and on other duty, until the 29th of October, when the brigade rejoined the division and corps at Cedar Creek. In November, after the army of Gen. Sheridan had expelled the Confederate army from the valley, the Sixth Corps was ordered back to the army in front of Petersburg, and arrived there on the 5th of December, immediately after which time the Forty-ninth went into winter-quarters on the Weldon Railroad. On the opening of the final campaign of the war in the spring of 1865, the regiment moved on the night of April 1st, and on the morning of the 2d took part in the grand assault which broke the Confederate line and caused the evacuation of Petersburg, the enemy retreating during the succeeding night towards Danville. The Sixth Corps pursued and overtook and fought the flying Confederates at Sailor's Creek, routed them, and took seven thousand prisoners, including three general officers. The Forty-ninth lost in that action but slightly,—seven killed and wounded. From this field the regiment marched, in charge of prisoners, to Appomattox Court-House, where it arrived on the day of the great surrender (April 9th). After that decisive event it moved to Danville, Va., reaching there on the 27th, and remaining until the 23d of May. The surrender of the Confederate army under Gen. Johnston in North Carolina had ended the war, and the Forty-ninth then turned homeward, and marching through Richmond arrived on the 2d of June at the Washington defenses, where it remained until the 15th, when its history was closed by muster out of the service.

The list of officers and enlisted men of the Huntingdon County companies in the Forty-ninth is as follows:

FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY C.

Capt. John B. Miles, must. in Aug. 5, 1861; pro. to maj. Oct. 16, 1862.

Capt. J. R. Eckebarger, must. in Oct. 2, 1861; pro. to 1st lieut. Oct. 16, 1861; disch. Nov. 19, 1863.

Capt. A. Boyd Hutchinson, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. to Co. G, date unknown.

Capt. James C. Smith, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Oct. 26, 1862; trans. from Co. G June 11, 1863; pro. to 1st lieut. Feb. 25, 1864; to brevet capt. Aug. 1, 1864; to capt. June 3, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

First Lieut. F. W. Wombacher, must. in Sept. 10, 1861; pro. to capt. Co. E March 16, 1864.

Second Lieut. A. G. Dickey, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; res. Oct. 27, 1862.

Second Lieut. Christian Dale, must. in Dec. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to 2d lieut. March 4, 1864; com. capt. Co. F June 27, 1865; not mustered; mustered out with company June 15, 1865; vet.

First Sergeant John Miller, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 19, 1864; to 1st sergt. April 6, 1865; com. 1st lieut. July 14, 1864; not mustered; mustered out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. Jeremiah C. Brown, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

First Sergt. Calvin Cain, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to 1st sergt. Oct. 23, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 6, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. George S. Ketner, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to 1st sergt. March 4, 1864; killed at Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; vet.

Sergt. Henry Entriken, must. in Oct. 10, 1861; pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 1, 1862; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. James F. Moore, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; pro. to corp. Sept. 10, 1862; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to sergt. Oct. 24, 1864; com. 2d lieut. July 14, 1865; not mustered; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Samuel D. Osborne, must. in Sept. 3, 1861; pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1862; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to sergt. April 6, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Harvey Moore, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to sergt. Oct. 31, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out; vet.

Sergt. Robert B. Smith, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. Samuel Stewart, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 17, 1861.

Corp. Eugene Jeffries, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. March 4, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. John T. Hall, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. Oct. 24, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. H. W. Marshall, must. in Sept. 3, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. Oct. 24, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. Merritt D. Stalbird, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. July 1, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. Enos S. McCafferty, must. in Sept. 4, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. John M. Duey, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. Sept. 19, 1864; killed at Petersburg April 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Moses Chriswell, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; died Feb. 16, 1864, of wounds received in action; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

Corp Griffith Lytle, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Corp. William H. Musser, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Corp. James A. Patton, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1863, expiration of term.

Ammerman, Joseph, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Armpruster, G, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Arney, Edward, must. in Nov. 2, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Ambrose, James, must. in Jan. 16, 1862; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Petersburg, Va, April 6, 1865; vet.

Alters, William, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Albright, John, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Albright, Israel, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Beufer, Luther, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Cold Harbor June 1, 1864.

Butler, David R., must. in Sept. 3, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; died of wounds received at Cold Harbor June 1, 1865; vet.

Barnes, Robert P., must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863.

Beck, Edward J., must. in March 18, 1862; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out March 11, 1865, expiration of term.

Beck, Jeremiah C., must. in Feb. 28, 1862; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Feb. 27, 1865, expiration of term.

Berkhimer, J. E., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Benner, John D., must. in Jan. 31, 1862; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Jan. 30, 1865, expiration of term.

Barnacle, William, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Brozer, William R., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 6, 1863.

Baumgardner, A., must. in Sept. 7, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863 disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 13, 1863.

Bruman, William, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 17, 1863.

Carter, James, must. in Feb. 9, 1864; must. out July 15, 1865.

Campbell, Joseph, must. in March 12, 1862; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Carroll, John, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corbin, William, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; captured; died at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 20, 1864, grave 6237.

Coon, John J., must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; captured; died at Andersonville, Ga., Oct. 22, 1864.

Caterson, Robert A., must. in Sept. 25, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan 6, 1864.

Campbell, David S., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 10, 1863.

Crosthwaite, J. T., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; wounded at Cold Harbor June 1, 1864; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Cromer, George W., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Couch, Robert A., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Couts, Christian, must. in Sept. 17, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Colyer, William, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Coder, Jacob C., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Clark, Alfred, must. in Sept. 11, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. March 23, 1865.

Clarkson, Benjamin F., must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 21, 1863.

Coonroy, Nicholas, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 21, 1862.

Dunkle, John N., must. in March 12, 1862; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Debler, Paul, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Dougan, James, must. in Jan. 31, 1862; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; died Dec. 3, 1862; buried at Alexandria, Va., grave 559.

Duttenhoffer, J., must. in Nov. 18, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Nov. 17, 1864, expiration of term.

Dolby, Thomas O., must. in Sept. 6, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Dixon, Samuel S., must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Dixon, George W., must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

David, John M., must. in Aug. 30, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Davidson, Miles, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. June 16, 1862.

Deal, Edmund, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; killed June 27, 1862.

Eby, Daniel, must. in June 18, 1864, substitute; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Eckenroth, Charles, must. in March 15, 1862; trans. from Co. G. Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 6, 1863.

Evens, Machia, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 21, 1862.

Foster, Henry, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863.

Franks, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; died Jan. 16, 1862.

Fitzjerald, Renison, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; killed June 28, 1862.

Green, Benson M., must. in Sept. 17, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; absent on detached service at must. out.

Gilchrist, Samuel A., must. in Sept. 28, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Cold Harbor June 1, 1864; vet.

Griffis, John, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 6, 1865; vet.

Gray, Jonathan V., must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, '63.

Gilbert, James, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Grissinger, Israel, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 20, 1865.

Hobson, Charles, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Hall, Robert J., must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Harlan, Girtter, must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; died June 20, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington.

Henderson, James H., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863.

Hess, Joseph C., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Harper, John L., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Hoy, John H., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. July 27, 1864; vet.

Henderson, James F., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1863.

Hodgson, Francis M., must in Oct. 10, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; trans. to Signal Corps Aug. 12, 1863.

Hilands, Roland, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 16, 1861.

Huston, Benjamin, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 23, 1861.

Jackson, Robert S., must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Keene, Joseph L., must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out; vet.

Knarr, Levi T., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 20, 1863.

Knight, George H., must. in Sept. 8, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Kaup, William H., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Levengood, Effinger, must. in Sept. 6, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863.

Leech, Alexander, must. in Feb. 9, 1864.

Lichty, William, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Lawner, Henry E., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Lowry, Joseph, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Lanver, Charles R., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 31, 1863.

Miller, Joseph, must. in Sept. 3, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.

Moody, Edward, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; died at Washington, D. C., Feb. 6, 1863.

Masterson, William, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Mayes, Thomas C., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Moon, Jesse H., must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Millard, Charles F., must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, '63.

McCoole, Jacob, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

McQuillen, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; killed in action June 28, 1862.

Naylor, William T., must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; died at Brandy Station, Va., Dec. 15, 1865; buried at Culpeper Court-House, Va.; block 1, section A, row 8, grave 259.

Orth, Adam, must. in Nov. 21, 1863; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

O'Neal, James, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 10, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. April 17, 1863.

Preston, Joseph J., must. in Sept. 10, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Pedrick, Lyman, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 2, 1864.

Smith, Jacob, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Smith, George C., must. in Feb. 8, 1864; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Sturtzman, James, must. in Jan. 25, 1862; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Jan. 25, 1865, expiration of term.

Secor, Orren D., must. in Sept. 10, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Nov. 29, 1864, expiration of term.

Smiley, John, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Spear, Andrew J., must. in Sept. 11, 1861; trans. from Co F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Shorthill, James, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 6, 1863.

Shaffner, Henry H., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; pro. to hospital steward.

Toot, Thomas, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Thompson, George W., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Turner, Andrew, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Taylor, William H., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Walker, Calvin T., must. in Feb. 8, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Wolfe, Franklin C., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out; vet.

Whitecraft, George S., must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Wagner, Benjamin F., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Working, Samuel, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Whipple, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. June 19, 1862.

Yeager, Spencer G., must. in Sept. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Yeager, David S., must. in Sept. 8, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Yeager, Andrew J., must. in Aug. 31, 1861; trans. from Co. G Jan. 11, 1863.

Young, Israel, must. in March 28, 1862; trans. from Co. G June 11, 1863; must. out March 28, 1865, expiration of term.

COMPANY D.

Capt. James D. Campbell, must. in Aug. 10, 1861; resigned Jan. 18, 1863.

Capt. James A. Quigley, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; wounded May 12, 1864; must. out Oct. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Capt. John W. Russel, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1861, to sergt. May 20, 1862, to 1st sergt., and trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to 2d lieut. March 16, 1864, to capt. Nov. 30, 1864; must. out with company July 17, 1865; vet.

First Lieut. John H. Westbrook, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; disch. Nov. 19, 1863.

First Lieut. William Sherwood, must. in Aug. 6, 1861; pro. from corp. to sergt. Nov. 25, 1861, to 1st sergt. Jan. 8, 1862, to 1st lieut. Aug. 5, 1862; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to capt. Co. F March 16, 1864.

First Lieut. Campbell Tucker, must. in Oct. 26, 1861; pro. to aide-de-camp on staff of Gen. William F. Smith Dec. 16, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Second Lieut. Frank Y. McDonald, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; disch. Nov. 19, 1863.

Second Lieut. Benjamin H. Downing, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; trans. to Co. E March 16, 1864.

First Sergt. Davis H. Law, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; pro. from corp. to sergt. Jan. 17, 1864, to 1st sergt. April 7, 1865; com. 2d lieut. July 14, 1865; must. out with company July 17, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. Stephen Transen, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; pro. to corp. Nov. 10, 1861, to sergt. May 20, 1862; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to 1st sergt. March 16, 1864, to sergt.-maj. April 7, 1865; vet.

Sergt. William Sollars, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Theodore B. Reeder, must. in Aug. 17, 1860; trans. from Co. C Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to sergt. March 16, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Charles D. Train, must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. May 12, 1864; pro. to sergt. Nov. 30, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Daniel S. Daler, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. Nov. 15, 1864, to sergt. April 7, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Daniel S. Swyers, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; pro. from corp. to sergt. Aug. 29, 1862; from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864; vet.

Sergt. Frank A. Brown, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; died June 17, 1864, at Wilmington, Del., of wounds received at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864; vet.

Sergt. Thomas G. Hutchinson, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; pro. to corp. March 14, 1862; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to sergt. Sept. 10, 1864; must. out Sept. 25, 1864, at expiration of term.

Sergt. James Hill, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; pro. to corp. Nov. 6, 1862; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to sergt. May 12, 1864; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, at expiration of term.

Corp. W. H. Ammerman, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. June 17, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. Uriah Kitchen, must. in March 24, 1864; pro. to corp. Sept. 10, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Corp. J. C. Montgomery, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. Nov. 23, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. Oliver P. Wilson, must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. March 1, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. Solomon Martin, must. in Sept. 7, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; pro. to corp. April 7, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. John R. Pratt, must. in March 8, 1864; pro. to sergt. June 5, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Corp. John A. Jackson, must. in Feb. 6, 1863; absent, sick, at muster out.

Corp. William A. Johnson, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864; vet.

Corp. Jacob Shriver, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A and pro. to corp. Jan. 11, 1863; died June 17, 1864, of wounds received at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.; vet.

Corp. Joseph B. Brown, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 16, 1863.

Corp. James C. Langton, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Arbogast, John, must. in Aug. 20, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Brobb, Isaac, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Brown, George W., must. in June 10, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Brown, Andrew C., must. in Sept. 7, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; died June 15, 1864, of wounds received at Spottsylvania May 10, 1864; vet.

Boyd, Aaron B., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.

Brewer, Andrew J., must. in June 1, 1864; disch. by S. O. Dec. 25, 1865.

Bathurst, Andrew G., must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. F Jan. 11, 1863; disch. by G. O. Jan. 15, 1865; vet.

Cronen, Patrick, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Coughlin, Michael, must. in Jan. 27, 1862; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Colpeltzer, William, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Conklin, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 3, 1864.

Climpson, Milton, must. in Aug. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 22, 1863.

Camp, Essex P., must. in Aug. 28, 1862; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; disch. by S. O. May 12, 1863.

Cadee, Erastus, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 6, 1863.

Corkle, Jackson J., must. in Aug. 28, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 17, 1865.

Cook, George M., must. in June 3, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 29, 1865.

Cade, Charles H., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; disch. Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.

Daller, Benjamin, must. in Feb. 4, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Davis, William I., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Downing, William H., must. in Jan. 20, 1862; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania May 10, 1864.

Dehass, Curtis, must. in May 3, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1864.

Eberhart, Solomon, must. in Dec. 8, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Elder, Thomas J., must. in June 1, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Eckley, Joseph, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 15, 1864, expiration of term.

Fravel, Samuel F., must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 29, 1863.

Frain, Samuel T., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.

Fisher, John, must. in June 3, 1861; disch. by G. O. June 15, 1865.
Crier, William, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
Gladfelter, William A., must. in Aug. 21, 1861; trans from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania May 10, 1864; vet.
Gessick, Augustus, must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863.
Gray, Samuel, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Hinkle, George W., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Haines, Michael, must. in Feb. 3, 1862; absent, sick, at must. out.
Harleman, Thomas, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Harleman, George W., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Rappahannock Station, Va., Nov. 7, 1863.
Harding, William L., must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; died Jan. 19, 1863.
Hipple, Robert, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; vet.
Haines, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, expiration of term.
Harkless, George, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 15, 1864, expiration of term.
Heckrott, Lewis P., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.
Hutton, George W., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A. Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.
Huffman, Daniel, must. in Sept. 10, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Hendricks, Hezekiah, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. May 22, 1865.
Haler, John M., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. C Jan. 11, 1863; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864; must. out March 4, 1865, expiration of term.
Jones, Henry, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
Jodon, Peter, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Aug. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Jodon, David, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 15, 1864, expiration of term.
Kunes, John C., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
King, William, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
Katon, William T., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; died at Andersonville, Ga., July 16, 1864; grave 3417.
Kennedy, Smith, must. in Jan. 3, 1862; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863.
Kauffman, David M., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.
Keyes, Charles R., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.
King, Edward N., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 15, 1863.
Lucus, Asbury, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Lucus, James S., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 21, 1863.
Myers, John S., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Miles, George W., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Miller, David, must. in Sept. 10, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Miller, Eli, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; died Jan. 28, 1863.
Manning, Peter, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; died Jan. 28, 1863.
Moss, Andrew, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863.
Mann, Robert, must. in June 1, 1864; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
McClafferty, Frank, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
McCormick, John, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
McClure, Anson, must. in June 1, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
McFarland, W. H., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; absent, sick, at must. out; vet.
McAffee, David, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. D Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 25, 1863.
McClauskey, C., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1862; must. out Sept. 10, 1864, expiration of term.
McMain, Thomas, must. in Feb. 4, 1864; disch. on surg. certif.
McClenahan, R. G., must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1862; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
McKinley, Joseph, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 5, 1863.
Neil, James, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1862; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864; vet.
Neiman, W. H., must. in Aug. 20, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 25, 1864, expiration of term.
O'Brien, James, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
Owens, Matthew, must. in Aug. 19, 1864; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Osborne, John, must. in March 17, 1863.
Owens, William, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 20, 1864, expiration of term.
Osborne, Abiah D., must. in Feb. 4, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 17, 1865.
Packer, James M., must. in May 31, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
Perry, Charles, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; died May 11, 1864, of wounds received at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Patton, Hugh, must. in June 7, 1864.
Ryan, Michael, must. in June 14, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 15, 1865.
Richards, John, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; absent, sick, at muster out; vet.
Rogers, James N., must. in Aug. 20, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; died at Fort Delaware May 14, 1864.
Rose, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 23, 1862.
Reading, Amos, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 18, 1864, expiration of term.
Rhoads, Peter, must. in Sept. 7, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Rimby, G. W. C., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Cold Harbor June 3, 1864.
Rigg, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Shatzer, Amos, must. in March 18, 1862; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Sneal, Matthew B., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Spiece, Jeremiah, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. April 14, 1863.
Spangler, Jonas, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 16, 1865; vet.
Strunk, William H., must. in Aug. 9, 1862; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 17, 1865.
Smith, Henry C., must. in June 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 17, 1865.
Shope, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Smythe, Homer S., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Steele, William G., must. in Aug. 25, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Stull, Jacob, must. in Sept. 11, 1862; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Tyler, William, must. in March 8, 1865; died June 29, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington.
Taylor, Thomas J., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. March 17, 1863.
Taylor, William D., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Sept. 16, 1864, expiration of term.
Taylor, Jesse, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863, killed at Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; vet.
Walizer, Andrew, must. in Aug. 16, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Wieze, John C., must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.
Williams, Valentine, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Wilkinson, S. D., must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Wooden, Adam B., must. in Sept. 1, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Winterod, Philip, must. in March 16, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865.

Watkins, William, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out with company July 15, 1865; vet.

Waters, Erastus J. C., must. in Oct. 8, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania May 10, 1864.

Wolf, Charles, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1865; died at Philadelphia June 28, 1863.

Walker, David, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; died Aug. 9, 1863; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

Walters, Frazier, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 25, 1863.

Watkins, John, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; trans. from Co. B Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 4, 1863.

Walizer, Elias, must. in Feb. 19, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. May 27, 1865.

Wolfe, Gideon W., must. in Aug. 21, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Williamson, T. M., must. in Aug. 21, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. June 21, 1865; vet.

Weber, Sylvester, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; trans. from Co. E Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Workman, Jacob, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. from Co. A Jan. 11, 1863; must. out Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Yarger, Abram, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.

The Fifty-third Regiment, of which Col. John R. Brooke, of Montgomery County, was the first commanding officer, was organized at Camp Curtin in September and October, 1861, being composed of companies recruited in Montgomery, Chester, Blair, Huntingdon, Clearfield, Centre, Carbon, Union, Luzerne, Potter, Westmoreland, Northumberland, and Juniata Counties. The men recruited in Blair and Huntingdon Counties formed "C" company, of which John H. Wintrode was captain.

Moving from Harrisburg, Nov. 7, 1861, the regiment proceeded to Washington, D. C., whence, on the 27th of the same month, it crossed the Potomac and went into camp near Alexandria, Va., which became its winter-quarters. In March, 1862, it moved forward with the Army of the Potomac in the fruitless advance on Manassas, and from that march returned to Alexandria, where it was assigned to the Third Brigade of Richardson's (First) division of the Second Corps, commanded by Gen. Edwin V. Sumner.

About the 1st of April the regiment with its corps was transported by water to the Virginia Peninsula, and moved with the Army of the Potomac to the line in front of Yorktown. The enemy evacuated that place in the night of the 3d of May, and on the following day the army moved on in pursuit, arriving the same night at Williamsburg, where a bloody battle was fought on the 5th. On the 6th the Fifty-third returned to Yorktown and remained five days, then moved by steamer up the York River to West Point, marching thence to the line occupied by the army along the Chickahominy. Crossing that stream on the night of the 31st of May, it took part in the battle at Seven Pines on the following day, losing nearly one hundred men in killed, wounded, and missing, and showing through the conflict a steadiness and bravery that elicited the commendation of the division and corps commanders. On the 27th of June, when the right wing of the army was closed in deadly conflict with the enemy at Gaines' Mill, the Fifty-third, being a part of the left wing, was posted on the York River Railroad, on the other side of the Chickahominy; but late in the afternoon, when the battle had turned against the Union forces under Gen. Porter, this regiment with its division was thrown across the river to their succor, and entering the fiery arena, helped to hold the victorious Confederates in check until the friendly darkness came on, and then amid the shades of night all recrossed to the south side of the stream, destroying the bridges behind them. The main body of the army at once took up the line of march for the James River, and the First Division of Sumner's corps covered the retreat, becoming hotly engaged with the pursuing enemy at Peach Orchard, and at Savage Station on Sunday, the 29th. Moving on from this encounter the command crossed White Oak Swamp and moved on in good order, frequently turning to fight on its way to Malvern Hill, where it arrived in the forenoon of Tuesday, July 1st. In the tremendous conflict of that day the Fifty-third was not closely engaged, though under a heavy fire for several hours. Between midnight and dawn of the 2d it again moved on, crossing Turkey Creek, and covering the retreat of the army from the field of victory to Harrison's Landing, where a new base of supply was made, and where the Fifty-third remained with its corps until the 16th of August, when it moved with the other troops down the Peninsula to Newport News, whence it was moved by transports to Alexandria, under orders to reinforce Gen. Pope, who was being overwhelmed on the Rappahannock. It did not arrive in time to take part in the second Bull Run battle, though within hearing of the distant roar of conflict on the 30th, while on the march towards Centreville, where it arrived on the following day. It was at once placed in position to cover the retreat of the defeated Army of Virginia to the Potomac, and having done this with the usual steadiness and gallantry, it moved across the river to a position northwest of Washington, September 3d, and a few days later was again on the march in the campaign of South Mountain and Antietam. In the first of these two engagements it took no active part, being held in reserve. It reached Antietam Creek on the 16th, and in the great battle of the 17th was engaged early in the day, holding position on the extreme right of the division, charging the enemy and driving him from his strong position in its front, and holding the ground against all attempts of the Confederates to reoccupy it. Later in the day the regiment was posted in support of a battery, and was under an exceedingly heavy fire for many hours. Its loss at Antietam was twenty-eight killed and wounded. After the battle it moved with its brigade in pursuit of the enemy, and on the 22d crossed the Potomac into Virginia. The Confederate army had escaped, and the troops rested for more than a month at Bolivar Heights, near Harper's Ferry. On the 30th of October it moved southeast across the Shenandoah, fighting at Snicker's Gap on the 4th of November, reaching Warrenton on the 9th, thence marching to Falmouth, opposite Fredericksburg, and arriving there on the 19th.

In the campaign of Fredericksburg, the Fifty-third crossed the Rappahannock on the 12th of December, driving the enemy's light forces from the bank of the river, and occupied a part of the town. Early in the day of the great battle (December 13th) the regiment with its brigade formed line of battle along the south border of the town, and after a halt of nearly two hours in that position, all the while under a terrible fire from the enemy's batteries, advanced at double-quick towards the famed stone wall that barred the way to the acclivity of Marye's Heights. Here, as at other points along the line, the rocky barricade proved impregnable to the Union assault, but the Third Brigade charged up to within twenty-five rods of it, and held its position there in the face of a fire as destructive as any that was ever poured into an advancing column, and through all the remaining hours of the day they held it against repeated attacks by the enemy until night closed in on the scene of carnage, and then, and not till then, they retired from the advanced line and made their cheerless bivouac in the town. The Fifty-third lost in this engagement one hundred and fifty-six killed and wounded, which was considerably more than half the effective strength with which it entered the fight. On recrossing the river it reoccupied its old quarters at Falmouth, where it remained employed in provost and camp duty during the winter.

In the spring campaign of 1863, the regiment moved from its camp on the 28th of April, crossed the Rappahannock at United States ford, and marched to Chancellorsville, where it took part in the great battle during the three days of its continuance, suffering considerable loss. On the 6th of May it recrossed the river with the army and returned to its old quarters near Falmouth. When it was ascertained that the Confederate army under Lee was moving to the invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania, the regiment (which was then in the Fourth Brigade of the First Division of the Second Corps) marched on the 14th of June to Banks' Ford, to observe the movements of the enemy, and immediately afterwards moved northward with its corps to Thoroughfare Gap, where it became engaged with the enemy on the 20th. It remained there in position until the 25th, when it resumed the march northward, and reached the field of Gettysburg at 8 o'clock A.M. on the 2d of July, three companies of the regiment, however, being absent on detached duty. The effective strength with which the Fifty-third entered the battle of Gettysburg was only one hundred and twenty-five men, out of which number it suffered a loss of seventy-three killed and wounded in the great conflict.

From this time to the close of the war the Huntingdon and Blair men in Company C participated in all the campaigns and battles in which the regiment was engaged. Among the battles in which the company was prominently engaged were Rappahannock Station, Bristoe Station, Mine Run, Wilderness, Po River, Spottsylvania Court-House, Cold Harbor, June 2, 1864; Petersburg, Va., June 16, 1864; Ream's Station, Va., Aug. 21, 1864; Boydton Plank-Road, Five Forks, Deep Creek, Va., April 6, 1864; and at Appomattox Court-House at Lee's surrender. Shortly after this the company, with other troops, returned by way of Washington to Harrisburg, from whence the men returned to their homes and to the pursuits of civil life.

FIFTY-THIRD REGIMENT.

COMPANY C.

Capt. John H. Wintrode, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; res. Dec. 3, 1862.

Capt. Henry J. Smith, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. May 9, 1862, to capt. Jan. 1, 1863; disch. March 16, 1865.

1st Lieut. Robert McNamara, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; res. May 9, 1862.

1st Lieut. Samuel M. Royer, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. from 2d to 1st lieut. May 9, 1862; res. Dec. 1, 1862.

1st Lieut. D. S. Fouse, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. from sergt. to 1st lieut. Dec. 1, 1862; must. out Oct. 8, 1864, expiration of term.

1st Lieut. Andrew J. Merrett, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to corp., to 1st sergt., to 2d lieut. May 1, 1865, to 1st lieut. May 18, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

2d Lieut. John McLaughlin, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. from sergt. to 2d lieut. Jan. 1, 1863; com. 1st lieut. Oct. 8, 1864; not mustered; must. out April 24, 1865, to date March 14, 1865.

1st Sergt. Andrew J. Fleck, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to corp. May 10, 1864, to sergt. Nov. 2, 1864, to 1st sergt. May 2, 1865; absent with leave at must. out; vet.

1st Sergt. Daniel N. Garner, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to sergt.; must. out Nov. 2, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. Daniel Lightner, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to corp. Feb. 25, 1864, to sergt. Sept. 21, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Michael McCall, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to corp. July 1, 1864, to sergt. May 1, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

Sergt. John Rodgers, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to corp. July 1, 1864, to sergt. June 16, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

Sergt. David B. Rothrock, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to sergt.; prisoner from June 16, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Samuel W. Gill, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; pro. to sergt.; captured; disch. by G. O. June 20, 1865; vet.

(Date of muster in Oct. 17, 1861, except where noted.)

Sergt. G. W. Montgomery, pro. to sergt.; died at Philadelphia July 1, 1864, of wounds received in action near Petersburg, Va.; vet.

Sergt. William D. Shontz, must. in Oct. 27, 1861; pro. to sergt.; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.

Sergt. Anthony J. Beaver, pro. to sergt.; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps May 15, 1864.

Sergt. Davis G. Enyeart.

Sergt. Matthew G. Isett, died; buried in National Cemetery, Gettysburg, section C, grave 64.

Corp. William Fernwalt, pro. to corp. July 1, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

Corp. David A. Sias, pro. to corp. Sept. 4, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

Corp. Matthias Querry, must. in Feb. 15, 1864; pro. to corp. Sept. 21, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.

Corp. Luden B. Morris, must. in Feb. 3, 1864; pro. to corp. Nov. 2, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.

Corp. John C. States, must. in Feb. 3, 1864; pro. to corp. March 1, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865.

Corp. Charles Nash, must. in March 25, 1864; pro. to corp. May 1, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Corp. John Keiser, must. in Sept. 1, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Corp. Jacob W. Prough, pro. to corp.; must. out Nov. 2, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. George W. Isett, pro. to corp.; disch. Sept. 4, 1864, for wounds received at Gettysburg July 2, 1863.
Corp. Samuel Kinney, must. in Jan. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 20, 1865.
Corp. Frederick L. Snyder, prisoner from June 16, 1864, to April 9, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865; vet.
Corp. Elijah Crownover, pro. to corp.; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864; vet.
Corp. William Reed. Corp. William Estep.
Corp. Luther T. Sangree. Corp. H. B. Geisinger.
Musician Jacob Chilcoat, must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Musician Alexander W. Campbell, must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Musician Henry F. Sheeder, must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Abbott, Amos, must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Allen, George, must. in March 28, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Argyle, Steele, must. in Nov. 18, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 20, 1865.
Bittner, William F., must. in Nov. 28, 1864; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Baker, John P., must. in Jan. 13, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Brown, James L., must. in Jan. 13, 1865; substitute; wounded in action March 25, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 17, 1865.
Bowers, Isaac, must. in April 22, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Brown, Charles, must. in Feb. 16, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Baker, William, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Bodenstein, Charles, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Boss, Green J., must. in March 2, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Biss, John C. Bollinger, James.
Coble, Benjamin, must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Cusac, Michael, must. in Jan. 5, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Graig, William, must. in Aug. 24, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Clark, Ethan, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Coble, William, must. in Dec. 24, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps April 3, 1865; vet.
Dugan, Thomas, must. in Jan. 22, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.
DeCrussy, Charles, must. in June 11, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Deitrick, George, must. in Jan. 9, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Dean, William D., must. in March 25, 1864; disch. April 20, 1865, for wounds received in action.
Davis, Thomas, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; disch. by G. O. July 11, 1865.
Daily, Michael, must. in Dec. 27, 1864; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
Decker, James M., must. in Jan. 4, 1894; died at City Point, Va., July 22, 1864.
Dean, Daniel, died Oct. 27, 1862.
Eslick, Ira J., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Enyeart, James E., died Dec. 11, 1863, at Alexandria, Va., grave 1161.
Fair, Henry.
Furst, Oscar, must. in Jan. 3, 1865; substitute; absent, wounded, at must. out.
Fry, Abraham, must. in Jan. 4, 1864; died Sept. 27, 1864; buried in Nat. Cem., Arlington, Va.
Fink, John. Fouse, Reuben I.
Fleck, Daniel. Fouse, George W.
Green, Henry, must. in Dec. 20, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Gyr, Henry, must. in Dec. 27, 1864; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Geiger, John W., must. in Aug. 10, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Godfrey, William, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Garner, Matthew G., must. out Nov. 2, 1864, expiration of term.
Garner, John.
Garner, John M.
Gill, George W., died Nov. 28, 1862; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, Washington, D. C.
Gregg, John.
Heltzel, George L., must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Harman, Charles S., must. in Oct. 17, 1864; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Hilliard, Daniel, must. in Nov. 16, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Harsh, Henry, must. in Jan. 16, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Hill, Wallace, must. in Feb. 16, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Hands, Patrick, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Hood, Robert, must. in Jan. 9, 1864; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864.
Heifner, Jacob, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., June 16, 1864; buried at City Point, Va.
Hammon, James.
Hanna, John, died Nov. 21, 1861; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, Washington, D. C.
Heifner, William.
Harker, Henry.
Heller, John A.
Hess, John, died 1862; buried in National Cemetery, Seven Pines, Va., section B, lot 34.
Houck, Ezekiel J.
Jolly, Samuel S., must. in Dec. 20, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Johnston, Thomas, must. in Jan. 25, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Johnston, James D., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Joslin, Julius, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Kamp, Albert, must. in Jan. 11, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Kugan, Martin, must. in Aug. 25, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Kessler, George W., must. in March 19, 1864; absent at must. out.
Kyler, Isaac, must. in March 10, 1862; dishonorably disch. by general court-martial.
Kessler, John, must. in Sept. 21, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 12, 1865.
Keiter, John.
Larkins, Francis, must. in July 30, 1863; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Leace, Oliver, must. out Nov. 2, 1864, expiration of term.
Long, Henry, must. in Jan. 14, 1865; substitute.
Lightner, Charles.
Magill, Jacob, wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House May 10, 1864; disch. Feb. 16, 1865, to date Nov. 2, 1864, expiration of term.
Malyer, Ferdinand, must. in Dec. 20, 1864; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Maher, Martin, must. in Sept. 6, 1864; substitute; wounded in action March 31, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 20, 1865.
Mone, Edwin, must. in Sept. 16, 1863; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Mower, William H., must. in July 22, 1863; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Morel, David, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Murphy, David, must. in Jan. 27, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Montag, Wm. G., must. in Sept. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
Moran, Francis, must. in July 20, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Montgomery, J.
McCall, William, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
McCreary, Paul, must. in Jan. 2, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
McIntire, John, must. in Dec. 18, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
McCoy, John, must. in Aug. 7, 1863; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
McKnight, John, must. in Jan. 5, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 7, 1865.
McGeegan, John, must. in Sept. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
McCoy, James.
McLaughlin, P.
Norris, Samuel W., pris. from June 16th to Nov. 24, 1864; must. out Feb. 20, 1865, to date Nov. 30, 1864.
Neresgold, Henry, must. in Dec. 26, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Neidengard, Henry, must. in Jan. 16, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.

Noland, John. Noland, William.
Numer, William. Orumer, Daniel.
Prin, William, must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Prett, Obediah, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; absent with leave at must. out.
Potter, Thomas, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Pannatta, William. Prough, Jacob.
Ruder, William, must. in Nov. 16, 1864; wounded in action March 31, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.
Ross, George, must. in Feb. 13, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Rinkins, James, must. in Aug. 7, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Roland, John, must. in Jan. 29, 1864; captured at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864; absent at must. out.
Ryan, George, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Rough, John, must. out Nov. 6, 1864, expiration of term.
Rough, James J., trans. to Vet. Res. Corps May 1, 1864.
Swope, Allison, died at Philadelphia Aug. 12, 1862.
Showalter, Daniel, must. in March 25, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Showalter, Edward, must. in Jan. 2, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Stains, George H., must. out with company June 30, 1865; vet.
Swope, Lawrence S., absent, sick, at must. out.
Stahl, John, must. in Jan. 16, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Sun, Henry, must. in Dec. 13, 1864; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Slocum, Henry, must. in Jan. 3, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Schwab, John, must. in Jan. 6, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Sample, James, must. in Jan. 7, 1865; must. out June 30, 1865.
Shaw, Baskin, must. in Jan. 7, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Slaglille, Abraham, must. in Dec. 30, 1864; substitute; absent, sick, at must. out.
Smith, William, must. in March 2, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Smith, James, must. in Aug. 24, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Sprink, John, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Shyley, William H., must. in April 21, 1862; pris. from Nov. 28, 1863, to Dec. 6, 1864; disch. by G. O. April 2, 1865.
Strong, James, must. out Nov. 6, 1864, expiration of term.
Showalter, John, must. in March 5, 1864; disch. Feb. 14, 1865, for wounds received in action.
Sloan, James W., must. in Dec. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 15, 1865.
Showalter, Joseph, must. in Feb. 5, 1864; died June 24, 1864, of wounds received in action; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.
Stains, Samuel F., died at Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1863.
Smith, Jacob W., date of must. in not given.
Thaw, Thomas, must. in Oct. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Tetwyler, Peter, absent, sick, at must. out; vet.
Tobler, Jacob, must. in Dec. 23, 1864; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Thompson, John, must. in Dec. 20, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Turner, Henry, must. in Feb. 16, 1864; must. out June 30, 1865.
Tippery, Sanford F., must. in Oct. 17, 1861.
Todd, Bernhard, must. in Oct. 17, 1861.
Varner, Casper, must. in Jan. 6, 1865; substitute; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Vannatta, William, must. in Dec. 27, 1864; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.
Weakland, August, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; absent, sick, at must. out.
Wagner, George, must. in Dec. 20, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Wimer, John, must. in Nov. 18, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Withford, Erastus, must. in Jan. 5, 1864; must. out with company June 30, 1865.
Woodcock, George W., must. in Jan. 29, 1864; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864.
Weaver, Francis A., must. in Oct. 18, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps July 1, 1864.
Winegardner, Michael, must. in July 28, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.
Yokes, William, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must out with company June 30, 1865.

CHAPTER XXI.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

The Sixty-second Regiment, of which Col. Samuel W. Black was the first commanding officer, was raised in the month of July, 1861, under authority given on the 4th of that month to Col. Black by the Secretary of War. The authority was afterwards extended, allowing the regiment to include twelve full companies, of which seven were recruited in Allegheny County, two in Clarion, and one in each of the counties of Armstrong, Jefferson, and Blair. The company from Blair (which was the first full company that left the county to enter the three years' service) was designated as M company of the regiment, Capt. Richard J. Crozier. The rendezvous of the regiment was at Pittsburgh, but soon after its organization it moved (July 24, 1861) to Harrisburg, where it remained in camp several weeks. Proceeding thence to Washington, D. C., by way of Baltimore, it received equipments and arms, and on the 11th of September crossed the Potomac to Virginia, encamping at Fort Corcoran, and being assigned to the Second Brigade (Brig.-Gen. George W. Morrell) of Gen. Fitz John Porter's division. After about two weeks spent at Fort Corcoran in camp duty and work upon the fortifications, the regiment advanced to a new line farther south, where it went into a camp which was christened "Camp Bettie Black."

In the spring campaign of 1862, the Sixty-second moved with the army on the 10th of March, but upon the discovery that the enemy had evacuated his works at Manassas the advance was abandoned, and the regiment with the other troops of the army moved back to the Potomac, arriving on the 16th of March at Alexandria, where a few days later it was embarked and proceeded to Fortress Monroe, encamping four miles from that place, at the site of the old town of Hampton, which had then recently been burned by the Confederate troops under command of Gen. J. B. Magruder. From Hampton the regiment with other troops made a reconnoissance to Big Bethel, and on the 4th and 5th of April marched with the army up the Peninsula to the front of the enemy's fortified line at Yorktown, skirmishing by the way, and losing one killed and three wounded.

For more than four weeks the regiment remained in front of Yorktown, employed in fortifying and other duty. On the night of the 4th of May the enemy evacuated his Yorktown lines, and on the following day the Army of the Potomac moved on in pursuit, except the division of Gen. Porter, which (including the Sixty-second Regiment) remained at Yorktown until the 8th, when it moved by steamers up the York River to West Point, and encamped on the opposite side of the stream. Here Gen. Griffin took command of the Second Brigade, Gen. Morrell being assigned to the command of the division, and Gen. F. J. Porter to that of the Fifth Provisional Corps, which was then formed.

From West Point the regiment moved with Morrell's division to the line of the Chickahominy, arriving at Gaines' Mill on the 26th of May. On the 27th it moved before daylight, and marched with its division to Hanover Court-House, where it was expected a junction would be made with Gen. McDowell's (First) corps from Fredericksburg and Bowling Green. This was not effected, but the enemy was met near the court-house, and a sharp engagement was the result. Martindale's (First) brigade had the advance, and the Second Brigade followed in its support. On finding the enemy in front a line of battle was formed, with the Second Brigade on Martindale's right. The Union line charged the Confederates, completely routing them, and capturing their camp equipage and a large number of arms, with more than eighty prisoners, among whom were several officers. The loss of the Sixty-second was light, only six wounded in the engagement, and on the same night it returned with the other troops to the camp near Gaines' Mill.

On the afternoon of the 26th of June was fought the battle of Mechanicsville, by McCall's division of Pennsylvania Reserves on the Union side. From its camp near Gaines' Mill the Sixty-second, with its division, was ordered up to the support of the Reserves, and it was for a considerable time under a heavy fire from the enemy, but did not become closely engaged. The conflict resulted in a decided advantage gained by the enemy, and the retreat of the Reserves early on the morning of Friday, the 27th, to Gaines' Mill, three or four miles farther down the Chickahominy, where Porter's corps stood in line, prepared to give battle to the advancing Confederates under Longstreet, the two Hills, and "Stonewall" Jackson. Morrell's division held the extreme left of the Union line; Griffith's brigade (in which was the Sixty-second Regiment) occupying the right of the division line, and joining the left of Sykes' division.

The Confederate corps of Gen. Longstreet advanced from the northward, and the battle was opened with tremendous energy. It soon became general along nearly the entire line, and raged with fury during the entire afternoon, the advantage being, in general, on the side of the Confederates. The Sixty-second and the Ninth Massachusetts Regiments were ordered to charge, and did so with the utmost steadiness and bravery. Col. Black, of the Sixty-second, was killed, and the command of the regiment then devolved on Lieut.-Col. J. Bowman Sweitzer. By this desperate charge the enemy was driven from his position at that point, but the Sixty-second advanced too far, uncovering its flank. This was immediately perceived by the Confederates, who at once took advantage of its exposed position, and massing on the flank poured in a most destructive enfilading fire; but the regiment held its ground with remarkable steadiness, and delivered volley after volley till its ammunition was exhausted, when it was compelled to fall back before overpowering numbers of the enemy. Having replenished its ammunition, it was ordered to the succor of the troops which were hard pressed on the extreme left near the Chickahominy. The regiment went in at double-quick, charging into a belt of woods, in the face of a withering fire from the enemy, who was strongly posted there. The fighting was fierce and determined on both sides, but the Union line was forced back, and the regiment retired to the Chickahominy. In the charge and repulse, late in the afternoon, Lieut.-Col. Sweitzer was taken prisoner, and on the following day was taken to Richmond.

During the night succeeding the battle the regiment crossed the Chickahominy, and on Saturday, the 28th, it remained in comparative quiet after the terrible scenes of the conflict at Gaines' Mill. On Sunday it moved with the other troops in the retreat (or change of base) to the James River, and arrived at Malvern Hill in the evening of June 30th. In the great battle at that place, in the afternoon of the following day, it lay in support of a battery, and repelled a desperate and determined charge of the enemy, made for the purpose of capturing the guns. The entire loss of the Sixty-second in this and the preceding battles of the campaign (including that of Hanover Court-House) was two hundred and ninety-eight killed, wounded, and missing.

From the field of victory at Malvern Hill the Sixty-second moved with the army soon after midnight, and marched away through the gloom and mud and pouring rain on the road to Harrison's Landing (or Berkeley), on the James River, arriving there late in the forenoon of July 2d. At about 11.30 P.M. on the 31st of July, the Confederates on the opposite side of the river suddenly opened fire on the Union army from fifteen batteries of field artillery. The gunboat fleet in the river promptly replied with their monster Parrotts and eleven-inch guns, and for nearly an hour the sky and the waters of the James glowed brightly with the incessant glare of bursting shells; then suddenly the fire ceased, and the enemy withdrew his batteries, having done but slight damage to the Union magazines, which it had been his intention to destroy. On the following day (August 1st) the Sixty-second, with its division and corps, moved across the James, and burned the mansion and other buildings of the Ruffin plantation, and leveled the woods which had screened the enemy's preparations for the artillery attack of the preceding night.

After a stay of nearly seven weeks at the Landing the army evacuated the position and marched down the Peninsula. The Sixty-second took up its line of march on the 14th of August, and moved by way of Williamsburg and Yorktown to Newport News, where it embarked and was transported to Acquia Creek on the Potomac. Thence it moved by railroad to Fredericksburg, and remained a short time in the vicinity guarding the fords of the Rappahannock, but soon moved up and rejoined its division, which had marched to the relief of Gen. Pope, whose army was being hard pressed by the enemy south of Manassas. The regiment was slightly engaged at Gainesville, Va., August 27th, but did not take part in the battles at Bull Run, August 29th and 30th, being in reserve with Gen. Porter's corps. After that battle and defeat it retired with its division to Centreville and thence to Minor's Hill, near Washington, reaching there September 4th.

In the Antietam campaign, the Sixty-second was present on that famous field, but was not closely engaged in the great battle of September 16th and 17th, its division and corps being held in reserve, though the Second Brigade was for hours posted in support of batteries and under a heavy artillery fire. After the battle the Confederate army retreated to the river and crossed into Virginia, where, on the 30th of September, the regiment became slightly engaged in a fight with a part of his forces at Blackford's Ford. An account of that engagement is given by Bates, in his "History of the Pennsylvania Volunteers," as follows: "On the 30th, the enemy having retired across the Potomac, the Sixty-second was ordered on a reconnoissance to the Virginia shore for the purpose of developing his strength. Crossing at an early hour at Blackford's Ford, the regiment was formed, and Companies L and M were deployed as skirmishers. No enemy was visible, and to all appearances he had withdrawn his forces. A few stragglers were captured and a number of muskets were gathered, when the regiment recrossed the river, and the entire corps was put in motion to follow up the retreating army; but scarcely had the One Hundred and Eighteenth Pennsylvania (which formed the head of the column) reached the opposite shore when the enemy debouched in heavy columns from a thick wood and made an impetuous assault upon this isolated force, killing and capturing many, and driving the rest in confusion back to the river. Gen. Morell had taken the precaution to plant a battery to cover the crossing. This was immediately opened, and soon succeeded in checking and driving back the assaulting party. After this affair the army remained in comparative quiet, resting upon the banks of the Potomac until the close of October."

In the reorganization of the army which followed the appointment of Gen. A. E. Burnside to succeed Gen. McClellan in the chief command, the brigade of which the Sixty-second was a part (the Second) was under command of Col. Sweitzer, the division under Gen. Griffin, and the corps (the Fifth) under Gen. Butterfield, the Fifth and Third Corps together forming the Centre Grand Division, under command of "Fighting Joe Hooker."

In the great battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862, the Second Brigade crossed the Rappahannock at noon of that day, and marched through the streets of the town under a terrific fire of artillery, and deflecting to the right moved past a brick-kiln to and across the railroad to the front of the enemy's almost impregnable position on Marye's Heights. There it was met by a fire as destructive as was ever hurled in the face of an assaulting column. The right of the line gave way, but the Second Brigade moved steadily forward through the infernal fire to a point within ten rods of the stone wall which sheltered the enemy. To advance beyond that point was impossible, but the men lay down in mud and water, a position so exposed that a man could hardly rise to his feet and live a minute afterwards, and remained there until Sunday evening, December 14th, when they returned under cover of darkness to the town. Through the day and evening of Monday, the 15th, the regiment picketed the outskirts of the town and threw up intrenchments to cover the retreat of the army. During the same night it recrossed the river, and occupied its old camp on the north side of the Rappahannock. The loss of the regiment in the battle of Fredericksburg was seventy killed and wounded.

In the spring campaign of 1863 the Sixty-second left its winter-quarters on the 27th of April, and moved with its corps (the Fifth, then under command of Gen. Meade) to and across the Rappahannock at Kelly's Ford, and the Rapidan at Ely's Ford, and marched thence to Chancellorsville, where the commander of the Army of the Potomac, Gen. Hooker, made his dispositions for battle, with the Fifth Corps on the left of the line. On the 1st of May the Sixty-second moved with its brigade and division on a reconnoissance to the left. Late in the day the Second Brigade advanced to an extremely exposed position, where it was without support, and where a superior Confederate force attempted to reach its flank and rear, to cut it off from the remainder of the division. Companies L and M of the Sixty-second being thrown out as skirmishers, discovered the position and evident designs of the enemy, and after several hours of skirmishing and fighting (through the greater part of the night), the brigade was extricated from its perilous situation, and succeeded in rejoining the main body. On the 2d of May the regiment was not engaged in the battle which resulted in the breaking and partial rout of the Eleventh Corps. On the 3d it was posted, with its brigade, in support of artillery, and assisted in the work of intrenchment. Afterwards the Sixty-second was detailed to skirmish through a belt of woods, preparatory to an advance of the Union lines; but the enemy fired the woods, and in that way prevented the execution of the movement. On the 4th the brigade advanced (the Sixty-second in the front line) to reconnoitre a strongly intrenched position of the enemy, but was met by so fierce a fire of artillery that it was compelled to retire. In this advance the regiment lost fourteen wounded. At about three o'clock in the morning of the 6th of May the Fifth Corps moved back and recrossed the Rappahannock, the Sixty-second being the last regiment to cross the swollen stream, from which it marched back to its previous camp at Falmouth, where it remained till about the 1st of June, then moved up the river to Kelly's Ford, where it was employed on picket duty and in observing the movements of the enemy.

About the middle of June the regiment marched northward with the army on the campaign that culminated in the battle of Gettysburg. It arrived with the Fifth Corps on that historic field at daylight on the morning of the 2d of July, having been slightly engaged with the enemy at Middleburg, and the men having suffered terribly from the heat, dust, and fatigue of the long march. The corps was first placed in position in the rear of Cemetery Hill, where it remained awaiting orders during the greater part of the day. It was finally ordered in to support Sickles' corps, which was hard pressed and in danger of being forced back in disorder. The position of the Second Brigade was in front of Little Round Top. The Sixty-second occupied the left of the brigade line,—an exposed position,—which the enemy attempted to flank, but failing in this, made a vigorous attack, which was repulsed, but the Second Brigade was withdrawn to a new line behind a wheat-field, across which it soon afterwards charged, under a terrible fire, but while doing so its advance was checked by the giving way of a brigade, which was pursued by a heavy force of the enemy, who came on with a rush and yell, and gained the flank and rear of the charging Second Brigade, which was thus placed in an extremely perilous position, and was extricated only by the unsurpassed bravery and steadiness of the officers and men, who retired slowly, but fighting over all the ground, until they gained a position of comparative security at the base of Little Round Top, the enemy in the mean time having been checked and driven by a brigade of the Pennsylvania Reserves. During the night the men built a rough stone wall, connecting the slopes of the two Round Tops, and this rude defense was held by the Sixty-second, which was not again closely engaged in the battle. Its losses at Gettysburg were heavy, reducing its strength to less than one hundred men. Among the wounded in this battle was Lieut. Patrick Morris of M company (mortally).

The Sixty-second took active part in the succeeding campaigns of the summer and fall of 1863, and fought bravely in the engagements at Manassas Gap, Rappahannock Station, Locust Grove Church, and at Mine Run, December 3d. Immediately after the close of the Mine Run campaign it went into winter-quarters, where a considerable proportion of the men re-enlisted and a large number of recruits were received from Pennsylvania. During the winter the regiment was employed by detachments in guarding the Orange and Alexandria Railroad.

On the opening of the spring campaign of 1864 the Sixty-second moved with its corps to the Rapidan, crossed that river at Germania Ford in the night of the 3d of May, and moved southward into the Wilderness, where it became heavily engaged with the enemy on the 5th, the regiment occupying the extreme right of the division line. It was again engaged on the 6th and 7th, and on the 8th it fought at Laurel Hill, losing heavily, but holding its ground and throwing up defensive works in the face of the enemy. It was heavily engaged and sustained severe loss in the great battle at Spottsylvania Court-House, and was almost constantly in line and under fire at and near that place from the 12th to the 21st of May, when it moved to the line of the North Anna River. It was engaged in the battle at Jericho Ford, and at Tolopotomy on the 30th. From the 31st to the 3d of June it was continually under fire, and fought bravely in the bloody battles of Bethesda Church and Cold Harbor, suffering heavy loss in both engagements.

Moving from Cold Harbor across the Chickahominy to the James River, the regiment crossed the latter stream and marched to Petersburg, reaching there in the evening of the 16th of June, and taking part in the battle of the 18th on the lines encircling that city, and in the engagement of the 21st at Jerusalem Plank-Road, where it lost slightly in killed and wounded.

On the 3d of July, 1864, the ten original companies of the Sixty-second Regiment were mustered out of the service (the term of their enlistment having expired), and the two remaining companies (L and M) were transferred to the Ninety-first Pennsylvania Regiment, and remained with it before Petersburg until the expiration of their term of service, and were mustered out on the 8th of August, 1864. The tattered and shot-torn flag of Company M has inscribed upon it the names of the battles in which the Sixty-second took part, viz.: Siege of Yorktown, battle of Yorktown, Hanover Court-House, Seven Days' battles, Gainesville, Antietam, Blackford's Ford, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Manassas Gap, Rappahannock Station, Mine Run, Wilderness, Laurel Hill, Spottsylvania Court-House, Jericho Ford, Tolopotomy, Bethesda Church, Petersburg. The following is a list of the officers and enlisted men of the Blair County company of the Sixty-second, viz.:

SIXTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

COMPANY M.

(Date of muster in Aug. 9, 1861, except where noted.)

Capt. Richard J. Crozier, res. March 7, 1863.

Capt. John H. Murray, pro. to 2d lieut. Sept. 1, 1861; to 1st lieut. Dec. 13, 1862; to capt. March 7, 1863; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

First Lieut. Stephen C. Potts, died Dec. 14, 1862, of wounds received at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.

First Lieut. Robert N. Martin, pro. from 1st sergt. to 1st lieut. May 1, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Second Lieut. Andrew T. Howden, must. in July 4, 1861; pro. to q.m. Aug. 21, 1861.

Second Lieut. Patrick Morris, died July 11, 1863, of wounds received at Gettysburg July 2, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, section A, grave 86.

First Sergt. John Muffty, pro. from corp. to sergt. Dec. 15, 1862; to 1st sergt. July 21, 1864; must. out with company July 15, 1864.

First Sergt. John R. Gardner, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; veteran.

Sergt. Samuel Herr, pro. from corp. to sergt. May 1, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Sergt. Joseph C. Sweirs, pro. from corp. to sergt. May 9, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Sergt. William G. Rhule, pro. from corp. to sergt. July 21, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Sergt. Matthew C. Wilson, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; veteran.

Sergt. George G. Kress, killed at Wilderness May 8, 1864; buried in Wilderness burial-grounds; yet.

Corp. Thomas Green, pro. to corp. Dec. 15, 1862; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Corp. Patrick Brady, pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1863; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Corp. Jonathan Ginter, pro. to corp. May 1, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Corp. H. B. Fleninken, must. in Aug. 11, 1861; pro. to corp. July 1, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Corp. Charles F. Huyo, must. in Aug. 11, 1861; pro. to corp. July 1, 1864; must. out with company Aug 15, 1864.

Corp. Dill Blackstone, pro. to corp. July 1, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Corp. Harrison H. Snyder, pro. to corp. July 21, 1864; must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Corp. Thomas Maloy, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 18, 1862.

Corp. Thomas Connelly, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 12, 1862.

Corp. Henry S. Devine, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 18, 1862.

Corp. Samuel McKinney, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 22, 1862.

Corp. Thomas Conden, must. in Nov. 1, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 10, 1863.

Corp. Henry S. Galloway, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 5, 1864.

Corp. William J. Blair.

Corp. Thomas Hensly, missing at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864.

Musician James Curran, disch. on surg. certif. June, 1862.

Musician Richard P. Brunker, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 9, 1863.

Musician Edward D. Garden, must. in Jan. 1, 1864; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Abbott, Peter M., must. in July 4, 1861; absent at muster out.

Anthony, Raynard S., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; substitute; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Apple, Jacob, must. in July 10, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Bell, George, must. in July 4, 1861; wounded and taken prisoner May 8, 1864; must. out June 2, 1865.

Byers, Walter P., wounded at Gettysburg; absent in hospital at muster out.

Beales, John, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 22, 1862.

Brannon, Michael, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 5, 1863.

Brannon, William, disch. on surg. certif. March 13, 1864.

Brindle, Emanuel, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 15, 1862.

Burkhire, William, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; substitute; disch. on surg. certif. March 26, 1864.

Baker, John, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Baughman, David, must. in Feb. 10, 1862; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.

Berger, Reuben, must. in Feb. 17, 1864; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Burke, James, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 1, 1863.

Brannon, Patrick, killed at Gaines' Mill, Va., June 27, 1862.

Brown, William, must. in Feb. 19, 1862.

Biddle, Charles, died at Minor's Hill, Va., Oct. 28, 1861.

Bertren, Peter, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; died May 5, 1863, of wounds received at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Campbell, L., absent, sick, at muster out.

Cassiday, Michael, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Cox, Levi A., must. in July 15, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 19, 1863.

Clark, John, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.

Campbell, John, died at Fort Corcoran, Va., September, 1861.

Comelie, Thomas.

Dunlap, Franklin, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Davis, John A., must. in Oct. 22, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 19, 1863.

Dernell, Jonathan, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Davis, Robert, must. in Nov. 22, 1861; killed at Gaines' Mill, Va., June 27, 1862.

Eaton, Hannibal V., died Oct. 8, 1862.

Elder, Reuben, must. in March 31, 1864; died May 15, 1864, of wounds received at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864.

Finney, Orrin P., must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Frederick, Benjamin F., trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.

Fitzsimmons, James, must. in Feb. 13, 1862; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.

Freeman, James E., must. in July 13, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Garber, Jacob, must. in Aug. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif.

Garber, Charles, must. in July 4, 1861; must. out July 4, 1864, expiration of term.

Horn, Levi A., must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Halloren, Charles, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Henshy, John B., must. in Sept. 17, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 24 1852.

Holder, John, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. June 16, 1863.

Hamilton, John, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Hanna, Matthew, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Herst, Jacob, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 5, 1863.

Hunter, Benjamin F., killed at Gaines' Mill, Va., June 27, 1862.

Hewitt, Thomas, died Jan. 6, 1863.

Johnston, Hugh, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Jones, James, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Jordon, Sylvester, must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Lennihan, Richard P., captured at Laurel Hill, Va., May 9, 1864.

Leonard, Nathaniel, absent at muster out.

Lane, George, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 22, 1862.

Leer, John, disch. on surg. certif. September, 1861.

Lindsay, William, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. June 20, 1864; vet.

Landon, Joel.

Long, John, must. in Feb. 25, 1862; died Jan. 13, 1862 of wounds recd. at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862; buried at Alexandria, Va., grave 684.

Mark, Michael, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Malone, Christian, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 24, 1863.

Morrow, Wilson, disch. on surg. certif. February, 1862.

Murray, Martin J., must. in July 13, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

McIlwain, William, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

McCabe, Edward, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

McCoy, Francis, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

McCool, John, must. in January, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 26, 1862.

McCandless, David, must. in July 15, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

McIntire, William, must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

MaCall, James, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; died at Bealton Station, Va., Dec. 17, 1863.

McKinley, George, died at Minor's Hill, Va., December, 1861.

Nolan, William, disch. on surg. certif. May 5, 1863.

Nicodemus, Samuel, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.

Norton, William, must. in July 14, 1863; substitute; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Orr, William, missing at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864.

O'Connor, William, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Printzler, O. P. B., must. in July 10, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Rush, Samuel, must. in Feb. 19, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 15, 1863.

Rumbaugh, William, must. in July 17, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.

Smith, Isaac, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Shade, Henry, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.

Stineman, Matthew C., wounded at Gettysburg, Pa.; absent at muster out.

Scotts, Andrew J., disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 1, 1863.

Saltgiver, George, must. in Aug. 27, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. March 25, 1863.
Sellers, George, disch. Oct. 6, 1862, for wounds recd. at Gaines' Mill, Va., June 27, 1862.
Sharrer, Daniel, must. in Feb. 7, 1862; disch. Oct. 6, 1862, for wounds recd. at Gaines' Mill, Va., June 27, 1862.
Smath, John, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 6, 1863.
Shade, William, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.
Shaffer, John, trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.
Seybert, Samuel W., must. in Aug. 31, 1863; substitute; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.
Stolla, Frederick, must. in July 10, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.
Stoughton, Elisha, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.
Steele, James B., must. in July 17, 1863; trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864.
Tipton, Samuel B., trans. to 91st Regt. P. V. July 20, 1864; vet.
Widensall, John, must. out with company Aug. 15, 1864.
Wensel, Frederick, absent, sick, at muster out.
Watkins, Thomas, disch. on surg. certif. June, 1862.
Watson, George M., disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 15, 1863.

CHAPTER XXII.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

THE SEVENTY-SIXTH AND SEVENTY-SEVENTH REGIMENTS.

The Seventy-sixth Regiment was raised in the fall of 1861, and organized at Camp Cameron, Harrisburg, under the following-named field-officers, viz.: Colonel, John M. Power; Lieutenant-Colonel, D. H. Wallace; and Major, Oliver M. Irvine, of Blair County. Two companies of the regiment were raised in Blair County, viz.: Companies C and F.

The regiment left Harrisburg on the 19th of November, 1861, and proceeded to Fortress Monroe, and thence by ocean transports to South Carolina to join the expeditionary forces which had previously gone forward to Beaufort, in that State, under command of Gen. T. W. Sherman. Arriving at Hilton Head on the 8th of December, it was assigned to the brigade of Gen. H. G. Wright, and in that command passed the winter in the delightful climate of lower South Carolina, engaged in camp and picket duty and the erection of defensive works. On the 8th of April, 1862, eight companies of the regiment embarked at Hilton Head (leaving F and A companies behind at that place) and proceeded to Tybee Island, near the mouth of Savannah River, to assist in the projected assault on Fort Pulaski. On the 10th the batteries were opened on the fort, which surrendered on the 11th without an assault of infantry. The regiment returned to Hilton Head on the 19th, and remained there till the 30th of May, when it moved to North Edisto Island, and on the 1st of June to John's Island, to take part with other troops in an attack on Charleston. It moved to Legareville on the 5th of June, and ten days later the attack was made, but was unsuccessful, and the troops withdrew. During the remainder of the summer and part of the fall the regiment remained in comparative inaction. On the 27th of September Maj. Irvine resigned, and Capt. Cyrus Diller was promoted to the majority.

On the 22d of October the Seventy-sixth (then under command of Col. D. C. Strawbridge) marched on an expedition for the purpose of breaking the railroad communication between Charleston and Savannah by the destruction of the long and high trestle-work at Pocotaligo. A strong force of Confederates was encountered and a severe battle resulted, in which the Seventy-sixth took prominent part, and suffered a loss of seventy-five killed and wounded. Among the former was Capt. Henry Wayne, and among the wounded Lieut. Gwin, both of F company.

From this time, for more than eight months, the regiment was employed in picketing and ordinary military duty on St. Helena and others of the Sea Islands. On the 6th of July, 1863, it moved with the other regiments of the brigade commanded by Gen. George C. Strong to Morris Island, in Charleston Harbor, to take part in an assault on Fort Wagner. In the morning of the 10th a tremendous cannonade was opened on the fort by the Union batteries and ironclads, and was continued for more than two hours, at the end of which time Strong's brigade (including the Seventy-sixth) moved forward to the attack, and gallantly carried the shore batteries. At about sunrise on the following morning the Seventy-sixth and the Seventh Connecticut Regiment assaulted the main work (Wagner), but were repulsed with a loss to the Seventy-sixth of fifty-two killed and one hundred and thirty-five wounded, among the latter of whom was Maj. John W. Hicks, of Blair County. On the evening of the 18th of July the regiment joined in another assault more fierce and determined than the former one, and in this Gen. Strong, commander of the brigade, and Col. Robert G. Shaw, of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment, were killed. In this action, however, the Seventy-sixth Pennsylvania suffered much less than in the previous assault, losing only nineteen killed and wounded. On the 2d of August the regiment moved to Hilton Head, where it remained many months, picketing, and occupying adjacent points by detachments. During this time (December 20th) Maj. Hicks was promoted to the grade of lieutenant-colonel.

The regiment remained in the South till the first part of May, 1864, when, with its corps, it was transported to Virginia, and there attached to the Army of the James, under Gen. B. F. Butler, at Bermuda Hundred. On a reconnoissance made by the brigade soon after its arrival, the Seventy-sixth lost sixty-one killed, wounded, and missing, in an action at the Weldon Railroad, the destruction of which was the object of the expedition. The enemy's force retired and concentrated at Fort Darling (Drury's Bluff), on the James River, below Richmond, where they were reinforced by Wise's Legion, and attacked in turn on the 16th of May, gaining a decided advantage.

Fighting was continued for several days afterwards, without resulting in a general engagement. On the 27th of May the regiment, with its division (the Second of the Tenth Corps), embarked and proceeded down the James and up the York and Pamunkey Rivers to White House Landing, where it joined the Army of the Potomac about the time when it was taking position at Cold Harbor, where the regiment took part, and sustained heavy loss in the tremendous battles of the 1st, 2d, and 3d of June. After these engagements it moved, with its division, across the Chickahominy and James Rivers, and rejoined the Army of the James on the 15th of June, and was at once sent out with a force to destroy the railroads. On the 23d it joined the lines of the Army of the Potomac before Petersburg. It was on active duty at the mine explosion (July 30th), and suffered considerable loss. From the 13th to 17th of August it was daily under fire at Deep Bottom and vicinity. On the evening of the 24th of August the enemy attacked vigorously, driving in the outposts. Early the next morning Lieut. George H. Gwin, with a detachment of the Seventy-sixth, made an attack on that part of the Confederate position and re-established the line, taking twenty prisoners.

From that time for more than a month the regiment was almost daily engaged in fighting and skirmishing. On the 29th of September it was engaged at Chapin's Farm and the taking of Fort Harrison, losing heavily. It also took part in the attack on Fort Gilmore, and fought at Hatcher's Run and at Darbytown, in the afternoon of October 27th, with considerable loss, having been under fire during the entire day. In December, 1864, the regiment accompanied Gen. Butler's expedition against Fort Fisher, which proved a sad failure, and a new one was fitted out under command of Gen. Terry, the Seventy-sixth forming part of the forces composing it. The expedition started from Hampton Roads on the 6th of January, 1865, and arrived at Beaufort, N. C., on the 8th. The troops landed near Fort Fisher on the 13th, and threw up works. On the 15th the fleet opened on the fort, and kept up a terrific bombardment, under cover of which three brigades (including that to which the Seventy-sixth belonged) moved to the assault. The work was defended with desperation, but finally surrendered after the loss of its commander, Gen. Whiting. The Seventy-sixth suffered very severely in this assault, numbering among its killed Capt. Thomas L. McGlathery, of F company. The regimental colors, carried by Corp. Albert Sanders, of Company C, was torn and shredded by shells and canister until a mere fragment remained on the staff.

After the capture of Fort Fisher the Seventy-sixth moved to Wilmington, and thence to Raleigh, N. C., where it remained until July 15th, when (the war in the mean time having been ended by the surrender of the Confederate armies of Lee and Johnston) it moved to Wilmington, and from thence the men of the regiment returned by sea to their homes in Pennsylvania.

The lists of officers and enlisted men of the Blair County companies of the Seventy-sixth Regiment are given, as follows:

SEVENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY C.

(Date of muster in Oct. 17, 1861, except where noted.)

Capt. John W. Hicks, pro. to maj. May 1, 1863.

Capt. Alfred Hicks, pro. from 2d to 1st lieut. Sept. 2, 1862, to capt. May 1, 1863; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Capt. John McNevin, pro. from q.m.-sergt. to 2d lieut. Oct. 10, 1864, to capt. Feb. 17, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

First Lieut. George S. Hower, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Sept. 2, 1862.

First Lieut. Joseph Harlin, pro. from 1st sergt. Feb. 17, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Second Lieut. Joseph D. Kuch, pro. from 1st sergt. Sept. 2, 1862; disch. April 16, 1863.

Second Lieut. Philn. N. Hicks, Sr., pro. from sergt. Feb. 14, 1864; disch. Aug. 19, 1864.

Second Lieut. Benjamin White, wounded at Darbytown Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; pro. from 1st sergt. April 10, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. Henry Smith, pro. from sergt. April 19, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. George W. Cruse, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; must. out Aug. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. Charles M. Gates, pro. from corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Martin Gates, absent, sick, at muster out.

Sergt. William R. Smith, pro. from corp. April 19, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Albert Sanders, pro. from corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Andrew J. White, disch. on surg. certif. June 3, 1863.

Sergt. William Robison, disch. on surg. certif. June 3, 1864.

Sergt. James S. McCartney, disch. on surg. certif. June 5, 1864.

Sergt. William R. Mowrey, captured; died at Richmond, Va., Jan. 31, 1864.

Corp. George Davis, must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Corp. James D. Davis, wounded at Fort Fisher, N. C., Jan. 15, 1865; absent at muster out; vet.

Corp. Adam Hainzey, pro. to corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Corp. Henry H. Hewitt, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; pro. to corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Corp. John F. Hoover, pro. to corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Corp. Martin Ounkst, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; pro. to corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Corp. Abraham Beals, pro. to corp. March 15, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Corp. Daniel Downs, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Corp. Peter Wilderson, disch. on surg. certif. March 21, 1863.

Corp. William Champeno, disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 24, 1864.

Corp. Michael Pote, pro. to q.m.-sergt. March 15, 1865; vet.

Corp. Samuel Flynn, killed at Chesterfield Heights, Va., May 7, 1864; burial rec., died at Andersonville, Ga., October, 1864; grave 10,667; vet.

Corp. John Curry, died Oct. 13, 1864; buried at Hampton, Va.

Corp. Thomas D. Neely, killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Corp. Benjamin F. Marks, died of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., July 30, 1864; vet.

Musician Thomas Lloyd, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Musician James Snyder, must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.

Andrews, John C., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Anderson, John, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 16, 1865.

Ayers, William R., must. out Nov. 8, 1864, expiration of term.

Allen, Samuel, must. in Nov. 20, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. July 14, 1862.

Applebaugh, C. E., must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; pro. to sergt.-maj. July 8, 1865.
Bold, Thomas, absent, sick, at must. out; vet.
Bowen, Thomas, must. in June 4, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Bonnell, James, must. in Feb. 17, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Ball, Elias B., must. in Jan. 19, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 31, 1865.
Breeze, Samuel, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Brown, Anson G., must. in Feb. 16, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 10, 1865.
Brownson, Isaac W., must. in Dec. 13, 1864; died at Raleigh, N. C., June 11, 1865.
Bomgardner, Zach., killed at Chesterfield Heights, Va., May 7, 1864.
Conklin, John, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. July 2, 1865.
Collagan, Michael, disch. by surg. certif. June 22, 1863.
Chamberlain, W. P., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Curran, James, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. June 4, 1865.
Crawford, William, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
Cox, John, died July 18, 1863, of wounds received at Fort Wagner, S. C.
Duffey, John, must. in June 4, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Duffey, Patrick, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; substitute; absent, sick, at must. out.
Dayton, John M., must. in July 23, 1863; disch. by G. O. July 15, 1865.
Dunn, William, must. in July 14, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.; disch. by G. O. Aug. 14, 1865.
Dehaven, Absalom, must. in July 13, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 16, 1865.
Dunlap, William, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Dasher, John W., must. in Feb. 19, 1862; wounded at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 18, 1863; must. out expiration of term.
Deafabaugh, Adam, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Deafabaugh, Thomas, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Davis, Joshua V., disch. on surg. certif. March 3, 1863.
Dasher, Samuel, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps April 28, 1864.
Dasher, Levi, died at Hilton Head, S. C., April 17, 1863.
Dennison, Jos. S., must. in Dec. 30, 1863; died at Hampton, Va., Sept. 12, 1864; burial record Aug. 12, 1864.
Davis, James, must. in Feb. 16, 1865; substitute.
Evans, Charles W., must. in June 2, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Flick, Thomas, must. in Aug. 24, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 7, 1865.
Fetzer, Michael, must. in July 18, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Francis, Albert, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Frutchey, Christian, must. in Jan. 19, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 13, 1865.
Fitzgerald, Patrick, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Fredergill, Thomas, must. in Nov. 1, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 5, 1862.
Flannington, James, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute.
Gneser, Adam, must. in July 13, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Gross, John, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Goutard, Adolph, must. in July 25, 1863; disch. by G. O. July 18, 1865.
Gibbony, John C., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Gates, M. V. B., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Gates, George W., disch. on surg. certif. March 28, 1863.
Greene, Edward S., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Glunt, Jacob, killed at Petersburg, Va., July 30, 1864; vet.
Good, John, killed at Petersburg, Va., Aug. 16, 1864; vet.
Garland, Moses K., must. in March 28, 1864; died at Chapin's Farm, Va., Jan. 1, 1865.
Hoover, John D., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hendershot, S., must. in Aug. 25, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hancock, John, must. in July 13, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hagerty, Henry, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; wounded at Darbytown Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 1, 1865.
Hagerty, Isaac, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; absent, in confinement, at must. out.
Hall, John, must. in July 22, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hall, Isaiah F., must. in Feb. 17, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hawley, Isaac, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Hetrick, Andrew G., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hainley, Christian, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Henderson, William, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Hoover, George S., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Helsel, Edward, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Hicks, Phil. N., Jr., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; pro. to q.m.-sergt. Sept. 7, 1864.
Hook, Maddock, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Hainzey, John, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Hainzey, George, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Hoover, Thomas L., disch. on surg. certif. June 8, 1864.
Hale, Henry, must. in Nov. 1, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 1, 1863.
Howe, Robert, prisoner from July 11, 1863, to Nov. 20, 1864; must. out Nov. 25, 1864, expiration of term.
Hall, George, disch. on surg. certif. March 24, 1863.
Higley, Daniel M., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 14, 1864.
Hendrick, Otis N., must. in Sept. 4, 1863; killed at Drury's Bluff, Va., May 16, 1864.
Hall, Samuel S., must. in Jan. 19, 1865; died at Wilmington, N. C., April 15, 1865.
Irvin, John S., must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Jordon, William T., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Jenkins, John, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Keener, William F., must. in Aug. 13, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Kline, George W., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Keesegle, Adam, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Kelsley, William, must. in Nov. 1, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 1, 1862.
King, Watson S., must. in Aug. 24, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. June 5, 1865.
Kegrise, Ebenezer, killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.
Kenter, Robert F., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; died at Point of Rocks, Md., Jan. 15, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, City Point, Va., section A, division 4, grave 52.
Kelley, James H., must. in July 14, 1863; died at Wilmington, N. C., April 18, 1865.
King, Thomas D., must. in Dec. 31, 1863; died at Portsmouth, Va., July 17, 1864.
Langdon, Harrison, must. in Feb. 20, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Luther, Francis, must. in Jan. 25, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Laise, John, must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
Ling, John, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Ling, William, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Lorenz, John B., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Lang, James, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 1, 1862.
Lyninger, Edward, killed at Drury's Bluff, Va., May 16, 1864; vet.
Lingafelter, A. J., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 30, 1865.
Moore, John W., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
Marks, Jacob, must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Miller, Henry, must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
Montgomery, T., absent, sick, at must. out; vet.
Moutz, John, must. in Feb. 20, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Mowry, Thomas, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Moore, Jesse, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Moyer, Michael, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; substitute; died at Raleigh, N. C., July 5, 1865.
Mason, Patrick, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute.

McKeehan, W. L., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
McConnell, John A., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Nolan, John, must. in Feb. 20, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Ounkst, Daniel, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
Packard, Eden, must. in Feb. 17, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. July 15, 1865.
Pond, William, must. in Feb. 17, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Parshan, Abdol, must. in March 14, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Robison, John, must. in July 23, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Reish, Joseph, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Ramage, Thomas R., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Reddy, Henry, disch. on surg. certif. May 9, 1862.
Rork, Joseph H., must. in Nov. 1, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 1, 1862.
Reddick, Franklin, died at Federal Point, N. C., Feb. 10, 1865; vet.
Smith, David R., must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Simpler, William, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Schmidt, John, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Scott, John, must. in Dec. 31, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Smith, John, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Smith, John M., disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 2, 1862.
Smith, John (2d), must. in Feb. 20, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 23, 1865.
Strayer, Henry, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 2, 1862.
Seymour, Edwin, must. in Jan. 21, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
Tyler, George P., must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Tate, John T., must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
Tate, William W., killed accidentally Dec. 5, 1861.
Treese, Henry, died at Hilton Head, S. C., May 20, 1862.
Vaughn, Thomas H., disch. by G. O. Aug. 18, 1865; vet.
Wildoner, Luther G., must. in Oct. 15, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Wentzell, John, must. in June 2, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Wick, Peter, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 15, 1865.
Walker, Andrew, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; died of wounds received in action May 16, 1864.
Williams, James, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
Zeeke, Lewis R., killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

COMPANY F.

Capt. Henry Wayne, must. in Nov. 6, 1861; killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
Capt. Joseph R. Findley, must. in Nov. 6, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. to capt. Oct. 22, 1862; disch. Oct. 4, 1864.
Capt. T. L. McGlathery, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. June 20, 1864; to capt. Jan. 2, 1865; killed at Fort Fisher, N. C., Jan. 15, 1865.
Capt. James H. McDivit, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. from 1st sergt. to 1st lieut. Jan. 3, 1865; to capt. Feb. 17, 1865; res. May 27, 1865.
Capt. William Blanck, Jr., must. in Nov. 21, 1861; pro. from hospital steward to 1st lieut. March 1, 1865; to capt. June 30, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
1st Lieut. George H. Gwinn, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; wounded at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. to 1st lieut. Oct. 23, 1862; to brevet capt. and brevet maj. April 13, 1865; must. out with company Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
2d Lieut. Joseph W. Cannon, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Oct. 23, 1862; disch. April 1, 1863.
2d Lieut. John Hubert, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. April 19, 1865; com. 1st lieut. June 13, 1865; not must.; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
1st Sergt. James M. Null, must. in July 13, 1863; pro. to corp. March 6, 1865; to 1st. sergt. May 1, 1865; com. 1st lieut. July 1, 1865, not must.; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
1st Sergt. Thomas Morgan, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Sergt. John N. Detwiler, must. in Jan. 1, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.
Sergt. George Boyle, must. in Jan. 1, 1864; absent without leave at muster out; veteran.
Sergt. William Miller, must. in Feb. 1, 1864; pro. to sergt. March 11, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865; veteran.
Sergt. John Shay, must. in Aug. 21, 1863; pro. to sergt. July 1, 1865; com. 2d lieut. July 1, 1865; not must.; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Sergt. James A. Gwin, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif.
Sergt. William H. Moore, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. Oct. 18, 1862.
Sergt. Peter Fogel, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Sergt. William A. Kline, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif.
Sergt. Alexander R. Gwin, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 18, 1863.
Sergt. Lucius A. Hurlbert, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.
Sergt. John A. Boyles, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died at Charleston, S. C., July 20, 1863.
Corp. George Snyder, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; wounded at Darbytown Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. Augustus Barker, must. in July 18, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. George McKenna, must. in July 9, 1863; pro. to corp. March 6, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. Henry Rutter, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to corp. March 6, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. Abel Morrison, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; pro. to corp. May 4, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. John Rockwell, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; pro. to corp. June 7, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. George R. Benton, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; pro. to corp. July 7, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. Thomas Chubb, must. in March 3, 1865; pro. to corp. July 7, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Corp. Albert D. Moore, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 4, 1863.
Corp. Henry A. Miller, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 5, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. John Lafferty, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 5, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. Daniel Clark, must. in Nov. 8, 1861; disch. Nov. 7, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. Casper Wicker, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. Nicholas McCollough, must. in July 16, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 24, 1865.
Corp. David A. Moore, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 4, 1862.
Corp. Adie F. Irwin, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Jan. 12, 1865, expiration of term.
Corp. John McLaughlin, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. July 18, 1862.
Corp. James McCormick, must. in Nov. 6, 1861; pro. to sergt.-major.
Corp. Charles Evans, must in Nov. 6, 1861; pro. to sergt. Co. K.
Corp. James H. Hughes, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Chesterfield Heights, Va., May 7, 1864.
Corp. Richard M. Bell, must. in Nov. 6, 1861; killed at Drury's Bluff, Va., May 14, 1864.
Corp. John W. Martin, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Chesterfield Heights, Va., May 7, 1864.
Corp. Enoch Hinkson, must. in Nov. 8, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 15, 1863.
Corp. Miles Kinsel, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed in action July 9, 1864.
Corp. Cornelius Walker, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.
Musician William W. Long, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Musician Joseph Ritter, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Musician James G. Stewart, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Musician William H. Wayne, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Musician John M. Knox, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Cold Harbor, Va., July 1, 1864.
Atwell, James E., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865

(Date of muster in of balance of company, Oct. 28, 1861, except where noted.)

Ayers, James M., must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 23, 1864, expiration of term.

Ayers, John J., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Adair, William S., must. in Oct. 2, 1863; died at Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 27, 1864.

Bollinger, John, must. in July 14, 1863; wounded at Darbytown Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Berker, Frederick, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Bishop, John S., trans. from 203d Regt. P. V. June 22, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.

Bowser, George W., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.

Broyles, Jacob, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Bearer, Levi, must. in Oct. 19, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Barton, Bright H., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Brown, James, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Buffamoyer, Daniel, must. in Feb. 15 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Back, Treranian, must. out Nov. 28, 1854, expiration of term.

Burkhart, William, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Burkhart, William D., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Bare, Walter, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Brown, Nathan, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Brown, Joseph, must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.

Ball, William W., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.

Brown, James B., killed at Cold Harbor, Va., June 6, 1864.

Burkholder, Henry, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Aug. 23, 1862; burial record Sept. 2, 1862.

Buel, Henry G., killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Boyles, William, killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.

Bartlebough, Henry, died at Hampton, Va., June 29, 1864, of wounds received in action.

Bradley, Thomas, must. in March 28, 1864; died June 12, 1864, of wounds received in action.

Black, John W., must. in Feb. 13, 1865; substitute.

Cogsdale, Tyler, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. July 8, 1865.

Clemo, Stephen, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.

Cochran, Michael, must. in Feb. 25, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Crossley, Matthias, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; died July 21, 1865; buried in Cypress Hill Cemetery, Long Island.

Conrad, Henry, must. in Dec. 23, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Cooper, Isaac, must. in Feb. 15, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Conners, John, disch. on surg. certif.

Crossman, Frederick, disch. on surg. certif. April 21, 1863.

Chittenden, Abel S., must. in Sept. 23, 1864; died at Wilmington, N. C., May 14, 1865.

Dell, Samuel, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; absent, sick, at must. out.

Diehl, William H., must. in Feb. 17, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 30, 1865.

Diren, Daniel W., must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Ditch, Henry, disch. on surg. certif. April 4, 1863.

Dole, Daniel, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; substitute; disch. by G. O. June 19, 1865.

Dunham, Joseph, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 12, 1865.

Delaney, John, died at Hilton Head, S. C., Nov. 8, 1862.

Daniels, John, must. in Oct. 16, 1861.

Frank, William, must. in Oct. 14, 1864; substitute; disch. July 13, 1865.

Freeman, Spencer, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.

Fairen, Martin, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Fleck, Luther E., must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died at Hampton, Va., June 17, 1864, of wounds received in action.

Fry, Adam, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.

Fry, Levi, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Finley, Stephen, must. in Aug. 27, 1862; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Gray, John, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Grossman, Frederick, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Grossenbecker, John, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Gray, Silas, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. Sept. 4, 1862.

Gray, Milton, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Gillen, James, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Giboney, George W., must. in Nov. 16, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Gobles, William, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; died at Hampton, Va., July 20, 1864.

Gaines, George, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; died July 11, 1864.

Gillhouse, Albert G., must. in Sept. 18, 1861.

Hawley, Isaac, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.

Hopper, Nicholas, must. in Feb. 16, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Henney, Levi, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.

Hultz, Nathan, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.

Hubbard, Michael, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. April 24, 1865.

Houseman, Andrew, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; trans. to Signal Corps Oct. 16, 1863.

Hempfield, George, must. in April 24, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Dec. 8, 1863.

Hench, Frederick, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., Oct. 31, 1862.

Hagerty, Joseph, must. in Jan. 1, 1864; killed in action July 9, 1864; buried near Fort Steadman, Petersburg, Va.; vet.

Hurley, John, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died at Fortress Monroe, Va., Nov. 30, 1861.

Holeman, Edward, must. in Feb. 22, 1865; substitute; died at Raleigh, N. C., June 19, 1865.

Irwin, Jacob, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Jennings, Michael, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 24, 1864, at expiration of term.

Johnson, John, must. in Sept. 20, 1861.

Kelly, Atkinson, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.

Kimball, Festus A., must. in Feb. 10, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. July 14, 1865.

Kerns, Thomas, must. in Feb. 22, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Krotzen, John, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 19, 1862.

Kough, John S., must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Kelley, Randall W., must. in Sept. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.

Kounsman, David, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Kinsel, Jonathan, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Krotzer, Henry, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died at Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 22, 1864.

Kemp, Joseph, must. in Nov. 16, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 3, 1862.

Kounsman, Samuel, must. in March 24, 1862; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.

Knox, William T., must. in March 24, 1862; died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 28, 1862.

Laughlin, George W., must. in Feb. 17, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Lafferty, George, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, at expiration of term.

Leffler, William, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.

Logan, James A., must. in Nov. 10, 1861.

Langdon, John G., must. in Sept. 12, 1861.

Martin, Andrew, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Martin, Edward, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; disch. by G. O. Aug. 16, 1865.

Milligan, John, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Moorehouse, Samuel, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.

Miller, Edmond, must. in Oct. 18, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Meadville, Graham, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; prisoner from July 13, 1863, to Nov. 21, 1864; must. out March 7, 1865, to date Nov. 26, 1864.
Meadville, Peter, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. July 15, 1863.
Monland, John, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. June 23, 1863.
Miller, George W., must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif.
Miller, James, must. in Sept. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.
Matthew, Edward B., must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. on surg. certif.
Mumford, Alonzo O., must. in Sept. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.
Monroe, Joseph, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Murray, Henry, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 10, 1865.
Morgan, John R., must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Fort Wagner, S. C., July 11, 1863.
McKnell, Albert, must. in Feb. 22, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
McAninch, William A., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865; vet.
McKeefer, Arthur, must. in July 11, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. April 8, 1865.
Noles, Michael, must. in Feb. 16, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Osler, John, must. in July 16, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Oxworth, George, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; trans. to Signal Corps Oct. 13, 1863.
Powell, John, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; died at Hampton, Va., Aug. 28, 1864, of wounds received in action.
Ray, John M., must. in Sept. 23, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Rogers, Samuel F., must. in Jan. 25, 1865; trans. from 203d Regt. P. V. June 22, 1865; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Reed, William H., must. in Oct. 20, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Reed, Thomas, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. May 8, 1865.
Rumbaugh, James, must. in July 13, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 22, 1865.
Ragan, Daniel, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died at Hilton Head, S. C., July 11, 1862.
Rolles, Clement, must. in Aug. 25, 1863.
Shultz, Dallas, must. in Dec. 28, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 31, 1865.
Spicer, Charles, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute; must. out with company July, 1865.
Smurr, Reason, must. in July 16, 1863; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Shall, John, must. in Aug. 11, 1864; died at Wilmington, N. C., April 24, 1865.
Skipper, August R., must. in Feb. 24, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Strawinger, John, must. in Feb. 13, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Silbo, John, must. in Feb. 21, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Starnosky, Henry, must. in Feb. 25, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Stole, Christian, must. in Aug. 18, 1864; substitute; trans. from 203d Regt. P. V. June 22, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Smith, George, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. Feb. 29, 1863.
Smith, Sanford, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Smith, Marion, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Shannon, John, must. in Nov. 6, 1861; disch. Aug. 1, 1862.
Shultz, Joseph, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.
Sipe, Levi, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; died March 25, 1864; buried in Prospect Hill Cemetery, York, Pa.; vet.
Steiner, Benjamin, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; killed at Pocotaligo, S. C., Oct. 22, 1862.
Smith, William, must. in Sept. 30, 1863; killed at Drury's Bluff, Va., May 14, 1864.
Tierney, Thomas, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Thompson, George, must. in Feb. 16, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. July 18, 1865.
Taylor, Gilbert, must. in Feb. 26, 1865; substitute; disch. by G. O. July 7, 1865.
Vanorden, Nor. G., must. in Oct. 24, 1864; killed at Fortress Monroe, Va., Dec. 12, 1864.
Wise, John, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; absent, sick, at must. out.
Welsh, David, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Whitman, Thomas, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; substitute; must. out with company July 18, 1865.
Wicker, Frederick, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Nov. 28, 1864, expiration of term.
Weirbaugh, Levi, must. in April 24, 1862; must. out May 15, 1865, expiration of term.
Wilcox, David E., must. in Sept. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 10, 1865.
Weirbaugh, Henry, must. in March 30, 1862; died at Portsmouth Grove, R. I., Oct. 18, 1864; burial record Oct. 30, 1864.
Weeks, Carodan, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; died at Andersonville, Ga., Oct. 2, 1864, grave 10,217 or 10,253.
Young, John, must. in Jan. 1, 1864; disch. by S. O., date unknown; vet.

The Seventy-seventh Regiment.—This regiment included in its original organization one company (C) from Huntingdon County. After the regiment had been in the service three years and five months, it was joined in the field by a company of Blair County men under command of Capt. Daniel Shock. This was designated as Company F, most of the surviving members of the original F company being transferred about the same time to A company.

The Seventy-seventh was rendezvoused at Camp Wilkins, near Pittsburgh, where it was organized, under command of Col. Frederick S. Stumbaugh, in October, 1861. On the 18th of that month it was embarked on transport steamers, and proceeded down the Ohio to Louisville, Ky., in company with the Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth Regiments of the Pennsylvania line, these three regiments forming a brigade, commanded by Brig.-Gen. James S. Negley, of Pittsburgh. From Louisville the brigade marched south along the line of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and remained encamped for a considerable time at a camp called "Camp Negley," in honor of the brigade commander. While here the Seventy-seventh was detached from the brigade and assigned to the Fifth Brigade of the division commanded by Gen. Alexander McD. McCook, the other regiments of the brigade (commanded by Brig.-Gen. Thomas J. Wood) being the Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth Indiana and the Thirty-fourth Illinois. This brigade, with the army of Gen. Buell, marched southward into Tennessee, and arrived at Nashville on the 2d of March, 1862. Soon afterwards the Seventy-seventh, with the other forces of Gen. Buell, continued the southward march, moving towards a point on the Tennessee River, where the forces of Gen. Grant and the Confederate army under Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston were approaching each other, and where, on Sunday, the 6th of April, they joined in the great battle of Shiloh or Pittsburgh Landing. On the evening of the 5th (the same time when the Army of the Potomac under Gen. McClellan arrived in front of Yorktown) the advance of Gen. Buell's corps reached Savannah (nine miles below Pittsburgh Landing, on the Tennessee), and bivouacked there for the night. On the following morning Buell heard the roar of the distant battle, and hurried his troops forward with all possible speed. The division of Gen. William Nelson led the advance, and pushed on without halt until late in the afternoon, when it reached the right bank of the Tennessee, opposite the place where Grant's hard-pressed battalions were engaged in the desperate fight, contesting every inch of ground, yet slowly retiring towards the river. When the succoring division came up opposite the scene of conflict its brave yet rough old commander sent an aide across to report to Gen. Grant, with this message, "Tell him," said he, "that Gen. Nelson is here with ten thousand fighting men and no d—d cowards!" this last remark being caused by the sight of a large number of fugitives from the fight skulking behind the bluff bank of the river. "Tell Gen. Nelson," said Gen. Grant to the aide, "that our men seem to be doing pretty well, but we shall be glad to see him over here." The division was promptly crossed and placed in position, enabling the Union forces to hold their ground firmly against the last desperate assaults of the Confederates. During the night the gunboats in the river kept up an incessant cannonade, throwing their huge shells over the heads of the men of Grant's army and into the Confederate lines beyond. In the morning of the 7th the battle was renewed, and the rebel forces were driven back at all points, though they held their ground most stubbornly and fought for hours with the greatest desperation. Other troops of Buell's command had arrived in the mean time, and among them the brigade in which was the Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania, which came up by steamboat from Savannah. At about nine o'clock in the morning it marched upon the field, and was immediately under fire. For six hours after its arrival the battle raged with the greatest fury. The regiment repelled a desperate assault of cavalry, and was in the front line in the final charge which drove the enemy from the field and ended the conflict.

For about a week after the battle the regiment remained on the field near Pittsburgh Landing, then moved several miles to a new camp. About four weeks later it moved with the army towards the enemy's strong position at Corinth, Miss., in the expectation of a general attack upon the works at that place, but they were occupied without resistance, the Confederates having evacuated. Upon the fall of Corinth, Gen. Buell's army marched back to Nashville; the Seventy-seventh, with its brigade, passing the entire summer on the route, which was from Corinth up the valley of the Tennessee to Bridgeport, Ala., thence northward by way of Stevenson, Cowan, Decherd, Manchester, and Murfreesboro' to the capital. Here it had little rest, being ordered northward on the rapid march with Buell's forces to intercept the Confederate Gen. Bragg, who was marching on Louisville, Ky. Buell's forces arrived on the 26th of September, and on the following day the Seventy-seventh encamped in the suburbs of the city.

On the arrival of Buell's army at Louisville, Gen. Bragg faced his forces southward, and marched back towards Tennessee. Buell followed with his army, leaving Louisville on the 1st of October. The Seventy-seventh, moving with the left wing, passed through Stanford and Nicholsville, Ky., skirmishing with the enemy at Claysville, Lawrenceburg, and other places, but not being present at the general engagement near Perryville, October 8th. It reached Nashville, Tenn., in the last part of October, and remained there and in that vicinity for two months, taking part in a minor engagement at Lavergne on the 27th of November. On the 26th of December it moved with the army towards Murfreesboro', near which town the great battle of Stone River was fought on the 31st of December and 1st and 2d of January. The Seventy-seventh was on the left of the division of Gen. R. W. Johnson, which occupied the extreme right of the army, the position of the regiment being partly in a cedar thicket and partly in a cotton-field, with the enemy near, and directly in front. In this position it lay during the night of Tuesday, December 30th. The battle was opened by Hardee's (left) corps of the Confederate army, which made a furious assault soon after daylight on the 31st, while the battery horses of Johnson's division were being taken to water. In a few minutes twenty-seven guns out of Johnson's five batteries were in the hands of the Confederates, and the three divisions of Johnson, Davis, and Sheridan (comprising McCook's army corps) were in retreat in some disorder across the cotton-field towards the shelter of a cedar wood in the rear. The Seventy-seventh, with some other troops, rallied, made a counter-charge, and recaptured the guns of Edgerton's battery, which, however, were soon after again taken by the enemy, and the regiment, compelled to relinquish its temporary advantage, was finally driven across the field, and through the woods to the vicinity of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, where the troops were rallied and a new line established by the commanding general, Rosecrans. This line, strengthened by slight breastworks, was held through the day against repeated attacks by the enemy. Several attacks were also made on Thursday, January 1st, and the artillery fire was incessant during that day, but no very decided advantage was gained on either side. The forenoon of Friday passed in comparative quiet, but about the middle of the afternoon the Confederates attacked with great fury on the left of Rosecrans' line, gaining an advantage at first, charging across Stone River, and causing the Union troops to recoil at that point, but they rallied at once and drove the enemy back across the stream. From that time the conflict raged until after dark, resulting in the complete rout of the Confederates, who retreated through the town of Murfreesboro' and along the turnpike road towards Shelbyville.

Through the entire battle of Stone River the Seventy-seventh behaved with great gallantry and steadiness, for which it was highly complimented by Gen. Rosecrans. Soon after the battle it encamped near Murfreesboro', where it remained until the general advance of the Army of the Cumberland, June 24, 1863. In the advance a Confederate division (Cleburne's) was found in a strong position at Liberty Gap, where a heavy fight resulted on the 24th and 25th, ending in the retreat of the enemy. The Seventy-seventh was one of the charging regiments, and sustained severe loss in the engagement.

The enemy retired to a strongly intrenched line at Tullahoma, but evacuated it on the approach of the Union army, and retreated to Bridgeport, Ala., and thence into Northern Georgia. The Union army followed in pursuit, the Seventy-seventh with its division arriving at Bridgeport, on the Tennessee River, on the 31st of August. Crossing the river, it moved to Trenton, Ga., thence up Lookout Valley to Valley Head, then across the mountain to Broomtown Valley, on the road to Rome, Ga., but before reaching the latter place the progress of the column was arrested by the intelligence that the enemy was menacing the left of Gen. Rosecrans' army, with the evident intention of giving battle to that part of the line (which was separated from the extreme right and more than thirty miles from it) and of making a desperate attempt to reoccupy Chattanooga; and, finally, that Longstreet's corps, having been detached from the Army of Northern Virginia, was already on the south side of the Savannah River, and moving by rail with all possible speed to join Bragg's army at Lafayette, Ga. Upon receipt of this intelligence the Seventy-seventh, with its division and the other commands of the Union army, moved rapidly back over the mountain and down the valley by the same route over which the advance had been made, and again crossing the mountain lower down towards the Tennessee, entered the valley known as McLemore's Cove on the 17th of September. After some fighting at that place the Seventy-seventh, with its division, moved by way of Dug Gap, Pond Spring, and Gordon's Mills, and arrived on the field of Chickamauga on Saturday, the 19th of September, and soon afterwards became hotly engaged in the great battle which was fought there on that and the following day by the Union army under Gen. Rosecrans and the Confederate forces under Bragg, reinforced by Longstreet's corps from Virginia.

Near the close of the first day's fight at Chickamauga the regiment charged, with its brigade (Willich's), and gallantly drove the enemy in its front, but in the exultation of the moment advanced too far, and while in that exposed position, just at dark, was attacked by a heavy body of the enemy (who had been reinforced at that point). The Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania and Seventy-ninth Illinois, being in the most advanced and exposed position, fought desperately against overwhelming odds, but after a hand-to-hand struggle in the twilight gloom they were overpowered, and seventy enlisted men of the Seventy-seventh taken prisoners, as were also several of the company officers, and all the field-officers of the regiment, who remained prisoners till May 1, 1864. Many of the privates of the regiment who were captured in this fight died in the prison-pen of Andersonville.

The remnant of the regiment (those who escaped capture in the evening of the 19th) fought in the battle of the second day at Chickamauga under command of Capt. Joseph J. Lawson, of Company C. The battle resulted in defeat to the Union army, and on Saturday night (September 20th) the Seventy-seventh, with the other commands, withdrew from the field of disaster to Rossville, Ga., and from there on Monday night and the early morning of Tuesday retreated to Chattanooga.

After Chickamauga the regiment saw no more of fighting during the year 1863. In October it moved from Chattanooga, crossing the Tennessee, and marching by the "Bob White road" to Jasper, Tenn., where it arrived on the 26th. Thence, crossing the Tennessee to Shellmound, it moved up the river to Whiteside's, Ga., where it remained during the winter, and where a considerable number of the men re-enlisted as veterans, and the strength of the command was largely increased by recruits from Pennsylvania.

In the spring and summer campaign of 1864, the Seventy-seventh fought at Tunnel Hill on the 7th of May, at Rocky Face Ridge on the 8th, in several minor engagements from the 9th to the 13th, at Resaca, Dallas, Ga., at New Hope Church, at Kingston, Ga., at Kenesaw Mountain (where it lost heavily in killed and wounded), and at Peach Tree Creek, July 20th. It also fought in the subsequent actions around Atlanta, including the battles of Lovejoy's Station and Jonesboro'.

After the fall of Atlanta, when the Confederate army under Gen. Hood suddenly crossed the Chattahoochee into Alabama and marched towards Nashville, with the evident intention of assaulting and capturing that city, Gen. Sherman detached a strong force from his army at Atlanta and placed it under command of Gen. George H. Thomas, with orders to march in pursuit of Hood, give him battle, and thwart his designs. The force was composed of the Twenty-third Corps (Gen. Schofield) and Stanley's (Fourth) Corps, of which latter the Seventy-seventh was a part. The regiment arrived on the 3d of November at Pulaski, Tenn. About the 25th it moved to Columbia, where the enemy was found in heavy force and strongly posted. A severe engagement resulted, in which, on the 29th, the Seventy-seventh took a conspicuous part. During the following night the regiment moved to Franklin, Tenn., where it fought bravely in the great battle of the 30th, being at one time almost entirely surrounded by the enemy, but escaping from its exposed position by the exercise of the highest soldierly qualities. Again, in the great and decisive battle of Nashville, the Seventy-seventh took a prominent part in charging the Confederate works on the 15th of December, and on the following day exhibited still greater gallantry in attacking one of the enemy's strongest positions, moving forward under a most destructive fire of canister, capturing a battery, and driving the Confederates in its front in utter and irretrievable rout. The loss of the regiment in this battle was heavy in killed and wounded, among the former being Lieut. Alexander T. Baldwin, of Company C.

The Confederate army, completely defeated and routed at Nashville, fled southward into Alabama. Among the Union forces which pursued was the Seventy-seventh, which marched rapidly to Huntsville, Ala., but there abandoned the pursuit and remained through the succeeding winter. About the middle of March, 1865, it marched to East Tennessee, where it was joined by five new companies, one of which was the new F company, from Blair County, under command of Capt. Shock. About the last of April the regiment returned to Nashville, where it was assigned to the First Brigade, First Division, Fourth Army Corps. In June it left Nashville, and passing down the Mississippi by boat to New Orleans, went into camp at Plaine Chalmette (Gen. Jackson's old battle-ground of 1815), where it remained nearly a month; then embarked and proceeded by sea to Indianola, Texas, arriving there on the 27th of July, and immediately afterwards marching to Green Lake. Afterwards it moved to a camp near Victoria. It remained in Texas until the early part of December, 1865, when it moved to Indianola, where the men were embarked and proceeded by sea to Philadelphia. Arriving there on the 16th of January, 1866, they were duly disbanded and returned to their homes and the vocations of civil life.

Following are given lists of the officers and enlisted men of the Huntingdon and Blair County companies of the Seventy-seventh Regiment:

SEVENTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY C.

(Date of muster in Sept. 20, 1861, except where noted.)

Capt. Michael McNally, res. Nov. 24, 1862.

Capt. Joseph J. Lawson, pro. from 1st lieut. to capt. Jan. 8, 1863; to maj. June 13, 1865.

Capt. Samuel S. Gillman, pro. to corp. Feb. 23, 1862; to sergt. Dec. 1, 1862; to 1st lieut. April 10, 1865; to capt. Sept. 1, 1865; wounded at Marietta, Ga., July 4, 1864; absent, with leave, at must. out; vet.

1st Lieut. Alexander T. Baldwin, pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. Nov. 15, 1861; to 2d lieut. May 25, 1862; to 1st lieut. Jan. 8, 1863; wounded at Dallas, Ga., May 28, 1864; killed at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 16, 1864.

1st Lieut. Silas M. Cline, pro. from sergt.-maj. to 2d lieut. April 10, 1865; to 1st lieut. Sept. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

2d Lieut. Samuel T. Davis, pro. to adjt. Sept. 28, 1861.

2d Lieut. Edward B. Miller, pro. from corp. to 1st sergt. May 25, 1862; to 2d lieut. Jan. 8, 1863; dsch. by S. O. Aug. 22, 1863.

2d Lieut. John T. Baldwin, pro. to corp. March 12, 1862; to sergt. Jan. 5, 1864; to 1st sergt. April [illegible], 1865; to 2d lieut. Sept. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

1st Sergt. Daniel McNulty, pro. to corp. Aug. 10, 1862; to sergt. April 12, 1865; to 1st sergt. Sept. 1, 1865; absent, on furlough, at must. out; vet.

1st Sergt. Samuel H. Wilson, pro. from corp. to sergt. Dec. 14, 1861; to 1st sergt. Nov. 24, 1862; prisoner from Sept. 19, 1863, to Feb. 19, 1865; must. out May 20, 1865.

1st Sergt. William Bradley, pro. to corp. Sept. 4, 1862; to sergt. Dec. 31, 1862; to 1st sergt.; wounded at Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. Sept. 18, 1865; vet.

1st Sergt. David H. Gates, trans. to 44th Regt. P. V. Nov. 15, 1861.

Sergt. David Brism, must. in March 25, 1864; pro. to sergt. April 10, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Sergt. William Heidler, pro. from corp. to sergt. Nov. 28, 1862; wounded at Resaca, Ga., May 15, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Henry Wagner, wounded at Liberty Gap, Tenn., June 25, 1863; pro. to corp. Dec. 1, 1862; to sergt. Sept. 1, 1865; must out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Andrew J. Mitchell, wounded at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863; pro. to corp. April 12, 1865; to sergt. Nov. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Scott R. Crawford, died Jan. 13, 1863, of wounds received at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862.

Sergt. Philip Bear, pro. to sergt. June 30, 1862; captured Oct. 8, 1862; trans. to regular army.

Corp. A. W. Baldwin, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Corp. George W. Leidick, pro. to corp. Dec. 11, 1863; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Henry H. Long, pro. to corp. April 12, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Patrick McNulty, wounded at Dallas, Ga., May 28, 1864; pro. to corp. April 12, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Thomas McMahon, pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Augustus Riddle, pro. to corp. Dec. 11, 1863; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. John Roark, pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Ezekiel Tantlinger, pro. to corp. Sept. 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Corp. Harvey Bennett, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 10, 1862.

Corp. William Jones, pro. to corp. July 1, 1864; trans. to U. S. Engineer Corps Aug. 1, 1864; vet.

Corp. Richard Mitchell, pro. to corp. Dec. 11, 1863; to com.-sergt. April 1, 1865.

Corp. William Keith, died Jan. 10, 1863, of wounds received at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862; buried at Stone River, grave 84.

Corp. James S. Leator, died at Nashville, Tenn., June 10, 1862.

Corp. W. H. H. Woolslair, pro. to corp. Dec. 1, 1862; captured at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863; died at Andersonville Aug. 27, 1864; grave 6980.

Corp. Hugh M. Hall, pro. to corp. June 30, 1862; captured Oct. 8, 1862; enl. in regular army.

Musician John Dill, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Altman, Gustave, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; wounded at Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 13, 1865.

Arndt, John J., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.

Brehm, William, must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.

Baker, George, —— ——, absent, on detached duty, at must. out.

Brown, Emanuel, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Bray, Thomas, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Bayne, John S., must. in Feb. 4, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Bennett, Silas A., must. in March 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Barr, Jacob, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Brooks, John W., disch. on surg. certif. May 22, 1862.

Buchins, John C, disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1862.

Ball, Jacob, disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 24, 1862.

Boyer, Peter, must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.

Buchanan, James W., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.

Black, Samuel D., must. in July 23, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.

Bostwick, Albert S., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 12, 1865.

Breitenstein, Luid, trans. to 4th U. S. Art. March 19, 1864.

Beamer, Samuel, died at Louisville, Ky., March 4, 1862.
Bender, Ezra E., died at Corinth, Miss., June 19, 1862.
Bender, Flavius J., captured at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863; died at Richmond, Va., Feb. 24, 1864.
Broadbach, Thomas, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; captured at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863; died at Andersonville Nov. 27, 1864; bur. rec. Oct. 26, 1864; grave 12,177.
Barry, William, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; captured at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863; died at Andersonville July 31, 1864; grave 4404.
Boyle, Sebastian, must. in March 9, 1865; died at Camp Stanly, Texas, Sept. 22, 1865.
Bonnell, Joseph, must. in March 6, 1865.
Bell, Frederick, must. in March 20, 1865.
Coleman, James L., must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Calvert, William H , must. in Feb. 27, 1864; wounded at Franklin, Tenn.; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Cupp, Joseph, must in Feb. 25, 1864; wounded at Dallas, Ga., June 7, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Cramer, Samuel, must. in March 26, 1862; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Cooper, William D., disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 10, 1865.
Carpenter, Thomas B., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to band Nov. 1, 1861.
Crook, William H., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to band Nov. 1, 1861.
Cook, Charles C., commissioned 2d lieut.; trans. as aide-de-camp to staff of Gens. Negley and Palmer; died July, 1864, of wounds received at Atlanta, Ga.
Colbath, Albert, died at Tuscumbia, Ala., June 19, 1862.
Dixon, William, wounded at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862, at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863, and at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 16, 1864; absent at must. out; vet.
Doane, Bennett G., must. in March 13, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Drake, John, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Dougherty, George W., wounded at Liberty Gap, Tenn., June 25, 1863; must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Dorland, William H., must. out Oct. 21, 1864, expiration of term.
Doner, Abraham R., wounded at Liberty Gap, Tenn., June 25, 1863; must. out Sept. 20, 1864, expiration of term.
Dearmitt, Michael, trans. to Co. D Oct. 10, 1861.
Eberly, Gottfried, must. in March 8, 1865; died at Camp Harker, Tenn., May 3, 1865.
Fahnestock, Ephraim A., must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Flowers, Jacob, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 6, 1864.
Fulgroad, John, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 12, 1863.
Firebaugh, Jacob, died at Camp Chase, Ohio, July 16, 1862.
Finton, Isaac N., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; died in Texas, July 25, 1865.
Fitzgerald, Henry.
Garver, David B., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Goodling, Peter, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; wounded at Dallas, Ga., May 30, 1864; absent at must. out.
Grubb, Benjamin, must. in March 10, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Gettys, Samuel A., must. in Sept. 29, 1861; disch. Feb. 7, 1863, for wounds received at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862.
Gauster, William, wounded at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862; must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Gillman, John F., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.
Gilleland, D. R. P., disch. by G. O. Sept. 18, 1865; vet.
Greenawalt, H. B., wounded at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862, and Liberty Gap June 25, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Dec. 10, 1863.
Garman, Edward, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to band Nov. 1, 1861.
Gilliland, James K., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; died at Jeffersonville, Ind., Aug. 12, 1864.
Galloway, Charles, must. in March 6, 1865; died Sept. 14, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Tex.
Higgins, John, wounded at Dallas, Ga., May 28, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Hineline, Andrew, wounded at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Heidle, David, must. in March 12, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Huggins, George W., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Huggins, John L., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Holden, John S., must. in March 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Hursh, Lebbias B., must. in March 10, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Hibler, Walter, must. in March 21, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Howell, Albert J.. must. in March 15, 1865; died Nov. 28, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Tenn.
Holwager, Jacob, must. in March 9, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Hummel, Christian, must. in March 9, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Hilbish, Zachariah T., must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Heiler, James, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 10, 1862.
Hamer, George G., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Hamilton, Joseph B., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Holt, James, must. in Oct. 1, 1862; must. out Oct. 9, 1865, expiration of term.
Haas, Henry, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Ittinger, Samuel H., wounded at Lovejoy, Ga., Sept. 2, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Johnston, Jacob, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Jennings, Samuel, res. Oct. 8, 1861.
Keller, Isaac, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Kegg, Joseph, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Kopp, William G., must. in March 9, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Kreps, Henry P., wounded at Liberty, Tenn., June 25, 1863; must. out Sept. 20, 1864, expiration of term.
Kephart, Samuel, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; killed at Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 5, 1864.
Lee, Henry T., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; wounded at Dallas, Ga., May 28, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Leidick, Joseph E., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Leidick, Abraham, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Leidick, Daniel, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Lehman, Jacob, disch. Aug. 24, 1863, for wounds received at Liberty Gap, Tenn., June 25, 1863.
Long, James P., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Landgraft, Charles, must. in Aug. 15, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.
Logan, Thomas, trans. to 4th U. S. Art. March 19, 1864.
Lycum, John, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Aug. 25, 1864.
Marks, Levi, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Markel, Adam R., must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Murphy, George B., must. in March 1, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Michael, Jacob C., must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Manning, William, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 9, 1863.
Murphy, Alexander, trans. to Co. D Oct. 10, 1861.
Monroe, George W., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Monroe, A. W., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Murley, Walter, died at Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 10, 1862.
Martin, John, captured at Chickamauga Sept. 19, 1863; died at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 30, 1864, grave 7263.
Murphy, William, must. in March 1, 1865; died at Green Lake, Tex., Aug. 4, 1865.
McLimans, Thomas, must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
McLimans, Robert, must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
McLimans, Emmet, must. in March 13, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

McFarland, Charles, disch. on surg. certif. April 16, 1863; died at Annapolis, Md., April 22, 1863.
McGinley, James, must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
McKee, Isaac, captured at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 19, 1863; died at Richmond, Va., Jan. 17, 1864.
Nipple, Alexander, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Negley, Ross, disch. on surg. certif. June 24, 1862.
Nagle, Daniel, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Neaton, Patrick, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; wounded at Atlanta, Ga., July 20, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, date unknown.
Nevil, John H., must. in Sept. 20, 1861.
Nevil, Henry H., must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Orwen, Lewis W., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Patterson, John H., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Price, William P., trans. to Co. B Nov. 1, 1861.
Rosenburg, Jackson, wounded at Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863, and Lovejoy, Ga., Sept. 2, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865; vet.
Rhodes, Isaac, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Reese, David, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Raizer, Matthias, must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Rupe, George, wounded at Liberty Gap, June 25, 1863; must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Ruggles, Joseph, must. in March 12, 1862; must. out March 20, 1865, expiration of term.
Roth, Jerome, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Roulett, James, must. in Oct. 20, 1861; died at Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7, 1861.
Ritter, Samuel, must. in Oct. 20, 1861; died at Louisville, Ky., Feb. 7, 1862.
Ritter, David, must. in Oct. 20, 1861.
Stimeling, Jacob, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Shaw, Joseph, must. in March 9, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Shaw, Graham, must. in March 21, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Specher, David G., must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Schawer, Henry, must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sweigert, Jacob, must. in March 7, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Shawb, David, must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Shissler, Abraham L., must. in March 9, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Stephens, John W., must. in March 8, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Shriver, Frederick, disch. on surg. certif. March 10, 1863.
Steitler, David, must. in Feb. 22, 1862; disch. April 13, 1863, for wounds received at Stone River, Tenn., Dec. 31, 1862.
Smith, James C., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Silke, Benjamin, must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Shirk, Christian G., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Silks, George W., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Stevens, Jacob C., must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Silks, Samuel, must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Stevenson, George, trans. to Co. D Oct. 10, 1861.
Sneath, Willis, trans. to Co. D Nov. 1, 1861.
Shultz, Jacob, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Aug. 10, 1863.
Stallman, Franklin, wounded May 28, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 10, 1865.
Shade, Alfred, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Shure, Jacob D., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Shuman, William A., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Shuler, Samuel M., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Sharp, Joseph, died at Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 1, 1861.
Snyder, Jacob, must. in March 6, 1865.
Thatcher, Martin, must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Thomas, John S., must. in March 10, 1864; wounded at Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 26, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 13, 1865; disch. by G. O. Dec. 1865.
Wileman, Elmer, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Wilson, James M., must. in Feb 27, 1864; wounded at Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Wildman, James, must. in July 15, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Waduman, William W., must. in March 10, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Wilson, Joseph, disch. on surg. certif. June 24, 1862.
Watkins, Nathaniel, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 10, 1862.
Webster, William, must. out Oct. 11, 1864, expiration of term.
Wagner, Jesse, must. out Dec. 10, 1864, expiration of term.
White, Charles, must. in July 21, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.
Wirths, Matthias, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 10, 1865.
Welker, George C., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.
Zeigh, Joseph, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Zeager, Jacob, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Zeek, Emanuel, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Zeigler, Josiah, must. in March 4, 1864; wounded at Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. Sept. 25, 1865.
Zimm, William A., must. in Oct. 29, 1861; trans. to regimental band Nov. 1, 1861.

COMPANY F.

(Date of muster in Feb. 28, 1865, except where noted.)

Capt. Daniel Shock, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
First Lieut. Miles Zentmeyer, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Second Lieut. J. O. Brookbank, pro. to q.m. Oct. 15, 1865.
First Sergt. George Diehl, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sergt. D. R. P. Johnston, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sergt. James E. Davis, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sergt. Louis H. Geisler, must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sergt. George W. Miller, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Corp. D. S. Bergstresser, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out Dec. 12, 1865.
Corp. John T. Allen, must. in March 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Corp. Charles Hogle, must. in March 22, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Corp. Samuel Pressle, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Corp. Thomas C. Miller, must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Corp. George Morrison, must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Corp. Lewis Sylong, must. in March 2, 1865; died Sept. 13, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Texas.
Corp. Jer. Rickabaugh, disch. by G. O. Sept. 14, 1865.
Corp. Jacob Stine, disch. by G. O. Sept. 15, 1865.
Bookhamer, Thomas, must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Bookhamer, John, must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Berayer, Joseph S., must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Burket, David, must. in March 6, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Blackburn, Her'n, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Boyer, William, must. in March 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Boswell, William, must. in March 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Bisbing, Samuel, must. in Jan 18, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Buck, Augustus, must. in April 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

Boyer, Adam, must. in March 3, 1865.
Burket, John, must. in March 6, 1865.
Beck, Reuben, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 20, 1865.
Campbell, John, must. in Dec. 23, 1863; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Courter, John C., must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Clites, Solomon, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Conrad, Edward, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Clossin, Martin, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; died Sept. 2, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Texas.
Chamberlain, Jacob, must. in March 6, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Cooper, George W., must. in March 2, 1865.
Comb, Henry, must. in Feb. 27, 1865.
Diehl, Samuel, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Diehl, George C., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Direly, Morgan, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Direly, Martin, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Direly, George M., must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Edmiston, Isaac, must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Fisher, Daniel J., must. in March 6, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Fitzpatrick, Michael, must. in March 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Finch, Miles, must. in March 3, 1865; died Aug. 2, 1865; buried at Green Lake, Texas.
Fleck, William, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; died at Green Lake, Texas, Aug. 7, 1865.
Foreman, Michael K., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; died at Louisville, Ky., July 9, 1865.
Gordan, Henry, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Grumer, Anthony, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Gunnett, Thomas, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Greenawalt, William, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Grabill, Emanuel, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; died Sept. 10, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Texas.
Hammell, Alfred, must. in Feb. 22, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Harold, Jacob, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Hoover, Henry, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; died Nov. 26, 1864; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Texas.
Hull, Isaac W., must. in April 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Hillery, George W., must. in April 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Kaley, Matthias, must. in April 4, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Lear, Franklin, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Lingenfelter, Thad., must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Lytle, George, must. in Feb. 24, 1865.
Lytle, Isaac, must. in March 6, 1865.
Lerhart, James, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 16, 1865.
Mulholland, James C., must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Martin, Abraham B., must. in April 3, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Moore, Josiah, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 1, 1865.
Merrits, John, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; died at Green Lake, Texas, Aug. 7, 1865.
Moore, John J., must. in March 4, 1865; died Nov. 18, 1865; buried at Railroad Depot, Victoria, Texas.
McCloud, James, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
McCue, William, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
McCray, James, must. in March 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 5, 1865.
Noland, Thomas, must. in Feb. 28, 1865.
Over, Daniel, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Pringle, Daniel, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Paul, David, must. in March 1, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 1, 1865.
Phillips, James, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 23, 1865.
Raezer, Daniel S., must. in March 20, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Ritchey, George S., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 11, 1865.
Rhodes, William, must. in Feb. 28, 1865.
Sheatum, William, must. in Jan. 10, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Stevens, Josiah, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Stevens, William, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; absent, without leave, at must. out.
Stevens, Giles, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sprankle, David, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Speece, Henry, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Sprankle, Moses, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 1, 1865.
Smith, Allen D., must. in Feb. 15, 1865; died at Louisville, Ky., June 23, 1865.
Sprankle, John C., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; died at Nashville, Tenn., May 29, 1865.
Stewart, Samuel A., must. in March 2, 1865.
Smith, Henry C., must. in Feb. 28, 1865.
Tipton, Levi, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Trueman, Jacob, must. in March 3, 1865; died Sept. 16, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Texas.
Temple, Franklin, must. in March 6, 1865; died Oct. 1, 1865; buried six miles northwest of Victoria, Texas.
Valkland, Charles, must. in Jan. 18, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out.
Walter, Jacob D., must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Wright, William, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Walter, Jacob G., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Waring, Robert, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; absent, on furlough, at must. out.
Wright, William E., must. in Feb. 15, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 15, 1865.
Weaver, John J., must. in Feb. 28, 1865; died at Camp Stanley, Texas, Sept. 17, 1865.
Zimmerman, William, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Zimmerman, Samuel, must. in Feb. 27, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.
Zimmerman, Jacob, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; must. out with company Dec. 6, 1865.

CHAPTER XXIII.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

Eighty-fourth Regiment. — The Eighty-fourth Regiment of Pennsylvania was raised in the summer and fall of 1861, and organized under the following-named field-officers, viz.: Col. William G. Murray (of Hollidaysburg, Blair Co.), Lieut.-Col. Thomas C. McDowell, Maj. Walter Barrett. The rendezvous of the regiment was established at Camp Crossman, near Huntingdon (which was also, and at the same time, the rendezvous of the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment), but it was removed from this to Camp Curtin about the 1st of December following. The companies composing the regiment were recruited in the counties of Cameron, Clearfield, Columbia, Blair, Dauphin, Lycoming, and Westmoreland. Of these, Blair County furnished two full companies (A and E), and a large proportion of two other companies (C and I), the former of these two being partly raised in Westmoreland, and the latter partly in Clearfield County.

The regiment was mustered into the service on the 24th of October, 1861. On Wednesday, November 27th, it left Camp Crossman for Harrisburg, where it arrived the same night, and on the following day pitched its tents at Camp Curtin. On the 21st of December the State colors were presented to the regiment by Governor Curtin. The flag was received by the colonel, and by him placed in charge of Color-Sergeant Stokes, who, on receiving it, said, "Governor and colonel, if I don't return this flag, 'twill be because Ned Stokes will occupy five feet eight on the ground."

On Tuesday, December 31st, the regiment left Camp Curtin for Williamsport, Md., proceeding by railroad to Hagerstown, Md., whence it marched to Clear Spring, camping there on the night of January 1st. Moving forward the next morning, it arrived at Hancock at three o'clock P.M., and was quartered in the town for the night. On Friday, January 3d, it crossed the Potomac, and marched to Bath, Va., reaching there at one o'clock P.M., and on the following day had a sharp skirmish with the enemy at that place, the Eighty-fourth being supported by the Thirty-ninth Illinois, with a section of a battery and a small body of cavalry. The enemy (a part of "Stonewall" Jackson's forces) drove in the Union skirmishers at eight o'clock A.M., but was held in check until three o'clock P.M., when the Eighty-fourth and other troops were compelled to retire before the superior Confederate force, and marched by way of Sir John's Run to Hancock, crossing the river at about dark. Gen. Lander arrived at Hancock the same night, and on the following day assumed command of the troops at that place.

The enemy who had been fought at Bath followed the retreating Union troops to the Potomac, and s..lled the town from the south side of the river. The Union troops were formed in line to resist the enemy should he attempt to cross; but it was found he had no intention of doing so, his advance being merely a feint to cover his real designs against Romney, Va. Discerning this, Gen. Lander made a counter-movement, marching his regiments to Cumberland, Md., where the other troops of his command were concentrated, and where the Eighty-fourth arrived on the 12th of January. During the winter the regiment was posted successively at the railroad bridges over the North Branch and South Branch of the Potomac and at Paw Paw Tunnel. On the 28th of February it was brigaded with the Fourteenth Indiana (Col. Kimball), the Sixty-seventh Ohio (Col. Busenbinder), and Seventh Virginia (Col. Evans).

On the 2d of March, Gen. Lander died, and the command devolved on Col. Kimball. On the 5th the regiment moved to Martinsburg, Va., arriving there at midnight of the 6th. On the 11th the First, Second, and Third Brigades were ordered to Winchester, and moved towards that town, arriving at Bunker Hill in the afternoon of the same day, and reaching a point within two miles of Winchester on the night of the 12th. There the information was received that the town had been evacuated by the Confederates, and thereupon the regiment went into camp, which was named "Camp Kimball." Here Col. Kimball, who had succeeded to the command on the death of Gen. Lander, was himself succeeded by Gen. James Shields. On the 18th of March the regiment moved southward about seventeen miles, passed through Middletown, and bivouacked one mile south of the town.

On the 19th the Eighty-fourth marched southward, its advance-guard skirmishing with Ashby's cavalry, and losing slightly in wounded. That night it bivouacked one mile south of Strasburg. On the 20th it left this camp and marched back to Camp Kimball, two miles north of Winchester, which it reached before eight o'clock P.M., having marched twenty-three miles without a halt for rest. On the evening of the 22d of March it moved through Winchester southward to meet the forces of "Stonewall" Jackson, who was reported to be approaching the place. The regiment marched about four miles, and bivouacked two miles south of Winchester. On Sunday morning, March 23d, the Confederate army under Jackson, eleven thousand strong and having twenty-eight pieces of artillery, moved forward to a point near the village of Kernstown, something more than four miles south of Winchester, where at about eleven o'clock A.M. they attacked Gen. Shields' advance brigade, which retired in good order towards the main body. The Eighty-fourth stood in line supporting a battery. The enemy moved up rapidly with infantry and artillery, advancing through a piece of woods on the right. The Eighty-fourth being ordered to charge moved quickly forward from the high land on the Kernstown road across open ground and entirely without cover to the place where the enemy held a strong position behind a stone wall and partially covered by woods. From this position a most destructive fire was poured in at close range upon the advancing column, but the Eighty-fourth moved forward unflinchingly through the leaden storm. Col. Murray's horse was wounded under him, and he dismounted and marched on foot at the head of his men, but a few minutes later he fell with a rifle-ball in his brain. After the loss of Col. Murray the regiment partially gave way and fell into some disorder, but rallied under command of Capt. George Zinn and held its ground. The enemy was forced from his position, and finally retreated in disorder.

Gen. Shields, in his official report of this battle, said that the Confederate forces, though strongly posted behind a high and solid stone wall situated on an elevated ground, "were forced back through the woods by a fire as destructive as ever fell upon a retreating foe. Jackson, with his supposed invincible 'Stonewall Brigade' and the accompanying brigades, much to their mortification and discomfiture, were compelled to fall back in disorder upon their reserve. There they took up a position for a final stand, and made an attempt for a few minutes to retrieve the fortunes of the day, but again there rained down upon them the same close and destructive fire. A few minutes only did they stand up against it, when they turned dismayed and fled in disorder, leaving us in possession of the field, their killed and wounded, three hundred prisoners, two guns, four caissons, and a thousand stand of small-arms. Night alone saved them from total destruction."

The Eighty-fourth, which went into the battle with only about two hundred and sixty fighting men, lost ninety in killed and wounded. Among the killed were Lieut. Charles Reim, of A company; Capt. Gallaher, of E company; and (as already mentioned) the commanding officer of the regiment, Col. Murray, of whose life, services, and death the following sketch is found in "Martial Deeds of Pennsylvania," viz.:

WILLIAM GRAY MURRAY, colonel of the Eighty-fourth Regiment, was born on the 25th day of July, 1825, in the town of Langford, Ireland. He was the eldest son of John and Sarah (Gray) Murray. When but nine months old his parents with their children emigrated to New York, where the father engaged in business. He soon after removed to the interior of the State, and subsequently to Lancaster, and then to Harrisburg, Pa., engaging in active business, and died in 1844.

The son, William Gray, being intended for mercantile life, received a good education in those branches best calculated to be useful to him. On leaving school he entered his father's store, but, that he might have the best advantages which could be afforded, he was placed in a large mercantile house in the city of New York, where he remained until the spring of 1845. On coming to his majority in the following year he had perfected arrangements for entering business on his own account, when the Mexican war broke out and he volunteered as a private in the Cameron Guards. He was made a sergeant, and while serving in that capacity at Vera Cruz was appointed a second lieutenant in the Eleventh United States Infantry by President Polk and served with distinction through that war, and upon returning to private life settled in Hollidaysburg. He was energetic in business, as he had been in the army, and bore a conspicuous part in the political struggles of the time. In 1851 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Dougherty, by whom he had three children, two of whom survive him. In 1852 he was appointed postmaster of Hollidaysburg by President Pierce, and was reappointed by President Buchanan.

At the outbreak of the Rebellion he took strong grounds with the Union side and avowed his intention of entering the army. A captain's commission in the regular service was tendered him, but his wife being in the last stages of consumption he declined it. Having had much experience in recruiting and organizing troops his counsel was sought, and his services were invaluable in enlisting and pushing forward recruits for the volunteer force. His wife died in August, 1861. A short time afterwards he received authority from Governor Curtin to recruit a regiment of infantry, and, obedient to the promptings of duty, he at once set about the work.

On the 19th of December, 1861, his regiment, the Eighty-fourth, marched from camp and was drawn up before the capitol to receive its flag. Governor Curtin, in presenting it, referred to Col. Murray as a tried soldier, and to the men as actuated by the purest and loftiest patriotism, leaving wives, mothers, and children, and the endearments of home to maintain the laws and the Constitution with the sword. In response Col. Murray said, "I accept this beautiful standard, presented by the Legislature of the Keystone State through you, its honored chief magistrate, in such glowing and eloquent terms. As the period for speech-making has passed and the hour for energetic action has arrived, my remarks on this occasion shall be brief, as becomes a soldier. In accepting this flag on behalf of the regiment, I do it with the full consciousness of the relations which both officers and men bear to our noble State and the nation whose cause we have espoused. Permit me to thank you, sir, for the terms of commendation in which you have been pleased to speak of the Eighty-fourth and of my humble self, and to assure you that, whatever our fate may be in the future, we will endeavor, by good conduct and a strict discharge of our duties, to make such a record as will bring no dishonor upon the 'Stars and Stripes' which we go to maintain and defend, or the proud Commonwealth whose sons we deem it an honor to call ourselves.

"No shrewish tears shall fill our eyes
When the sword hilt's in our hand;
Heart-whole we'll part, and not a sigh
For the fairest in the land.
Let piping swain and craven wight
Thus weep and puling cry,
Our business is like men to fight,
And hero-like to die."

The active campaigning of the regiment commenced on the 1st of January, 1862, when it was led by Col. Murray to Bath, Va., to the relief of the Thirty-ninth Illinois and a section of artillery, commanded by Lieut. Muhlenberg, crossing the Potomac at Hancock, Md. The opposing force greatly outnumbered them, being estimated at from sixteen to twenty thousand men. After twenty-four hours of irregular skirmishing, the Union force succeeded in withdrawing across the river and bringing off the guns.

In the battle of Winchester, Va., the Eighty-fourth, which from the hard service to which it had been subjected had been reduced to barely three hundred men, was selected to lead in the assault upon the enemy's batteries, which were securely posted and were particularly destructive. The ground was open which they had to cross, and repeated charges were made, which Col. Murray led with great gallantry, officers and men falling on every side, strewing the ground with the dead and the dying. In the midst of the struggle his horse was shot under him. Extricating himself, he renewed the charge on foot. A little later his cap-cover was shot from his head. The carnage was now terrible, the enemy screening themselves behind a stone wall and a curtain of wood. But, nothing daunted, Col. Murray led on his regiment, and just as it was entering the grove which crowned the summit, while rushing on, with sword in hand, and exclaiming, "Charge, boys! charge!" he was struck by a rifle-ball, which, crashing through the bugle of his cap, carrying away the figures "84" with it, passed through his brain, tearing away the top of his skull. But though fallen, his heroism was not without its reward, for the stronghold in carrying which he had sacrificed his life was taken and the victory gained. His body was received in Harrisburg with imposing ceremonies, the Governor, heads of departments, the two houses of the Legislature, and military and civic societies moving in the sad procession. The body lay in state at the residence of his mother, and was viewed by great numbers. From the capital it was taken to Hollidaysburg, where even more universal sorrow was manifested and tokens of respect were shown. At the residence of his father-in-law, John Dougherty, Esq., thousands of sorrowing friends and relatives gathered, eager to take a last look at the fallen soldier. At St. Mary's Church high mass was celebrated, and a most touching and eloquent discourse was delivered over the remains by the Rev. John Walsh. He was finally laid to rest beside his wife, whom he had but a few months before followed to the grave.

Col. Murray was a man of large, active benevolence, warm and ardent in his impulses, though singularly calm and equable, and energetic and untiring in the path of duty. In person he was six feet in height, with a large and muscular frame. He was of light complexion, brown hair, eyes of a bright gray and expressive, features prominent, movements quick, and to courage of the highest order was united a strong sense of religious responsibility.

On the 25th of March the Eighty-fourth left its camp south of Winchester and moved ten miles to the little village of Berryville, Va., and remained there as provost-guard of the town until the 2d of May, when it moved up the valley, passing through Front Royal, and crossing the Blue Ridge marched eastward to the Rappahannock, and down the valley of that stream to Fredericksburg, where it became a part of the Fourth Brigade of Shields' division of McDowell's (First) corps. Soon afterwards, however, it was ordered back to the Shenandoah Valley to the support of Gens. Banks and Fremont. It arrived at Front Royal May 30th. From that place it moved to Port Republic, reaching there June 8th, and on the 9th took part in a severe engagement with the enemy, the Fourth Brigade being in the advance. The Confederates in strong force made a desperate and partially successful effort to turn the Union left and come in on its rear, when the Third Brigade came up to the aid of the Fourth, checked the enemy's advance, and he was driven a short distance, but being again heavily reinforced at that point, the Eighty-fourth and other regiments composing the Union force were compelled to retreat, but did so steadily and in good order, though with quite heavy loss. The enemy closely followed up his advantage, and pursued the Third and Fourth Brigades until they reached the place where the First and Second Brigades stood firmly in line. There the retreat was stayed and the battle ended, the Confederates giving up the pursuit and retiring from the field, and the Union forces soon after falling back to Port Republic.

From Port Republic the Eighty-fourth again moved eastward to the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., and went into camp at Cloud's Mills, where Col. Samuel M. Bowman became its commanding officer, and where the regiment, with the Third and Fourth Brigades, remained until the early part of July, when it again took the field with the army of Gen. John Pope, it being then a part of Ricketts' division of McDowell's corps. Moving to the vicinity of Warrenton, Va., it remained there till the last part of the month, then moved towards Culpeper Court-House, near which place the battle of Cedar Mountain was fought on the 9th of August.

On the 14th of August, Gen. Pope advanced to the Rapidan, and remained on that line a few days, then commenced falling back towards Washington, the enemy pursuing and constantly threatening his right and rear. On the 28th, at Thoroughfare Gap, Ricketts' division (which included the Eighty-fourth) fought the entire Confederate corps of Gen. Longstreet, who was attempting to force the pass and join "Stonewall" Jackson's forces at Manassas Junction. The division fought until night, then fell back to Bull Run, where the Eighty-fourth, with its brigade, fought all day in the disastrous conflict of the 30th, known as the Second Bull Run battle. The position of the brigade was first on the right and afterwards on the left of the line. It was very heavily engaged during the afternoon, and remained on the field until after dark, at which time it occupied an extremely exposed position far in advance of the other troops, and was in imminent danger of being cut off by a Confederate division, but finally succeeded, though with great difficulty, in withdrawing from the field and crossing Bull Run in safety. The Eighty-fourth moved that night to Centreville, and from there on the following day to the defenses of Washington.

During the succeeding campaign of South Mountain and Antietam the regiment and its brigade (then forming a part of Gen. Whipple's division) remained at Arlington, where the strength of the Eighty-fourth (which after the battle of August 30th had been reduced to less than eighty men) was largely increased by accessions of recruits and the return of convalescents. In October it joined the Army of the Potomac, being made a part of Gen. Franklin's grand division, with which it took gallant part in the great battle of Fredericksburg, losing heavily in killed and wounded, and receiving complimentary mention for its bravery and steadiness from Gen. Carroll in his official report of the operations of the 12th and 13th of December.

After the battle of Fredericksburg the Eighty-fourth with its brigade recrossed the Rappahannock and returned to camp at Stoneman's Switch, where (excepting a few days spent on Gen. Burnside's famous but fruitless "Mud March" in January) it remained during the winter of 1862–63. On the opening of the spring campaign the regiment moved with the army across the Rappahannock and marched to Chancellorsville, where it was hotly engaged in the great battle at that place on the 2d and 3d of May, and remained under a heavy fire during the conflict of the 4th.

The division of which the Eighty-fourth was a part having been greatly reduced in numbers by the casualties of the campaign of Chancellorsville, and its commander (Gen. Whipple) having been killed in the battle, was disintegrated and its regiments assigned to other commands, the Eighty-fourth being placed in Carr's brigade, in the Second Corps. The regiment took no part in the battle of Gettysburg, being posted at that time at Westminster, Md., as a guard to the trains of the Second Corps. After the retreat of Gen. Lee from Gettysburg it crossed the Potomac into Virginia, where, during the remainder of the season of 1863, it fought at Wapping Heights, July 23d and 24th; at Thoroughfare Gap, October 10th; at Bristoe's Station, October 14th and 19th; at Kelly's Ford, November 7th; at Locust Grove Church, November 28th; at Mine Run, November 30th, and in several minor engagements, but suffering only a light loss in killed and wounded. After the close of the Mine Run campaign the regiment went into winter-quarters near Brandy Station, Va., where a large number of its men re-enlisted for the war and received the usual "veteran furlough."

On the opening of the spring campaign of 1864 the Eighty-fourth moved with the army across the Rapidan, passing that river at Germania Ford on the 4th of May and entering the Virginia Wilderness, where it was actively engaged in the battles of the 5th and 6th, suffering in the latter a heavy loss, among which was that of Lieut.-Col. Opp mortally wounded. Again on the 10th it was engaged at Pamunkey River, and on the 12th joined in the most desperate charge which was made in the Wilderness campaign, the assault on the strong works of the enemy at Spottsylvania Court-House. In the battle and victory of that day the Eighty-fourth took a prominent part, and gave active assistance in the capture of a large number of Confederate prisoners. From the 14th to the 23d it was constantly on the march or in line of battle under fire. On the 23d it fought at North Anna River, charging and carrying the enemy's works. On the 30th it was all day under fire in the battle at Tolopotomy. On the 31st it fought at Pleasant Hill, and again at the same place on the 1st of June, when Lieut. Nixon, of I company, was among the wounded.

From Cold Harbor the army crossed the Chickahominy and marched towards the southeast, having Petersburg for its objective-point. The Eighty-fourth with its brigade crossed the James River on the 14th of June, and on the 16th took part in a general assault on the bristling lines of the enemy in front of Petersburg. The Second Corps renewed the attack on the 17th, and forced the enemy to yield some of his outer works. On the 27th of July the regiment fought at Deep Bottom, and again at the same place, and near Charles City Cross-Roads, on the 14th of August. On the 1st of October it took part in an assault on the Confederate lines, in which action it was repulsed with severe loss, Lieut.-Col. Zinn being among the seriously wounded. During the month of December, 1864, the men originally enlisted in the Eighty-fourth were mustered out of service, excepting those who had re-enlisted as veterans, who with the recruits of the regiment were organized into a battalion of four companies. This battalion fought at Weldon Railroad October 27th, and again at the same place on the 9th of December. On the 13th of January, 1865, the battalion was consolidated with the Fifty-seventh Pennsylvania Regiment under Col. Zinn, previously lieutenant-colonel of the Eighty-fourth. The Fifty-seventh was mustered out of service on the 29th of June, 1865, having served honorably through the campaign which was ended by the surrender of the Confederate army by Gen. Lee at Appomattox Court-House.

Following is a list of officers and men of the four companies which were entirely or partially raised in Blair County, viz.:

EIGHTY-FOURTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY A.

(Company A mustered out Dec. 12, 1864.)

Capt. Robert L. Horrell, res. July 24, 1862.

Capt. Jonathan Derno, pro. from 1st Lieut. July 24, 1862; res. Oct. 15, 1862.

Second Lieut. Charles Reem, killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862, Sergt. James G. Shannon, disch. Feb. 20, 1863.

Sergt. Joseph Delehunt, pro. to 2d lieut. March 23, 1862; to capt. Oct. 15, 1862.
Sergt. Joseph W. Dougherty, pro. to 2d lieut. Oct. 15, 1862; to 1st lieut. Feb. 25, 1863; vet. Jan. 1, 1864.
Sergt. Simeon B. Barr, trans. to Invalid Corps Aug. 15, 1863.
Corp. James Barr, trans. to Invalid Corps Oct. 1, 1863.
—— Lambright, prisoner at Chancellorsville May 3, 1863.
Albert, Francis, prisoner Oct. 13, 1863.
Bunker, Henry L., must. in Dec. 5, 1861; wounded at Tolopotomy May 31, 1864; must. out with company Dec. 12, 1864.
Bowers, Cornelius D., wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Benton, David H., trans. to Invalid Corps Aug. 15, 1863.
Bullers, William H., disch. March 29, 1863.
Burk, Samuel, died Feb. 22, 1863.
Beamenderfer, Cyrus W., vet. Jan. 1, 1864.
Carl, Anthony, killed at Port Republic.
Cruse (add), disch. Feb. 11, 1863.
Case, Reuben, disch. Nov. 30, 1862.
Cruse, Lewis, corp. Oct. 15, 1862; must. out with company.
Dougherty, George A., disch. Oct. 2, 1862.
Dannals, William S., must. out with company.
Davis, William A., wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; disch. Aug. 13, 1862.
Evans, Frank, must. out with company.
Fether, Josiah, disch. Jan. 24, 1862.
Frank, Adam, disch. July 11, 1862.
Fry, Michael, disch. Oct. 6, 1862.
Ferry, Joseph, must. out with company.
Gern, Charles, disch. Sept. 24, 1862.
Garrison, Thomas, must. out with company.
Gilroy, Patrick, disch. July 24, 1862.
Galloway, Joseph, disch. Oct. 14, 1862.
Grimes, Henry, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; vet. Jan. 1, 1864.
Grimes, Jacob, disch. Nov. 3, 1862.
Halpin, James, disch. Aug. 15, 1862.
Harbaugh, Jason, must. out with company.
Hemler, Joseph, must. out with company.
Hileman, William K., sergt. May 3, 1863; must. out with company.
Hertzler, Abraham, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; trans. to Invalid Corps.
James, Jesse T., died Sept. 23, 1863.
Kripple, John A., disch. Feb. 13, 1863.
Lane, David M., must. out with company.
Lowe, William H., prisoner at Port Republic; disch. Oct. 2, 1863.
Lewis, John I.
Murray, Jacob, disch. Dec. 24, 1862.
Maughermer, Sol. D., must. out with company.
Mock, Josiah D., disch. Oct. 6, 1862.
Mussavens, George, trans. to Invalid Corps Aug. 15, 1863.
McGlue, William, wounded at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862; disch. March 12, 1863.
McDonald, D., 1st sergt. Feb. 25, 1863.
McCullough, Michael, disch. Jan. 7, 1863.
McDonough, John T., trans. to Invalid Corps Aug. 15, 1863.
McIntire, Eli, corp. Feb. 25, 1863.
McGrain, John, killed at Locust Grove, Va.
McCarty, Morrison, 1st lieut. Oct. 15, 1862; res. Feb. 25, 1863.
More, Joseph H., 1st sergt. Oct. 15, 1862; vet.
Mason, Robert L., killed at Winchester, Va.
erson, William A., wounded at Chancellorsville; trans. to Invalid Corps Jan. 1, 1864.
Piper, Thomas F., disch. Aug. 26, 1862.
Piper, Silas W., 1st sergt. Nov. 1, 1862; 2d lieut. Feb. 25, 1863; must. out with company.
Pickel, Lewis, must. out with company.
Pickel, Robert, must. out with company.
Pickel, Henry, must. out with company.
Roseleab, William, must. out with company.
Smith, John B., wounded at Cedar Mountain; trans. to Invalid Corps.
Spade, George, disch. Dec. 30, 1862.
Scott, David, disch. Nov. 10, 1862.
Thompson, Thomas, disch. Oct. 30, 1862.
Trainer, John, Jan. 1, 1864; vet.
Teeters, John, wounded at Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862; disch. March 29, 1863.
Zell, Walker, trans. to Invalid Corps Aug. 15, 1863.
Waters, John H., trans. to Invalid Corps Aug. 15, 1863.
Wear, John M., must. out with company.
Wear, Emanuel, disch. Dec. 10, 1862.
Widensall, Jacob, sergt. Aug. 15, 1863; vet.
Wighaman, John, appointed principal musician Nov. 1, 1863; vet.; disch. Jan. 12, 1865.
Wilson, Henry R., prisoner at second Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862; corp. Aug. 15, 1863; must. out with company.
Wilie, William.
Wise, Jacob, wounded at second Bull Run; disch. Dec. 27, 1862.
White, Silas, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
White, Edward, disch. Feb. 13, 1863.
Young, Charles, trans. to Co. F.
Zimmerman, John, disch. Oct. 14, 1862.
Zimmerman, William, must. out with company.

Company C.

(Date of muster in Sept. 16, 1862, except where noted.)

Capt. Abram J. Crissman, must. in Sept. 5, 1861; res. July 15, 1862.
Capt. B. M. Morron, must. in Sept. 5, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. July 15, 1862; res. Sept. 29, 1862.
Capt. William Logan, disch. Aug. 28, 1863.
Capt. James J. Wirsing, must. in Sept. 16, 1861; pro. from 2d to 1st lieut. Jan. 12, 1863; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; pro. to capt. Nov. 16, 1863; disch. Jan. 3, 1865.
First Lieut. Archibald Douglass, must. in Sept. 16, 1861; res. Jan. 11, 1863.
First Lieut. Charles Mummey, must. in Dec. 4, 1861; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; pro. from 1st sergt. Dec. 11, 1863; disch. March 24, 1864.
Second Lieut. Charles O'Neil, must. in Dec. 18, 1861; res. April 30, 1862.
Second Lieut. William M. Gwinn, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; pro. from sergt.-maj. April 23, 1862; res. Sept. 19, 1862.
Second Lieut. William Hays, pro. from 1st sergt. Jan. 13, 1863; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; disch. Aug. 27, 1863.
Second Lieut. Joseph McMaster, pro. to 2d lieut. July 21, 1864; disch. March 6, 1865.
Sergt. Robert R. Roberts. Sergt. Matthew Campbell.
Sergt. Charles McClune. Sergt. Harrison Hines.
Corp. Eli Johnston, trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Corp. John Felgar.
Corp. John Stum, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Corp. Jeremiah Wirsing.
Corp. Joseph Hood.
Corp. Moses Clark, captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Corp. John Douglass, trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Corp. Peter J. Kesler, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. July 7, 1865.
Musician Austin Ringler.
Musician John Cramer, trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Aukney, Norman, trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Ayres, John.
Albert, John A.
Akers, William C., must. in Dec. 5, 1861; died; buried in Wilderness burial grounds, Va.; vet.
Brougher, Aaron.
Binkey, Jacob, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Baldwin, Josiah, trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Barron, Jacob D., wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Bechtel, John.
Bullard, Owen, died at Hancock, Md., Jan. 5, 1862.
Bonner, Henry W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. A; vet.
Blumroder, William. Bair, John.
Boose, Isaac. Bowers, C. D.
Beissert, Herman, captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Berkstresser, John.
Berry, John.
Bales, Adam.
Boyles, Dennis, must. in Aug. 6, 1864; substitute.
Cookensberg, Fred., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Campbell, William, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Campbell, Isaiah, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.

Campbell, John E., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Curry, Charles W., disch. for wounds received at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Cruse, Lewis.
Cruse, Michael.
Curry, Constantine.
Collins, Michael.
Crothers, William.
Clark, John.
Campbell, John T.
Camerer, Daniel.
Camerer, John, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Carroll, Thomas.
Cornmesser, Charles, died at Davidsburg, Pa.
Douglass, Reed A., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Duffey, Michael.
Fry, Michael, Sr., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Fry, Michael, Jr., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Freeman, George S., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Flegal, Summerfield.
Geisy, John, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Grimes, John.
Grimes, Henry.
Grimes, Jacob.
Hoffer, Jesse, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. July 14, 1865.
Harman, Eli, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Hays, George, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Hays, Clement H., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Hoffer, Jeremiah, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Hines, John, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Hoffer, George, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Hoffer, Samuel, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Hileman, William C., must. in 1861; died of wounds received at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Hileman, William K., must. in 1861.
Hertzler, Abraham, must. in 1861; disch. for wounds received at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Johnston, John, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Johnston, Jacob, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Johnston, Uriah, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Jennings, John.
Johnston, Isaac.
Kesler, James, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Konkle, Samuel, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Kuhns, Daniel, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. June 30, 1865.
Knox, Henry, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Knox, Jacob M., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Kissel, George, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Keech, Leco, killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, lot 10.
Kinney, Terrence.
Long, Thomas.
Kephart, David A.
Lever, John.
Lahey, Thomas.
Moore, Josiah A., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V.
Miller, George A., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Moore, Robert C., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Montacue, Edward, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Miller, William S., must in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Miller, Martin, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Minl, Adam, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Miller, Noah, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan 13, 1865.
Miller, Daniel M., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; died Dec. 9, 1862; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
Martheny, James, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Moody, Marshall, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Mickey, John S., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Mathews, John, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; died Dec. 23, 1862; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
Murphy, John.
Mason, Robert.
Morningstar, Peter, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865; vet.
Musans, George.
Mort, Adam.
Miller, Mahlon B.
Myers, James, killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Moore, Joseph H., must. in Dec., 1861; trans. to Co. A.
McIlvaine, Robert, must. in Aug. 22, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
McGraw, John.
McCoy, Patrick.
McGirr, James.
McKinney, John W.
McCartney, Morr'n.
Nedow, Henry, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Nickles, Edward, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Noel, Charles.
Osborne, William.
Pane, William S., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Padan, William J., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Pickel, Lewis.
Pickel, Henry, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. A; vet.
Pickel, Robert.
Queer, William, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Reese, George B., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Roadman, Perry H., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Richards, Thomas, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Rodkey, William.
Reed, Lewis S.
Rick, Felix.
Rinard, Jacob.
Smith, Henry H., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Stum, Henry, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; died July 20, 1863; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
Shawley, Paul, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Shawley, Jonathan, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Shawley, Conrad, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Shultz, John L., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Showman, Joseph, must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Satterfield, Herman.
Stalman, David.
Scott, David.
Shoup, Nathaniel.
Shreder, John W.
Spidel, Jacob.
Teeter, Samuel.
Teeter, John.
Taylor, Robert.
Trainor, John, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; trans. to Co. A; vet.
Templeton, Roland.
Thomas, Wilkin A.
White, John W., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Wissinger, William G., must. in Sept. 16, 1862.
Wissinger, Harrison, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Walters, Edward, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. E.
Waight, Aaron, killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Wilson, Henry R.
Wise, Jacob.
Whittaker, William.
White, Edward.
White, James.
White, Silas.
Wimer, William R.
Wingate, J. Russell, must. in Dec. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. D.
Young, Martin, disch. for wounds received in action.

Company E.

Capt. Patrick Gallagher, must. in Sept. 5, 1861; killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Capt. Patrick F. Walsh, must. in Sept. 5, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. March 23, 1862; res. Oct. 15, 1862.

Capt. Alexander Dobbins, must. in Aug. 12, 1862; pro. from private Oct. 15, 1862; res. May 23, 1863.

Capt. Albert A. Steinman, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. Jan. 1, 1862, to 2d lieut. March 23, 1862, to 1st lieut. Aug. 2, 1862, to capt. Nov. 2, 1863; wounded and captured May 3, 1863; res. Dec. 23, 1863.

Capt. Robert Johnson, must. in 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Aug. 12, 1862, to 1st lieut. Nov. 2, 1863, to capt. Jan. 1, 1864; must out Dec. 6, 1864.

1st Lieut. Alex. H. Taylor, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; pro. from corp. to sergt. March 23, 1862, to 2d lieut. May 23, 1863, to 1st lieut. Jan. 2, 1864; must. out Dec. 6, 1864, expiration of term.

2d Lieut. John Maloney, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; res. March 18, 1862.

2d Lieut. John C. Wolf, must. in 1861; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1864; must. out Dec. 6, 1864, expiration of term.

1st Sergt. Darsey B. Houck, must. in 1861; pro. from sergt. March 23, 1862.

Sergt. Henry W. Moyer, must. in 1861.

Sergt. Hugh Smith, must. in 1861; pro. from corp. Jan. 1, 1862.

Sergt. Philip Smith, must. in 1861.

Corp. William Curtis, must. in 1861; pro. to corp. April 15, 1862.

Corp. James Gallaher, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; pro. to corp. Feb. 16, 1862; trans. to Co. A; vet.

Corp. Joseph Ledger, must. in 1861; pro. to corp. Jan. 4, 1862.

Corp. George W. Lower, must. in 1861; pro. to corp. April 1, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865; vet.

Musician Gemmel Baker, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. I Feb. 17, 1862.

Musician Stephen Holoran, must. in 1861.

Musician James C. Roller, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. A.

Aurandt, Alfred, must. in 1861; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865; vet.

Aeble, James B, must. in Dec 24, 1861; trans. to Co. A Dec. 1861.

Abt, Joseph, must. in Dec. 1861; trans. to Co. I Feb. 17, 1862.

Austin, Ashnel, must. in Dec. 1861.

Ake, Samuel V. B., wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Black, Daniel, must. in 1871; died at Point Lookout, Md., Dec 21, 1862.

Benton, Miles, must. in 1861.

Bacon, Daniel, must. in 1861; vet.

Baker, John D., must. in 1861.

Bears, Reuben, must. in 1861.

Brubaker, Emanuel, must. in 1861; died of wounds received at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.

Barr, Silas J., must. in 1861.

Burgett, Elias, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., June 13, 1865.

Briner, James, captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; died at Alexandria, Dec. 14, 1864; grave 2928.

Cain, John, must. in 1861.

Cassidy, Christopher, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. I Feb. 17, 1862.

Craig, John, must. in 1861.

Conrad, Robert A., must. in 1861.

Colburt, James, must. in 1861.

Clevenger, Jonathan J., must. in March 25, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Cramer, Jacob, must. in March 9, 1864; died at Annapolis, Md., March 16, 1865.

Downig, James, must. in 1861.

Devore, Samuel B., must. in 1861.

Devore, Daniel, must. in 1861.

Fann, John, Sr., must. in 1861.

ns, Thomas, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Loerhart, Jacob M., must. in 1861.

Estep, Henry E., captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Enders, Joseph, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. A; vet.

Enders, Michael, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Estep, David, must. in Sept. 2 1862; captured; died at Salisbury, N. C., Dec. 6, 1864.

Estep, Elijah, must. in Sept 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Friel, Hugh, must. in 1861; tured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Funk, Alexander, must. in 1 trans. to Co. I Feb. 17, 1862.

Flemmey, Stephen, must. in ; lisch. on surg. certif. June 3, 1862.

Ford, Patrick, must. in 1861.

Fry, John C., must. in Dec. 5, 1861; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Flanegan, George A., must. in April 8, 1864; captured; died at Salisbury, N. C., Oct. 29, 1864.

Gorman, Thomas, must. in 1861.

Galloway, John, must. in 1861.

Gallaher, William, must. in 1861.

Gates, Jeremiah, must. in 1861; killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.

Gates, F. N., must. in 1861.

Gates, William H., must. in 1861.

Glass, John, must. in March 30, 1864; died at Carlisle, Pa., April 7, 1864.

Hancuff, Thomas W., must. in 1861; killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.

Harkins, Patrick P., must. in 1861.

Hurley, William, must. in April 5, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Hale, Samuel, must. in March 27, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Johnston, James, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Kelly, John, must. in 1861; killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.

Kelly, George W., must. in 1861.

Kelly, James W., must. in 1861.

Kinsel, William H., must. in 1861.

King, James, must. in Dec. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. D Dec. 1861.

King, Daniel, must. in April 12, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Kelly, Henry F., must. in May 30, 1864.

Kelly, William D., must. in May 30, 1864.

Lynch, Robert, must. in Dec. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. D Dec. 1861.

Lissick, Samuel, must. in Nov. 2, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., June 13, 1865.

Lias, James M., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., June 13, 1865.

Lucas, Daniel, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Mock, William H., must. in 1861.

Miller, Henry, must. in 1861.

Morrison, John, must. in Dec. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. D Dec. 1861.

Murray, Ferdinand, must. in Dec. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. D Dec. 1861.

Miller, James, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Miller, Jacob W., must. in April 12, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Morris, James, must. in March 30, 1864; died; buried in Wilderness burial-grounds, Va.

McElwell, William, must. in 1861; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

McDermott, Charles, must. in 1861.

McCloskey, Henry, must. in 1861.

McManus, James, must. in 1861.

McIntyre, Henry, must. in 1861.

McDermott, C. B., must. in 1861.

McLaughlin, Henry, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865; vet.

McGonigle, Julius C., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Nixon, Alban H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. I. Feb. 17, 1862.

Nunemaker, James, wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Nash, Adam, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Nash, Samuel, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Newhouse, William, must. in March 30, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Orth, John, must. in Dec. 26, 1861.

Obenour, Theobold, died at Alexandria, July 2d, of wounds recd. at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; grave 874.

Painter, William, must. in 1861.

Peight, Joseph, must. in 1861.

Pierce, William S., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Patterson, Andrew J., must. in 1861.

Potter, William M., died of wounds recd. at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Patterson, Robert G., disch. by special order.

Parks, George W., must. in March 25, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Rumbarger, Benjamin, must. in 1861.
Rockwell, Milton, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; trans. to Co. A; vet.
Richards, Charles W., must. in Dec. 5, 1861; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Retzer, Joseph, must. in 1861.
Rodkey, James.
Rhule, James, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Stewart, William C., must. in 18[illegible]; captured; died at Salisbury, N. C., Oct. 24, 1864.
Sanders, John A., must. in Dec. [illegible], 1861; trans. to Co. D December, 1861.
Sharp, William, must. in 1861.
Spidel, Joseph, must in 1861.
Snare, Henry H., must. in Dec. 5, 1861; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. A.
Stewart, David A, must. in Sept. 30, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Schreck, Jacob, captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Shafer, John, must. in March 25, 1864; captured; died at Andersonville, Ga., July 26, 1864; grave 4009.
Shafer, Jacob, must. in March 25, 1864; died at City Point, Va., Jan. 17, 1865.
Smith, Theodore, must. in May 30, 1864.
Tasker, Eli, must. in 1861.
Tetwiler, Andrew, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. A.
Temple, James, must. in 1861.
Taylor, William, must. in 1861; captured at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862; killed at Chancellorsville May 3, 1863.
Tetwiler, Joseph, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Tetwiler, Anthony, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Vincent, George W., wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Vansickle, John W., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; died April 1, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Culpeper Court-House, Va., block 1, section A, row 6, grave 188.
Warsing, James, must. in 1861.
White, Charles, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. I Feb. 17, 1862.
Wilson, John F., must. in 1861.
Wittier, Jacob M., must. in 1861.
Weaver, Maurice, must. in 1861.
Walters, Edward, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.

Company I.

Capt. Joseph L. Curby, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; res. Sept. 10, 1862.
Capt. John H. Comfort, must. in Nov. 17, 1862; res. Nov. 24, 1862.
Capt. Arthur C. Gilbert, must. in June 5, 1862; pro. from sergt. Co. H. to 1st lieut. Oct. 1, 1862, to capt.; res. April 15, 1863.
Capt. John R. Ross, must. in Nov. 15, 1862; pro. from 1st lieut. May 1, 1863; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; pro. to brevet maj. April 9, 1865; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
First Lieut. Isaac Hooper, must. in Sept. 16, 1861; res. Feb. 14, 1862.
First Lieut. Clarence L. Barrett, must. in Feb. 1, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. Feb. 15, 1862; res. Aug. 2, 1862.
First Lieut. John B. Ferguson, must. in 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Feb. 25, 186[illegible], to 1st lieut.; res. Nov. 15, 1862.
First Lieut. George S. Good, must. in Nov. 17, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. May 1, 1863; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; captured at Mine Run Nov. 30, 1863; disch. Dec. 31, 1864.
Second Lieut. John W. Paulley, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; res. Jan. 31, 1862.
Second Lieut. Alban H. Nixon, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from sergt. to 2d lieut. March 3, 1862, to 1st lieut. Co. K Jan. 18, 1863.
First Sergt. Hiram F. Willis, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; pro. to 1st sergt.; com. 2d lieut. May 1, 1863; not must.; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; disch. to accept com. in Vet. Res. Corps.
Sergt. Thomas Gouldsberry, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Sergt. A. G. Jamison, must. in 1861.
Sergt. Wm. Clouser, must. in 1861.
Sergt. Wm. W. Albach, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Corp. Johnson Cassidy, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Corp. James Gorman, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Corp. Ellis Hart, must. in 1861; disch.
Corp. Robert Jamison, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Corp. Isaac Manes, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Corp. Alexander Reed, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Corp. Joseph Repetto, must. in 1861.
Corp. Charles White, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Musician Simon C. Whitmer, must. in 1861.
Adams, Thomas, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Avery, Howard D., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Apt, Joseph, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Brady, John, must. in 1861; disch. May 10, 1862.
Bennett, Joseph, must. in 1861.
Bowers, Henry C., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Baltzer, Houser, must. in 1861; disch.
Brigham, Jacob N., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; died Aug. 2, 1864, buried in Cypress Hill Cemetery, L. I.
Brown, Daniel L., must. in; died at Annapolis, Md., June 15, of wounds received at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Brush, Eliphalet W., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Brigham, Virgil, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Branning, Lot, must. in 1861.
Brigham, Oren D., must. in 1861; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Brush, Oliver S., must. in 1861.
Brigham, Truman, must. in 1861.
Bone, William, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan 13, 1865.
Barnhart, Demetr's, must. in Nov. 4, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Bastian, Jacob, must. in Sept. 27, 1862; trans. to Co. B.
Burk, James, must. in Sept. 29, 1862.
Boyer, Samuel H., must. in Oct. 6, 1862.
Boyer, Daniel C., must. in Oct. 16, 1862; died June 12, 1864; buried National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.
Bliss, Nelson, must in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Bailey, Newton, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Bailey, Samuel, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Booze, William, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Baker, Gemmil, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Bidwell, Anson N., must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Barrett, Walter, must. in March 31, 1864.
Campbell, John B, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Curry, Samuel, must. in 1861; disch.
Colmer, George W., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K 1862.
Cramer, John, must. in 1861.
Cunningham, John, must. in 1861.
Campbell, Wayne, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Campbell, Lartis, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Clements, John, must. in Nov. 6, 1862.
Culp, Valentine, must. in 1861.
Cassidy, Christopher, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Charles, John J., must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Davis, John H., must. in 1861; disch.
Dexter, Elias, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Davy, Judson, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Davis, James A., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Duaenhaffer, Frank, must. in Nov. 4, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Dosh, John, must. in 1861.
Elmore, Daniel, must. in Oct. 25, 1862.
Evens, John, must. in 1861.
Evens, Henry, must. in 1861.
Funk, Alexander, must. in 1861; died.
Farley, Sidney, must. in 1861.
Ferguson, John H., must. in 1861; wounded at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Ferguson, James H., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Frampton, William, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.

Frampton, John W., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Frampton, Isaac, must. in March 31, 1864.
Green, John, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Glunt, Abraham, must. in 1861; died.
Gavitt, Joseph M., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Guthrie, John G., must. in Nov. 4, 1862.
Gibson, Edward, must. in Sept. 15, 1862.
Gearhart, Charles, must. in Nov. 6, 1862.
Garretson, Theodore J., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Gilnett, Jacob, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Gaston, John R., must. in March 31, 1864.
Hoggencamp, John, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Hoffmann, William, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; captured; died at Alexdria, Va., Feb. 8, 1865; grave 2993.
Haas, James, must. in Oct. 6, 1862; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Haas, Jonathan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Harp, George W., must. in Oct. 6, 1862.
Hughes, Samuel, must. in 1861.
Hart, Peter S., must. in 1861; wounded on picket June 19, 1864; trans. to Co. K, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865; vet.
Hoffman, George, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Hagerty, William, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Haneigh, Uriah, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Hepburn, James, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Heitzenrether, John, must. in 1861.
Hartridge, Robert, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Hofford, Joel, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Haines, James A., must. in 1861.
Hare, Samuel, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Hallowell, William A., must. in 1861.
Hanes, Ephraim, must. in March 3, 1864.
Hagerty, Patrick, must. in March 30, 1864.
Hulse, Samuel H., must. in March 31, 1864.
Johnson, Samuel, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Jackson, Chester T., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Jefferson, James, must. in Sept. 29, 1862.
Kessler, Jacob, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Kessler, Levi, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Krigbaum, Orlando, must. in Oct. 6, 1862; trans. to Co. G, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Kratzer, William, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Lydic, Robert L., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Lydic, Joseph L., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Lukens, Justice, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Luke, David, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Lloyd, George, must. in Sept. 15, 1862.
Lawrence, A. B., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. B.
Lawrence, H. K., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. B.
Lewis, James M., must. in May 17, 1862; trans. to Co. H.
Manes, Ellis, must. in 1861.
Miller, Isaac, must. in 1861.
Michaels, Orange J., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Miles, John, must. in 1861; disch.
Mark, John, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K in 1862.
Mosher, James, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Marks, George W., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. July 5, 1865.
Mosher, Andrew J., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Markle, John L., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 13, 1863.
Marks, Andrew J., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Mosher, John, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Myers, John P., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Mitchell, Amos J., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Mitchell, Virgil B., must. in Oct. 29, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Miller, Jacob S., must. in Dec. 21, 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1863.
Maghar, Dennis, must. in March 30, 1864.
McGowen, Daniel, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
McAleer, John, must. in 1861.
McCracken, F., must. in 1861.
McCracken, Philip, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
McAfoose, William, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
North, Edwin, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Olinger, Samuel, must. in 1861; died at Alexandria, Va., July 18, 1862.
Oliver, William, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Ostrander, Levi, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Parsons, George C., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Poudler, John, must. in 1861.
Pardee, Theodore, must. in 1861; drowned at Hancock, Md.
Potter, Jackson, must. in 1861; died at Alexandria, Va.
Reed, Jacob, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Reed, James, must. in 1861.
Rodkey, Robert L., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Rogers, George W., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. K, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Robbins, Arthur, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. B.
Rarnard, Jacob, must. in Nov. 6, 1862.
Rue, James, must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Robinson, James G., must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to Co. K, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Sutliff, David L., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; died Aug. 1, 1863; buried in National Cemetery at Antietam, Md., section 26, lot D, grave 409.
Sutliff, Joseph G., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; died May 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery at Arlington, Va.
Skinner, Jerome, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Sherwood, Bradley, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Scott, Jesse, must. in Oct. 29, 1862.
Schemerhorn, H. E., must. in Oct. 29, 1862
Shisler, John, must. in Sept. 15, 1862.
Stebbins, Cyrus, must. in Nov. 14, 1862.
Scott, William, must. in Sept. 15, 1862.
Simonton, John W., must. in 1861; captured; died at Richmond, Va., March 27, 1864.
Sell, Henry, must. in 1861; discharged.
Stugart, Henry, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Shankle, John B., must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Stanberger, D. F., must. in 1861.
Sayers, Robert, must. in March 31, 1864.
Taylor, Hamlet H., must. in March 31, 1864; trans. to Co. H, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Taylor, George, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Ulrich, Adam, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to Co. B.
Varner, John, must. in 1861.
Wisner, Thomas, must. in 1861.
Weaver, Franklin, must. in 1861; trans. to Co. K, 1862.
Woodward, John, must. in 1861.
White, Samuel C., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
White, Osmer, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Wright, James, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Williams, Samuel, must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Wilton, George W., must. in Sept. 30, 1862.
Wood, Moses, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V., Jan. 13, 1865.
Wood, Henry D., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 57th Regt. P. V. Jan. 13, 1865.
Williams, Richard, must. in Sept. 30, 1852.
Whipple, Abraham, must. in Sept. 15, 1862.
Wadsworth, Andrew, must. in Sept. 27, 1862.

CHAPTER XXIV.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT (NINTH CAVALRY)—THE ONE HUNDRED AND TENTH REGIMENT—THE TWELFTH CAVALRY.

To the Ninth Cavalry Regiment of Pennsylvania Huntingdon County contributed one company, designated as Company M, and commanded by Capt. George W. Patterson. The other companies of the regiment were recruited in the counties of Perry, Dauphin, Luzerne, Susquehanna, Lancaster, Cumberland, Mifflin, and Northampton.

The rendezvous of the regiment was at Camp Cameron, Harrisburg, where it was organized in the fall of 1861, under command of Col. Edward C. Williams, of Harrisburg. On the 20th of November it left Camp Cameron and proceeded by rail to Pittsburgh, and thence by steamboat on the Ohio River to Jeffersonville, Ind., opposite Louisville, Ky., where it went into camp. In January, 1862, it moved into Kentucky, and went into camp at Green River, where it remained several weeks. It was then divided into three battalions (respectively under command of the colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and Maj. Jordan), which were posted in different parts of the State for protection against guerrillas, particularly those commanded by the rebel Gen. John H. Morgan, who were then raiding and committing depredations in every direction. In the early part of March the three battalions were ordered to Tennessee. At Gallatin, in that State, on the 4th of May, Maj. Jordan's battalion fought Morgan's forces, capturing two hundred and ninety-one of the command and putting the rest to rout. The same battalion again fought Morgan at Spring Creek on the 14th of May, and on the 6th of June was engaged at Moore's Hill, Ky., with a force of Confederate cavalry under Col. Hamilton. Again, on the 9th of July, the major's battalion became sharply engaged at Tompkinsville, Ky., with a force of two thousand men under Morgan. Its loss in this battle was twenty-four killed and wounded and nineteen taken prisoners, while the losses of Morgan's command were nearly ten times as great.

Early in August, 1862, when a large Confederate force under Gen. Kirby Smith was advancing through Kentucky for the purpose of attacking Cincinnati, the three battalions of the Ninth were reunited at Lebanon, Ky. After the battle of Richmond, Ky., the Ninth Cavalry did gallant service, fighting continually while covering the rear of the retreating division of Gen. William Nelson. The regiment reached Louisville when the Confederate army of Gen. Bragg and the Union army under Gen. Buell were approaching that city, each striving to reach it in advance of the other. Buell was successful, and upon his arrival at Louisville Bragg turned back and marched his army towards Tennessee. Buell's army followed in pursuit, leaving Louisville October 1st, the Ninth Pennsylvania and Second Michigan Cavalry Regiments leading the advance to Perryville, Ky., where a general battle was fought on the 8th. The Pennsylvania and Michigan cavalry regiments fought the Confederate infantry and held them at bay until the arrival of McCook's (Union) corps. The loss of the regiment at Perryville was thirty-seven killed and wounded.

After the battle of Perryville the Ninth was ordered to Louisville, where horses were furnished to those of the men who had been dismounted, amounting to more than half the regiment. It then moved with the Second Michigan to Nicholasville, and thence in the latter part of December to and across the Cumberland Mountains, and crossing the Cumberland and Clinch Rivers (by swimming the horses), and reached the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, where on the 1st of January they fought (dismounted) a heavy force of cavalry belonging to the command of Gen. Humphrey Marshall, capturing over one hundred prisoners, and succeeding in burning the railway bridge. Again the regiment fought about three hundred of the enemy's cavalry at the railway crossing of the Holston River, capturing the entire Confederate force and burning the bridge and a long trestle-work at that place. The loss of the Ninth in this action was thirty-one killed and wounded.

From the Holston River the Ninth, with the rest of the cavalry force, retreated across the Cumberland Mountains, pursued by Marshall's Confederate troops, but avoided battle, and reached Nicholasville, Ky., on the 13th of January, 1863. Soon after the regiment went to Louisville to remount, and thence proceeded to Nashville, arriving February 6th. From Nashville it moved to Franklin, Tenn., where it was engaged with a brigade of Forrest's cavalry on the 9th. During the remainder of the month the Ninth, with the Second Michigan, remained in that vicinity, hovering along the front and flanks of Gen. Van Dorn's Confederate cavalry corps, always on the move, and frequently making feints or real attacks on parts of the enemy's line, and by these means completely deluding both Van Dorn and Forrest into the belief that they were confronted by a body of Union cavalry fully equal in strength to that of their combined forces, which numbered more than nine thousand men. On the 4th of March the Ninth was engaged in a pitched battle with a strong force of the enemy's cavalry about four miles from Franklin, losing sixty-three killed and wounded in a fight of more than five hours' duration. On the 5th the Ninth, in conjunction with other Union cavalry and a strong body of infantry under Col. Coburn, of Indiana, was again engaged with the enemy, making a most gallant sabre-charge, and captured more than two hundred prisoners; but the fight ended in a victory for the enemy, who took more than three thousand five hundred prisoners of the Union infantry. For its gallantry in this action the Ninth was highly complimented in orders by Gen. Rosecrans.

During the summer campaign of 1863 the regiment (then composing a part of Gen. Stanley's cavalry division) fought at Shelbyville, Tenn. (making a desperate charge and capturing several hundred prisoners and a field battery), at Elk River, Tenn., and at Cowan, Tenn., where it took more than two hundred prisoners. From there it moved by way of Stevenson and Bridgeport, Ala., across Said Mountain and Lookout Mountain, into Georgia. It fought the enemy's cavalry at Lafayette, in that State, on the 16th of September, taking a large number of prisoners, and at the battle of Chickamauga, on the 19th and 20th, it did such good service as elicited the commendation of Gen. Thomas in general orders. During the succeeding winter the regiment was constantly on duty in East Tennessee, where most of the men re-enlisted and received the usual "veteran furlough," returning from Pennsylvania to Louisville with a large number of recruits.

When the Confederate guerrilla chief, John H. Morgan, made his last raid northward the Ninth moved from Louisville to Frankfort, Ky., and held that place, delaying Morgan's force and compelling it to fall back to Pound Gap, where it was attacked and defeated by Gen. Burbridge. Afterwards the regiment moved to Nashville, and thence to Chattanooga. From there it moved back to McMinnville in pursuit of the Confederate cavalry under Gen. Wheeler. On the 6th of September, at a point a few miles east of Murfreesboro', on the McMinnville road, it fought a brigade of Wheeler's command, charging with the sabre, defeating the enemy, and taking nearly three hundred prisoners. From that field it took part in the pursuit of Williams' Confederate brigade to Sparta, Tenn., where Williams' men dispersed and took to the mountains. For its service in this campaign the Ninth was commended in orders by Gens. Steadman and Van Cleve.

The regiment then moved to join the army of Gen. Sherman in Georgia. On the 16th of November it fought at Lovejoy's, Ga., capturing three hundred prisoners and several pieces of artillery. Afterwards it fought the forces of the cavalry general, Wheeler, at Macon, Ga., at Bear Creek (where the regiment lost ninety-six killed and wounded), at Waynesboro', Louisville, Ga., at Buck Head Church, and at various other places, where it always fought on the side of victory. It reached Savannah on the 21st of December. A month later it moved northward with the army into South Carolina (crossing the Savannah at Sister's Ferry), fought the forces of Wheeler and Wade Hampton at Blacksville and Aiken, passed through Columbia, the capital of the State, fought at Lexington, crossed the Catawba at Rocky Mount, moved through Rockingham to Fayetteville, N. C., fought the enemy in the battle of Averysboro' March 16th (where it was engaged for eight hours, and lost one-tenth of its force), and in the great battle of Bentonville on the 19th. After that battle it moved to Goldsboro', N. C., where it remained resting and refitting till the 9th of April, when it moved towards Raleigh, fighting a heavy battle with the enemy's cavalry on the 11th, and arriving at the State capital on the 13th, passing through the town, and moving out on the Hillsboro' road, where, on the same day, it met a force of Wheeler's cavalry and defeated it, pursuing it to Morrisville, and there fighting and utterly routing him. On this day the Ninth received a flag of truce which brought a letter from the Confederate commander, Gen. Johnston, to Gen. Sherman, proposing a surrender of the Southern army. A detachment of the Ninth escorted Gen. Sherman when he advanced to meet Gen. Johnston to arrange the terms of surrender. The terms were agreed on, the surrender made accordingly, and the war thus ended; the Ninth Cavalry being engaged in the last battle fought east of the Mississippi in the great conflict. The regiment was mustered out of the service on the 18th of July, 1865. Following is a list of the Huntingdon County company (M) of the Ninth:

NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT (NINTH CAVALRY).

COMPANY M.

(Mustered out July 18, 1865.)

Capt. George W. Patterson, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 31, 1861.

Capt. James Bell, must. in Dec. 31, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. May 25, 1863.

Capt. Thomas S. McCahan, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. May 22, 1863; disch. Aug. 8, 1864, wounds received in action.

Capt. Doctor A. Shelp, must. in Nov. 14, 1861; pro. from sergt. Co. L to 2d lieut. May 22, 1863, to 1st lieut. Aug. 23, 1864, to capt. May 23, 1865.

First Lieut. O. B. McKnight, must. in Oct. 9, 1861; pro. from 2d lieut. Co. B May 22, 1863, to capt. Co. I Aug. 23, 1864.

Second Lieut. Isaac C. Temple, must. in Dec. 13, 1861; disch. May 25, 1863.

Second Lieut. Andrew M. Clark, must. in June 1, 1863; pro. from corp. Co. B Aug. 23, 1864; com. 1st lieut. Aug. 1, 1864; resigned May 15, 1865.

Second Lieut. William Irvin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. May 20, 1865; com. 1st lieut. June 16, 1865.

First Sergt. George W. Kuhn, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to 1st sergt. May 20, 1865; com. 2d lieut. June 16, 1865.

Quartermaster-Sergt. Samuel P. Wallace, must. in Dec. 30, 1861; pro. from farrier Jan. 1, 1864.

Sergt. R. B. Montgomery, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from corp. Jan. 1, 1864.

Sergt. Samuel Low, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from corp. Jan. 1, 1864.

Sergt. George Berger, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from corp. Dec. 25 1864.

Sergt. James W. Straw, must. in Dec. 10, 1861; pro. from corp. Dec. 25, 1864.

Sergt. Henry Shaffer, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from corp. Dec. 25, 1864.

Sergt. William Schofield, must. in Dec. 23, 1861; disch. Dec. 27, for wounds received at Tompkinsville, Ky., July 9, 1862.

Sergt. Robert McClelland, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif, April 12, 1864.

Sergt. David E. Beighell, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. Daniel Eisenberg, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. Isaac Myton, must. in Dec. 13, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. David R. B. Barry, must. in Oct. 23, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Co. D May 23, 1863.

Corp. Andrew P. McDonald, must. in Dec. 13, 1861; pro. to corp. Dec. 25, 1864.
Corp. Arthur B. Shaw, must. in —— 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Dec. 25, 1864.
Corp. Stephen Patterson, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865.
Corp. Nicholas Stephens, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865.
Corp. Daniel W. Smith, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Dec. 25, 1864.
Corp. George Gregory, must. in Aug. 24, 1864; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865.
Corp. John Burke, must. in March [illegible] 1864; pro. to corp. Oct. 27, 1864.
Corp. John C. Bloom, must. in May 5, 1864; pro. to corp. Dec. 25, 1864.
Corp. J. B. McCullough, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. John A. Dillon, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Corp. F. B. Eisenberg, must. in Aug. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Corp. Henry S. Beeman, must. in Dec. 13, 1861; died at Annapolis, Md., Jan. 1, 1865.
Corp. William T. Arterberry, must. in Sept. 19, 1862; died at Nashville, Tenn., July 26, 1863.
Corp. L. B. F. Hose, must. in Sept. 19, 1861.
Saddler Samuel M. Ruhle, must. in Dec. 10, 1861; pro. to saddler June 1, 1865.
Farrier Jacob S. Devore, must. in Dec. 13, 1861; pro. from blacksmith June 1, 1865.
Farrier Jeremiah H. Beals, must. in Sept. 19, 1862; disch. by G. O. July 20, 1865.
Blacksmith Thomas Kelley, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; pro. to blacksmith June 1, 1865.
Bugler John Wagoner, must. in March 4, 1864; pro. to bugler Nov. 1, 1864.
Bugler Samuel T. Wallace, must. in Dec. 10, 1861; pro. to bugler June 1, 1865.
Bugler W. C. Arterberry, must. in Sept. 19, 1862; disch. by G. O.
Bugler George Beilstein, must. in Dec. 30, 1861; trans. to Vet. Corps.
Armstrong, James H., must. in Aug. 3, 1864.
Anderson, George A., must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Bliler, George, must. in May 26, 1864.
Beck, Crissman H., must. in Feb. 16, 1864; wounded at Griswoldville, Ga., Nov. 22, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 27, 1865.
Beatty, Oscar, must. in May 30, 1864.
Bryan, Charles, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Bloom, John C., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; wounded at Lebanon, Ky., Aug. 1, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 19, 1863.
Burke, John, must. in Dec. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 2, 1862.
Ball, Oliver B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. by G. O. June 17, 1865.
Boyd, Augustus, must. in May 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 21, 1865.
Boughmaster, C., must. in Dec. 30, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. May 4, 1863.
Brandy, Christian, must. in Sept. 3, 1861; disch. on surg certif. Aug. 14, 1862.
Bradley, John, must. in Sept. 3, 1861; disch. on surg. certif., date unknown.
Blain, William, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; wounded at Franklin, Tenn., March 1, 1863; trans. to Vet. Corps, date unknown.
Briggs, Daniel C., must. in April 13, 1864; died at Louisville, Ky., Aug. 29, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, sec. C, range 5, grave 43.
Barnes, William.
Burns, William.
Bayne, William J., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 7, 1861.
Chathams, Thomas, must. in June 2, 1864.
Caldwell, Samuel, must. in May 27, 1864.
Colledge, David, must. in Feb. 4, 1864.
Cain, Thomas, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Conley, John, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Campbell, James, must. in Sept. 15, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Convers, Henry, must. in Aug. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Caldwell, Lafayette, must. in May 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 21, 1865.
Campbell, James A., must. in Sept. 10, 1861; died at Bacon Creek, Ky., March 4, 1862; buried at Cove Hill National Cemetery, Louisville, Ky.
Chilcoat, Benjamin, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; captured; died at Florence, S. C. Jan. 20, 1865.
Cocker, James, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; died at Lebanon, Ky., Aug. 26, 1862.
Cunningham, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Cochran, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Conner, Edward J.
Dell, Henry, must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Dailey, Rude.
Fetteroff, Daniel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1861, expiration, of term.
Ferris, Levi W., must. in Jan. 1, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. June 9, 1865.
Fehn, Adam, must. in Dec. 30, 1861; trans. to Marine Brigade.
Funk, David, must. in Dec. 13, 1861.
Finley, James.
Gates, George, must. in May 31, 1864.
Gladden, Isaac, must. in Aug. 10, 1864; died at Florence, S. C., Feb. 5, 1865.
Green, John H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Sparta, Tenn.; buried. National Cemetery, Stone River, grave 525.
Gainer, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Healey, Abraham, must. in April 14, 1864.
Hoover, Allen E., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 10, 1865.
Hoffman, Thomas, must. in Jan. 3, 1865.
Honley, Levi, must. in Dec. 13, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Harnish, Samuel, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Hoover, Peter, must. in Sept. 17, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Hugentugler, O. B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 18, 1862; re-enl. Sept. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Hains, William B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; prisoner from ——, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. June 7, to date May 18, 1865; vet.
Hammond, James, must. in Oct. 26, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, date unknown.
Harpster, William, must. in Sept. 5, 1864; captured; died at Florence, S. C., Feb. 28, 1865.
Hampson, Solomon C., must. in Feb. 25, 1864; died at Louisville, Ky., Oct. 25, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, section C, range 2, grave 54.
Hutton, Benjamin F., must. in May 17, 1864.
Heaton, Charles.
Hestand, John B., must. in Sept. 19, 1862.
Harris, John, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Jones, Alex. W., must. in May 19, 1864.
Jenkins, Charles, must. in Jan. 12, 1864.
Johnston, Thomas, must. in Aug. 15, 1864.
Johnston, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 3, 1864.
Judge, Michael, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Johnston, Collins, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Jones, Arthur M. C., must. in Aug. 20, 1861; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Kelly, Leonard K., must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Kelly, Henry A., must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Kelso, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. April 20, 1863.
Kinney, Andrew P., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif., date unknown.
Kuhn, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Tompkinsville, Ky., July 9, 1862.
Leahney, John, must. in May 23, 1861.
Loader, John L., must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Lindsey, Ambrose, must. in Sept. 24, 1861; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Lowe, Joseph, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Leapsom, John J., must. in Dec. 31, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.
Merritts, Joseph, must. in March 29, 1864.
Morell, Henry, must. in June 6, 1864.
Mehaffey, Joseph, must. in Jan. 13, 1864.
Miller, John J., must. in Aug. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Merritts, Samuel, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; captured; died at Florence, S. C., Feb. 25, 1865.
Miller, Robert G., died at Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 22, 1861.
McCraken, Joseph, must. in Dec. 10, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 26, 1864.
McGinnis, John P., must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Neville, Henry.

Noffsker, Jacob J., must. in Sept. 5, 1864; wounded at Griswoldville, Ga., Nov. 22, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. May 31, 1865.
Porte, Henry, must. in Dec. 13, 1861.
Parks, Miles, must. in Dec. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Parks, Charles, must. in Sept. 4, 1861; died at Nashville, Tenn., April 10, 1862.
Rea, Crawford, must. in May 27, 1864.
Rowe, James, must. in May 25, 1864.
Robinson, Patrick H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861.
Reed, Andrew J., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Rhoads, John A., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; captured at Florence, S. C., Dec. 3, 1864.
Smith, Michael, must. in Aug. 24, 1864.
Stephens, Thomas, must. in May 30, 1864.
Sipe, John, must. in June 6, 1864.
Shore, Jesse L., must. in Feb. 19, 1864.
Shaffer, Peter, must. in Feb. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 18, 1865.
Stewart, Joseph W., must. in Oct. 19, 1864.
Steffler, Harrison T., must. in Sept. 10, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Shearer, Abraham, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Stotz, Frederick, must. in Sept. 17, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Shattzberger, M., must. in Aug. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Shollenberger, J., must. in Aug. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Stevens, James H., must. in Feb. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Spangler, William H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. May 11, 1863.
Shields, Leonard, must. in Sept. 17, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Stahler, Henry, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 25, 1862.
Shannon, Porter, must. in Sept. 3, 1861; killed at Tompkinsville, Ky., July 9, 1862.
Shoening, Francis, must. in Sept. 12, 1861; died at Nashville, Tenn., April 15, 1862.
Stewart, John P.
Scruder, Lemon, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; disch. by G. O. Aug. 28, 1865.
Thompson, Allen B., must. in Feb. 19, 1864.
Thomas, Joseph D., must. in Sept. 18, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Co. K Aug. 26, 1864.
Tussey, Samuel C., must. in Sept. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1856.
Thompson, William, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, exp. of term.
Turman, Harry, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Turman, Royal, must. in Aug. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Turner, George.
Thompson, Robert P., must. in Sept. 15, 1861.
Underwood, G. W.
Vanscoyock, F. B., must. in Dec. 17, 1861.
Weight, Thomas, must. in Aug. 15, 1861.
Wilson, Simon M., must. in Dec. 31, 1861; disch. Dec. 24, 1864, exp. of term.
Wanamaker, Stephen, must. in Sept. 5, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Weidener, Jacob, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Wolf, Samuel, must. in Aug. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O May 29, 1865.
Watts, James, must. in Sept. 6, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Weight, Henry, must. in Aug. 15, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Webster, Edmund, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; died at Wilmington, N. C., March 10, 1865.
Wolf, Michael H., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; killed at Griswoldville, Ga., Nov. 22, 1864.
White, John M.

The One Hundred and Tenth Regiment.—This regiment was composed of companies recruited in the counties of Huntingdon, Blair, Bedford, Centre, Clearfield, and Philadelphia, which rendezvoused at Camp Crossman, near Huntingdon. The companies raised in Blair and Huntingdon Counties were Company A, from Tyrone; Company B, of Huntingdon County; Company C, of Blair; Company D, of Huntingdon. Company H was raised in Blair County.

The regiment was organized at Camp Crossman in the fall of 1861, under the following-named field-officers, viz.: Col. William D. Lewis, Jr., Lieut.-Col. James Crowther (killed at Chancellorsville May 8, 1863), Maj. John C. Johnston. Capt. Isaac Rodgers was mortally wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, May 12, 1864, and died on the 28th of the same month. Two of the adjutants of the regiment, during its term of service, were Huntingdon County men, viz.: W. F. Cunningham, of Company D, and Lewis G. Stewart, of Company B.

The regiment moved from Camp Crossman to Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, about Dec. 1, 1861, and about a month later moved by way of Hagerstown to Hancock, Md., which point was then menaced by a Confederate force under "Stonewall" Jackson, though it was afterwards found that his demonstration was but a feint to cover his real designs against Romney, Va. The One Hundred and Tenth reached Hancock on the 14th of January, and was assigned to duty as part of the force commanded by Gen. Lander. Gen. Jackson sent Col. Ashby with a flag of truce to demand the surrender of the town, which was refused by Gen. Lander, and thereupon the Confederates opened upon the town with their artillery, and continued the cannonade through the day, during which time the regiment was in line with the other troops to meet the anticipated advance of the enemy across the river. Jackson, however, withdrew his force to Romney, and afterwards moved to Winchester. Gen. Lander moved his force to Cumberland, where the One Hundred and Tenth was assigned to Tyler's brigade, Lander's division of the corps of Gen. Banks. The other regiments of the brigade were the Seventh and Thirty-ninth Ohio, the Seventh Indiana, and First Virginia.

The regiment was placed on duty on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, guarding the bridges over the north and south branches of the Potomac and at Paw Paw tunnel. On the 8th of March it left Paw Paw and moved to Martinsburg, and thence to Winchester, where Gen. James Shields became commanding officer of the division in place of Gen. Lander, who died on the 2d of March. On the 18th of March the regiment with its division moved up the valley (the enemy under Jackson retiring before the advance of the Union troops) to a point south of Strasburg, where its camp was made on the night of the 19th. On the 20th it marched back to the camp north of Winchester, having scarcely made a halt during all the day's march.

In the afternoon of the 22d the enemy's cavalry made its appearance, and on the 23d the advance of "Stonewall" Jackson's infantry force reached a point near Kernstown, south of Winchester. Gen. Shields at once made his dispositions for battle, placing Tyler's brigade in advance, with orders to move to the assault of the enemy's position under fire from the Union batteries. The enemy was in heavy force and strongly posted behind a stone wall, and partially covered by woods, and an attack on such a force in such a position was a difficult and dangerous service. Gen. Shields, in his official report, said he "intrusted this movement to Tyler's splendid brigade, which, under its fearless leader, Col. Tyler, marched forward with alacrity and enthusiastic joy to the performance of the most perilous duty of the day." The brigade advanced rapidly in the face of a murderous fire, charged up to and over the stone wall which sheltered the enemy, and drove the Confederates from their position, compelling them to fly in disorder, leaving their dead and wounded on the field. The One Hundred and Tenth pursued the enemy to a point where he had taken up a new position. This they also assaulted and carried, driving the Confederates in greater disorder than before, taking about three hundred of them prisoners and capturing two pieces of artillery and a thousand stand of arms. In this engagement the regiment lost fifty-two killed and wounded out of a total strength of a little over three hundred men with which it entered the fight.

After this battle the regiment was for some time on provost-guard duty in Winchester. About the 1st of May it moved to Harrisonburg, and thence with the other troops marched through the Luray Valley and across the Blue Ridge to Fredericksburg, being engaged on the way in several skirmishes, among which was one at Gaines' Cross-Roads on the 18th of May, in which A company sustained a slight loss. At Fredericksburg the regiment was assigned to the Fourth (Carroll's) Brigade of Shields' division. Soon afterwards it was ordered back with the division to the Shenandoah Valley to reinforce the command of Gen. Banks, who was then confronted and overmatched by the forces of "Stonewall" Jackson. The brigade arrived at Port Republic on the 8th of June, and on the 9th was engaged with Jackson's forces. The One Hundred and Tenth occupied the right, which the enemy in strong force made a determined effort to flank, and in the conflict which resulted the regiment sustained severe loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners. The troops, overpowered by Confederate numbers, were compelled to retire and fell back in good order to Front Royal, from which place the regiment with its division marched to Port Republic, and thence to Alexandria, where the First and Second Brigades were transported to the Peninsula to join the army of McClellan, while the Third and Fourth Brigades went into camp near Alexandria. The camp of the One Hundred and Tenth was at Cloud's Mills, where it remained several weeks, and then moved to Warrenton, Va., where its brigade was assigned to Gen. Ricketts' division in the Army of Virginia, under Gen. John Pope.

In the latter part of July the division moved towards Culpeper Court-House, and took part in the movements of the campaign which resulted in the battle of Cedar Mountain on the 9th of August. In the conflict of that day Ricketts' division was ordered in at about dark, but the One Hundred and Tenth did not become closely engaged, though it lay under a very heavy artillery fire, and sustained some losses. On the 14th it moved to the Rapidan, and with other troops occupied the line of that river until the 19th, when the army commenced falling back towards the defenses of Washington. On the 28th the regiment fought with its division at Thoroughfare Gap, where it was confronted by the entire corps of Longstreet. At night the division fell back to the vicinity of Groveton, reaching there late in the day on the 29th. On the 30th, in the second Bull Run battle, the regiment was in line early in the day, and fought with bravery and steadiness through the whole afternoon. The day ended in defeat to the Union arms, and at night the regiment fell back with its division and the army to Centreville, and thence retreated to the defenses of Washington. The camp of the One Hundred and Tenth was at Arlington Heights, where it remained (reduced to a mere fraction of its original strength) during the progress of the campaign of South Mountain and Antietam. In October, 1862, the One Hundred and Tenth (being then in Gen. Whipple's division) joined the Army of the Potomac, then under command of Gen. A. E. Burnside, and marched through Virginia to the Rappahannock River opposite Fredericksburg, and went into camp at Stoneman's Switch. In the great battle of Fredericksburg (December 13th) it was on the left, with Gen. Franklin's grand division, and performed good service, suffering severe loss. The battle resulted in disaster to the Union troops, and the regiment with the army recrossed to the north side of the Rappahannock, and returned to its old camp at Stoneman's Switch. While remaining at that place Lieut.-Col. Crowther was promoted to the command of the regiment, vice Lewis, resigned, and Maj. D. M. Jones became lieutenant-colonel. In January, 1863, the regiment took part in the famous "Mud March," which Gen. Burnside intended to be the initiative of a new forward movement towards Richmond, but after a few days of useless fatigue and marching through pouring rain and almost bottomless mud, the movement was abandoned, and the troops returned to their winter-quarters. In the spring campaign of 1863 under the new army commander, Gen. Hooker, the regiment left camp on the 28th of April, and marched its division to the Rappahannock, crossing that river on the 30th at United States Ford, and marched to Chancellorsville. In the great battle at that place, on the 2d and 3d of May, the movements and services of the One Hundred and Tenth were nearly the same as those of the Eighty-fourth (both being in the same brigade), which have been mentioned in the history of the latter regiment. The One Hundred and Tenth lost more than one-third of its men either killed, wounded, or taken prisoners, among the former being the brave Col. Crowther, who fell in the conflict at the Chancellorsville House on the 3d of May. On the night of the 5th and morning of the 6th the regiment marched from the field, crossed the Rappahannock with the army, and returned to its old camp.

In the campaign of Gettysburg the One Hundred and Tenth (then under command of Lieut.-Col. Jones, and forming part of the brigade of Gen. De Trobriand, in Birney's division of the Third Corps) reached the famous battle-field on the night of July 1st, the men having endured extreme fatigue and hardship on the long, dusty, and sweltering march from the Rappahannock. The corps was posted on the left of the army line. The One Hundred and Tenth was in line and under fire early in the morning of the 2d, but not closely engaged till afternoon, when, with the Fifth Michigan, of the same brigade, it received a tremendous attack from a Confederate brigade, and held the superior force at bay, fighting until its ammunition was exhausted, when it was relieved, and retired to the second line of the corps, where it remained—under fire, but not again so closely engaged—during the remainder of the conflict. In this great battle the regiment lost fully one-third of its men in killed and wounded, among the latter being the commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. Jones,[1] who lost his left leg.

After the campaign of Gettysburg, the regiment remained for a time in Pennsylvania and Maryland, then crossed the Potomac with the army into Virginia, where it was encamped for a considerable time at Warrenton, and afterwards at Culpeper. In November it was posted at Catlett's Station. It was engaged in the battles of Kelly's Ford (where the brigade captured more than four hundred prisoners), and at Brandy Station, November 8th. It took part in the movement of the army to Mine Run, and after the close of that fruitless campaign went into winter-quarters near Brandy Station, where the men re-enlisted as veterans.

In the reorganization of the army, preparatory to the spring campaign of 1864, the One Hundred and Tenth was transferred with its brigade to the Second Corps, under Gen. Hancock. The commanding officer of the regiment was Col. Isaac Rodgers, who had been promoted successively through all the grades, from first lieutenant of B company. Moving with the army to the campaign of the Wilderness, the regiment crossed the Rapidan at Ely's Ford May 4th, and camped that night on the field of Chancellorsville. On the 6th it was engaged in the second day's battle of the Wilderness, and from that time until the 10th was daily under fire, losing one-fourth of the men with which it crossed the Rapidan on the 4th. On the 12th it was actively engaged in the bloody battle at Spottsylvania Court-House, taking a prominent part in the capture of an entire Confederate division. In this action Lieut. John W. Manning, of H company, was killed, and Col. Rodgers mortally wounded.

The regiment fought and did good service in the subsequent engagements at North Anna River, Shady Grove Church, Tolopotomy, Cold Harbor, and the Chickahominy River (June 3d). On the 14th of June it crossed the James River and moved to the front of Petersburg, where it joined in an assault on the Confederate defenses of the city, fighting bravely and suffering severe loss. Again, on the 17th, it took part in an engagement at the Weldon Railroad. It fought and sustained heavy loss in the battle at Deep Bottom, July 27th, and was engaged again at the same place in November. It participated in the battle at Hatcher's Run, and afterwards in various movements and actions during the winter, being for some time posted as a garrison of the earthwork known as "Fort Hell." On the 25th of March, 1865, it fought in the battle which resulted from the tremendous assault of the Confederates on Fort Steadman. In this action the regiment lost severely in killed and wounded, Col. Isaac T. Hamilton being among the latter. It again suffered heavy loss in the battle of Amelia Springs, where the brigade fought the enemy and drove him in rout from a strongly-intrenched position. This was the last battle of the regiment. At Clover Hill, Va., in the afternoon of the 9th of April, it received the joyful news of the surrender of the Confederate army, which virtually ended the war. Early in May the regiment faced north, and took up the line of the homeward march, passing through Richmond, reaching the Washington defenses on the 15th, and taking part in the great review of the Army of the Potomac at the National Capital on the 23d of May. It was mustered out of

[1] The following sketch of Col. Jones is from "Martial Deeds of Pennsylvania:"

"David Mattern Jones, lieutenant-colonel of the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment, was born on the 24th of April, 1838, in Huntingdon County, Pa. He was the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Mattern) Jones. He received a good common-school education, and learned the trade of his father, that of a potter. In the three months' service of 1861 he was corporal of Company D of the Third Regiment. On his return from this he recruited and was commissioned captain of Company A of the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment, which was sent to the upper Potomac, joining the column of Gen. Lander, and participating in the engagements against Jackson, and subsequently, under Shields, in the hard-fought battle of Winchester, in which Jackson was driven. In a skirmish with a detachment of Ashby's cavalry, in one of the passes of the Blue Ridge, in June, 1862, Capt. Jones manœuvred his company with so much skill as to attract the attention of his superiors, and he was promoted to the rank of a major. He participated in the hard fighting at Cedar Mountain, and in the second battle of Bull Run, receiving in the latter a severe wound in the right wrist from a Minié-ball, which passed quite through, leaving the limb weakened and partially paralyzed. Shortly after the battle of Fredericksburg, in which he was engaged, he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel, and at Chancellorsville, when the colonel was killed, the command devolved on him at a critical moment in the battle. At Gettysburg he was of De Trobriand's brigade, that held unsupported, in the early part of the battle, the rocky, wooded ground designated the whirlpool or slaughter-pen. More bold or determined fighting has rarely been witnessed than was here displayed. It was a sad field for Col. Jones, for while conducting the fight with matchless heroism he was shot through the left leg, and so severe was the wound as to necessitate amputation. His heroic conduct called forth warm commendation in the orders of Gen De Trobriand. Being disabled for further field service he resigned. He was married in 1864 to Miss Amanda J. Palmer, who died in 1867. In 1865 he was elected register and recorder of his native county."

the service on the 28th of June, 1865. Following is a list of the Huntingdon and Blair companies of the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment, viz.:

ONE HUNDRED AND TENTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY A.

(Mustered in June 24, 1861, except where noted; mustered out June 28, 1865.)

Capt. David M. Jones, pro. to maj. June 16, 1862.

Capt. Fleming Holliday, pro. from 1st lieut. June 16, 1862; res. Dec. 20, 1862.

Capt. W. H. Stephens, pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. June 16, 1862, to capt. Jan. 1, 1863.

Capt. Samuel McCune, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Dec. 20, 1862, to 1st lieut. May 1, 1864, to capt. July 25, 1864.

First Lieut. Hiram H. Hopkins, pro. from 2d lieut. June 16, 1862, to capt. Co. H Oct. 11, 1862.

First Lieut. David Copelin, must. in Dec. 19, 1861, res. Jan. 25, 1864.

First Lieut. William H. Shelow, pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. May 1, 1864, to 1st lieut. July 25, 1864, to adjt. June 8, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. Adam Weight, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from private to sergt. Sept. 24, 1863, to 1st sergt. June 1, 1865, com. 1st lieut. April 18, 1865.

First Sergt. Joseph C. Core, died, buried in National Cemetery, Gettysburg, sec. E, grave 25.

Sergt. George W. Buck, pro. from corp. May 6, 1864, to sergt. Nov. 1, 1864, com. 2d lieut. April 18, 1865.

Sergt. George W. Troxell, pro. to corp. Aug. 1, 1864, to sergt. June 1, 1865.

Sergt. Aaron Rodgers, pro. to corp. Aug. 6, 1864, to sergt. June 1, 1865.

Sergt. Lisle F. McCully, disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Sergt. Joseph Goss, disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.

Sergt. Thomas Weight, disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.

Sergt. Charles Eckley, killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; buried at City Point.

Sergt. Andrew L. Ganoe, must. in Dec. 19, 1861.

Sergt. Francis M. Burley, died, date unknown, of wounds rec. at Gettysburg; buried in National Cemetery, sec. A, grave 70.

Sergt. John L. Hill.

Sergt. William Stephens.

Corp. Adam Gross, pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1864.

Corp. Simon Kephart, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to corp. Dec. 30, 1864.

Corp. Ira C. Horn, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; pro. to corp. April 20, 1865.

Corp. Miles Dickson, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865.

Corp. Thomas Evans, pro. to corp. June 1, 1865.

Corp. Thomas S. Closson, must. in Aug. 24, 1863; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865.

Corp. John Shelow, wounded at Port Republic, Va., June 6, 1862; disch. for wounds received at Petersburg June 18, 1864.

Corp. William Spittler, wounded at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 24, 1865; vet.

Corp. George W. Weight, captured at Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1865.

Corp. William Fetters, captured at Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1865.

Corp. Edward H. Barnes, must. in Jan. 14, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va.

Corp. William Lytle, died at Washington, D. C., Aug. 12, ——, of wounds received at Deep Bottom, Va.; buried in National Cemetery at Arlington, Va.

Corp. David Miller, must. in Feb. 29, 1864.

Musician Charles F. Brogan, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. by G. O. July 14, 1865.

Musician Samuel Africa, must. in Dec. 10, 1861.

Musician John McDonald, pro. to principal musician Jan. 4, 1864; veteran.

Anderson, David, disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Burns, William M.

Boyer, William H., must. in Dec. 19, 1861.

Burley, William H. H., disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Beyer, Sanford F., killed at Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1865; vet.

Barns, John A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864.

Beamer, John, disch., date unknown, for wounds received in action.

Bunnells, John R.

Barnes, Hayes, died June 16, 1864; buried in National Cemetery at City Point, Va., section D, division 1, grave 93.

Barto, Benjamin H.

Bilestine, George W.

Burk, John.

Blake, Christopher.

Closson, Graham M.

Crowl, Francis, wounded at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Oct. 28, 1864; disch. by G. O. Aug. 2, 1865.

Carabaugh, Jonathan, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; captured at Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865; vet.

Caldwell, Thomas, disch. date unknown.

Campbell, Robert M., disch. date unknown.

Crosby, William E., disch. date unknown.

Cherry, Edward, died at Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 20, 1861.

Dearmett, George W., wounded at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864.

Denny, Joseph, captured at Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865; vet.

Dickson, James, must. in Dec. 19, 1863.

Eakens, Stephen I.

Eckley, Henry L., must. in Feb. 23, 1864.

Everly, Samuel, died March 24, ——, of wounds received at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.

Everly, Charles, disch. date unknown.

Fink, Reuben.

Foust, Henry.

Foreman, Joseph C.

Fink, Isaac, must. in Feb. 27, 1864.

Fink, William, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; trans. to Co. K, 9th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps, Jan. 12, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 15, 1865.

Fiester, David.

Feehan, Michael, disch. date unknown.

Foreman, John C., disch. June 14, 1862.

Fink, Benjamin V., burial record, died; buried in Lawton National Cemetery, Millen, Ga., section A, grave 102.

Ganoe, Elijah, must. in Dec. 19, 1861.

Green, James, wounded in action May 18, 1864.

Ganoe, Isaac, must. in Feb. 9, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 26, 1865.

Glasgow, Thomas, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; wounded at Wilderness, Va.

Goss, Elias, must. in Aug. 10, 1861; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.

Goss, Harrison, disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Goshorn, Solomon B., must. in Feb. 29, 1864.

Gooderham, P. J., died at Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 15, 1862; buried at Mount Kalma Cemetery.

Goss, Frederick, died at Tyrone, Pa., June 25, 1862.

Hurdman, David, must. in Dec. 19, 1861.

Hinchy, John F., captured at Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865; vet.

Hugo, Henry.

Homan, William H., trans. to U. S. Cav.

Hoover, Samuel, disch. on surg. certif.

Hunter, John A.

Isett, Washington, must. in Jan. 4, 1864.

Isett, George, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; wounded in action May 16, 1864.

Jones, Levi.

Kreps, James.

Keare, Andrew, disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.

Kephart, Perry.

Kephart, Samuel.

Kinney, Thomas.

Litzinger, Joseph, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.

Lausane, Moses, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.

Logan, James A., must. in Feb. 24, 1864; died from wounds received at Petersburg, Va.

Long, Anthony, disch. on surg. certif.

Mirehire, Patrick, must. in Aug. 23, 1863.

Miles, John M.

Mays, William.

Meaher, Thomas, disch. Oct. 24, 1865, expiration of term.

Morsey, James, disch. Oct. 24, 1865, expiration of term.

Morgan, Joshua, disch. on surg. certif.

Monahon, Patrick.

Mulhollen, William, disch. on surg. certif.

Mottson, William, disch. expiration of term.

Medara, Samuel.

Miller, Peter.

McQuillan, William H., must. in Feb. 15, 1864; died at Alexandria, Va., July 10th, of wounds received at Petersburg, Va.
McAdams, William, trans. Co. I, 11th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps; must. in Feb. 15, 1864.
Newman, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; wounded at Petersburg, Va.
Newman, Richard, disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Newman, Benjamin, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; died July 12th of wounds received at Petersburg, Va.
Nipple, John, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Nixdorf, Joseph.
Neely, Robert, died at Cumberland, Md., March 16, 1862.
Parsons, John F., must. in Feb. 17, 1864; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864.
Plummer, Amos J., died October 10th of wounds received in action Sept. 10, 1864; vet.
Plummer, Henry E., disch. on surg. certif.
Renner, Isaac, must. in Oct. 5, 1864.
Rounds, William, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; trans. Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 25, 1864.
Richards, George W., disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Rodgers, Samuel. Ross, Joseph.
Ryan, Michael. Stonebreaker, Abel.
Stephens, William, disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Stoddart, Thomas, captured at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864.
Stone, John H., disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Swatts, Jacob, wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Stoddart, James, died at Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 13, 1862.
Shimmell, John J.
Spitler, Berry.
Shea, William.
Stewart, John P., disch. on surg. certif.
Stoddart, John, killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, section E, grave 23.
Stewart, William, disch., date unknown.
Tozer. Robert, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Toxell, John, wounded at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Oct. 14, 1864; disch. on G. O.
Valance, James, wounded at Winchester.
Wiser, Emanuel, must. in Dec. 19, 1861.
Warfield, John. Williams, John.
White, John M. Worts, Martin.
Wilson, Emery E., wounded at Gettysburg.
Weight, Daniel, died at Chamberlain, Md., March 5, 1862.
Wilson, William, died at Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 5, 1862.
Weight, David E., died at Hagerstown, Md., Jan 20, 1862.

Company B.

Capt. Seth Benner, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; resigned Nov. 30, 1862.
Capt. Isaac Rodgers, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. Dec. 1, 1862; to maj. Dec. 21, 1862, and to lieut.-col. and col.
Capt. John M. Skelly, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Dec. 16, 1862, to capt. Jan. 16, 1864; disch. by S. O. March 1, 1865.
1st Lieut. Daniel Henkle, must. in Sept. 26, 1861; pro. to 1st lieut. May 11, 1865, to capt. Dec. 21, 1862; not must.; disch. Nov. 30, 1863.
1st Lieut. John R. Pancoast, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from q.m.-sergt. to 2d lieut. Oct. 1, 1862, to 1st lieut. Dec. 21, 1862; com. capt. March 1, 1865; not must.; brev. capt. April 9, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
2d Lieut. Benjamin F. Bare, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; resigned Feb. 28, 1862.
2d Lieut. Samuel B. Young, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from sergt. Feb. 23, 1862; resigned Sept. 20, 1862.
2d Lieut. Andrew J. Miller, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. May 1, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 7, 1864; vet.
1st Sergt. Enoch W. Edwards, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from sergt. May 1, 1864; com. 1st lieut. March 1, 1865; not must.; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
1st Sergt. William P. Ramsay, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died May 2, 1862, from wounds received in action.
Sergt. James M. Walls, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from corp. June 3, 1864; com. 2d lieut. March 1, 1865; not must.; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Sergt. G. Tate, must. in Dec. , 1861; pro. from corp. Nov. 1, 1864; must. out with company June , 1865; vet.
Sergt. Samuel K. Hicks, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from corp. Nov. 1, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Sergt. Albert Hall, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; pro. from corp. Nov. 1, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Sergt. James French, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Sergt. David P. Stewart, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to com.-sergt. Feb. 1, 1864; vet.
Sergt. Naum H. Apgar, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; vet.
Sergt. Miles W. McCarthy, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; vet.
Sergt. Thomas A. Ruggles, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; vet.
Sergt. Valentine Stewart, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed near Poplar Grove Church, Va., Oct. 2, 1864; vet.
Sergt. Washington J. Bell, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Sergt. Matthew G. Collins, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; trans. to Co. C, 54th Regt. P. V., date unknown.
Sergt. Samuel D. Wilson, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. Daniel Snyder, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to corp. Nov. 24, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. Joseph M. Price, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; pro. to corp. Nov. 24, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Corp. William A. B. Couch, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. Diern Ramsey, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. April 10, 1864; prisoner from May 6, 1864, to Feb. 22, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Corp. Daniel C. Fleck, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. J. C. Coughenaur, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Dec. 1, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. William H. Miller, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; pro. to sergt.-maj. November, 1864.
Corp. Lewis G. Stewart, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to sergt.-maj. Feb. 1, 1864; vet.
Corp. John B. Musser, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; vet.
Corp. John G. Moore, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; died at Point Lookout, Md., February 25th, of wounds received at Hatcher's Run, Va., Feb. 5, 1865.
Corp. W. W. Withington, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. James V. Lee, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; captured at Bull Run, Va., August, 1862; trans. to U. S. Art., date unknown.
Corp. Henry T. Stains, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. Charles E. Applebach, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. David P. Harvey, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; discharged, date unknown.
Musician James E. Pool, must. in March 17, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 4, 1865; died Oct. 2, 1864; buried in Cypress Hill Cemetery, L. I.
Musician Richard Carothers, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 18, 1865; disch. by G. O. July 29, 1865.
Musician John M. Wallace, must. in Oct. 21, 1864; pro. to principal musician, date unknown; vet.
Musician William A. McConahy, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Aurandt, John D., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Applebach, John E., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Alexander, H. T., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Adams, Robert, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Banks, John, must. in March 10, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Barbin, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1863, expiration of term.
Brade, John, must. in March 10, 1864; captured; died, date unknown; buried in Lawton National Cemetery, Millen, Ga.
Barbin, Solomon, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died Oct. 30, 1862; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
Briggs, Adolphus E., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; discharged at expiration of term.
Barnett, William H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to U. S. Cav., no date.
Crisswell, Joseph, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Chilcoat, Benjamin F., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.

Cutchall, Richard, must. in Jan. 17, 1864; prisoner from June 2 to Nov. 26, 1864; disch. March 20th, to date Feb. 17, 1865.
Coughenaur, I. F., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Chilcoat, John W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Chilcoat, Allen E., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Clark, Jacob S., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Donnelly, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Dougherty, Adolphus, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Dougherty, Thomas, must. in Oct. ' , 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Dunn, A. S., must. in Dec. 5, 1861; disch. Dec. 5, 1864, expiration of term.
Decter, John N., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. C, 18th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps, Nov. 6, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 19, 1865; vet.
Dunn, Michael, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; missing in action at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862.
Ewing, Samuel H., must. in Feb. 23, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Fisher, Andrew J., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Firl, George, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Gehrett, Jacob F., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Garren, John, must. in Feb. 16, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Gorsuch, Matthew A., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; captured; died at Andersonville, Ga., July 18, 1864; grave No. 3528.
Geisinger, John R., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Herr, Henry, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Hood, Samuel B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; prisoner from May 6, 1864, to April 23, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Hammon, Martin L., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Hall, Laban J., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; missing in action at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864.
Herr, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. May 1, 1864; vet.
Hewitt, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 5, 1864; pro. to hospital steward Oct. 24, 1864.
Hudson, Ephraim A., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Harvey, Robert B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. date unknown.
Hockenberry, Isaac, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Hockenberry, Benjamin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Hooper, Isaac G., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died May 15, 1862.
Hooper, Jacob K., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Hays, Samuel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Henderson, Andrew J., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Johns, William, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Jamison, Benjamin F., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; prisoner from June 2, 1864, to March 2, 1865; disch. June 19, to date from May 31, 1865.
Johnson, Irvine, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Kelley, Thomas M., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Kennedy, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; wounded with loss of leg at Deep Bottom, Va., Aug. 16, 1864; absent at must.-out; vet.
Kough, George W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. May 5, 1865; vet.
Kyle, John M., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. D, 13th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Kelly, Levi, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Liveringhouse, W. R., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; absent at must. out.
Lee, Edward, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Long, William M., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Long, William B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Long, Adam A., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Lee, William H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on must.-out roll.
Marlin, Benjamin F., must. in Dec. 19, 186; absent at must. out; vet.
Madden, William H., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; disch. by G. O. Aug. 9, 1865.
Moore, James L., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration term.
Miller, David B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Miller, Benedict S., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps May 4, 1864.
Moore, Robert B., must. in Sept. 5, 1864; pro. to qr.mr.-sergt. Nov. 1, 1864.
Miller, Moses, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died, date unknown; buried in National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., sec. B., grave 51.
Miller, David R., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Marlin, James M., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Marlin, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
McMahan, William, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
McMullen, John W., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
McKelvey, Joseph P., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
McCoy, William F., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Nov. 14, to date Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
McCracken, John, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 11, 1865.
McClain, John M., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; died near Brandy Station, Va., March 26, 1864.
McNite, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
McKelvey, William J., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
McHugh, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. on surg. certif. June 18, 1862.
McKeag, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Orner, George A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; absent, sick, at must. out; vet.
Orr, George, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; wounded in action June 12, 1864; absent at must. out.
Plympton, John A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Piper, Martin M., must. in Feb. 19, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Peters, Henry, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864; absent at must. out.
Price, William H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Piper, Philip, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed near Petersburg, Va., Sept. 10, 1864; vet.
Parker, Elliott R., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died April 22, 1862.
Pardonner, Jonathan E., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Plympton, Edwin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; missing in action at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862.
Palmer, Gratz H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Quinn, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Quarry, Michael, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Rutter, Albert, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Rothrock, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Runk, Samuel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 23, 1864, expiration of term.
Rhinehart, John W., must. in Jan. 1, 1862; disch. May 1, 1865, to date at expiration of term.
Ripple, Christian L., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Ruggles, Samuel, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed in action May 19, 1864; vet.
Raebstein, Joseph, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. June 28, 1862.
Reed, Levi D , must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Scott, Cornelius W., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Stewart, John F., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Saucerman, Jacob, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Stewart, Jeremiah, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died May 25, 1864; burial record, May 19, 1864; buried in National Cemetery Asylum, Va.; vet.
Stewart, Noah, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; died May 27 of wounds received May 24, 1864.
Stevens, Wesley L., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Skipper, Elijah R., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Sheaffer, Andrew S., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch., date unknown.
Staub, David L., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died at Shirleysburg, Pa., Feb. 28, 1862.
Sollers, Elijah, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.

Smith, Richard, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Smith, Thomas G., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Smith, Daniel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died May 11, 1862.
Stevens, Benedict T., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Thompson, Asbury, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Templeton, Richard C., must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. Nov. 23, to date Sept. 2, 1864.
Trueax, George, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Wilson, James W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; captured; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865; vet.
Wilfang, William, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; captured; died, date unknown.
Walls, John H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
White, Samuel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Zeltsh, Henry, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. for wounds received at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862.

COMPANY C.

Capt. Ezra D. Brisbin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; res. June 16, 1862.
Capt. John R. Kooken, must. in June 27, 1862; died December 14th from wounds received at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
Capt. Isaac T. Hamilton, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. Co. D Dec. 14, 1862; to maj. Aug. 23, 1864.
Capt. James C. Hamilton, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. Oct. 23, 1864; to 1st lieut. Dec. 17, 1864; to capt. March 6, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
1st Lieut. George W. Burley, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; res. June 16, 1862.
1st Lieut. H. C. H. Kay, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from 2d lieut. June 16, 1862; res. Dec. 20, 1862.
1st Lieut. Charles Copelin, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from 2d lieut Co. K Dec. 20, 1862; com. capt. April 23, 1864; not mustered; disch. Dec. 17, 1864.
1st Lieut. Samuel Kinley, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. Dec. 17, 1864; to 1st lieut. March 18, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
2d Lieut. William Roberts, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from 1st sergt. June 16, 1862; res. Dec. 20, 1862.
2d Lieut. Martin M. Maxwell, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from sergt. Dec. 20, 1862; com. 1st lieut. April 23, 1864; not mustered; disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 21, 1864.
1st Sergt. Thomas G. Livingston, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from corp. to sergt. Oct. 23, 1864; to 1st sergt. March 18, 1865; com. 2d lieut. December, 1865; not mustered; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
1st Sergt. James C. Bell, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
1st Sergt. Samuel Tobias, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from sergt.; wounded at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, 1863.
Sergt. David C. Lane, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. April 12, 1864; to sergt. Oct. 25, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Sergt. Benjamin Shoemaker, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 24, 1864; to sergt. March 18, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
ergt. John W. Plummer, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Oct. 24, 1864, to sergt. March 18, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Sergt. William H. H. Shimer, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1865; to sergt. June 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
rgt. John Moore, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Sergt. Charles Andrews, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Sergt. Samuel B. Schwartz, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to q m.-sergt. June 1, 1865; vet.
Sergt. Simon B. Stonerook, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to 59th Co., 2d Batt., Vet. Res. Corps, March 9, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 5, 1865; vet.
Sergt. Ambrose K. Taylor, m .. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; vet.
Sergt. William Ralston, must. . Oct. 24, 1861; disch. date unknown.
Sergt. Alexander Croft, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died at Bedford, Pa., Feb. 5, 1862.
Corp. John A. Beegle, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; pro. to corp. March 18, 1865; must. out with co. ny June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. D. R. P. Swaney, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; pro. to corp. March 18, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. Andrew Border, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. March, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. William Kane, must. in Dec. 26, 1863; pro. to corp. March 18, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Corp. Levi M. Bulger, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. to corp. April 30, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Corp. George P. Kelly, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; pro. to corp. April 30, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Corp. John W. Smith, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. David Price, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Corp. George W. Maxwell, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864.
Corp. Thomas J. Greenland, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Corp. George W. Smith, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1864.
Corp Joseph Gates, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. George L. Hartman, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Musician Charles Schroder, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Musician Samuel H. Tyson, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Ainsworth, James W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; absent, sick, at muster out; vet.
Abbott, Amos, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Aimaker, John, must. in July 16, 1864; drafted; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Afflesback, George, must. in March 5, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Atwell, John, must. in Feb. 19, 1864; disch. by S. O. June 27, 1864.
Andrews, William A., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 7, 1864.
Andrews, Charles, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; missing in action at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862.
Allen, William, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Brooks, Jonas W., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Broombaugh, F. M., must. in Feb. 25, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Banks, John, must. in Dec. 29, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 12, 1864.
Bowman, Daniel H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died September 27th (burial record Sept. 15, 1864) of wounds received at Deep Bottom, Va., July 27, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.; vet.
Bailey, John, must. in July 16, 1864; killed in action Oct. 22, 1864.
Beard, George W., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Bulger, Andrew, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Blake, Samuel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. date unknown.
Border, John S., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Blake, Thomas, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. date unknown.
Bowman, George, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Border, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Blake, Simon, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Coble, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Chilcoat, Hilany, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Chilcoat, Isaac, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Copelin, Isaiah, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Castner, John W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Cramer, Jacob, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
College, David, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
College, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died at Yellow Creek, Pa., May 11, 1862.
College, John W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died March 24, of wounds received at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Carpenter, David, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Davis, John N., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Dively, John, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; captured; died at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 31, 1864, grave 7360.
Davis, Porter R., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.

Dougherty, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Davis, Martin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch., date unknown.
Evans, Oswell D., must. in Feb. 25, 1864; died at Washington, D. C., Oct. 21, 1864.
Everhart, David L., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Fackler, Samuel, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865, vet.
Fishel, George W., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Fitzharris, Michael, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. A, 84th Regt. P. V.
Ferguson, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Fluke, Oliver, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. June 28, 1862.
Garrett, Albert T., must. in March 19, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Gaily, Joseph, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Garrett, John C., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; prisoner from June 1 to Dec. 10, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865; vet.
Gilson, Jackson, must. in Sept. 16, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Gates, Martin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Gates, Samuel, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died at Cumberland, Md., March 12, 1862.
Gates, William H., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. June 28, 1862.
Householder, M. C., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; absent, sick, at muster out; vet.
Harwood, Richard, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Hicks, Jackson, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Jan. 15, 1865, expiration of term.
Hartman, J. P. C., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; prisoner from June 1, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. May 30, to date May 16, 1865; vet.
Holsinger, Josiah, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; prisoner from June 1, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. May 30, to date May 16, 1865.
Householder, Jacob, must. in Feb. 7, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 19, 1865.
Hays, Alexander G., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. April 25, 1865, for wounds, with loss of leg; vet.
Heltzell, Jonathan D., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; vet.
Helm, Edward, must. in Dec. 19, 1861.
Hamilton, John C., must. in Oct. 4, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.
Hart, Thomas, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Irwin, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Irwin, Jerrett, must. in March 15, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Justice, Edward S., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; died at City Point, Va., June 25, of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1864.
Johnston, Samuel, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; died of wounds received May 7, 1864.
Kelly, David, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Knode, Thomas, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term; vet.
Leer, William, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Lauxman, John, must. in March 4, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Lindsey, Ephraim N., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; died of wounds received May 19, 1864.
Lang, James, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; prisoner; died at Andersonville, Ga., Oct. 31, 1864; burial record Oct. 13, 1864, grave 10,873.
Lammison, Thomas, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died at Stoneman's Switch, Va.
Lightner, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Lammison, George, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Lightner, John, must. in Jan. 16, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Monchan, James, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 6, 1865.
Murray, Samuel, must. in July 11, 1864; disch by G. O. June 7, 1865.
Mimminger, Jacob, must. in Sept. 4, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps . March 25, 1865.
Miller, Hezekiah, must. in Feb. 28, 1864; died at Washington, D. C., Aug. 6, 1864.
Myers, Daniel, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; died of wounds received May 16, 1864; buried in Soldiers' Cemetery, Brattleboro', Vt.
Morgan, Dennis, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Miller, Andrew, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch., date unknown.
Miller, John E., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
McCoy, James, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
McIlneay, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died at Harrisburg, Pa., June 15, 1862.
Newton, James, must. in March 15, 1862; dropped from rolls Dec. 31, 1864.
Olinger, George W., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; wounded; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.
Powley, Henry, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Plastic, William H., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.
Pearson, Francis, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Ralston, David E., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Swaney, Samuel G., must. in Feb. 28, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Swaney, William S., must. in March 5, 1864; trans. to Co. B, 14th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps.; disch. on surg. certif. June 2, 1865; vet.
Sutton, Jonathan A., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must out with company June 28, 1865.
Speer, William H., must. in March 19, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865,
Shoemaker, Austin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; prisoner from June 23, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865; vet.
Smith, Samuel H., must. in Feb. 25, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. June 15, 1865.
Stonerook, Aaron B., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; trans. to Co. I, 18th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps, Nov. 29, 1864; disch. by G. O. Aug. 1, 1865.
Stout, Richard F., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Smith, David S., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Seabrooks, George, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Schmittle, George, must. in June 18, 1862; disch., date unknown.
Straley, James, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. June 25, 1862.
Tetwiler, William, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch Oct. 24, 1864, expiration of term.
Thompson, David, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; captured; died at Lynchburg, Va., July 12, 1864; burial record, died July 23, 1864; buried in Poplar Grove National Cemetery, Petersburg, Va., division E, section E, grave 61; vet.
Tetwiler, Jacob, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Tasker, George, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Wilt, Silas D., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Wilson, James A., must. in Jan. 14, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Wallace, Samuel G., must. in Dec. 18, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 25, 1864.
Woodward, James A., must. in Jan. 21, 1865; trans. to Camp Chase, Ohio, Feb. 28, 1865.
Woodcock, Clark, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; killed at Sailor's Creek, Va., April 6, 1865.
Woollet, Sylvester B., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Young, Edwin, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Young, George N., must. in Oct. 24, 1861; not on muster-out roll.

Company D.

Capt. Samuel L. Huyett, must. in Aug. 23, 1861; res. Dec. 20, 1862.
Capt. John B. Fite, must. in June 28, 1862; com. lieut.-col. May 5, 1865; not mustered; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
1st Lieut. Isaac T. Hamilton, must. in Dec. 5, 1861; pro. to capt. Co. C Dec. 14, 1862.
1st Lieut. Jacob B. Meily, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
2d Lieut. Henry C. Weaver, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; res. June 16, 1862.
2d Lieut. Ephraim Burket, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. from hosp. steward July 12, 1862; com. capt. Aug. 9, 1862; res. Dec. 20, 1862.
1st Sergt. William Rapp, must. in Oct. 24, 1862; pro. to corp. Dec. 1, 1864; to sergt. June 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
1st Sergt. John M. Skelly, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to lieut. Co. B Dec. 16, 1862.
Sergt. Isaac Lute, must. in Oct. 24, 1862; pro. to sergt. June 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Sergt. Emanuel Brallier, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; pro. from corp. Dec. 1, 1864; com. capt. May 14, 1865; not mustered; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.

Sergt. Adam B. Zeller, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Sergt. George B. Gooderham, must. in Aug. 20, 1862; pro. to corp. March 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Sergt. Smith McDonald, must. in July 21, 1862; pro. to sergt. Dec. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Sergt. William Y. Taylor, must. in June 28, 1862; pro. to corp. March 1, 1864, to sergt. Dec. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Sergt. F. G. Arrowsmith, must. in July 23, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 30, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 24, 1865.
Sergt. Robert Stewart, must. in Dec. 19, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Sergt. David P. Stewart, must. in Dec. 19, 1862; trans. to Co. B.
Sergt. John Donnelly, must. in Dec. 19, 1862; trans to Co. B.
Sergt. Benjamin Huyett, must. in Dec. 19, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. Merriam Lee, must. in Oct. 24, 1862; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Corp. Isaac Bates, must. in Dec. 23, 1862; pro. to corp. June 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Corp. John J. Brunner, must. in Sept. 2, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. Andrew Bitzer, must. in Sept. 2, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. Silas M. Wherry, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. John Keyser, must. in June 10, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. Jacob Waltz, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; pro. to corp. Dec. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. George A. Deitrick, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; pro. to corp. March 1, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. George F. Harrington, must. in Sept. 13, 1862; pro. to corp. March 1, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. Benjamin F. Martin, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B.
Corp. George W. Lathero, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. John A. Plympton, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B.
Corp. Lewis G. Stewart, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B.
Corp. Joseph T. Roller, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. James C. Hamilton, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. C.
Corp. John Carothers, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Corp. George G. Tate, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B.
Musician James W. Daily, must. in Aug. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Musician Patrick McEnnally, must. in June 28, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Musician Samuel Butland, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Musician John Spillinger, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Musician Luther C. Hagerty, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Anderson, John, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Aurandt, John D., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B.
Adams, William H., must. in Dec. 19, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Bitzer, Henry, must. in Sept. 13, 1862; disch. by G. O. July 5, 1865.
Blackstock, David, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Bryant, Martin, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Blouch, Samuel, must. in July 7, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 10, 1865.
Books, Jonas W., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. C.
Black, William, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Butler, Abram S., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. June 14, 1862.
Blatt, George S., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Baker, Samuel C., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; died at Winchester, Va., April 27, 1862.
Baker, David S., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. for wounds rec. at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Benner, David H., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Benner, Henry, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Benner, Thomas, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. on surg. certif.
Butler, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Barnes, John A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. A.
Brown, Alfred, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Coleman, Morris W., must. in Sept. 13, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Cody, Stephen, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Cobaugh, Daniel W., must. in Aug. 1, 1862; disch. by G. O. July 11, 1865.
Cooper, John B., must. in March 26, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 30, 1864; disch. April 21, 1865.
Coble, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. C, no date.
Couch, W. A. B., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Cunningham, W. F., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to adjt. Aug. 12, 1863.
Dinges, William J., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; wounded in action Sept. 22, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Daily, Francis, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.
Dunkel, Jacob, must. in Sept. 19, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; absent at muster out.
Dresser, Robert, must. in Aug. 21, 1862; wounded in action Oct. 8, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 6, 1865.
Dunlap, John M., must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Downey, Jacob, must. in Aug. 1, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Dougherty, Thomas, must. in Dec. 19, 1862; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Dougherty, Adolphus, must. in Dec. 19, 1862; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Ege, John W., must. in Aug. 7, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Evans, Henry, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 29, 1864.
Frankford, Miles, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Finley, William, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Funk, Oliver, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. June 18, 1862.
Fetterhoff, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch., no date.
Gallegan, Thomas, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; disch. Jan. 18, 1865.
Graham, James, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; trans. to Co. D, 9th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps, Dec. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 5, 1865.
Hill, George, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; disch. by G. O. July 5, 1865.
Hamilton, Jesse C., must. in Nov. 2, 1862; absent, wounded, at muster out.
Hummel, Edward, must. in July 31, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Hogmire, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Helm, Edward, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. C, no date
Hicks, Jackson, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. C, no date.
Hagan, Reuben, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Huston, James, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Hicks, James, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. June 20, 1862.
Hicks, Samuel K., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Huling, James S, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Haman, Peter, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Hutton, Frank A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. June 12, 1862.
Keith, William, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Keith, Jacob J., must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Keith, Jeremiah, must. in Oct. 24, 1862; trans. to Co. D, 9th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps, Dec. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 20, 1865.
Kinley, Samuel.
Kimlin, Anthony, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. March 27th for wounds rec. at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
Kennedy, Johnston, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Knode, Thomas, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. C, no date.
Knode, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Kennedy, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Lake, Charles H., must. in Sept. 30, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.
Lister, Samuel, must. in Oct. 29, 1862; disch. Aug. 7, 1864, for wounds rec. at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Littlefield, Horatio, must. in Aug. 28, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Lee, Edward, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Lynn, Peter, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; missing in action at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862.
Moore, James, must. in Aug. 21, 1862; wounded at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Miller, Joseph P., must. in Oct. 24, 1862; must. out with company Jan. 28, 1865.
Mock, George, must. in July 24, 1862; wounded at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; absent at muster out.
Martin, James, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Miller, John A., must. in July 7, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Mountain, Frank, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Miller, George, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Musser, John B., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Mulhollen, Thomas, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; missing in action at Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862.
Miller, Henry E., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Moore, Luther W., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; disch. June 21, 1862.
Moore, Robert B., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Miller, Jacob, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
McDonald, Simon, must. in Oct. 24, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
McGuiggan, Charles, must. in March 12, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865; vet.

McAnulty, Michael, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. July 21, 1864.
McCormick, John, must. in Aug. 2, 1862; killed at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864.
McMullin, John, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; killed at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862.
McCarthy, Miles W., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
McDonald, Samuel, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Noel, John A., must. in Sept. 20, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Newton, James, must. in March 15, 1862; trans. to Co. C, no date.
Oxenford, William, must. in July 29, 1862; captured; died Dec. 22, 1864, on transport "Baltic;" burial record Dec. 2, 1864.
Orner, George A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Patterson, John, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Pearson, William, must. in Sept. 19, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Perdy, Samuel, must. in Dec. 19, 1861, not on muster-out roll.
Plaster, William H., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. C, no date.
Pancoast, John R., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; pro. to q.m.-sergt., no date.
Piper, Philip, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Quinn, John, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Russell, George, must. in Dec. 23, 1861; disch. by G. O. Aug. 26, 1865.
Rager, Elliott, must. in Aug. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Rudolph, Adam, must. in June 28, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Rager, Jordan S., must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Rembold, Philip, must. in July 22, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Rapp, James A., must. in Oct. 25, 1862; died at Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10, 1864.
Ramsay, James, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Ruggles, Samuel, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Rockey, Theodore, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; wounded at Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Ruggles, Thomas A., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Rinehart, John W., must. in Jan. 1, 1862; trans. to Co. B, no date.
Shaffer, George W., must. in July 23, 1862; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House May 12, 1864; absent at muster out.
Schmidt, Carl, must. in Aug. 12, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Smith, John, must. in Sept. 19, 1862; wounded in action Oct. 12, 1864; absent at muster out.
Slagen, Charles, must. in Aug. 28, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 21, 1865.
Stewart, Oliver J., must. in Oct. 29, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Saltsgiver, John, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Snyder, Daniel, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Swope, Cyrus G., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Thomas, Joseph B., must. in Aug. 21, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Vannorman, William, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; died at Alexandria, Va., April 21, 1864, grave 1779.
Welsh, James, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Weight, Adam, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. A, no date.
Walkel, John W., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Weaver, Albert J., must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.
Warner, Christ A., must. in Sept. 20, 1862; trans. to 149th Company, 2d Batt., Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. June 29, 1865.
Young, William, must. in Aug. 21, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Young, Calhoun, must. in Aug. 21, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Young, Charles, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; not on muster-out roll.

Company H.

Capt. Hiram R. Hopkins, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; pro. from 1st lieut. Co. A Oct. 11, 1862; res. May 28, 1863.
Capt. Francis Cassidy, must. in Oct. 11, 1862; pro. from 2d to 1st lieut. Jan. 1, 1863; to capt. July 1, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 3, 1864.
Capt. Frank B. Stewart, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. July 1, 1863, to 1st lieut. July 8, 1864, to capt. Dec. 24, 1864, to major May 10, 1865.
Capt. Jacob Beckhart, no date of muster; pro. from 1st sergt. to 1st lieut. Jan. 1, 1865, to capt. June 19, 1865; must. out June 28, 1865.
First Lieut. John Cotterell, must. in Dec. 27, 1861; res. Dec. 18, 1862.
First Lieut. Patrick F. Holland, must. in Aug. 31, 1861; pro. from corp. Co. F Dec. 18, 1861; missing since June 30, 1862.
First Lieut. Matthias H. Jolly, must. in Oct. 13, 1862; pro. to adjt. Jan. 1, 1863.
First Lieut. John W. Manning, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; pro. to 2d lieut. May 11, 1863, to 1st lieut. Jan. 1, 1864; killed at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864.
First Sergt. David W. Smythe, must. in Feb. 1, 1864; pro. to corp. June 6, 1864, to sergt. Jan. 1, 1865, to 1st sergt. June 1, 1865; com. 1st lieut. Jan. 12, 1865; not mustered; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
First Sergt. John H. Ermine, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; pro. to 1st sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
First Sergt. George Herrick, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; died of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, sec. B, grave 49.
Sergt. Solomon Beyer, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; pro. to corp. Nov. 16, 1862; to sergt. Sept. 11, 1863; disch. July 1, to date June 26, 1865.
Sergt. James Morgan, must. in Oct. 11, 1862; pro. to corp. July 1, 1864, to sergt. June 1, 1865; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Sergt. Michael Fether, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Sergt. William V. Holliday, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; pro. to sergt. Dec. 15, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Sergt. Thomas Beamer, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; disch. Sept. 20, for wounds with loss of arm, at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Sergt. Samuel Holes, must. in Sept. 28, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps January, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 30, 1865.
Sergt. Frank A. Elias, must. in Nov. 24, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; no date.
Corp. Jacob R. Bossert, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1863; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 15, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 12, 1865.
Corp. Cyrus Valentine, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; pro. to corp. Aug. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Corp. James Harding, must. in Sept. 12, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 12, 1865.
Corp. Joseph Eckley, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; trans. to Co. F, 24th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps, March 8, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.
Musician, Edward Wallace, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. Jan. 1863.
Anderson, Johnson, must. in March 7, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Anderson, Sample, must. in Sept. 20, 1862; disch. November, 1862.
Baker, Henry N., must. in Oct. 11, 1862; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Brannen, William, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Burley, David, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Brubaker, Jacob, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Bratton, John D., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Baker, Thomas J., must. in March 17, 1864; disch. on surg. certif.
Bratton, Henry D., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 15, 1864.
Bell, Lemon, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; missing in action at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864.
Beegle, Henry W., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; died of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, section D, grave 47.
Beegle, Jacob, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; died near Falmouth, Va., January, 1863.
Bailey, William T., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. on surg. certif.
Boyles, William T., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. February, 1863.
Cassiday, George E., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Crayton, John A., must. in Jan. 30, 1864; accidentally wounded; absent at muster out.
Cochran, Peter, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; wounded at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Cowen, Robert, must. in March 1, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Cowen, Thomas, must. in March 30, 1864; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Creamer, Amos A., must. in Sept. 9, 1862; died of wounds received at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Cowen, William, must. in 1862; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Dougherty, John, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Davidson, John W., must. in Oct. 11, 1862; com. 2d lieut. Jan. 12, 1865; not mustered; pro. to hosp. steward June 1, 1865.
Davis, Peter, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; killed at Deep Bottom, Va., Aug. 16, 1864.
Duncan, David R., must. in Sept. 23, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.

Dixon, James, must. in Sept. 25, 1862; disch. November, 1862.
Empfield, Thomas S., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; wounded at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Edmunson, Lisle, must. in Sept. 9, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Evans, Llewllyn, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Fry, John, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Funk, Harrison, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; disch. Dec. 1, 1862.
Gates, Philip, must. in Sept. 9, 1862; disch. March 1, 1863.
Glasgow, Taylor, must. in Sept. 25, 1862; died, date unknown.
Huntsbarger, S., must. in March 1, 1864; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Hench, Henry, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Hemphill, Joseph D., must. in Feb. 9, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 7, 1865.
Haslet, James, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.
Hollen, William S., must. in Aug. 28, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Henderson, Samuel T., must. in Sept. 12, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Hunsbarger, David, must. in March 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.
Henderson, John A., must. in Sept. 9, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 15, 1864.
Harper, Samuel G., must. in Oct. 11, 1862; killed at Petersburg, Va., Sept. 20, 1864.
Hamilton, Joseph S., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; died of wounds received at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Hayden, Patrick, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; captured; died at Richmond, Va., September 7th, of wounds; burial record, died at Macon, Ga.
Hook, Andrew B., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; killed at Chancellorsville, Va. May 3, 1863.
Irwin, James, must. in March 10, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Krise, John M., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; disch. by S. O. July 16, 1864.
Knepper, Henry S., must in Sept. 12, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.
Kelly, William A., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; missing in action at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864.
Kinsel, Henry M., must. in Sept. 9, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, 1863; buried in Nat. Cem., section C, grave 13.
Kinsel, Thomas, must. in Sept. 9, 1862; disch. February, 1863.
Lambright, Samuel, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Leighty, Joseph, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. April 16, 1865, for wounds received at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Lumadue, William, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Moore, Daniel, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Miles, Henry H., must. in Sept. 16, 1862; wounded at Deep Bottom, Va., Oct. 1, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Mulholland, Andrew, must. in Sept. 28, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. May 28, 1865.
Meyer, Samuel, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; died November 7th, of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; burial record, died at Philadelphia Nov. 9, 1864.
Makin, Abraham C., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; died May 13th, of wounds received at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Montgomery, Thomas, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; killed at Sailor's Creek, Va., April 6, 1865.
Miller, William M., must. in Sept. 9, 1862; disch. for wounds received at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862.
McConnell, William T., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
McMullen, Thomas, must. in Oct. 11, 1862; disch. by G. O. Aug. 2, 1865.
McPherson, Adam, must. in Sept. 12, 1862; disch., date unknown.
McDonald, William, must. in Sept. 25, 1862; not on must.-out roll.
North, Henry, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; disch. June 13, to date June 5, 1865.
Nolen, John, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; disch. Sept. 30, 1862.
Nash, Edwin M., must. in Sept. 12, 1862; disch. Nov. 1, 1862.
Pickle, David, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Plummer, John R., must. in Oct. 11, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 8, 1864.
Pryor, Henry, must. in Sept. 23, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. June 30, 1865.
Post, Jacob, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; disch. Dec. 1862.
Robinson, Abraham, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Robinson, William, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Reep, Adam, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Rough, Valentine, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; died at Germantown, Pa., Feb. 9, 1864; burial record, died at Philadelphia, Jan. 9, 1864.
Rager, John L., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 19, 1864; grave 6373.
Robinson, William, must. in Sept. 17, 1862; disch., date unknown.
Rigg, James W., must. in Aug. 28, 1862; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Stover, Uriah, must. in Feb. 5, 1864; must. out with company June 28, 1865.
Stiles, William, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Stiles, Samuel, must. in Sept. 9, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Stiffler, Peter, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Snyder, William G., must. in March 1, 1864; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Staum, Jacob, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.
Snyder, John, must. in Sept. 9, 1862; trans. to Co. I, 10th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps; disch. June, 1865.
Smith, Sample, must. in Oct. 2, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. Aug. 28, 1865.
Taylor, Charles, must. in Sept. 16, 1862; wounded at Sailor's Creek, Va., April 6, 1865; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Thomas, George D., must. in Sept. 18, 1862; died March 26, 1864.
Tries, James, must. in Sept. 1862; disch. for wounds received at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Thomas, Isaac, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. Dec. 1862.
Vanscoyoc, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Vanscoyoc, Aaron, must. in Sept. 3, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. June 29, 1865.
Wolf, Daniel J., must. in Sept. 3, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Wallace, John, must. in Sept. 25, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 31, 1865.
Wilt, William P., must. in Feb. 22, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 9, 1864.
Weigherman, W. H., must. in Feb. 28, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps, date unknown.
Williams, Joseph, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; died at Alexandria, Va., Dec. 16, 1864.
Williamson, Gideon, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; disch. Dec. 1862.
Wilt, Joseph, must. in Sept. 5, 1862; disch. Jan. 1863.
Williams, Joseph, must. in Sept. 18, 1862; disch. Dec. 1862.
Wilson, John T., must. in Oct. 11, 1862; disch. Dec. 1862.

The Twelfth Cavalry.—This regiment, designated as the One Hundred and Thirteenth of the Pennsylvania line, contained one company raised in Blair and Cambria Counties, viz., Company G, Capt. Adam Hartman. The regiment was organized at Philadelphia, under Col. William Frishmuth, in November, 1861. Col. Frishmuth resigned soon afterwards, and Lewis B. Pierce became colonel, Jacob Kohler lieutenant-colonel, and Darius Titus, James A. Congdon, and William Bell majors. The regiment moved to Washington about May 1, 1862, and in June crossed the Potomac into Virginia, though the men were not mounted until the latter part of July. Joining Gen. Pope's "Army of Virginia," it was engaged with the enemy at Bristow Station, where it was surprised by the Confederates, who made a fierce assault, resulting in a loss to the regiment of two hundred and sixty of its men killed, wounded, and taken prisoners. The remainder escaped to Centreville, whence they were ordered to Alexandria and from there to the north side of the Potomac to picket the line of the river as far up as Edwards Ferry.

In the Antietam campaign the regiment joined Pleasonton's division. At the battle of South Mountain it was in reserve and not engaged. On the 16th of September two squadrons (one of which was under command of Capt. Hartman, of G company), while on a reconnoissance towards Hagerstown, became engaged with the enemy's cavalry at Boonesboro', taking a considerable number of prisoners. In the latter part of the month of September it was placed on duty guarding the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad above Harper's Ferry. It took part in several cavalry raids,—to Moorefield, Woodstock, and other points,—and fought in an action at Fisher's Hill, suffering some loss, but driving the enemy from his position.

In 1863 (June 12th) the Twelfth led the advance of a reconnoissance towards Front Royal, soon discovering heavy masses of Confederate infantry moving towards the Potomac. This was the first knowledge gained of the actual movement of Gen. Lee's army from the Rapidan to the invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania. Encountering the cavalry of the enemy's advance, the regiment skirmished sharply in the neighborhood of Winchester, and fought on two or three successive days at Apple Pie Ridge, but being of course overpowered by the enemy's infantry retired to Winchester, where the troops were entirely surrounded by Lee's army. In the night of the 14th the brigade moved out of the town towards Martinsburg, but on its way was attacked and a furious fight resulted, in which the retreating columns became separated, but both succeeded in cutting their way to the Potomac, a part reaching the river at Harper's Ferry, and the remainder, including the Twelfth, going to Bath and Bloody Run, Va. When Lee's army was on the retreat from Gettysburg, the Twelfth, with the First New York Cavalry, attacked his trains at Cunningham's Cross-Roads, capturing a guard of six hundred and forty men, three pieces of artillery, one hundred and twenty-five wagons, and more than five hundred horses and mules. The regiment remained at Sharpsburg, Md., until the 2d of August, when it moved into Virginia, and was there employed in scouting and picket duty (with occasional skirmishes) until the spring of 1864. During the winter the men reenlisted, receiving the usual veteran furlough. Large numbers of recruits were received, nearly filling the ranks.

When Gen. Early moved north in 1864, with a force of twenty thousand men, intending to capture the city of Washington (crossing the Potomac on the 3d of July), the Twelfth formed part of the cavalry forces that harassed the Confederate advance. It fought at Crampton's Gap, Pleasant Valley, and several other points. Early, having advanced to within sight of the city, was driven back by the arrival of the Sixth Corps from Petersburg, and retreated into Virginia as far as Berryville, but from there turned back towards the Potomac. On the 20th of July the Twelfth fought a part of his forces at Winchester, capturing several guns and a considerable number of prisoners. Again, on the 23d and 24th, it fought (dismounted) and was repulsed with heavy loss. On August 21st the regiment (then forming a part of the Army of the Shenandoah under Gen. Sheridan) took part in an action with the enemy's cavalry, losing slightly. In November it was stationed at Charlestown, Va., but its ranks were sadly thinned and the greater part of the men dismounted. During the fall the regiment did some fighting, but took part in no general engagement. In December it was on duty guarding the railroad between Harper's Ferry and Winchester, and frequently engaged in skirmishing. In the spring of 1865 (about the middle of March) it took part in an expedition against the guerrilla bands which infested the eastern slopes of the Blue Ridge, and on the 22d of March was closely engaged with the enemy at Harmony, Va., losing twenty-five killed and wounded. Soon after it moved to Winchester, Va., and from there (as a part of Reno's cavalry division) it marched on a raid to Lynchburg. On the route (at Edinboro', Va.) the Twelfth had a brisk fight with the enemy and sustained some loss, fighting alone and unsupported by any other troops. This was the last battle of the Twelfth, for immediately afterwards news was received of Lee's surrender, including all rebel troops in Virginia. The regiment was afterwards posted for a time at Mount Jackson and at Winchester, Va., where it remained till its muster out, July 20, 1865. A list of the officers and men of the Blair and Cambria company of the Twelfth is here given, viz.:

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTEENTH REGIMENT (TWELFTH CAVALRY).

COMPANY G.

Capt. Adam Hartman, must. in Feb. 17, 1862; disch. July 21, 1863.

Capt. Patrick H. McAteer, must. in Feb. 17, 1862; pro. from 1st lieut. Dec. 22, 1863; must. out with company July 20, 1865.

First Lieut. Thad. S. Shannon, must. in Feb. 17, 1862; res. June 25, 1862.

First Lieut. Thomas Morley, must. in June 25, 1862; pro. to 2d lieut. June 25, 1862, to 1st lieut. May 1, 1864, to capt. Co. I Feb. 6, 1865.

First Lieut. John H. Black, must. in Jan. 24, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. April 29, 1864, to 1st sergt. Feb. 6, 1865; wounded at Hamilton, Va., March 21, 1865; absent, sick, at must. out; vet.

Second Lieut. Andrew McGough, must. in Jan. 18, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. Feb. 6, 1865; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

First Sergt. David M. Ginter, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; pro. from q.m.-sergt. Feb. 7, 1865; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Q.M.-Sergt. Aaron Daugherty, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; pro. from sergt. Feb. 7, 1865; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Com.-Sergt. Jer. H. Ivory, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Joseph W. Lafferty, must. in Jan. 24, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Felix Beck, must. in Jan. 18, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Edward McCarty, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Sergt. Matthew Aiken, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.

Sergt. J. H. Daugherty, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Sergt. Samuel O. Evans, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; disch. Feb. 7, 1865, expiration of term.
Sergt. William J. Stiffler, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; captured at Bunker Hill, Va., Jan. 1, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga., May 8, 1864; grave 921; vet.
Corp. John F. Gardner, must. in Feb. 13, 1862; captured Feb. 3, 1864; disch. by S. O. April 15, 1865; vet.
Corp. Silas Middleton, must. in Feb. 7, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Corp. Joseph Cramer, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Corp. Jacob C. Brown, must. in May 20, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Corp. Henry Tomlinson, must. in Feb. 6, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Corp. John McIntyre, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Corp. Simon McAteer, must. in April 3, 1863; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Corp. John Bateman, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; pro. to corp. June 2, 1865; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Corp. James P. Stewart, must. in Aug. 2, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Bugler Gabriel Miller, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Bugler William A. D. Reed, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Blacksmith John F. Pfeiffer, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Farrier Joseph E. Engle, must. in Feb. 29, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Saddler John Frederick, must. in Feb. 26, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Ayres, William, must. in Sept. 12, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Ake, Joseph W., must. in Sept. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Byrne, Patrick E., must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Bowser, John J., must. in May 18, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Black, David M., must. in March 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Baker, Benedict B., must. in April 15, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Boyles, John, must. in March 21, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Brown, John T., must. in Feb. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865; vet.
Blackwood, William J., must. in Jan. 24, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term; vet.
Brissell, John, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 15, 1865.
Boley, William, must. in March 28, 1864; died July 9th of wounds received June 29, 1864.
Brannan, Thomas, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Bruce, Peter, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; disch. Feb. 28, 1865, expiration of term.
Bergur, Nathan, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Brady, Michael, must. in April 30, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Bleiffer, C. F., must. in Sept. 27, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Conrad, Augustine, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Cherry, George, must. in March 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Coons, David, must. in March 28, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Cramer, Francis, must. in Feb. 19, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Cunningham, J. W., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 3, 1865.
Cassidy, Michael, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Cope, Abraham V., must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Dally, James W., must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Douglas, William K., must. in April 13, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Demazon, Lewis, must. in Feb. 10, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Davis, Thompson, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Daugherty, J. H., Sr., must. in Aug. 2, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Davis, William, must. in June 24, 1862; disch. by G. O. May 13, 1865.
Engle, Barney, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Eberly, Henry, must. in April 6, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Emfield, David, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Eagle, Henry, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; died at Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12, 1863.
Fausnaught, Isaac S., must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Fultz, Elisha, must. in March 30, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Funk, David P., must. in Jan. 8, 1864; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Funk, James, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Fultz, William M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Fleck, Conrad, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Fetters, Louis, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 17, 1865.
Fry, John, must. in Feb. 22, 1864; killed at Charlestown, Feb. 7, 1865.
Funk, Milton, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; trans. to Co. C Nov. 10, 1862.
Gates, Frederick, must. in Feb. 1, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Green, John W., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Gwin, William W., must. in Feb. 14, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Glant, Henry, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Green, John, must. in Jan. 24, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Hall, George W., must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Hollin, William R., must. in Feb. 1, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Hamilton, Charles H., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Heltzel, Joseph, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Hollis, William K., must. in Feb. 12, 1862; disch. by S. O. Nov. 20, 1865; vet.
Hileman, Samuel, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Hodson, Robert W., must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Hartman, Nicholas, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Haas, Conrad, must. in Feb. 13, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Hoffman, John, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Ivory, Francis, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Ivory, Thomas, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; died at Salisbury, N. C., Jan. 15, 1865; vet.
Johnston, Joseph C., must. in Feb. 7, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
James, Edward, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 22, 1865.
Kantner, David, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Kaler, Michael, must. in Feb. 11, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Lee, John, must. in March 1, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Louder, William H., must. in March 15, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Lunday, Joseph F., must. in March 28, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Little, Peter J., must. in Feb. 14, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 14, 1864.
Little, Augustine, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; died at Sandy Hook, Md., Oct. 18, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Antietam, sec. 26, lot D, grave 366.
Lynn, James, must. in Aug. 22, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Lehr, John, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Mountain, William, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Mountain, David, must. in May 18, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Mountain, Asbury, must. in May 18, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.

Meyer, George W., must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Matthew, James, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Magraw, Emanuel, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Mally, James, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
McCauley, William, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
McKinney, James, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
McKinney, Henry, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
McKinney, James A., must. in April 14, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
McKee, Albert, must. in Sept. 8, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
McFeeley, Barnabas, must. in Sept. 9, 1864; drafted; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
McAteer, John J., must. in Feb. 14, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. June 26, 1865; vet.
McHugh, James E., must. in March 30, 1864; killed at Charlestown, W. Va., March 13, 1865.
McCloskey, Joseph, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
McAteer, Augustine, must. in Feb. 6, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
McClain, David, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Nelson, John, must. in Feb. 15, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Oakwood, John, must. in Feb. 23, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Orr, Aaron F., must. in Sept. 21, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Parks, Amos, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Pfoff, Frederick, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Reed, John H., must. in April 9, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Rhodes, Samuel J., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Rice, Thomas, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Reigh, Frederick, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; trans. to Co. M; vet.
Smith, John R., must. in Feb. 13, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Smeltzer, Jacob, must. in March 28, 1864; absent at muster out.
Smeltzer, Ferdinand, must. in March 28, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Schlay, Adolph, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Swanger, Hugh, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Speece, Christian, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; captured June 29, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Stevens, Louis, must. in March 2, 1862; disch. March 7, 1865, expiration of term.
Stewart, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Shaffer, John, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. July 6, 1865.
Springer, Henry, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Specht, William, must. in Jan. 18, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Shingler, William, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Skelton, Jason, must. in Feb. 12, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Thompson, David, must. in Feb. 5, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Turnbaugh, John, must. in Dec. 2, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Turnbaugh, Martin, must. in Dec. 2, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Tomlinson, Francis, must. in Feb. 6, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1864, expiration of term.
Thompson, William, must. in June 7, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Turnbaugh, William, must. in Sept. 21, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 1, 1865.
Trout, Mayberry G., must. in Jan. 8, 1862; trans. to Co. I March 15, 1865; vet.
Tyler, David, must. in Jan. 24, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Trout, Ephraim R., must. in Feb. 14, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Utley, James E., must. in March 7, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Valentine, William, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Valentine, Malden, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; disch. Feb. 17, 1865, expiration of term.
Valentine, Levi, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Valentine, John P., must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Williamson, John H., must. in Feb. 13, 1862; must. out with company July 20, 1865; vet.
Wonderly, Forrest, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out with company July 20, 1865.
Walters, Jacob, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; captured June 29, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Williamson, Alfred, must. in Jan. 8, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Wilson, James, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; not on muster-out roll.
Wilson, Francis, must. in April 22, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Yingling, Thomas C., must. in Jan. 24, 1862; not on muster-out roll.

CHAPTER XXV.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

The One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Regiment.—This regiment was raised in July and the first part of August, 1862, under authority from Governor Curtin to Lieut.-Col. Jacob Higgins, of Blair County, to recruit a nine months' regiment as a part of the quota of Pennsylvania under the President's call of July 1, issued on account of the disasters to the army of Gen. McClellan on the Peninsula. Of the companies so raised and formed into the One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Regiment, four companies were raised in Huntingdon County and six in Blair. The Huntingdon County companies were as follows, viz.: Company C, Capt. William W. Wallace; Company F, Capt. John J. Lawrence (promoted to major in the organization of the regiment, and succeeded as captain by Lieut. William H. Simpson); Company H, Capt. Henry H. Gregg; and Company I, Capt. William F. Thomas (previously second lieutenant of Company G of the Fifth Reserves). The Blair County companies were Company A, Capt. Francis M. Bell; Company B, Capt. U. L. Huyett; Company D, Capt. Jacob Szink (promoted to lieutenant-colonel in the organization of the regiment, and succeeded as captain by C. R. Hostetter); Company E, Capt. William McGraw; Company G, Capt. John McKeage; and Company K, Capt. Joseph W. Gardner.

The rendezvous of the regiment was at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, where it was organized August 16th, under Col. Jacob Higgins, Lieut.-Col. Jacob Szink, and Maj. John J. Lawrence as field-officers. The adjutant of the regiment was Robert M. Johnston. On the day of the organization the regiment left Harrisburg and proceeded to Washington, where it was made part of a provisional brigade, commanded by Col. Higgins. Crossing into Virginia, it was encamped first at Hunter's Chapel, and was soon afterwards stationed at Fort Barnard. It remained a few weeks on the line of the Washington defenses, engaged in garrison duty and infantry and heavy artillery drill. On the 6th of September it was ordered to the north side of the Potomac, in view of the imminent invasion of Maryland by Gen. Lee's army, and to Rockville, Md., where it was assigned to duty in Crawford's brigade of Gen. Mansfield's division. The other regiments of the brigade were the Forty-sixth, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth, and One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania, the Fifth Connecticut, Tenth Maine, and Twenty-third New York. Marching from Rockville on the 9th of September, the regiment arrived at Antietam Creek on the 16th. On the afternoon of that day Gen. Hooker's corps, composing the right wing of the army, crossed the creek, and opened the battle by an attack on the enemy's position at that point. Late in the evening, the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth leading, the brigade took position on the front line and remained there during the night. Early in the morning of the 17th, the day of the great battle, the division was ordered forward to dislodge a body of the enemy who had taken cover in a strip of woods. This service was performed with great gallantry, the enemy being driven a considerable distance up the road towards Sharpsburg; but the division sustained the loss of its noble commander, Gen. Mansfield, who fell mortally wounded in the attack. Shortly afterwards the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth was again ordered forward to drive the enemy from a new position in the woods near a small church building. The regiment went in with a ringing cheer, and advanced rapidly and with great steadiness through a storm of iron and lead, drove the Confederates in disorder from their position, and took a number of prisoners; but in turn a heavy body of the enemy came up and charged the Union troops in front and flank with such impetuosity that they were compelled to retire, escaping from their perilous position with no little difficulty. The One Hundred and Twenty-fifth was next ordered in support of a battery in an advanced and exposed position. It did so, repelling two successive charges by the enemy, who were determined to capture the guns. Through all the desperate conflict at Antietam the officers and men of the regiment displayed the greatest courage and steadiness, though this was their first battle. The loss of the regiment at Antietam was one hundred and fifty, of whom only four were missing, all the remainder being killed or wounded. Among the latter were Capts. Hostetter, of D, and Simpson, of F company; Lieuts. W. F. Martin, of A, Alexander W. Marshall and P. S. Treese, of D, William C. Wagner, of F, and George Thomas, of I company. Five successive color-bearers were killed, and the adjutant, Lieut. Robert M. Johnston, was mortally wounded. He died on the 19th, and was succeeded by Lieut. John G. Cain, of E company.

After the close of the Antietam campaign the regiment remained in Maryland until the 1st of November, when it crossed the Potomac into Virginia, where it was for a short time stationed on Loudon Heights. On the 10th it marched via Leesburg towards the Rappahannock, whither the main body of the army had preceded this corps. It advanced to a point near Dumfries, but being too late to take part in the battle of Fredericksburg (December 13th), moved back to a camp at Fairfax Station. On the 28th of December it moved out from this camp to Wolf Run Shoals, where it was engaged in action with the enemy's cavalry, and returned to camp on the 29th, the men having suffered terribly from cold, fires not being allowed on account of their near proximity to the enemy. On the 8th of January the regiment again took part in a movement against the enemy at Wolf Run Shoals.

In Gen. Burnside's projected forward movement of the army in January, 1863, the regiment marched from camp on the 20th of that month, moving to Dumfries, to Shipping Point, and to Stafford Court-House, where it remained in camp, but constantly doing picket duty, and frequently engaged in movements to neighboring points on account of the near proximity of the enemy's cavalry. In March it was moved to a new station at Acquia Creek Landing. On the 27th of April the regiment (then in the Second Brigade of Geary's division of the Twelfth Corps) moved to the Rappahannock, crossing at Kelly's Ford, thence to the Rapidan, crossing at Germania Ford, and from thence to Chancellorsville, where it arrived in the afternoon of the 30th, and immediately went into line of battle. On the following morning the brigade advanced east, soon encountering the enemy's pickets, and drove them back to and through a belt of timber. On emerging from the woods, it was found to be in a very perilous position, far in advance of the other troops, and away from their support. The enemy in front opened a tremendous fire of artillery, and the brigade being in imminent danger of being flanked, was withdrawn with some difficulty, and retired to its position of the previous evening. During the night the men threw up some quite formidable defenses, though they had no intrenching implements, and were obliged to use their bayonets and tin plates for the work, the enemy at the same time being only a few rods away in front.

On the following day (May 2d) the regiment lay under a heavy artillery fire until 3 o'clock P.M., when it advanced with the brigade on the Fredericksburg plank-road, and made a demonstration against the enemy in the woods and behind his defenses; but failing to dislodge him, returned at about six o'clock to the position of the previous evening. A little later in the day came the tremendous assault of "Stonewall" Jackson on the Union right, which broke before the fury of the attack, and one division of the Eleventh Corps came rushing in disorder and panic to the position of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and its brigade, which was the first point where the wild retreat of the fugitives was checked. Geary's division formed line facing the rapid advance of the exultant Confederates, and held them at bay during the night and until the middle of the forenoon of the 3d, bravely holding the ground against repeated attacks, in which canister was used at short range on both sides. At ten o'clock A.M. of the 3d the enemy had succeeded in flanking the position on the right, and the division was compelled to fall back to a new and more contracted line, which was held with comparative ease, though the enemy made frequent and vigorous assaults upon it. During the remainder of the great battle the regiment was continually in line and for many hours under a heavy fire, but was not again closely engaged. On the morning of the 5th it was ordered to the left of the line, and commenced intrenching. In that position it remained during the day and succeeding night, and on the 6th recrossed the Rappahannock, and returned to its old camp at Acquia.

Chancellorsville was the last battle of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth, as its term of service had expired. It was then ordered to Pennsylvania, and on its arrival at Harrisburg was received with unbounded enthusiasm and admiration by thousands of people who had assembled there to greet its return. It was mustered out of service on the 18th of May, 1863. Following are given the rolls of the regiment, viz.:

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.

Field and Staff Officers.

Col. Jacob Higgins, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Lieut.-Col. Jacob Sźink, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. from capt. Co. D Aug. 16, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Maj. John J. Lawrence, must. in Aug. 15, 1862; pro. from capt. Co. F Aug. 16, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Adjt. Robert M. Johnston, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; died Sept. 19, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Adjt. John G. Cain, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. Co. E, Sept. 20, 1862; must out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Q.M. William C. Bailey, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; disch. April 15, 1863.

Q.M. Asbury Derland, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from corp. Co. C Nov. 7, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Surg. Lewis C. Cummings, must. in Sept. 23, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Asst. Surg. John Feay, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; disch. by S. O. Oct. 9, 1862.

Asst. Surg. Francis B. Davidson, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; disch. by S. O. Nov. 24, 1862.

Asst. Surg. Augustus Davis, must. in Dec. 10, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Asst. Surg. Lafayette F. Butler, must. in Feb. 11, 1863; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Chap. John D. Stewart, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Sergt.-Maj. Joseph M. Becker, must. in Aug. 12, 1862; pro. from private Co. F Aug. 16, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Q.M.-Sergt. David Feay, must. in Aug. 10, 1862; pro. from private Co. B Aug. 18, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Com.-Sergt. Henry L. Irvine, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; pro. from private Co. G March 15, 1863; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Com.-Sergt. Samuel G. Baker, must. in Aug. 10, 1862; died at Stafford Court-House, Va., March 14, 1863.

Hosp. Steward John F. Conrad, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from corp. Co. C Aug. 20, 1862; must. out with regiment May 18, 1863.

Company A.

(This company was mustered into the service of the United States Aug. 10, 1862.)

Capt. Francis M. Bell, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

First Lieut. Jesse S. Stewart, killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

First Lieut. Wilbur F. Martin, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. May 4, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Second Lieut. David G. Ganoe, pro. from 1st sergt. May 4, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

First Sergt. Alfred Abbott, pro. from corp. to sergt. Jan. 28, 1863, to 1st sergt. May 4, 1863; must. out May 18, 1863.

Sergt. Oliver G. Smith, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Sergt. Charles Merriman, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Sergt. William B. Meredith, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Sergt. William Funk, pro. from corp. May 4, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. William Miller, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. C. F. Kirkpatrick, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. William H. H. Berry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. J. W. Hendershot, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. Henry B. Duck, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. George C. Davidson, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. H. I. Boughamer, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. John W. Grazier, pro. to corp. May 4, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Corp. William C. Kean, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 24, 1862.

Corp. Amon G. Edwards, died at Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 9, of wounds received at Antietam, Md, Sept. 17, 1862.

Corp. Andrew Womer, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot A, grave 88.

Musician David S. Johnson, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Musician Stephen V. Haslet, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Ayers, Jacob, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Ake, Joseph W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Baker, Isaac F., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Beaty, Joseph W. K., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Bennett, Alexander, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Beyer, Ezra C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Bowls, James B., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Bresler, Lindley H., died at Alexandria, Va., Dec. 17, 1862; grave 615.

Beamer, Thomas W., died at Stafford Court-House, Va., March 18, 1863.

Crane, Andrew, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Crocker, Henry H., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Crone, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Crowl, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Cunningham, D. T., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Clodious, Charles, wounded and missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Coy, John, disch. Jan. 24, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Crissman, Austin, died Sept. 20, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Deahle, Henry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Dell, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Dunmire, George B., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Dickson, David F., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Eakins, David W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Esterline, John M., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Funk, George, missing in action at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Garman, Philip, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Green, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Hart, Jonathan, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Hicks, Daniel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Heard, Thomas W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Hook, Samuel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Houseman, James, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Hunter, Thomas, absent in hospital at muster out.

Herman, Moses, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Huff, Charles, disch. Jan. 26, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Hunter, James H., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Henckey, Samuel A., died at Harper's Ferry, Va., Sept. 20, 1862.

Genberg, John W., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Jones, Daniel, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.

Keatly, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Keatly, Calvin F., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Kinsel, John M., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Kerr, Robert, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Kinsel, Erastus, died April 7, 1863, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Laporte, Adolph M., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Lago, William F., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Merrimen, William F., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Myers, Thomas, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Myers, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Miles, George, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McIlvaine, Henry C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McAvoy, Michael, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McQuillen, A. W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McQuillen, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McCarney, George S., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McCoy, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McGill, Thomas T., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McFarland, John A., died at Stafford Court-House, Va., Feb. 8, 1863.
Osborne, David P., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Orr, George W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Robison, James, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Rosberry, James, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Rosberry, John T., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sharrer, George W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sloan, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Smith, Thomas, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sturtsman, Henry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stevens, David M., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Shaw, Daniel, died Sept. 28, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Templeton, John R., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Thomas, George W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Thomas, Jerry B., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Vaughn, Henry, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.
Vaughn, George, wounded at Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. April 1, 1863.
Vanscoyoc, Abraham, disch. on surg. certif. March 15, 1863.
Watson, Jerry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Wilson, Joseph W., absent, sick, at must. out.
Wolf, Isaac P., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Wesley, Charles, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Wolf, Theawalt, died at Smoketown, Md., Jan. 25, 1863, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

COMPANY B.

Capt. Ulysses L. Huyett, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
First Lieut. Joseph R. Higgins, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Second Lieut. G. Schollenberger, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
First Sergt. Hill P. Wilson, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
(The balance of this company was mustered into the service of the United States Aug. 10, 1862.)
Sergt. James Houck, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. James Schollar, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Ephraim Gerst, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. James D. Allender, pro. from corp. Oct. 1, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Samuel G. Baker, died at Stafford Court-House, Va., March 19, 1863.
Corp. Joseph Sias, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. James Geiser, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Robert Feay, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Robert McFalls, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. James C. Carey, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. F. M. McKinnan, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Daniel I. Irwin, pro. to corp. Sept. 21, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Elijah Estep, pro. to corp. Feb. 4, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. John D. Patterson, disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 26, 1863.
Musician J. A. B. McKamey, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Musician Calvin C. Hewitt, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Amhizer, Daniel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Aurandt, Jacob F., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Blake, William B., wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brantner, James S., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brunnell, William, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brunnell, Thomas N., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brumbaugh, J. C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Butts, William G., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brantner, John H., disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 9, 1862.
Carles, Henry D., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Cooper, James M., must out with company May 18, 1863.
Cooper, Theodore N., died at Fairfax Station, Va., Jan. 3, 1863.
Dougherty, Vic V., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
De Haven, Wesley, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Donnelly, David R., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Eicholtz, Alfred, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Ewing, Levi M., died at Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 21, of wounds received at Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862.
Fouse, William D., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Feay, David, pro. to q.m.-sergt. Aug. 18, 1862.
Feats, John A., died Nov. 30, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Garner, Joseph C., wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Geiser, Tillman, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Heller, Edward W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Houck, George A., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Huyott, Miles C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lang, Joseph H., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lang, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lower, Henry G., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Love, John D., wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lucas, John H., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lucas, Abraham, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lucas, Gabriel, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 9, 1862.
Metz, Thomas J., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Metz, Thornton B., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Mock, John E., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
McCoy, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McGonigal, George W., wounded; missing in action at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
McManamy, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McManamy, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McMichaels, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Nicodemus, John H., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Powell, Milton P., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Philip, Ralph.
Reiger, August, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Rhody, George H., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Rhody, William H., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Richards, John, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Riley, William N., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Shaffer, Samuel B., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Shinefelt, John C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Slonecker, Lemuel A., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stuart, Asbury H., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stuart, Madison W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sparr, Samuel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sims, Andrew J., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 24, 1862.
Straithoof, Jacob, died Dec. 30, 1862; burial record, Jan. 3, 1863, at Fort Schuyler, N. Y.; buried in Cypress Hill Cemetery, L. I.; grave 583.
Straithoof, Johnson, died Feb. 15, 1863, at Washington; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
Tresse, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Tresse, Harry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Trout, Alexander, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Tresse, David, died at Maryland Heights, Md., Oct. 26, 1862.
Teats, John A., died at Frederick, Md., November 30, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, Antietam, section 26, lot E, grave 462.
Withers, Henry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Walters, Joseph, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Westbrooke, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Winters, George, wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Whitehead, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Wolford, Edward, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Wolfkill, Benjamin F, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Yerger, George W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

COMPANY C.

Capt. William W. Wallace, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
1st Lieut. William B. Zeigler, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; res. Feb. 25, 1863.
1st Lieut. L. Frank Watson, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from sergt. Feb. 7, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
2d Lieut. William F. McPherran, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; died Feb. 6, 1863.
2d Lieut. Theodore L. Flood, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. Feb. 7, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
1st Sergt. John D. Isett, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from sergt. Feb. 7, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Walter W. Greenland, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. J. R. McMurtrie, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; pro. from corp. Sept. 18, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Charles E. Campbell, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from corp. Feb. 7, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Henry A. Hoffman, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. from corp. Feb. 26, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. J. Randolph Simpson, must. in Aug. 11, 1863; disch. April 3, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Sergt. George A. Simpson, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 23, lot D, grave 420.
Corp. Thomas C. Fisher, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Z. G. Cresswell, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company, May 18, 1863.
Corp. Miles Zentmire, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; pro. to corp. Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. James E. Wilson, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. to corp. Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. David P. Henderson, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. to corp. Oct. 30, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Robert C. Morrow, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. to corp. Feb. 7, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. John R. Isenberg, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Asbury Derland, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. to q.m. Nov. 7, 1862.
Corp. Thomas J. Gregg, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. to 2d lieut. Co. F, 70th Regt. P. V., Nov. 20, 1862.
Corp. Albert C. Snyder, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; trans. to U. S. Telegraph Corps Jan. 3, 1863.
Corp. John F. Conrad, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. to hospital steward Aug. 20, 1862.
Corp. Benjamin F. Williams, must. in Aug 11, 1862; died Nov. 13, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Musician George W. Friedley, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Africa, George H., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; died at Rockville, Md., Oct. 26, 1862.
Benner, Thomas M., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Baker, William, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brenneman, J. C., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brenneman, M. L., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brenneman, M. B., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. April 6, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Brenneman, G. W, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. Nov. 10, 1862.
Canan, Henry, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Carmon, John, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Carmon, Henry C., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Conrad, Benson W., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Aug. 29, 1862.
Decker, Harry P., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Denny, Alexander, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Dewalt, John A., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Decker, Nicholas, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died Oct. 11, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Dunmire, Elijah C, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died at Georgetown, D. C., Sept. 24, 1862.
Ehman, George, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Enyeart, Thomas L., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Fockler, J. Lee, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Funk, James, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Friday, John H., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Green, James M., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Graber, Adam, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Garland, David W., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Gahagin, Mordecai, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Goodman, Joseph, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Haslet, James, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Heckadorne, H. B., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Hearn, Jacob, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Hart, Frederick, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Hoffman, John, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Hawn, Henry, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. Nov. 15, for wounds received at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Harvey, Parker C., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 13, 1862.
Hoffman, Uriah D., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Hood, Henry, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died Nov. 10, 1862.
Isenberg, Nicholas S., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Isenberg, Samuel V., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Isenberg, George W., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died at Maryland Heights, Md., Oct. 25, 1862.
Knode, Joshua R., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Kopelin, William O., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Knode, Albert A., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died at Maryland Heights, Md., Oct. 21, 1862.
Kuhn, David, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Lytle, Milton S., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lincoln, J. George, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Leffard, John R., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Leffard, Enoch I., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Low, John A., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Myers, Eli H., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.

McCoy, William R., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McFerren, Alfred, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; absent, sick, at muster out.
McDivitt, C. James, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McCoy, John S., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; killed at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Parker, David H., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Patton, Joseph, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Peterson, William H., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Robb, Porter A., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Robb, William W., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Raugh, Sellers, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Reed, Charles H., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Robb, J. Easton, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. March 22, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Reed, Samuel, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died at Fairfax Station, Va., Jan. 17, 1863.
Simpson, Alexander C., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Snyder, David C., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Snyder, John P., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sprankle, Jeremiah, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sprankle, George, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Spyker, Daniel, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stewart, John G., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Swoope, James M. C., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stewart, James A., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
White, David, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
White, John, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Whittaker, Thomas S., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Wyland, George, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Williams, John H., must. in Aug. 13, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Zeek, Elias A., must. in Aug. 11, 1862; disch. Nov. 21, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.

Company D.

Capt. Jacob Szink, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. to lieut.-col. Aug. 16, 1862.
Capt. Christ. R. Hostetter, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. from 1st lieut. Aug. 16, 1862; disch. March 17, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Capt. Alexander W. Marshall, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
1st Lieut. Thomas E. Campbell, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. March 17, 1863, to 1st lieut. April 19, 1863; must. out May 18, 1863.
2d Lieut. Peter S. Treese, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; com. 1st lieut. March 17, 1863; not must.; disch. on surg. certif. April 17, 1863.
2d Lieut. G. W. Hawksworth, must. in Aug. 13, 1862; pro from sergt. to 1st sergt. March 17, 1863, to 2d lieut. April 19, 1863; must. out May 18, 1863.
(The balance of this company was mustered into the service of the United States on the 13th day of August, 1862.)

First Sergt. James H. Attic, pro. from sergt. April 19, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Edwin Hammond, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Isaac E. Brown, pro. from corp. April 19, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. William Burley, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; pro. from corp. March 19, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. James C. Tresse, pro. from private to corp., to sergt. April 19, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sergt. Edward L. Russ, disch. Nov. 13, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Corp. David A. Burtnett, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. George A. Burtram, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Mordecai McMahon, pro. to corp. Aug. 25, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Alfred Bomgardner, pro. to corp. Nov. 16, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. James G. Kerr, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; pro. to corp. Sept. 21, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. William Springer, pro. to corp. Jan. 14, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Morris Davis, pro. to corp. April 29, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. John M. Dougherty, pro. to corp. April 29, 1863; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Corp. Robert Try, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 13, 1862.
Corp. John A. Kelley, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Musician W. A. Brambaugh, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Musician Augustus Boyden, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Aiken, Stephen, disch. March 13, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Boyer, Albert, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Burley, Levi, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Blake, Samuel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Brumbaugh, Jacob, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Blake, Wilbur E., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Bowen, Francis, wounded and missing in action at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Baker, John, must out with company May 18, 1863.
Brubaker, George, disch. on surg. certif. March 5, 1863.
Burley, Emanuel, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Brown, John A., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Cochrane, Robert, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Cowrey, James W., died at Harper's Ferry, Va., Jan. 21, 1863.
Dasher, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Davis, Able, disch. on surg. certif. March 23, 1863.
Davis, John E., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Davis, Leonard, died at Acquia Creek, Va., April 21, 1863.
Evans, Andrew, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Finney, Andrew W., died Nov. 10, 1862.
Green, Samuel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Glass, John R., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Gearhart, Fred. W., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Howell, John C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Higgen, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Haney, Patrick, Jr., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Haney, Patrick, Sr., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Hoar, William S., disch. Jan. 25, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Homan, Thomas, died at Fairfax Station, Va., Jan. 15, 1863.
Irvin, George M., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Kissell, John G., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Keagy, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Keresey, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Lingerfelter, Josiah, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Laub, William A. B., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Long, Samuel A., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Madison, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Myers, William H., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Minehart, Lewis, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Miller, Andrew, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Myers, Andrew, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Myers, Joseph, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Marshall, Winfield S., must. out with company May 18, 1863.

Miller, William T., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Markley, Isaac, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Mahon, John, not on muster-out roll.
McCloskey, David, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McCloskey, George A., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
McLaughlin, John S., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Oswalt, David W., killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Owens, Matthew, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Painter, Jacob, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Patton, Edward, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Parsons, Charles A., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Richmond, Samuel S., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Rhinehart, Rice, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Richmond, Albert E., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Robertson, Joseph, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. April 2, 1863.
Rollin, John, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 3, 1863.
Rose, John, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Shaffer, Joseph, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Schlag, Adolph, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Sharier, Philip, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Steel, Samuel, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stackhouse, Henry, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stewart, Andrew, wounded and missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Szink, Henry C., must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Stoner, Charles A., died Dec. 13, 1862.
Urich, John, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Walton, John, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Woods, Thomas, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
West, William, must. out with company May 18, 1863.
Williamson, S. H., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 28, 1863.

Company E.

(This company was mustered into the service of the United States on the 13th day of August, 1862, and mustered out on the 18th day of May, 1863, except in cases otherwise noted.)

Capt. William McGraw, must. in Aug. 16, 1862, and must. out with company.
1st Lieut. Samuel A. Kephart, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
2d Lieut. John G. Cain, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; pro. to adjt. Sept. 20, 1862.
2d Lieut. John H. Robertson, must. in Aug. 15, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. Sept. 20, 1862.
1st Sergt. John Bryan, must. in Aug. 15, 1862; pro. from sergt. Sept. 20, 1862.
Sergt. William Nosker, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Sergt. George W. Perkins.
Sergt. William Rounds.
Sergt. James Gardner, pro. from corp. Sept. 20, 1862.
Corp. Peter Stroup, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 9, 1862.
Corp. Samuel Stroup, must. in Aug. 15, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862, and at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Corp. James Mathews.
Corp. William McClure.
Corp. Charles Butler.
Corp. Adam Rough, pro. to corp. Sept. 26, 1862.
Corp. George S. Beers, pro. to corp. Sept. 16, 1862.
Corp. Daniel Deihl, pro. to corp. Feb. 26, 1863.
Corp. William McGinnis, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 25, 1863.
Corp. George Hoopengarner.
Musician John Scullin.
Musician Charles H. Suder.
Benton, Emanuel M.
Buck, William, absent, sick, at muster out.
Bottorf, David.
Burknet, John.
Brindle, George W.
Butler, David, must. in Aug. 15, 1862.
Benton, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Beigle, John A., must. in Aug. 15, 1862.
Benton, Jesse L., must. in Aug. 15, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 30, 1863.
Baker, Franklin, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Burg, Adam, died September 30, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
Carnell, David.
Dell, Peter.
Dunlap, Essington.
Dunn, Patrick.
Dasher, James.
Dunlap, John, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Dively, Gabriel, must. in Aug. 15, 1862.
Dodson, Andrew, must. in Aug. 15, 1862.
Earlenbaugh, A.
Ginter, John.
Gardner, Robert.
Gesler, Lewis H.
Gallagher, John, disch. on surg. certif. April 22, 1863.
Harklerode, A. H.
Harklerode, David, wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Hanly, David.
Heverly, William P.
Heverly, William.
Hoover, George W., must. in Dec. 20, 1862.
Hale, Henry, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.
Kephart, Jacob.
Leighty, George.
Kough, John S.
Langham, Solomon.
Long, Daniel.
Leedom, Levi.
Lambright, Jonathan, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan 30, 1863.
Lier, John, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot A, grave 53.
Millward, Luke.
Miller, Stanley.
Mauk, George W., died at Washington Jan. 23, 1863; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
McCoy, Dennis.
Phagans, James.
Noll, Henry S.
Pressell, Samuel.
Osborn, William R.
Rhodes, John.
Roach, Thomas.
Stanley, Joseph B., absent without leave at muster out.
Swither, Daniel.
Snyder, George, Jr.
Strayer, John.
Stiffler, Sylvanus L.
Summers, George.
Smith, David.
Summers, William.
Shoff, David.
Snyder, George, Sr., disch. on surg. certif. April 2, 1863.
Troxell, Abraham, died at Harper's Ferry, Va., Nov. 9, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, Va., lot 25.
Wright, Thomas.
Weyandt, Samuel.
Wheeler, William.
Wagoner, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1862.
Wilt, Henry H.

Company F.

(Except in cases otherwise noted, this company was mustered into the service of the United States on the 12th day of August, 1862, and mustered out on the 18th day of May, 1863.)

Capt. John J. Lawrence must. in Aug. 15, 1862; pro. to maj. Aug. 16, 1862.
Capt. William H. Simpson, pro. from 1st lieut. Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
1st Lieut. William C. Wagoner, disch. Feb. 9, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
1st Lieut. Franklin H. Lane, pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Aug. 16, 1862, to 1st lieut. Feb. 9, 1863.
2d Lieut. J. F. N. Householder, pro. from sergt. to 1st sergt. Aug. 16, 1862, to 2d lieut. Feb. 9, 1863.
1st Sergt. Albert B. Flood, pro. from sergt. Feb. 9, 1863.
Sergt. George A. Black.
Sergt. James B. Geissenger.
Sergt. Valentine Brown.
Sergt. David Hazard, pro. from private Feb. 9, 1863.
Corp. John G. Corbin.
Corp. William Homan.
Corp. Thomas Blake.
Corp. Hampton C. Watson.
Corp. William J. Hampson.
Corp. Alrich Paul.
Corp. Joseph B. Farrer.
Corp. John H. Boring.
Musician John L. Williams.
Barton, Thomas.
Brown, Jacob.
Boyer, George.
Brown, William L.

Bryan, Charles, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Bryant, James, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Bupp, Solomon.
Becker, Joseph M., pro. to sergt.-maj. Aug. 16, 1862.
Cannon, John.
Carothers, Charles.
Corbin, Charles.
Cozzens, Robert.
Cypher, Thomas.
Cunningham, Benjamin, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Dering, Valentine.
Fulton, Alfred.
Friedley, William, died Nov. 9, 1862.
Geist, Andrew.
Graham, William.
Hall, James.
Haugh, William H., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Heffner, John (2).
Hudson, William C.
Hazard, John L.
Hayes, Thomas L., disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 27, 1863.
Heffner, John (1), died at Washington, D. C., March 5, 1863.
Isenberg, Samuel.
Isenberg, David, died at Fairfax Station, Va., Jan. 4, 1863; buried in Harmony Burial-Grounds, D. C.
Kelley, William T.
Kyler, David.
Lewis, John D., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Mitchell, James A.
Moore, James.
Moore, John O.
Myers, William, disch. on surg. certif. March 23, 1863.
McClure, Andrew, disch. on surg. certif. March 26, 1863.
McCracken, Joseph, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot A, grave 27.
Neff, William.
Owens, Richard, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
Price, Joshua E.
Protzman, Martin L.
Reed, William E.
Richards, Thomas J.
Riland, Alfred A.
Stall, Thomas.
Snyder, J. Howard.
Strickler, William R., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Syling, Lewis.
Switzer, Elias H., disch. Jan. 5, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Swoope, David, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 3, 1863.
Shorthill, David R., disch. March 8, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Snyder, Oliver W., disch. on surg. certif. April, 1863.
Trout, Brinkley.
Tyhurst, Alfred.
Wagoner, George J., must. Aug. 14, 1862.
Watkins, Nathaniel.
Witter, Josiah.
Wright, Thomas.
West, Allen, trans. to 14th Regt. Ind. Vols. Oct. 1, 1862.
Walker, William C., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Walheater, John H., died at Fairfax Station, Va., Dec. 30, 1862.
Walker, Robert D., died at Washington, D. C., May 1, 1863.
Young, John B.
Young, Thomas.
Hamer, Moses.
Harvey, Frank.
Lane, William.
Lewis, David D.
Saxton, Henry C.
Shearer, Calvin B.
Shoemaker, H. F.
Shriner, John.
Shriner, Thomas.
States, William.
Moore, Joseph.
Morgan, Jacob.

COMPANY G.

(The entire membership of Company G was mustered into the service of the United States on the 13th day of August, 1862, and mustered out on the 18th day of May, 1863, unless otherwise noted.)

Capt. John McKeage.
First Lieut. Samuel A. Andrews.
Second Lieut. Thomas McCamant.
First Sergt. Augustus Baton, pro. from sergt. Jan. 1, 1863.
Sergt. John Swires.
Sergt. George W. Vaughn.
Sergt. John Hellwig.
Sergt. James Rodgers, pro. from corp. March 1, 1863.
Sergt. David E. McCahan, disch. Feb. 13, 1863, for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Corp. James R. Robison.
Corp. Moses Garland.
Corp. Horace Kemp, pro. to corp. Feb. 17, 1863.
Corp. Alexander Boggs.
Corp. John G. Christian, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Corp. Reese Williams, pro. to corp. March 26, 1863.
Corp. James H. Gibbony, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot A, grave 63.
Musician John Miller.
Musician Thomas Lloyd.
Andrews, David.
Barr, Theodore, missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863.
Burns, Thomas.
Black, David M.
Beamer, Albert, disch. December 8 for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Cameron, William S.
Canan, William H.
Classon, Josiah S.
Charles, Thomas, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Davis, John.
Dunn, James.
Dannals, Charles R.
Holler, James M., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Hewit, Henry.
Hicks, Philemon N.
Irvine, Alfred C.
Isett, Aaron B.
Irvine, Henry L., pro. to com.-sergt. March 15, 1863.
Jones, Thaddeus.
Johnson, Franklin R.
Johnson, James R., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Johnson, David R. P., disch. December 8 for wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
London, George W.
London, James G.
Leet, Callohan M.
Lovett, John, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 3, 1863.
Long, James, died at Frederick, Md., Feb. 5, 1863, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery.
Miller, Thomas.
Mans, John H.
Metzler, Joseph F.
Morrow, James, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
McRea, William J.
McKee, Thomas G.
McCord, Henry.
McClellan, Thomas.
McClellan, Hugh T.
McClellan, William H.
McGinnis, James.
McClellan, Adolphus, disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 11, 1862.
Ounkest, Martin.
Ounkest, Daniel.
Price, Joseph C., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Phillips, Benjamin F.
Phillips, David, Jr.
Prounkard, J. E., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 11, 1863.
Piper, Joseph H., died at Harper's Ferry, Va., Oct. 28, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, Winchester, lot 25.
Robison, Albert.
Ruggles, Benjamin F.
Reed, Joseph H., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Reffner, Joseph.
Russ, Calvin.
Riddle, James D., died Sept. 26, of wounds received at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Snyder, William H.
Stuff, Valentine.
Sanders, John, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Sharar, H. Bascom, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Tippery, Mayberry.
Taylor, Henry C.
Taylor, Samuel, absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Thompson, R. D.
Williams, David P.
Corp. Joseph Carroll.
Corp. Thomas M. Barr.
Bollinger, Henry L.
Buterbaugh, Samuel.
Curtis, George R.
Christy, Livingston L.
Clarke, Robert.
Dasher, Samuel D.
Fulton, Samuel A.
Gibboney, Benjamin F.
Hewit, William.
Hammers, James J.
Martin, William.
Martin, Henry.
Scott, James P.
Sellers, David M.

Company H.

(This company was mustered into the service of the United States on the 14th day of August, 1862, except in a few cases otherwise designated, and mustered out on the 18th day of May, 1863, unless otherwise noted.)

Capt. Henry H. Gregg, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
First Lieut. John Flenner, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Second Lieut. Samuel F. Stewart, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; res. Jan. 24, 1863.
Second Lieut. James T. Foster, pro. from sergt. Feb. 24, 1863.
First Sergt. George F. Painter, pro. from sergt. March 1, 1863.
Sergt. Jesse E. March.
Sergt. Abner P. Lane, pro. from corp. March 1, 1863.
Sergt. William L. De Grant, pro. from corp. March 1, 1863.
Sergt. William H. Flenner.
Sergt. John W. Lytle, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 21, 1863.
Corp. Robert Wilson.
Corp. William M. Davis.
Corp. Henry C. Logan, pro. to corp. Oct. 21, 1862.
Corp. Lewis Gahagan, pro. to corp. Oct. 21, 1862.
Corp. David Shaffer, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; pro. to corp. Nov. 21, 1862.
Corp. Joseph Cox, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
Corp. Allison H. Crum, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
Corp. James A. Couch, pro. to corp. March 1, 1863.
Corp. Samuel Hetrick, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 14, 1863.
Corp. Peter Carton, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot B, grave 175.
Musician Sylvanus W. Gettys.
Musician Taylor Myton.
Ayres, Wesley C.
Aurand, John M.
Ayers, Jeremiah L., disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 18, 1863.
Buchanan, Robert J.
Bell, Anderson.
Bell, Alexander.
Bell, James A.
Bailey, Samuel C., absent, sick, at muster out.
Boblitz, Eugene, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 9, 1862.
Brindle, Cyrus, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 21, 1862.
Baird, David, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.
Berkstresser, J. H., disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.
Burkholder, George, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 13, 1863.
Crouse, Valentine, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Davis, James H.
Decker, Levi, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 13, 1862.
Decker, John W., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. March 16, 1863.
Dierfield, James H., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot A, grave 29.
Eckley, Jacob A.
Fink, Solomon, died April 22, 1863.
Gorsuch, Nathan H., absent, sick, at muster out.
Garner, Michael.
Gregg, David F., disch. on surg. certif. April 2, 1863.
eck, Levi G.
Harker, Andrew.
Hammond, Martin.
Howard, Thomas H.
Hetrick, John.
Harris, William.
Hetrick, Samuel S., disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 21, 1862.
Harper, Jonathan L., disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.
Hunter, Robert L., disch. on surg. certif. April 1, 1863.
Hertle, John, disch. on surg. certif. April 22, 1863.
Hoover, Joseph W., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Hess, Samuel, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot A, grave 28.
Johnson, David H.
Knode, Peter.
Kenyon, Alfred W.
Keefer, John, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Long, Elisha.
Miller, Abijah B.
Miller, Peter R.
Morrison, John B., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
McCarthy, John S., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
O'Donnell, Constance.
O'Donnell, Michael, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Pardoner, Henry.
Piper, Martin M.
Patterson, John M.
Parker, William J., disch. on surg. certif. March 15, 1863.
Quarry, John P.
Rorabaugh, Martin.
Rudy, Eminger S., disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 3, 1863.
Sloan, James D.
Shawley, David.
Slack, John R.
Spangler, Jerry.
Silknitter, Solomon.
Steel, Jacob.
Snyder, James G., wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 5, 1862.
Shawley, Daniel, disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 29, 1862.
Spanogle, George B., disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 10, 1862.
Wilson, Henry.
Waldsmith, John W.
Wingate, William B.
Wilson, John.
Wingate, Alexander B.

Company I.

(Company I was mustered into the service of the United States on the 13th day of August, 1862, and mustered out on the 18th day of May, 1863, except in cases designated by date.)

Capt. William F. Thomas.
1st Lieut. George Thomas, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
2d Lieut. John D. Fee.
1st Sergt. William Bodley.
Sergt. Robert H. Myers.
Sergt. David P. Kinkhead.
Sergt. William Pope, pro. from private Jan. 1, 1863.
Sergt. George W. Hall, pro. from private April 10, 1863.
Sergt. Thomas L. Hall, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. April 10, 1863.
Sergt. Alfred McAllister, died at Huntingdon, Pa., October 25, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Corp. John H. Sower.
Corp. John D. Coder.
Corp. D. Porter Couch, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1863.
Corp. Samuel Houck, pro. to corp. Jan. 1, 1863.
Corp. George A. Mitchell.
Corp. James B. Harris, pro. to corp. March 20, 1863.
Corp. Daniel Kauffman, pro. to corp. April 4, 1863.
Corp. Andrew Harbison, pro. to corp. April 10, 1863.
Corp. William A. Keister, disch. on surg. certif. March 20, 1863.
Corp. Isaiah Foster, disch. on surg. certif. April 4, 1863.
Corp. Edward H. Wist, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1863.
Musician James H. Lightner.
Musician Robison Gill, absent, without leave, at muster out.
Allison, William S.
Anderson, Winchester, disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 3, 1863.
Baker, Reuben T.
Bradley, Thomas.
Brode, Abraham.
Baker, F. Alfred, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Birge, William H., died at Harper's Ferry, Va., Nov. 6, 1862.
Barnet, David.
Coder, Samuel C.
Corbin, Benjamin F.
Clark, Thomas A.
Corbin, Henry L.
Coder, Simon, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 9, 1862.
Clark, Thomas H., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot B, grave 137.
Corbin, William W., killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Deviney, David P.
David, Benjamin, died at Pleasant Valley, Md., Oct. 29, 1862.
Gerlach, Conrad, wounded at Antietam, Md , Sept. 17, 1862.
Gray, Daniel, disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 9, 1862.
Hoffman, James L.
Heffrights, Martin.
Hawn, Merits.
Harvey, John F.
Hall, Albert, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Hoover, Robert.
Houck, William.
Hanawalt, William H.
Howard, John.
Householder, G. W., died of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Hays, William, died October 31 at Frederick, Md., of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Harken, Samuel B. wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; died at Coffee Run, Pa., Nov. 16, 1862.

Jamison, Benjamin, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Martin, William, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Miller, Frederick, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Mick, Solomon, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 15, 1862.
McLaughlin, W. H. Nee, Henry.
Powell, Henry H. Ready, John.
Roupe, Theodore, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Roupe, William. Ripple, George.
Steele, William W. Sankey, Thomas J.
Seebeck, John, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Smith, Christopher A. Shannon, Patrick.
Scott, John W., missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.
Shaffer, Isaiah, wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 19, 1863.
Snyder, Joseph, killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Wolfkill, Daniel D. Woomer, Isaac.
Warfel, Adam. Warfel, Henry C.

COMPANY K.

(This company was mustered out of the service of the United States May 18th, except in cases otherwise indicated.)
Capt. Joseph W. Gardner, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
First Lieut. Edward R. Dunegan, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Second Lieut. Daniel J. Traves, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
First Sergt. Henry B. Huff, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. from private Aug. 16, 1862.
Sergt. Joseph H. Bryan, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Sergt. William Graw, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Sergt. Hugh G. Krise, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Sergt. John Kahoe, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Corp. William J. Bradley, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Corp Frank Beatty, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Corp. George W. Russell, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Corp. James Cummerford, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. to corp. Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Corp. Britton E. Clack, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Corp. Henry M. Shots, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Corp. John A. McIntyre, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; pro. to corp. Aug. 16, 1862; captured at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; disch.
Corp. Bernard J. McFeely, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Musician Caleb Tipten, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Akers, Wilson L., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Able, John H., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Arbel, Thomas G., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Beatty, Jacob, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Burkheimer, M., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Brunt, William, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Bendin, Simon, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Bierman, Frederick, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Beal, John S., must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 9, 1863.
Beal, William, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. March 7, 1863.
Bell, Joseph, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 23, 1863.
Brudin, James, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 23, 1863.
Boartman, A. H., must. in Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; died at Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 13, 1862; buried in Mount Kalma Cemetery.
Cluck, Jacob, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Collin, Elisha B., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Cook, Henry H., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Crook, Peter, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Callaghan, Andrew, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Conway, John A., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Cratin, Joshua, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; killed at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Dillon, Charles, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; absent, in hospital, at must. out.
Donahoe, Patrick, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Ehrnfelt, Jacob M., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Edmonson, Samuel B., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Elder, Henry R, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Engles, Robert P., must. in Aug. 14, 1862; died in Washington, D. C., April 28, 1863.
Finney, Francis, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Farrell, James, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Grey, George W., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Gates, Henry A., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Huffler, Frederick, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Hall, Edmund, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Hicks, Josiah D., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Hobart, Bartholomew, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Inlow, Francis, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Jones, George W., must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Kearney, Patrick F., must. in Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
King, James, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Lee, Martin, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Louden, George M., must. in Aug. 14, 1862; died at Harper's Ferry, Va., Dec. 25, 1862.
Mathews, John, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Myers, William, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; missing in action at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Mauer, Joseph, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Mabus, Leonard, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; died in Maryland Oct. 21, 1862.
McLune, George, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
McMullen, John E., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
McCleary, Samuel, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
McGough, Charles, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
McGough, Silas A., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
McGuire, Hiram, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
McDemitt, Michael A., must. in Aug. 16, 1862; died at Philadelphia, Pa., of wounds received at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
McDemitt, Louis C., must. in Aug. 16, 1862; died at Booneville, Md., Oct. 18, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862.
Noel, MichaelJ., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Orr, Aaron F., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Rodman, John, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Rhodes, Jacob, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Rhodes, Abraham, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862.
Rhodes, Isaac, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Ramiley, William R., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Robinson, James H., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Reinhart, Joseph, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Richard, George, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Speilman, William P., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
String, William, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Sueger, Hugh, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Smith, Robert, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; wounded at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Shafer, Jacob, must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Trought, Frederick, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Tuiney, Francis P., must. in Aug. 16, 1862.
Weakfield, Thomas, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Ward, Frederick C., must. in Aug. 14, 1862; died Sept. 19, of wounds received at Antietam Sept. 17, 1862; buried in National Cemetery, section 26, lot B, grave 172.
Wright, William L., must. in Aug. 14, 1862.
Yerger, Henry, must. in Aug. 14, 1862.

CHAPTER XXVI.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SEVENTH AND ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-NINTH REGIMENTS.

The One Hundred and Forty-seventh Regiment was organized in the field (at Loudon Heights, Va.), Oct. 10, 1862, it being formed of Companies L, M, N, O, and P of the Twenty-eighth Regiment, with three new companies from Dauphin County. Company O of the Twenty-eighth was from Huntingdon County, as has already been noticed in the history of that regiment. It became Company B of the One Hundred and Forty-seventh. The regiment was placed under command of Lieut.-Col. Ario Pardee, Jr., who was promoted to that grade from major of the Twenty-eighth. Two new companies were afterwards added to the One Hundred and Forty-seventh, bringing its strength up to the usual standard, and Lieut.-Col. Pardee was promoted to colonel (March 19, 1864), and John Craig was promoted to major.

On the 10th of December the regiment moved to Fairfax Court-House, and immediately after to the Rappahannock, but arrived too late to participate in the battle of Fredericksburg. In January, 1863, it took part in Burnside's "Mud March," and after its fruitless close went into camp at Stafford Court-House, Va. Soon afterwards it went into winter-quarters at Acquia Landing.

In the spring campaign of 1863 the regiment crossed the Rappahannock, and arrived at Chancellorsville May 1st. It became engaged with the enemy on that day and in the early part of the 2d. On the evening of the 2d, when the right gave way before the tremendous assault of "Stonewall" Jackson's veterans, the regiment received a heavy attack, but held its ground through the night. On the 3d the brigade was engaged, and, overpowered by numbers, compelled to fall back, vacating the defenses which had been thrown up. They were soon after retaken, with many prisoners, from the enemy. The position, however, could not be held, and the brigade again fell back. Again it advanced along the plank-road, but was again repulsed. It then fell back to a new and more contracted line, which was held through the conflict, the regiment not being again closely engaged. Its losses at Chancellorsville were seventy-three killed and wounded and twenty-four missing.

From its camp at Acquia the regiment marched northward with the army in June, and arrived on the field of Gettysburg July 1st. Its first position was between the two Round Tops, but it moved during the night to Culp's Hill. It was engaged through all the forenoon of the 3d of July, standing firm against repeated charges of the enemy. Its loss at Gettysburg was twenty-five killed and wounded. After the battle it moved with the army into Virginia, and took part in the later operations of the summer. In September it was ordered west with its corps, which, with the Eleventh (both under command of Gen. Hooker), was transferred to the Army of the Cumberland. It was moved by railroad to Louisville, Ky., thence to Nashville, to Tullahoma, and to Bridgeport, Ala., on the Tennessee River. Moving up the valley of the Tennessee from Bridgeport to the vicinity of Chattanooga, it fought in the "battle above the clouds" on Lookout Mountain, November 24th. The enemy was driven from the mountain, and when the mists lifted above the rocky palisade in the morning of the 25th the flag of the "White Star division" (Geary's) was seen waving from the summit. In this battle the Union forces captured nineteen hundred and forty prisoners, two thousand stand of arms, two pieces of artillery, nine battle-flags, forty thousand rations, and a very large amount of camp and garrison equipage.

From Lookout the regiment moved with its division up Chattanooga Valley in pursuit of the enemy, by Rossville, to Ringgold, Ga., where the One Hundred and Forty-seventh fought in an engagement, suffering considerable loss. Here the pursuit was abandoned, and the troops returned to winter-quarters on the Tennessee.

In the Atlanta campaign of 1864 the regiment fought at Rocky Face Ridge, May 8th; at Resaca, May 15th (with loss of ten killed and wounded); and on the 25th of May at Hope Church, where Capt. J. Addison Moore, of B company, was wounded. After these engagements fighting was almost continuous for a month, and the regiment was frequently engaged. It fought at Pine Knob, June 15th, losing sixteen killed and wounded; again on the 16th and 18th, losing ten killed and wounded; at Kenesaw Mountain (June 27th), and at Peach-Tree Creek (July 20th), with but slight loss.

After the fall of Atlanta the regiment saw no more fighting. It moved with Sherman's army on the famous "march to the sea," arriving at Savannah December 21st. From Savannah it moved north through the Carolinas, and after the surrender of Johnston's army marched through Virginia to Washington, D. C., where it took part in the grand review of the army, May 24th. It was mustered out of service July 15, 1865.

One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment.—This regiment was raised in July and August, 1862, and rendezvoused at Harrisburg, where it was organized under command of Col. Roy Stone, previously major of the famous "Bucktail" regiment[1] of the Reserves. The lieutenant-colonel was Walton Dwight, and the major George W. Speer, of Huntingdon, which county furnished one of the companies composing the regiment, viz., Company I, of which the original captain was George W. Speer, who upon his promotion to the grade of major was succeeded in the command of the company by Capt. Brice X. Blair, of Huntingdon.

On receipt of the news of the invasion of Maryland by the Confederate army under Gen. Lee, in the fall of 1862, the regiment left Harrisburg and proceeded to Washington. It did not, however, take the field at once, but remained at and in the vicinity of the capital until February, 1863, when it joined Gen. Burnside's army on the Rappahannock, and went into camp at White Oak Church, where it was assigned to duty in the First Army Corps, the brigade of which it was a part being under command of Col. Stone, of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth.

[1] The One Hundred and Forty-seventh was also called the "Bucktail" regiment, and the men wore the distinguishing badge, the buck's tail, in their hats.

On the 28th of April the regiment broke camp and moved to the Rappahannock. Crossing that stream it marched to Chancellorsville, arriving there on the morning of the 3d of May. It was under fire during the whole of that day and a part of the 4th, but suffered only slight loss. On the 6th it recrossed the river and returned to the old camp at White Oak Church, where it remained till again put in motion to move with the army to meet the Confederate forces which were pressing forward under Gen. Lee to the invasion of Pennsylvania. It arrived within four miles of Gettysburg on the evening of June 30th, and on the following day reached the famous field, and took part in the opening of the battle, when the heroic Gen. Reynolds fell. It was continually under fire during the remainder of the battle, and with its brigade "repelled the repeated attacks of vastly superior numbers, and maintained the position until the final retreat of the whole line."[1] Col. Stone, in command of the brigade, was severely wounded, and at night the Union troops were forced to retire. Passing through Gettysburg, the regiment with its brigade was placed in reserve at Cemetery Hill. On the 2d, towards the close of the day, the division was ordered to the assistance of the Second Corps, but did not then become closely engaged. Soon afterwards the regiment took part in an attack on the enemy at a point where a Union battery had been taken. Two of them were recaptured after a severe fight.

During the night the regiment remained on the front line. It was relieved in the morning of the 3d, but lay under a terrific fire of artillery for many hours, until the ominous lull that preceded the grand charge by eighteen thousand of the flower of the Confederate army. The losses of the regiment in the three days of battle were two hundred and five killed and wounded and one hundred and thirty-one missing, of which latter nearly all were prisoners or killed and wounded who fell into the hands of the enemy. The greater part of the loss was sustained in the first day's fight, in Col. Stone's report of which he said nearly two-thirds of my command fell on the field."

After the campaign of Gettysburg, the regiment, being greatly reduced in numbers, was not very actively engaged in the operations of the summer and fall. Its winter-quarters were made near Culpeper, where the strength of the command was largely increased by accessions of recruits and the return of convalescents. On the 4th of May, 1864, the regiment moved with the other troops, and crossing the Rapidan at Germania Ford, and entered the Wilderness, where it became closely engaged on the 5th, losing heavily and being compelled to fall back from the field. On the 6th the battle was renewed and the regiment again engaged, making two gallant charges, and being repulsed and compelled to fall back to the works. It was in this day's fight that the gallant Gen. Wadsworth was killed. The loss of the regiment in the battles of the 5th and 6th was one hundred and thirteen killed and wounded and ninety-three taken prisoners. On the 8th it fought at Laurel Hill, holding its position all day and throwing up works at night. It fought again on the 10th, driving the enemy from his works, and held the ground till night, losing in this battle fifty-nine killed and wounded. On the 12th it was engaged in the furious battle at Spottsylvania Court-House. It crossed the North Anna River on the 23d, and late in the afternoon of that day the enemy made an impetuous attack, before which the brigade gave way and fell back to a more secure position, which was held and fortified. In this fight the regiment lost severely in killed and wounded, among the former being Lieut. C. S. Zimmerman, of Company I.

The regiment took part in the engagement at Bethesda Church, on the 31st of May and 1st of June, and during the succeeding four days was continually under fire, though with but light loss. It crossed the James River on the 16th of June, and on the 18th was engaged with the enemy before Petersburg, taking and holding a position, and losing twenty-two killed and wounded. From the crossing of the Rapidan, May 4th, to the end of July the losses of the regiment were two hundred and eighty-three killed and wounded, and one hundred and twenty-two missing. On the 18th of August it fought with its brigade at the Weldon Railroad, losing nine killed and wounded and four missing. During September the regiment was held in reserve, but went again to the front on the 1st of October, and on the 27th took part in the battle at Hatcher's Run. On the 7th of December it again took part in an advance on the Weldon Railroad, and lost slightly in skirmishes with the Confederate cavalry. On the 6th of February it fought at Dabney's Mills, and was again engaged on the 7th, driving the enemy from his position. On the 10th it was withdrawn from the front and ordered to Baltimore, Md. From there it was sent, with the One Hundred and Fiftieth Regiment, to Elmira, N. Y., to guard the camps of the Confederate prisoners at that place. In that duty the One Hundred and Forty-ninth remained until the close of the war, and was mustered out of service June 24, 1865. Following is a list of officers and enlisted men of the Huntingdon County company of the regiment:

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT.

COMPANY I.

Capt. George W. Speer, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; pro. to maj. Aug. 29, 1862.

Capt. Brice X. Blair, must. in Aug. 27, 1862; pro. from 1st lieut. Oct. 6,

[1] Official report of Gen. Doubleday.

1862; wounded, with loss of arm, at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; disch. by S. O. Feb. 5, 1864.

Capt. Samuel Diffenderfer, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; pro. from sergt. to 1st lieut. March 25, 1863, to 1st lieut. Jan. 29, 1864, to capt. March 17, 1864; disch. on surg certif. May 4, 1864.

Capt. David R. P. Neeley, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; captured at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; pro. from corp. to sergt. Aug. 30, 1862, to 1st sergt. Feb. 9, 1864, to 2d lieut. March 22, 1864, to capt. June 26, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

First Lieut. Henry C. Weaver, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; pro. from sergt. Aug. 30, 1862; disch. by S. O. March 26, 1863.

First Lieut. Alfred A. Thompson, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; pro. from 2d lieut. March 25, 1863; disch. for wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

First Lieut. C. S. Zimmerman, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; pro. from 1st sergt. to 2d lieut. Feb. 9, 1864, to 1st lieut. March 17, 1864; killed at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864; buried in Nat. Cem., Richmond, section C, division 5, grave 145.

First Lieut. Joseph R. Shaver, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; pro. from corp. to sergt. Dec. 9, 1862, to 1st sergt. March 22, 1864, to 1st lieut. June 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Second Lieut. D. C. M. Appleby, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; pro. from corp. to sergt. Sept. 1, 1863, to 2d lieut. June 30, 1864; must. out June 24, 1865.

First Sergt. James S. Gillam, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; pro. from corp. to sergt. March 22, 1864, to 1st sergt. June 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

First Sergt. Warren Raymond, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Sergt. Levi G. Graham, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; pro. to corp. Dec. 9, 1862, to sergt. March 22, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Sergt. D. B. Lamberson, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; pro. to corp. Feb. 9, 1864, to sergt. Nov. 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Sergt. John F. Ramsey, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; captured at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; pro. to corp. June 30, 1864, to sergt. May 1, 1865; must. out with company.

Sergt. James M. Uhler, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; drafted; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 10, 1864; pro. from private May 16, 1865; must. out with company.

Sergt. Samuel J. Campbell, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 17, 1865.

Sergt. Samuel D. Foust, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; captured at North Anna River, Va., May 22, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga., Nov. 14, 1864; grave 12,025.

Corp. Peter North, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 10, 1864; pro. to corp. June 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. David Harshberger, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; pro. to corp. June 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. John W. Yocum, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; pro. to corp. June 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. George Goshorn, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; pro. to corp. June 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. Joseph Recker, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; pro. to corp. Nov. 30, 1864; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. Augustus Eberman, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; pro. to corp. March 22, 1864; wounded at Hatcher's Run, Va., Feb. 7, 1865; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. Samuel H. Price, must. in Aug. 30, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; pro. to corp. Feb. 9, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out of company.

Corp. Franklin D. Rutter, must. in Aug. 15, 1862; drafted; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; pro. to corp. May 16, 1865; must. out with company June 24, 1865.

Corp. James H. Farmer, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; killed at Laurel Hill, Va., May 8, 1864.

Corp. Thomas J. McClure, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Corp. Peter M. Minich, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; killed at Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1864.

Corp. David A. McClure, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; died at Alexandria, Va., June 14, 1864.

Corp. John W. North, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; killed at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864; buried in National Cemetery at Richmond, Va., section 6, division 3, grave 166.

(The balance of this company was mustered out of the service of the United States June 24, 1865, unless otherwise specified.)

Appleby, David C., must. in Aug. 30, 1862; disch. Jan. 16, 1865, for wounds received at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864.

Appleby, Thomas M., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; captured at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864; died in Andersonville, Ga., Oct. 24, 1864; grave 11,419.

Boyer, James S., must. in Aug. 26, 1862.

Bird, John, must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 11, 1864.

Bulock, Joseph, must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted.

Breckbill, Daniel, must in Aug. 26, 1862; drafted; disch. by G. O. June 30, 1865.

Baughby, Benjamin, must. in Oct. 15, 1863; drafted.

Brown, William H., must. in Oct. 16, 1863; drafted.

Barlett, John, must. in Feb. 21, 1865.

Burnett, John A., must. in Aug. 16, 1863; drafted; missing in action at Cold Harbor, Va., June 8, 1864.

Browning, Jacob T., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. March 28, 1864.

Blair, James C., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; died Oct. 7, of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Barnett, Ephraim F., must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted; captured at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864; died Aug. 23, 1864, at Andersonville, Ga.; grave 6609.

Beaty, David W., must. in Aug. 19, 1862.

Briggs, George W., must. in Aug. 19, 1862.

Copenhaver, N., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; missing in action at Weldon Railroad, Va., Aug. 21, 1864.

Cowden, James, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; captured at Warrenton Junction, Va., Dec. 1, 1863.

Crispen, George W., must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted.

Carothers, James C., must. in Aug. 15, 1863; drafted; absent on detached service.

Clemins, William, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864.

Colegate, James D., must. in March 16, 1864.

Colegate, Robert D., must. in March 16, 1864.

Campbell, David M., must. in March 27, 1865.

Coral, Lemuel, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 19, 1862.

Cowden, John M., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; died July 20, of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; buried in U. S. General Hospital Cemetery, York, Pa.

Clarkson, William M., must. in Aug. 20, 1862; died July 18, of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Demars, Joseph, must. in Aug. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 29, 1862.

Drake, Isaac Z., must. in Aug. 30, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Evans, Lewis, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted.

Evans, David, must. in April 6, 1865.

Early, John C., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; captured at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 12, 1865.

Evans, Isaiah, must. in Sept. 29, 1863; drafted; killed at Laurel Hill Va., May 8, 1864.

Eyer, Daniel, must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted; died at Washington, D. C., Feb. 4, 1864; buried in Harmony burial-grounds.

Fogal, Adam, must. in Aug. 30, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Fetter, George, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted.

Frownfetter, Amos, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted.

Farmer, Thomas H., must. in Aug. 22, 1862; disch. by S. O. May 14, 1863.

Foster, David H., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 9, 1862.

Gambell, James M., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; captured at Weldon Railroad, Va., Aug. 21, 1864; died at Salisbury, N. C., Jan. 25, 1865.

Garland, Daniel A., must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted.

Grahm, David K., must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted.

Gunter, David, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 17, 1862.

Gardner, Absalom, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. March 14, 1863.

Genszler, John D., must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 25, 1864.

Gates, Jeremiah E., must. in Sept. 29, 1863; drafted; wounded at Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 17, 1865.

Goshorn, Samuel M., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; disch. by S. O. July 8, 1865.

Goshorn, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; died at Shade Gap, Pa., Oct. 21, 1862.

Graham, William H., must. in Sept. 5, 1863; drafted; died Oct. 31, 1863, at Bristoe Station, Va.; buried in Nat. Cem., Richmond, Va., section C, division E, grave 82.

Goshorn, John M., must. in Aug. 26, 1862.

Hartly, John, must. in Aug. 15, 1863; drafted; missing in action at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864.

Hammon, Amos, must. in Aug. 16, 1863; drafted.

Hohenberry, Joseph, must. in March 21, 1865.

Hoover, Jacob, must. in April 7, 1865.

Hall, George C., must. in April 11, 1865.

Harper, Robert, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Sept. 19, 1863.

Hunt, Charles H., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 27, 1863.

Huntsman, Thomas S., must. in Aug. 18, 1863; drafted; disch. by G. O. May 16, 1865.

Herr, Daniel K., must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 5, 1864.

Hartzell, Daniel, must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 11, 1863.

Holliday, Henry C., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Oct. 17, 1864; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 18, 1865.

Harmony, William H., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, section A, grave 17.

Howe, George, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted; died at Sylvania, Bradford Co., Pa., Nov. 6, 1864.

Hall, Hugh, must. in Jan. 25, 1864; captured at North Anna Court-House, Va, May 23, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 8, 1864, grave 5080.

Irvin, Andrew, must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted.

Johnston, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 29, 1865.

Kough, Graham, must. in Aug. 19, 1862.

Kessinger, Thomas M., must. in Aug. 14, 1863; drafted; wounded near Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 20, 1864; absent, in hospital, at muster out.

Kistler, David S., must. in Oct. 9, 1863; drafted.

Kirchner, Lewis, must. in Sept. 5, 1863; drafted; captured at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 12, 1865.

Kennedy, Joseph X., must. in Aug. 22, 1862; not on muster-out roll.

Lightner, Scott, must. in March 22, 1865.

Lightner, Andrew, must. in March 22, 1865.

Leonard, Simpson, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. March 14, 1863.

Leasure, Solomon, must. in Sept. 29, 1863; drafted; died at Alexandria, Va., Jan. 29, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, grave 1355.

Laughlin, Matthew J., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Manherz, John M., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted.

Miller, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 10, 1864.

Maxwell, Henry, must. in Oct. 5, 1863; drafted; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 10, 1864.

Merritt, Levi, must. in March 27, 1865.

Miller, Samuel E., must. in April 5, 1865.

Moore, Jacob B., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 5, 1864.

Miller, Isaac, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 17, 1862.

Meanan, Patrick, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 15, 1864.

Myerly, George S., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps April 6, 1864.

Moore, Henry, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.

Mills, John B., must. in Aug. 30, 1862; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864.

May, Jacob, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted; missing in action at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864.

McIntyre, James E., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Spottsylvania, Pa., May 11, 1864.

McLain, George, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted.

McKinstry, James A., must. in Aug. 19, 1862.

McMeans, William, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; disch. by S. O. July 8, 1865.

McDonald, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

McDaniels, Hiram, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; drafted; died May 14, of wounds received at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 10, 1864.

Ness, Oliver, must. in April 5, 1865.

Neil, Simon M., must. in Aug. 27, 1863; drafted; captured at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; died at Annapolis, Md., Dec. 25, 1864; buried in U. S. General Hospital Cemetery.

Price, William A., must. in Aug. 29, 1862; disch. by G. O. June 7, 1865.

Paul, John, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.

Quarry, Henry T., must. in Feb. 21, 1865.

Rorar, John J., must. in Aug. 22, 1862; wounded at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864.

Roger, David C., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; wounded at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.

Reed, Alexander, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted.

Runk, Henry E., must. in Oct. 3, 1863; drafted.

Rorar, Eliakim L., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Feb. 28, 1863.

Roddy, David R. P., must. in Aug. 22, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. April 14, 1863.

Rice, Solomon, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted; wounded at North Anna River, Va., May 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 29, 1865.

Russell, William H., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. July 7, 1865.

Rhine, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; died at Belle Plain, Va., April 4, 1863; burial record, May 31, 1863; buried in Military Asylum Cemetery.

Shaver, William, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. June 30, 1865.

Shoop, Jacob, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863.

Smith, George, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; drafted; absent, sick, at muster out.

Snyder, Elias, must. in March 21, 1865.

Snyder, Andrew, must. in March 21, 1865.

Stallman, William H., must. in Aug. 26, 1862.

Scott, James S., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 15, 1862.

Scott, James, Sr., must. in Aug. 19, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 30, 1863.

Sipe, William A., must. in Aug. 20, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Oct. 1, 1862.

Smecker, John W., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; disch. by G. O. May 16, 1865.

Stevens, Denton, must. in Sept. 29, 1863; drafted; disch. on surg. certif. April 21, 1864.

Smiser, Michael P., must. in Aug. 15, 1863; drafted; wounded at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Oct. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. Feb. 28, 1865.

Shoop, Samuel J., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; pro. to capt. 31st Regt. U. S. C. T. May 5, 1864; disch. Dec. 15, 1864.

Simons, Samuel R., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 15, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 28, 1865.

Seibert, Jacob L., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; died at Frederick City, Md., Aug. 8, 1863; buried in National Cemetery, Antietam, sec. H, lot E, grave 505.

Traxler, Michael P., must. in Aug. 19, 1862.

Thompson, James C., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 19, 1864.

Vawn, William T., must. in Aug. 26, 1862; wounded at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 10, 1864; absent, in hospital, at must. out.

Vaughen, Robert, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Jan. 13, 1863.

Vawn, Alexander, must. in March 16, 1864; died June 10, of wounds received at Bethesda Church, Va., June 2, 1864.

Wright, William H., must. in Aug. 20, 1862; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863.

Whitefield, William C., must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted; wounded at Petersburg, Va., June 19, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 9, 1865; disch. by G. O. April 12, 1865.

Wilkins, Josephus, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; drafted.

Wilson, James, must. in Aug. 19, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. March 5, 1863.

Weitzell, Elias, must. in Aug. 26, 1862; disch. on surg. certif. Dec. 30, 1862.

Williams, Harrison P., must. in Aug. 24, 1863; drafted; wounded at Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.

Wimer, William R., must. in Sept. 28, 1863; drafted; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Oct. 17, 1864.

CHAPTER XXVII.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

THE NINETEENTH AND TWENTY-SECOND CAVALRY—ONE HUNDRED AND NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT.

The Nineteenth Cavalry, designated as the One Hundred and Eightieth Regiment, contained one company from Huntingdon and one from Blair County, these being, respectively, Company M, Capt. Samuel L. Huyett, and Company L, Capt. D. R. Miller. The regiment was organized at Camp Stanton, Philadelphia, in the fall of 1863, and mustered into the service for a term of three years, under Col. Alexander Cummings, as its commanding officer. In the first part of November it moved from Camp Stanton to Washington, D. C., whence it was ordered to Eastport, Miss., but its destination was afterwards changed to Columbus, Ky., where it arrived on the 3d of December, and was assigned to duty in the cavalry division commanded by Gen. B. H. Grierson. The regiment was then under command of Lieut.-Col. Joseph C. Hess, Col. Cummings being absent on detached duty. In January, 1864, it was ordered on duty with Grierson's division in Mississippi in the destruction of railroads and Confederate magazines of supply. In this the expedition was very successful, immense quantities of grain and cotton being destroyed. The regiment was several times slightly engaged with the enemy's cavalry, losing fifteen killed and wounded from the time of starting until its return to Memphis, Tenn.

About the 1st of April it again moved with the division against the rebel Gen. Forrest. On this expedition it fought during one entire day at Cypress Swamp, Miss. On the 10th of May it fought at Bolivar, defeating the enemy with severe loss. In June it was engaged at Guntown, where the Union forces were defeated, and driven back with heavy loss. The Nineteenth fought dismounted, and lost fifteen killed and wounded. In July and August a detachment of the regiment, operating in Mississippi, fought in the actions at Grand Gulf, Port Gibson, Big Black, Coldwater, and Oxford. On its return to Vicksburg the Nineteenth was ordered, with other troops, to Little Rock, Ark., and moved thence northward to Independence, Mo., to take part in the operations against the Confederate forces under Gen. Sterling Price. There it fought in a number of engagements, among which were those of Marion, Greensboro', Pilot Knob, Osage, and Big Blue, taking part at the latter place in a daring and successful sabre charge. Returning to Memphis (where it arrived Oct. 20, 1864), it was sent thence eastward through Tennessee and Alabama, to operate against the forces of Gen. Hood, who was then advancing from Atlanta towards Nashville. In the latter part of November it moved by steamer from Memphis to Nashville, Tenn., where it arrived December 3d, and on the 15th fought dismounted, with the forces of Gen. Thomas, in the great battle at that place. When the enemy fled in rout from Nashville the regiment mounted and joined in the pursuit. It fought the cavalry rear-guard on the 16th, and again on the 17th. In the latter engagement it joined with other regiments in a gallant sabre charge, driving the enemy. The Nineteenth in pursuing unintentionally charged into the main body of the Confederate infantry, where it was met by a storm of musketry and canister that caused it to recoil and fall back; but the remainder of the brigade came up, another charge was ordered, and the enemy was driven in disorder to Franklin, where the regiment charged a strong position behind a stone wall, being at first repulsed, but soon afterwards charged the enemy's flank, and drove him to his next line of defense, where the regiment again attacked and fought until 9 P.M., when the fight closed by the rout and flight of the Confederates. In this day's fighting the Nineteenth lost twenty-two killed, wounded, and missing, but took about three hundred and fifty prisoners and three stands of colors. Beyond Duck River the regiment continued the pursuit, and fought at Anthony's Hill (December 25th), and at Sugar Creek, where it lost eleven killed and wounded. This closed the campaign. The regiment then moved to Gravelly Springs, Ala., where, in February, 1865, it was consolidated into a battalion of six companies, and the supernumerary officers mustered out. By this consolidation most of the men of L and M companies were transferred, respectively, to Companies C and F. On the 8th of February the battalion was sent to New Orleans, where it arrived on the 9th of March, and was soon afterwards moved to Baton Rouge. In June, 1865, the six companies were consolidated into four. The battalion fought at Clinton, La., July 25th, and on August 12th moved to Alexandria, on Red River. The companies were separated, and moved to different points in Louisiana and Texas, where they were several times slightly engaged with guerrillas. In April, 1866, the four companies concentrated at New Orleans, where they were mustered out on the 14th of May. A list of officers and enlisted men of the Huntingdon and Blair companies of the Nineteenth Cavalry is here given:

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTIETH REGIMENT (NINETEENTH CAVALRY).

COMPANY L.

Capt. D. Ross Miller, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; pro. from 1st lieut. Oct. 19, 1863; res. July 10, 1864.

First Lieut. Wilbur B. Blake, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; pro. from private Oct. 19, 1863; trans. to Co. C.

Second Lieut. James A. Rothermel, must. in Aug. 12, 1862; pro. from private Co. E, 160th Regt. P. V., Oct. 13, 1863; disch. July 20, 1864.
First Sergt. Eli H. Myers, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Q.M.-Sergt. Samuel Baker, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; captured at Hollow Tree Gap, Tenn., Dec. 17, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 19, 1865; vet.
Com.-Sergt. Samuel B. Blake, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Sergt. Robert W. Davis, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; disch. Nov. 9, 1864, to accept position in U. S. C. T.
Sergt. James Morrison (2), must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. A; vet.
Sergt. Alban G. Knode, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Sergt. James Morrison (1), must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Sergt. Daniel Hicks, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Corp. Andrew Dodson, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; pro. to corp. Jan. 30, 1865; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Corp. Joseph L. Wilson, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Corp. Thomas Wolfkill, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Corp. Thomas Taylor, must. in Sept. 26, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Corp. Miles L. Davis, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Corp. Philip Shiro, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Corp. Alexander Funk, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Corp. Augustus S. DeWitt, must. in July 31, 1863; trans. to Co. I.
Corp. William H. Anspach, must. in Sept. 24, 1863.
Bugler William H. Bidaman, must. in Sept. 26, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Bugler Abraham Lucas, must. in Sept. 17, 1863.
Blacksmith Andrew G. Partchey, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., May 31, 1864.
Farrier John Aungst, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Saddler Josiah M. Hite, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Allen, George, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Appo, Christian, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Arnold, John A., must. in Sept. 26, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Brian, Isaiah W., must. in Sept. 24, 1863; died at Columbus, Ky., Jan. 26, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Mound City, Ill., section C, grave 3078.
Baker, Henry, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Burket, William, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Boyle, Martin L., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Brady, John B., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Brininger, George, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Bolinger, James, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Croyle, William, must. in Oct. 19, 1863; drowned at Island No. 10, Mo., Nov. 29, 1864.
Croyle, Peter, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Coughenour, William, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Coughenour, Elijah, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Cunningham, John, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Deer, John, must. in Sept. 18, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 20, 1865.
Dodson, Albert, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; died at Mound City, Ill., May 7, 1864; burial record April 27, 1864.
Dunn, Edward, must. in Aug. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Dodson, Samuel, must. in Sept. 30, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Fraley, Samuel, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Franklin, Thomas, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. A Aug. 9, 1864.
Grier, Samuel, must. in Aug. 28, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Gehrett, David N., must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Greenwood, George, must. in Oct. 19, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Havens, John, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; prisoner from June 11, 1864, to April 29, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Harris, James, must. in Oct. 19, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Heiges, John H., must. in Aug. 28, 1864; trans. to Co. C.
Hampshire, Samuel, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Hoar, Samuel L., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Hoover, John M., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Hanly, Samuel, must. in Sept. 9, 1863, trans. to Co. C.
Havens, Jackson, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; missing in action at Guntown, Miss., June 10, 1864.
Harrison, Frank, must. in Aug. 18, 1864; not accounted for.
Johnson, James, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Johnson, Joseph C., must. in Sept. 17, 1863.
Knipple, Andrew J., must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C; vet.
Kesler, Davis, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Lahiff, James, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Longenecker, James, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Lewis, James, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. A Aug. 1, 1864.
Lingfelter, Michael, must. in Oct. 19, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps.
Moorehead, John, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., June 3, 1864; buried in Mississippi River National Cemetery, section 1, grave 10.
Moore, James, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Myers, John, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Miller, Josiah, must. in Sept. 26, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Montgomery, Mat., must. in Oct. 10, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Miles, Samuel G., must. in Oct. 19, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Myers, Frederick, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; trans. Aug. 4, 1864.
Myers, Henry, must. in Sept. 29, 1863.
McClure, William, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 2, 1864.
McLaughlin, Cornelius, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Nelson, Harris, must. in Oct. 30, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
Pressil, David, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1864.
Partchey, William R., must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Rothrock, Samuel A., must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Smith, Alexander, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; disch.
Stratford, John F., must. in Sept. 26, 1863; disch. by S. O. Jan. 23, 1864.
Saltsman, A. W., must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Simpson, Mayberry, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Spang, David, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Starry, Howard C., must. in Aug. 28, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
Taylor, William, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; prisoner from Dec. 17, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Treister, Elijah, must. in Sept. 26, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Walter, Joseph H., must. in Sept. 17, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 16, 1864; buried in Mississippi River National Cemetery.
Wilson, John C., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Wilson, Henry S., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. A June, 1865.
Walter, Samuel H., must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Walters, Joseph, must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Wertz, Joseph S. L., must. in Sept. 24, 1863; trans. to Co. C.
Zeth, George W., must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. C.

Company M.

Capt. Samuel L. Huyett, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; pro. from 1st lieut. Oct. 19, 1863; trans. to Co. F.
1st Lieut. Roland C. Allen, must. in Oct. 27, 1863; com. adjt. July 12, 1865; not must.; disch. Feb. 5, 1865.
2d Lieut. Edward Brady, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; not accounted for.
1st Sergt. Lorenzo D. Civills, must. in Aug. 28, 1863; trans. to Co. A June, 1865.
Q.M.-Sergt. Joseph H. Bond, must. in Sept. 1, 1863; pro. to sergt.-maj. May 1, 1864.
Com.-Sergt. Charles H. Hunt, must. in Aug. 9, 1863; captured at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 17, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
Com.-Sergt. John M. Sheeter, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., June 23, 1864.
Sergt. James F. Foster, must. in Aug. 24, 1864; captured at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 17, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
Sergt. Joseph Garverieth, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; died at Camp Dennison, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1865.
Sergt. George T. Wallace, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Sergt. Lemuel Warner, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Sergt. William A. Black, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Sergt. John W. Bradley, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Corp. Victor W. Dougherty, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; disch. by G. O. Nov. 24, 1865.
Corp. Abednego Keller, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; died at Andersonville, Ga., July 25, 1864.
Corp. San'd Stonebreaker, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Corp. James Collobine, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Corp. Patrick Shannon, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Corp. Samuel Row, must. in Sept. 29, 1863; trans. to Co. A June, 1865.
Corp. John M. Kennedy, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Corp. Jeremiah Burris, must. in Sept. 2, 1863.
Bugler John Stahl, must. in Aug. 28, 1863; trans. to Co. C Jan. 30, 1865.
Bugler Peter Dolan, must. in Sept. 19, 1863.

Blacksmith Henry Cole, must. in Oct. 5, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Blacksmith Q. A. Chapple, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
Saddler James B. McCartney, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Baker, Edwin J., must. in Feb. 4, 1864; disch. by G. O. Dec. 29, 1865.
Bogar, Harvey, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., May 4, 1864; buried in Mississippi River National Cemetery.
Bodley, Thomas J., must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Barr, John A., must. in Oct. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Brown, John C., must. in Aug. 25, 1863.
Clark, James N., died Sept. 21, 1863; buried in Mississippi River National Cemetery, Tenn., section 1, grave 8.
Campbell, William F., must. in Sept. 18, 1863; trans. to Co. A June, 1865.
Cokendafer, William W., must. in Oct. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Cooper, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 15, 1863.
Carney, William A., must. in Aug. 15, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
Downing, John, must. in July 27, 1863.
Diamond, Frank, must. in Aug. 7, 1863.
Edwards, Thomas, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. H Jan. 30, 1865.
Fury, Frederick M., must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Fink, Peter, must. in Oct. 1, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Freet, Christian, must. in Aug. 25, 1863.
Fleming, Samuel, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
Greenley, Henry, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 6, 1864.
Gill, William, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; captured at Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 23, 1864.
Given, James S., must. in Aug. 25, 1863.
Hetrich, George G., must. in Aug. 25, 1863; disch. on surg. certif. Nov. 6, 1864.
Hampson, Miles, must. in Dec. 17, 1863; captured at Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 23, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 16, 1865.
Harris, James B., must. in Aug. 11, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 20, 1865.
Hunter, Mahlon R., must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Hogmire, John, must. in Sept. 15, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Houck, William H., must. in Sept. 2, 1863.
Hower, John, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
Jacobs, William, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; prisoner from Dec. 19, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Jones, Samuel, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., May 23, 1864; buried in Mississippi River National Cemetery, section 1, grave 5.
Jackson, Daniel, must. in July 23, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Joice, John, must. in Aug. 7, 1863.
Kerr, Robert S., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; died at Camp Dennison, Ohio, Jan. 20, 1865; burial record, Nov. 12, 1864; buried in Mississippi River National Cemetery, Tenn.
Klippart, Andrew, must. in Aug. 7, 1863; trans. to Co. D.
Kephart, Sylvanus, must. in July 20, 1863.
Logan, Banks B., must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Mullen, James, must. in Aug. 25, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Morris, Alexander, must. in Sept. 2, 1863.
Mickley, Henry, must. in Oct. 17, 1863.
Moore, William J., must. in Aug. 28, 1863; not on muster-out roll.
McCracken, John S., must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
McVeigh, Joseph, must. in Sept. 9, 1863; trans. to Co. A June, 1865.
McCauley, Lawrence, must. in July 23, 1863.
Nearhoof, Simon, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Nunemaker, T. F., must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Primm, Francis M., must. in Aug. 9, 1863; prisoner from Nov. 23, 1864, to April 4, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 24, 1865.
Pennebaker, John, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Peck, John W., must. in Oct. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Port, John W., must. in Aug. 25, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Pleiffer, Jacob, must. in Sept. 2, 1863.
Rodgers, Harvey, must. in ——, 1863; died at Memphis, Tenn., June 23, 1864.
Reese, Christian, must. in Oct. 17, 1863; died at Mound City, Ill., March 20, 1864.
Ripple, Nicholas, must. in Aug. 10, 1864; died at Gallatin, Tex., Jan. 30, 1865.
Robb, J. Easton, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Shively, Elias, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; died at Andersonville, Ga., July 25, 1864, grave 4064.
Shields, Matthew, must. in Sept. 17, 1863; trans. to Co. E Jan. 30, 1865.
Shaffer, Joseph, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Snyder, Martin, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Smith, David, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Stewart, Fleming, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Smiley, Charles J., must. in Sept. 8, 1863; trans to Vet. Res. Corps.
Shultze, George R., must. in Sept. 16, 1863.
Templeton, Alexander B., must. in Aug. 25, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Tarr, Jesse, must. in Oct. 16, 1863.
Whiteman, John A., must. in Aug. 18, 1864; prisoner from Nov. 24, 1864, to April 28, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 27, 1865.
White, Samuel, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; died at Union City, Tenn., Feb. 25, 1864.
Walters, Jefferson A., must. in Sept. 23, 1863; died at Baton Rouge, La., May 3, 1865.
Welsh, James, must. in Sept. 2, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Wallace, Kephart, must. in Oct. 16, 1863; trans. to Co. F Jan. 30, 1865.
Wilson, Joseph, must. in July 30, 1863.
White, Enson, must. in Aug. 7, 1863.
Zeigler, James A., must. in Oct. 5, 1863; died at Jeffersonville, Ind., Jan. 15, 1865; burial record, Dec. 28, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, New Albany, sec. B, grave 28.

The Twenty-second Cavalry, designated as the One Hundred and Eighty-fifth Regiment, was formed Feb. 22, 1864, at a camp near Chambersburg, Pa., by uniting seven companies which had been raised in 1861–62 in Washington Co., Pa. (and known as the Ringgold Cavalry Battalion), with five other companies which had been raised for the six months' service in July, 1863, and at the expiration of their term of service mustered out, then re-enlisted and reorganized, to form (with the Ringgold Battalion) the Twenty-second Cavalry, as above mentioned.

In the six months' battalion there was one company from Huntingdon and one from Blair County, viz.: From Huntingdon, Company A; Captain, B. Mortimer Morrow (who was promoted to major in the formation of the battalion, and was succeeded by John D. Fee as captain of Company A); First Lieutenant, John H. Boring; Second Lieutenant, Eugene Dougherty. The six months' company from Blair County was Company D; Captain, William L. Neff; First Lieutenant, William Gayton; Second Lieutenant, J. Brown Wingate. In the three years' organization there was one company from Huntingdon County. This was designated as K company, and commanded by Capt. John H. Boring, of Huntingdon.

The six months' battalion went into the field at the time of the invasion of Pennsylvania by the Confederate army under Gen. Lee, in July, 1863 (the campaign of Gettysburg), and was employed in guarding the fords and bridges of the Susquehanna and the roads approaching that river from the south. After the retreat of Lee's army across the Potomac it joined in the advance of the Union forces into Virginia, and was employed in various duties in the Shenandoah Valley until the expiration of its term of enlistment.

The field-officers of the Twenty-second at its organization in February, 1864, as above mentioned, were: Colonel, Jacob Higgins; Lieutenant-Colonel, Andrew J. Greenfield; and Majors, George T. Work, Elias S. Troxell, and Henry A. Myers.

The Ringgold Battalion and the five other companies forming the new regiment joined forces and consolidated as the Twenty-second at Cumberland, Md., on the 5th of March, 1864. The entire regiment remained at Cumberland until April, when the dismounted part of the command (amounting to more than half the regiment) moved, under command of Lieut.-Col. Greenfield, to Pleasant Valley, Md., where the men were mounted, and about the middle of May moved thence to Camp Stoneman, near Washington, D. C. A month later the battalion, under Lieut.-Col. Greenfield, was ordered to Martinsburg, where it was assigned to duty with the brigade of Col. Mulligan, the battalion being now placed under command of Maj. Troxell. During the month of July it fought bravely at Leetown, at Maryland Heights, Snicker's Gap, and Snicker's Ferry. In August, being then under command of Lieut.-Col. Greenfield, it joined the cavalry division of Gen Torbert, in the Army of the Shenandoah, under Gen. Sheridan, and fought in numerous actions, including Kernstown, Opequan, Berryville, and Charlestown, Va.

The other detachment, or battalion, of the Twenty-second, which had remained at Cumberland when the dismounted men marched for the Pleasant Valley camp, in April, 1864, as before mentioned, soon left Cumberland, and joining the forces of Gen. Hunter, took part in that general's campaign against Lynchburg, Va., where they fought on the 12th of July, and afterwards fought in the battles of Kernstown and New Market, July 25th, it being then under command of Maj. Work, and in the brigade commanded by Col. Higgins, of the Twenty-second. Afterwards it formed part of the forces which under Gen. Averill pursued the Confederate Gen. McCausland on his retreat from the burning of Chambersburg, Pa., and overtaking him at Moorefield, Va., fought a decisive battle, totally routing the enemy and capturing all his artillery. In this engagement the battalion under Maj. Work performed very valuable service, and behaved with marked gallantry.

Soon after this the two detachments of the Twenty-second were united at Hagerstown, Md., and the entire regiment, then under command of Lieut.-Col. Greenfield, moved with the cavalry forces of Gen. Averill across the Potomac into Virginia, where the enemy was encountered on the 31st of August. In this engagement Averill's division was outnumbered and compelled to retire towards Falling Waters, Va. Again advancing, the cavalry division met the enemy at Darkesville, September 2d, and gained a decided advantage, capturing the Confederate wagon-train. On the two days next succeeding the Twenty-second with its division fought the enemy, who were found in superior force at Bunker Hill and Stephenson's Station, no decisive advantage being gained by either side. On the 7th, at Darkesville, another battle was fought, and the Confederate force defeated with heavy loss. Again, on the 12th and 15th of the same month, at Bunker Hill and Buckletown respectively, Averill's forces were engaged, and the Twenty-second showed its usual gallantry. On the 18th the regiment made a grand charge on the Southern line at Martinsburg, ending in the defeat of the enemy, who was on the following day driven in some disorder towards Winchester. In this battle Capt. John H. Boring, of K company, was wounded. Late in the day the Twenty-second, then commanded by Maj. Troxell, took part in the furious charge of the cavalry at Opequan, which ended in the entire rout of the Confederate forces under Early, and sent them "whirling up the valley." In this the Twenty-second captured a battery and a large number of prisoners. At Fisher's Hill Early again stood for battle and again he was routed, the Twenty-second sustaining its full share of the fighting, as it also did on the 26th at Mount Vernon Forge. On the 27th, Early's forces attacked in superior numbers, and the regiment suffered severely, but held its ground in the face of overwhelming odds, and did at least as much as any other regiment towards averting general disaster and saving the wagon-trains of the whole division. In the action of this day Maj. Work and Adjt. Isenberg were seriously wounded, and several officers of the regiment taken prisoners. Lieut.-Col. Greenfield was on this occasion in command of the brigade. On the 19th of October the regiment fought splendidly and sustained severe loss in killed and wounded in the historic battle of Cedar Creek, where the day was barely saved by the arrival of Sheridan "from Winchester, twenty miles away." A few days later the Twenty-second went into camp at Martinsburg, remaining there about two months. From about the 20th of December through the winter of 1864–65 the regiment was constantly engaged in scouting and operations against Confederate guerrillas in the mountain regions of West Virginia, in which service the men were kept almost continually in the saddle, exposed to every kind of hardship and privation.

One company of the Ringgold Battalion (which had enlisted in 1861) was mustered out of service at the expiration of its term of enlistment, was honorably discharged in August, 1864, and another was mustered out on the 7th of October following. In April, 1865, nearly one-half of those remaining in the regiment were mustered out, their terms of enlistment having expired. The rest remained in service till after the close of the war, and in the latter part of June, 1865, the remnant was consolidated with a part of the Eighteenth Cavalry, forming what was known as the Third Provisional Cavalry, which remained on duty in West Virginia about four months longer, and was mustered out of service on the last day of October at Cumberland, Md. A list of officers and men of the Huntingdon County company in the Twenty-second Cavalry is here given, viz.:

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY FIFTH REGIMENT.

Company A.

(This company was mustered into the service of the United States on the 16th day of July, 1863, and mustered out on the 2d day of February, 1864, except those otherwise noted.)

Capt. B. Mortimer Morrow, pro. to maj. Aug. 5, 1863.
Capt. John D. Fee, pro. from 1st lieut. Aug. 11, 1863.
First Lieut. John H. Boring, pro. from 2d lieut. Aug. 25, 1863.
Second Lieut. Eugene Dougherty, pro. from 1st sergt. Aug. 25, 1863.
First Sergt. Jacob Cottle, pro. to 1st sergt. Aug. 5, 1863.
Q.M.-Sergt. Melchiah R. Evans, pro. from corp. Aug. 5, 1863.
Q.M.-Sergt. Martin C. Dryden, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Com. Sergt. S. Wilson Gehrett, pro. from corp. Aug. 5, 1863.
Com. Sergt. George Ripple, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Sergt. Thomas J. Fee, pro. to sergt. Aug. 5, 1863.
Sergt. William J. Cline.
Sergt. Charles M. Haines.
Sergt. Israel Stever.
Sergt. John W. Foust, pro. from private Jan. 6, 1864.
Corp. James Pennypacker, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. William Lessick, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Michael Stever, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Porter B. Baker, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Archy Dell, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Melchiah Corbin, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Richard Ramsay, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Asahel L. Corbin, pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Abraham S. Butler, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Zachariah Pheasant, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. John McHugh, trans. to 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. John Myers, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. Long Louden, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. John A. Miller, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Blacksmith George Park.
Saddler Samuel Schaffer.
Auman, Peter, disch. on surg. certif.

Bice, James.	Berkstresser, James.
Brown, Reuben.	Baker, George S.
Barras, Benjamin F.	Clark, James A.

Chilcott, Thomas T.
Coder, Samuel C., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Crone, David P., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Corbin, John A., killed at Upperville, Va., Dec. 16, 1863.

Dell, Samuel.	Daughenbaugh, W.
Dean, George.	Dunlap, Henry.

Evans, Caleb W.
Ehman, John, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Fields, William H.
Fields, Elisha.
Funk, William, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.

Geisinger, Miles.	Goodman, Benjamin F.
Greenland, Abner.	Higgins, William.

Harris, Mark H.
Hatfield, William, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Johnson, Andrew, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.

Keys, John.	Kelly, William.
Kelly, Stephen.	Kyler, John.
Locke, Daniel.	Lytle, William.

Long, Amon, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Lourish, William A., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.

Murray, James H.
Miller, Jacob D.

Morrison, Hans, trans. to Co. H, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
McClelland, William R., trans. to Co. H, 185th, three years' regiment, 1864.

Nail, James H.	Parks, William.
Perdona, Henry M.	Ramsey, Kelly.
Roland, John F.	Rarrick, Alfred.
Rum, Joseph.

Rex, Martin L., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.

Rogers, James.	Smiley, John J.
Shore, John W.	Stever, Henry.
Simpson, George.	Swope, Amon.
Stephens, Wesley L.	Smith, Christopher.

Sorrick, Lowry L., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Sherran, John H., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Stake, John F., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.

Taylor, William H.	Tate, Mordecai M.
Wise, William H.	Whiteman, John A.

Webb, Josiah, trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Williams, John H., trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 5, 1864.
Wilson, Henry S.

Company D (Six Months).

(This company was mustered out of the service of the United States Feb. 5, 1864, except in cases otherwise noted.)
Capt. William L. Neff, must. in July 30, 1863.
1st Lieut. William Gayton, must. in July 17, 1863.
2d Lieut. J. Brown Wingate, must. in July 30, 1863; trans. to Co. M, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 4, 1864.
1st Sergt. H. M. Strausbaugh, must. in July 22, 1863; pro. from private Jan. 5, 1864.
1st Sergt. Robert A. Laird, must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to 1st sergt. July 30, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 4, 1864.
Q.M.-Sergt. George B. Taylor, must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to q.m.-sergt. July 30, 1863.
Com.-Sergt. George M. Shade, must. in July 21, 1863; pro. to com.-sergt. July 30, 1863.
Sergt. John W. Eaby, must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to sergt. Nov. 1, 1863.
Sergt. William D. Fouse, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to sergt. Nov. 1, 1863.
Sergt. Andrew J. Henderson, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to sergt. Nov. 1, 1863.
Sergt. Lewis Irwin, must. in July 21, 1863; pro. to sergt. Jan. 5, 1864.
Sergt. Teighman Geiser, must. in July 21, 1863; pro. to sergt. July 30, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 4, 1864.
Sergt. Samuel B. Hood, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to sergt. July 30, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th, three years' regiment, Jan. 4, 1864.
Sergt. George W. Yeager, must. in July 29, 1863; pro. to corp. July 30, 1863, to sergt. Jan. 5, 1864; trans. to Co. H, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Corp. George W. Amhiser, must. in July 21, 1863; pro. to corp. July 30, 1863.
Corp. John Ward, must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to corp. July 30, 1863.
Corp. Joseph F. Chilcoat, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to corp. July 30, 1863.
Corp. Philip Hooper, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to corp. July 30, 1863.
Corp. Simon College, must. in July 28, 1863; pro. to corp. Nov. 1, 1863.
Corp. John W. Foust, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to corp. Jan. 5, 1864.
Corp. William A. Chambers, must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to corp. July 30, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Corp. Jacob L. Moore, must. in July 16, 1863; pro. to corp. Jan. 5, 1864; trans. to Co. H, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Corp. Michael Moaghan, must. in July 22, 1863; pro. to corp. Jan. 5, 1864; trans. to Co. L, 185th (three years' regiment) P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Bugler Charles F. Bittle, must. in July 21, 1863; pro. to bugler July 30, 1863.
Bugler William L. Snyder, must. in July 29, 1863; pro. to bugler July 30, 1863.

Blacksmith James M. Yingling, must. in July 21, 1863.
Farrier Joseph Slonaker, must. in July 29, 1863.
Saddler Seth F. Myers, must. in July 16, 1863.
Buchanan, William, must. in July 20, 1863.
Buckley, George, must. in July 16, 1863.
Bookhammer, T. R., must. in July 29, 1863.
Boner, William F., must. in July 25, 1863; absent, on detached service, at muster out.
Cook, George L., must. in July 28, 1863.
Clambaugh, Thomas, must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to Co. H, 185th P. V., Jan. 31, 1864.
Dickens, James H., must. in July 28, 1863.
Emlish, Elijah S., must. in July 24, 1863.
Eckerd, Winfield S., must. in July 21, 1863.
Evans, Henry, must. in July 21, 1863.
Fisher, John, must. in July 16, 1863.
Fisher, Benjamin, must. in July 16, 1863.
Fisher, Joseph, must. in July 24, 1863.
Fox, Watson, must. in July 29, 1863.
Fisher, Harry L., must. in July 17, 1863; trans to Co. F, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Goslin, David M., must. in July 16, 1863.
Geraghty, Hugh M., must. in June 25, 1863.
Hannawalt, David, must. in July 16, 1863.
Hedding, James, must. in July 16, 1863.
Hetrich, Jacob A., must. in July 16, 1863.
Harkins, Albert, must. in July 17, 1863.
Houck, George A., must. in July 21, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Hartzell, David R., must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to regimental com.-sergt. Aug. 5, 1863.
Irvin, Daniel P., must. in July 22, 1863; trans. to Co. F, 185th P. V., Jan. 31, 1864.
Johnston, David, must. in July 16, 1863.
Johnston, William, must. in July 16, 1863.
Kelly, John, must. in July 20, 1863.
Lang, William L., must. in July 21, 1863.
Miller, Andrew J., must. in July 16, 1863.
Moore, George, must. in July 16, 1863.
Moyer, Martin, must. in July 16, 1863.
Matthias, William, must. in July 24, 1863.
Metz, George M., must. in July 21, 1863; disch. on surg. certif.
Norris, Robert H., must. in July 16, 1863.
Noland, Joshua, must. in July 29, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Nealy, Wm. W., must. in July 27, 1863; trans. to Signal Corps Jan. 24, 1864.
Powell, Joseph, must. in July 21, 1863.
Patterson, Andrew J., must. in July 29, 1863; absent, on detached service, at muster out.
Powell, Milton, must. in July 21, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Palmer, Harvey C., must. in July 17, 1863; trans. to 185th P. V. Jan. 4, 1864.
Postlethwaite, A. G., must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to sergt.-maj. Aug. 5, 1863.
Patterson, George M., must. in July 17, 1863; pro. to regimental q m.-sergt. July 30, 1863.
Phillips, John H., must. in July 28, 1863.
Rodcay, William H., must. in July 29, 1863.
Shaw, Daniel, must. in July 18, 1863.
Smith, James M., must. in July 16, 1863.
Saylor, Harrison, must. in July 16, 1863.
Smith, Andrew, must. in July 16, 1863.
Smith, Benjamin F., must. in July 16, 1863.
Shinefelt, Joseph H., must. in July 21, 1863.
Stowder, Nelson W., must. in July 16, 1863; trans. to Co. I, 185th P. V., Jan. 4, 1864.
Truax, Andrew W., must. in July 18, 1863.
Urick, Joseph H., must. in July 17, 1863.
Wright, Abram, must. in July 16, 1863.
Yingling, Benjamin F., must in July 21, 1863.

COMPANY K (THREE YEARS).

(Unless otherwise noted, this company was mustered out of the United States service with Co. K, 3d Regt. Pro. Cav., Oct. 31, 1865.)

Capt. John H. Boring, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; wounded at Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 18, 1864.
First Lieut. John S. Wiser, must. in July 17, 1863; pro. from 2d lieut Feb. 26, 1864; disch. June 8, 1865.
Second Lieut. William F. Sharrer, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; com. 1st lieut. June 13, 1865.
First Sergt. David A. Gillis, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; pro. to 1st sergt. Sept. 6, 1865.
Q.M.-Sergt. Henry P. Decker, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Com.-Sergt. Perry O. Etchison, must. in Feb. 2, 1864.
Sergt. W. H. Daughenbaugh, must. in Feb. 22, 1864.
Sergt. Reid W. McDonald, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Sergt. William A. Grove, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Sergt. Allison H. Crum, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Sergt. John M. Gillis, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; pro. to sergt. Sept. 6, 1865.
Sergt. James M. Vanzant, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 14, 1865.
Sergt. Samuel W. Gehrett, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; pro. to regimental q.m.-sergt. July 20, 1865.
Corp. Henry H. Buckley, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Corp. John D. Richardson, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Corp. John R. Slack, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Corp. Peter R. Miller, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Corp. A. S. Henderson, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Corp. Henry H. Mateer, must. in Feb. 22, 1864.
Corp. Jacob L. Buckley, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Corp. George W. Wogan, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; pro. to corp. Sept. 6, 1865.
Corp. Robert J. Boyles, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; accidentally killed at Burnt Cabins, Pa., July 26, 1864.
Corp. William M. Gable, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; died of wounds received at Charlestown, Va., Aug. 21, 1864.
Corp. James E. Kirkpatrick, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; died at Sandy Hook, Md., Aug. 1, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Antietam, section 26, lot D, grave 370.
Bugler John Krichten, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Bugler Samuel D. Grove, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Blacksmith Henry Anderson, must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Saddler Sylvester Burns, must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Farrier James Dishong, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Ambrose, Jacob, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Barnett, Joseph E., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Boner, William F., must. in Feb. 22, 1864.
Bain, George, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Baker, Andrew J., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Barras, Benjamin F., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Buchanan, William, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Bowman, Jacob H., must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Black, George W., must. in Sept. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 25, 1865.
Bumgardner, Lewis, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Correll, Elliott D., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Cornelius, Peter L., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Clevenger, Adam, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Cutchall, John W., must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Chestnut, John M., must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Crownover, William H., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Cook, Joseph M., must. in Feb. 27, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Cowan, Samuel, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 19, 1865.
Clifford, George, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Doyle, William, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Doyle, Cornelius, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Decker, David, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Dishong, Adam, Jr., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Edwards, Joseph, must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Evans, Asahel Y., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Early, John H., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Flasher, William, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Flasher, John, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Guster, Peter, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Gehrett, John J., must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Goodman, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 30, 1865.
Hoke, James, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Hamill, Alexander B., must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Houck, Isaac, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Heeter, James E., must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Herr, John H., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Hicks, John G., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Hirst, William, must. in Feb. 27, 1864.

Houseman, William E., must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Isenberg, James, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Isell, Samuel G., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; trans. to Co. G, 16th Regt. Vet. Res. Corps; disch. by G. O. Oct. 27, 1865.
Isenberg, Thomas J.
James, Silas, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Kinkead, David P., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; com. 2d lieut. June 13, 1865; not mustered.
Kuhn, Francis, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Ketterman, A. B., must. in Feb. 25, 1864.
Lytle, Reuben S., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Lytle, William A., must. in Feb. 29, 1864.
Logan, James, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Litsinger, George O., must. in Sept. 19, 1864.
Leidig, Jeremiah, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 18, 1865.
Long, Elijah, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Murray, James H., must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Marshall, Charles, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Mathias, Henry C., must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
McKinney, Joseph, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
McDonald, Robert A., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
McCarthy, Alvin R., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
McCartney, John S., must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Needham, George, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Nail, Frederick R., must. in Feb. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 8, 1865.
Purdonner, M. H., must. in Feb. 29, 1864.
Ramsey, Jackson B., must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Runion, Abraham, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Ray, Elliott, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Robinson, William, must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Richards, John, must. in Feb. 27, 1864.
Shafer, George, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Skipper, Abraham, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Steward, John, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Smiley, John J., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Slack, Joseph M , must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Shields, Alexander, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Secrist, Jesse, must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Secrist, David, must. in Feb. 25, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Sowers, George, must. in Feb. 18, 1864; absent, sick, at muster out.
Small, Aloysius F., must. in Feb. 18, 1864; captured; died at Salisbury, N. C., Feb 25, 1865.
Sheffer, Charles W., must. in Feb. 23, 1864.
Taylor, Henry, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Troyer, John, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Valance, David, must. in Feb. 18, 1864.
Walker, William M., must. in Feb. 29, 1864.
Wilson, John J., must. in Feb. 26, 1864.
Wonn, Paul. must. in Feb. 27, 1864.

One Hundred and Ninety-second Regiment.—This regiment was originally composed of fourteen companies, enlisted for one hundred days' service, largely made up of members of the One Hundred and Twentieth Regiment of militia, which had been called out in 1862, and again in 1863, with the short term troops which were put in the field to repel the Confederate invasions which were defeated respectively by the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg.

The regiment was organized in July, 1864, and moved from Philadelphia on the 23d of that month, and proceeded to Baltimore, where it was soon after stationed at Fort McHenry. It was afterwards stationed at Johnson's Island, Lake Erie, at Gallipolis, Ohio (guarding stores, and detachments of it guarding boats on the Ohio River), and at Ironton, Ohio. On the 30th of September seven of the companies proceeded to the head of Hughes River, West Virginia, where, and in which vicinity, they remained until the expiration of their enlistment, Nov. 11, 1864, when they were mustered out.

In February, 1865, a second regiment, also designated as the One Hundred and Ninety-second, was organized for a one year's term of service, under command of Col. William W. Stewart. In this regiment was one company (B) made up largely of Huntingdon County men, and of which the commissioned officers were Capt. William F. Johnston (promoted to major of the regiment), First Lieut. Thomas S. Johnston, and Second Lieut. Alfred Tyhurst. Another company (D) was largely composed of Blair County men. The officers were Capt. S. A. Andrews, First Lieut. James Rodgers, Second Lieut. John Swires.

The regiment entered the field in the spring campaign of 1865, in Central Virginia, west of the Blue Ridge, but never became actively engaged, as the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox, on the 9th of April, included all Confederate troops in Virginia, and virtually ended the war. The regiment was mustered out on the 24th of August following. Below are given lists of the Huntingdon and Blair County companies of the One Hundred and Ninety-second, viz.:

COMPANY B (ONE YEAR).

(This company was mustered out of the service of the United States on the 24th of August, 1865, except in a few cases otherwise noted.)
Capt. William F. Johnston, must. in Feb. 17, 1865.
Capt. Thomas S. Johnston, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; pro. from private 195th (one year) Regt. to 1st lieut. Feb. 17, 1865, to capt. April 21, 1865.
1st Lieut. Alfred Tyhurst, must. in Feb. 17, 1865; pro. from 2d lieut. April 21, 1865.
2d Lieut. Henry A. Hoffman, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; pro. from private to 1st sergt. Feb. 17, 1865, to 2d lieut. April 19, 1865.
1st Sergt. Russell R. Henry, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Sergt. Henry C. Carmon, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Sergt. David Hanley, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Sergt. Augustus R. Deal, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Sergt. John O'Neil, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; absent at muster out.
Corp. George Y. Kurtz, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Corp. James E. Thompson, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Corp. William Bricker, must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Corp. Clifford Graffius, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Corp. Thomas McBreen, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Corp. James C. Hight, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Corp. William H. O'Donnell, must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Africa, Henry L., must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Ayres, Robert H., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Brumbaugh, D. W. C., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Bricker, George H., must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Bulger, Zachariah, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Butler, John C., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Barr, John, must in Feb. 15, 1865.
Barr, William M., must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
Barrick, William, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; died at Harper's Ferry, Va., June 16, 1865.
Cunningham, J. M., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Condron, Jacob, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Conrad, Samuel, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Dickson, Edward C., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Decker, Marshall, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Dickson, David C., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Dickson, Thomas C., must. in Feb 14, 1865.
Dickson, James M., must. in Feb. 14, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Denny, Daniel, must. in Feb. 13, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Eaton, Bird C., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Eichelberger, Michael, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Fister, William, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Gates, William (1st), must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Gates, William (2d), must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Gates, Thomas, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.

Grazier, Abednego, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Gillespie, Andrew, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Grady, Thomas D., must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
Grady, James S., must. in Feb. 8, 1865; not on muster-out roll.
Hicks, William, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Houck, John, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Hoffman, John, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Hazzard, John, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Hood, Lewis, must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Hurl, James M, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Howell, Thomas, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Henderson, W. T., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Hanley, Jacob, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Heneston, William, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Hale, Elijah, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 7, 1865.
Hossinger, William, must. in Jan. 30, 1865; not on muster-out roll.
Itinger, Stephen, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Johnston, George B., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Jones, William W., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Kauffman, Benjamin, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Koplin, William O., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Kauffman, Joseph, must. in Feb. 14, 1865; died near Winchester, Va., June 11, 1865.
Long, Henry C., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Lang, Silas, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Leabhart, William G., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Long, Thomas, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 7, 1865.
Morningstar, J. M., must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Malone, James Y., must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Malzie, Valentine, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Morgan, William M., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Moore, Samuel T., must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
McDonald, Alfred, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
McCloskey, D. A., must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Nail, John V., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Pope, David, must. in Feb. 15, 1865.
Rupert, William, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Rosensteel, John J., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Rupe, William, must. in Feb. 9, 1865.
Riley, Charles M., must. in Feb. 13, 1865; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Simpson, Thomas M., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Skeese, James E, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Swoope, George W, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Shives, Thomas M., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Strickler, Henry D., must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Stouffer, Henry, must. in Feb. 13, 1865.
Stuart, Aaron K., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Shriner, John, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Swivle, John, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Skelly, William, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Snyder, Peter, must. in Feb. 13, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 8, 1865.
States, Benjamin F., must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Shaffer, David S., must. in Jan. 30, 1865; not on muster-out roll.
Vanolman, Joseph, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Westbrook, John H., must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Wirt, Jeremiah, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Weir, Lewis, must. in Feb. 14, 1865.
Wirt, William, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Westbrook, Joseph, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 7, 1865.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

MILITARY—WAR OF THE REBELLION.—(Continued.)

THE TWO HUNDRED AND SECOND, TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTH, AND TWO HUNDRED AND EIGHTH REGIMENTS—HUNTINGDON AND BLAIR MEN IN OTHER REGIMENTS.

The Two Hundred and Second Regiment was organized for one year's service at Camp Curtin, Sept. 3, 1864, under Col. Charles Albright. One company (K) of the regiment was recruited in Huntingdon County. Its commissioned officers were Capt. A. W. Decker, First Lieut. John S. Morrison, Second Lieut. Peter Shaver.

On the 10th of September the regiment moved to Chambersburg, Pa., and thence on the 30th to Alexandria, Va. From there it was ordered to the Manassas Gap Railroad to guard the line, and keep it open for the transportation of supplies to the Army of the Shenandoah. In this duty it was several times engaged with guerrillas who infested that region and obstructed the railroad and threw a train off the track, killing several soldiers and wounding twenty, for which act the troops burned all the houses within a mile of the scene of the outrage. Afterwards citizens of rebel proclivities were compelled to ride on each train, and by this course their safety was secure for the future.

In December the regiment moved to Fairfax, and was placed on duty on the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, and in fortifying at different points along the line, but saw no fighting except occasional skirmishing with guerrillas. In May, 1865, the regiment was moved to Pennsylvania, and was posted at Tamaqua and other points in the anthracite region, where it remained on duty until its muster out at Harrisburg, Aug. 3, 1865.

COMPANY K.

(This entire company, except Corp. Samuel Booher, who died at Fairfax Station, Va., Dec. 11, 1864, and Private Samuel L. Glasgow, promoted to commissary sergeant Sept. 7, 1864, was mustered out of the service on the 3d day of August, 1865.)

Capt. A. Wilson Decker, must. in Sept. 8, 1864.
1st Lieut. John S. Morrison, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
2d Lieut. Peter Shaver, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
1st Sergt. John A. Woodcock, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Sergt. Henry Hudson, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Sergt. William J. Hampson, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Sergt. George M. Spanogle, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Sergt. Samuel L. Heeter, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Corp. John Wilson, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Corp. John Price, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Corp. Jacob B. Swope, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Corp. David Johns, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Alfred Ettner, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Corp. David B. Heck, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Corp. George D. Eyster, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp John B. Chilcoat, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Samuel Booher, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Appleby, Thomas A., must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Booher, Joshua M., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Baker, George S., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Bruce, Patrick H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Bratton, William C., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Brown, Elihu, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Bolinger, Philip, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Beer, Lewis, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Betts, David R., must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Brown, Hiram, must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Cornelius, George W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Cornelius, Joseph H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Copenhaver, Peter, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Clark, William F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Copenhaver, David, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Collins, Thomas, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Collins, Lewis L., must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Cornelius, Joshua, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Dell, Henry S., must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Dickson, Thomas, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.

Dorland, Thomas, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
De La Vin Morris, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Douglas, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Davis, Benjamin, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Eastman, Edmund, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Friedly, Howard, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Goodman, John M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Grove, David, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Gault, Ezekiel, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Greenland, Abia, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Gilliland, Thomas J., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Gray, William A., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Green, William H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Gulick, Samuel S., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Glasgow, Samuel L., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Hudson, Millard F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hampson, Robert, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hoffman, Conrad, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Hileman, James, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Hileman, Luther, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Hudson, George B., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Heck, Elijah G., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Heck, William H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Heck, Daniel B., must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Haffley, George W., must. in Oct. 6, 1864.
Hutchinson, Marshall, must. in Feb. 8, 1865.
Lynn, William M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Lynn, Alva, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Lynn, James, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Lockard, Jacob C., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Logan, Dennis, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Lamp, Henry, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Leonard, Samuel, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Moore, Curran E., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Montgomery, Jacob, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Mitler, Thomas B., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Miller, James, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Mundorff, William, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Meminger, John F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Marlin, James T., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Miner, Samuel, must. in March 6, 1865.
McElwee, David, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McKinstry, James, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Price, Abraham R., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Park, Jacob B., must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Piper, William, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Perkins, Stephen, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Ruter, Charles W., must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Runk, David E., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Snyder, Joseph H., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Steele, Samuel, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Smith, Philip, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Snyder, Wesley, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Sharrer, Francis M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Stevens, Wesley M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Shafer, David E., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Stains, Henry T., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Senft, George V., must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Swope, George W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Swank, Josiah, must. in Feb. 28, 1865.
Wilson, Thomas, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Welch, David G., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Wagoner, Anderson, must. in Sept. 4, 1864
Weaver, Philip, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Wagoner, John P., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Young, Robert, must. in Feb. 28, 1865.

Two Hundred and Fifth Regiment.—The rendezvous of this regiment was at Camp Curtin, where it was organized on the 2d of September, 1864, and was mustered into the service for one year under the following-named field-officers, viz.: Col. Joseph A. Matthews, Lieut.-Col. William F. Walter, Maj. B. Mortimer Morrow, who had previously served with honor in the Eighty-fourth Regiment. Many of the enlisted men of the Two Hundred and Fifth were veterans of the early service. One of the companies (D) was raised in Huntingdon County. Three companies were from Blair County, viz.: Company A, Company C, and Company I.

On the 5th of September the regiment left Harrisburg and went to the front, camping at Fort Corcoran, on the Washington defenses, but soon after moved to City Point, Va., as an escort to about thirteen hundred recruits and drafted men, destined for Gen. Grant's army in front of Petersburg. At City Point the regiment was engaged in fatigue and picket duty. Early in October it joined the Army of the James, but about three weeks later it was transferred to the Army of the Potomac, and assigned to Gen. Hartranft's provisional brigade, which was attached to the Ninth Corps, and which, about the middle of December, became a part of the Third Division of that corps, Gen. Hartranft commanding the division, and Col. Matthews the brigade. The camp of the regiment was at Fort Prescott, on the "Army-Line Railroad," where, with the division, it made winter-quarters, the other divisions of the Ninth Corps holding positions in its front.

The first battle of the regiment was the retaking of Fort Steadman, which had been previously captured by the enemy in a sudden and overwhelming assault. It was in the early gray of the morning (March 25, 1865) that the troops were formed in line for the attack. The Two Hundred and Fifth was held in reserve, and in support of Hartranft's first line, where it remained for more than an hour. The assault was made with great impetuosity, and the work was carried in gallant style. The regiment captured a number of prisoners, and lost ten wounded in the action. But the severest battle in which the Two Hundred and Fifth was engaged was the first assault on the works of the inner line at Petersburg, in the morning of April 2d. The regiment formed at eleven o'clock P.M. of the 1st, and at one A.M. of the 2d moved forward to the rear of Fort Sedgwick, then advanced and formed line of battle nearly on the picket line. At daylight the whole line advanced to the attack. The regiment assaulted Battery No. 30, carried it, taking a number of prisoners, and held the work against several determined assaults made by the enemy during the day. It remained on the front line till two o'clock A.M. of the 3d, when it was relieved. In this engagement the regiment was exposed to the heaviest fire of musketry and artillery, and suffered a loss of one hundred and twenty-one killed and wounded and five missing. Lieut. Henry A. Lower, of C company, was among the killed; Maj. Morrow was wounded, losing a leg. Others among the wounded were Capt. Gwinner, of A company; Lieut. David M. Butler, of C company; and Lieut. David H. Geisinger, of D company.

On the 3d of April the regiment moved to the front of the Petersburg works, and found them evacuated. It then marched with the other troops to Burkesville Junction, repairing the South Side Railroad as it proceeded. It remained at Burkesville till after the war had been ended by the surrender of the Confederate armies under Lee and Johnston, when it moved back to City Point, and there embarked for Alexandria, near which place (at Fairfax Seminary) it remained until ordered to Pennsylvania. It was mustered out June 2, 1865. Following is a list of the officers and enlisted men of the Huntingdon and Blair County companies of this regiment, viz.:

COMPANY A.

(Unless otherwise noted, the members of this company were mustered out of the service of the United States June 2, 1865.)

Capt. George C. Gwinner, must. in Sept. 4, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
First Lieut. Levi W. Port, must. in Sept. 2, 1864: disch. on surg. certif. May 15, 1865.
Second Lieut. Morris Davis, must. in Sept. 4, 1864; brevet capt. April 2, 1865.
First Sergt. Ephraim Burket, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Sergt. Samuel Kulp, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Sergt. Turbot Keim, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Sergt. John R. Plummer, must. in Aug. 17, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 14, 1865.
Sergt. John Walton, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Corp. Thomas C. Yingling, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865.
Corp. William R. Jones, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Corp. Jacob Broombaugh, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Corp. Martin L. Robison, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Corp. John Miller, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. Thomas G. Bell, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Corp. Adam Bowers, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Corp. Alexander Beard, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; pro. to corp. May 1, 1865.
Musician Charles Crasta, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Musician Peter B. Spanogle, must in Aug 19, 1864.
Barkheimer, Jacob, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Barkheimer, Martin, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Briney, John, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Bare, Francis, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Burns, Alexander, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Broombaugh, Samuel, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Bowers, Michael D., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 14, 1865.
Bratton, Harvey A., must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Burkett, John, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Boyles, Henry, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Boyles, Andrew A., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Briney, Henry, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Cox, Henry, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Crum, Abram, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; died at Washington, D. C., April 15, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.
[illegible]is, James, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Dixon, John C, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Davis, Thomas W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Dixon, Matthew, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 9, 1865.
Davis, Benjamin S., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Dixon, Samuel F., must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.
Daughenbaugh, W., must. in Aug. 9, 1864.
Davis, William, must. in Aug 26, 1864.
Edmiston, William, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Fink, John H., must. in Aug 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 13, 1865.
Fink, David A., must. in Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Fleck, Martin, must. in Aug. 17, 1864.
Feeny, Christopher, must. in Aug. 17, 1864; accidentally killed at Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 23, 186[illegible]
Ganoe, Benjamin, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Ginter, James, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Gibson, William, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 13, 1865.
Good, Samuel, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Gill, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Hudson, Edward, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Hostler, Jacob F., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Hartzell, Solomon, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Hall, George, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Hollin, Thomas, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; trans. to Co. H Oct. 27, 1864.
Kantner, J. H., Sr., must. in Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 15, 1865.
Kantner, J. H., Jr., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Kirkpatrick, William, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Lindsey, Miller, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 6, 1865.
Lotz, David M., must. in Aug. 22, 1864.
Lochard, Joseph R., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Lautz, Daniel, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 6, 1865.
Long, Daniel, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Long, Samuel, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Myers, Joseph, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Moore, Joseph, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Mouzart, Lewis, must. in Aug. 20, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 20, 1865.
Mayer, David, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Miller, Henry, must. in Aug. 17, 1864.
Montgomery, Al., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Middleton, James, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent at must. out.
Meadville, Henry, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
McKeehan, David, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
McConnell, Frank, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
McConnell, Joseph D., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
McConnell, Jerome, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 13, 1865.
McConnell, Samuel, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
McCormick, Samuel, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent at must. out.
McCormick, John, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
McClelland, Jacob, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
McMonigal, Jacob, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McGuire, Cornelius L., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; died Feb. 5, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.
Olewine, Joseph A., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Patterson, Samuel, must. in Aug. 19, 1864; absent at must. out.
Price, Robert, must. in Aug. 17, 1864.
Peck, Reuben, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
Roberts, John H., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Ruggles, William, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Rasberry, John, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Richardson, Jonathan, must. in Aug. 22, 1864.
Stumpff, Edward, must. in Aug. 22, 1864.
Swanger, David, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Swanger, Christopher, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Swanger, Frederick, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Saterfield, George B., must. in Aug. 20, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 24, 1865.
Slogenhop, William, must. in Aug. 17, 1864.
Stover, Henry, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Sellers, James, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Walton, James, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Willis, James, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Weston, William, must. in Aug. 19, 1864.
Watkins, John W., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; absent at must. out.
Wolf, John G, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.

COMPANY C.

(This company, with the exception of those otherwise noted, was mustered out of the service of the United States June 2, 1865.)

Capt Louis D. Spiece, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
1st Lieut. Henry A. Lower, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.

1st Lieut. David M. Butler, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; pro. from 2d lieut. May 11, 1865.
2d Lieut. John Robertson, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; pro. from 1st sergt. May 11, 1865.
1st Sergt. John H. Stephens, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; pro. from sergt May 11, 1865.
Sergt. Reuben Bunn, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Sergt. Oliver B. Fluke, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Sergt. George H. Cowen, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; pro. to sergt. May 11, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Sergt. Henry Naber, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; pro. from private May 11, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Corp. A. S. Earlenbaugh, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. Jacob R. Grimes, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Corp. Michael Burns, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Corp. Henry Whitaker, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Corp. John J. Garber, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. George C. Emigh, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Corp. Rufus E. Smith, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; pro. to corp. May 11, 1865.
Corp. M. I. Haddeman, must. in Sept. 2, 1864; pro. to corp. May 11, 1865.
Musician John W. Young, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Bryan, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Benton, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Burget, Henry, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Buskin, George W., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Barr, Henry, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Bowser, Joseph M., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Butler, John B., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Benton, Franklin, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Bowser, Joab, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; died at City Point, Va., Dec. 12, 1864.
Bittle, George C., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; died April 25, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.
Cartwright, Frank J., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va.; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Cowen, William L., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Conrad, Henry, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Daugherty, C. W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Dick, Michael P., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Dick, Daniel P., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Emigh, Christopher, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Emigh, George, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Feather, John, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Feather, Samuel, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent, in hospital, at muster out.
Feather, Henry C., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Forsht, David, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Fairbanks, Ira, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Fluke, Samuel B., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; pro. to principal musician Sept. 2, 1864.
Garretson, Benjamin H., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; died at Philadelphia, Pa., May 27, 1865.
Gunsman, Frederick, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Grass, Cephas, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Garretson, Frederick, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Ginter, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; not on muster-out roll.
Harbaugh, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Hamilton, Baxter, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Hayes, James W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Hanely, John S., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 8, 1865.
Harn, David K., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Harn, John K., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Horton, Jacob L., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 2, 1865.
Hamilton, E. K., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Imler, Jonas C., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Kauffman, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Knollen, William, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Lingenfelter, Martin, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Lingenfelter, G. W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Lynn, Levi M., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Lamburn, Thomas, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Moyers, George C., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Moyer, Abel, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Moore, Charles, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Mobley, Ezekiel, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Musselman, George, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Morris, George W. L., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; died at Alexandria, Va., April 15, 1865; grave 3082.
Nicewonger, T., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Otto, Henry, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865.
Otto, Jacob W., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Pates, Thomas, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Penrose, Joseph, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Priar, William A., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Price, Daniel M., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Querry, William C., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Rorabaugh, John, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Rhodes, George H., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Ridenour, Jacob D., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Swartz, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Shiffler, Nathan B., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Shiffler, Martin J., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Shafer, William, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Snowberger, A. M., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Smith, Eli, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Simpkins, John A., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Snyder, George, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Shock, John, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Snowden, Alexander S., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Smettzer, John B., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, V April 2, 1865.
Strayer, John D., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Smith, George, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Shafer, Abraham, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Simonton, Thomas W., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; died at Alexandria, Va., April 8, of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; grave 3062.
Strayer, Nicholas, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; died May 12, 1865; buried in Arlington Cemetery.
Templeton, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Walter, Moses, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. Aug. 8, 1865.
Wagner, John M., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Weaver, Mitchell G., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Walker, Isaac, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Walter, George, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Womer, Aaron, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.

Company D.

(This company was mustered out of the service of the United States June 2, 1865, except in cases otherwise noted.)
Capt. Thomas B. Reed, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
First Lieut. Jonas B. Shoultz, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Second Lieut. David H. Geissinger, must. in Sept. 3, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; brevet 1st lieut. July 8, 1865; disch. to date July 25, 1865.
First Sergt. David Shoultz, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sergt. Frederick S. Fouse, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sergt. Samuel Rager, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Sergt. Reuben T. Baker, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sergt. John M. Gainer, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; pro. to sergt. April 6, 1865.
Sergt. Wm. S. Anderson, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; died April 6, of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, Alexandria, grave 3063.
Corp. John W. Porter, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Theodore Renner, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. James D. Sloan, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Samuel H. Grove, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Theodore T. Shirk, must. in Aug. 2, 1864.

Corp. Allen S. Anderson, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; pro. to corp. April 2, 1865.
Corp. Huston E. Crum, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; pro. to corp. April 2, 1865.
Corp. Cornelius Trostle, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; pro. to corp. April 2, 1865.
Corp. James Hathaway, must. in Sept. 5, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Corp. John Myers, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; died April 4, of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Musician George Crawford, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Musician Benjamin F. Meghan, must. in Sept. 1, 1864
Aults, Ambrose M., must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Baker, Alfred E., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Beaver, Samuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; disch. by G. O. Aug. 9, 1865.
Berkstresser, G. W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Brogan, Samuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Berry, Jeremiah, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Chaplin, Samuel, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Decker, James, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Davis, William M., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Eckenrode, Joseph A., must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Eltz, Henry, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Faust, Daniel, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; died at Philadelphia, Pa., April 14, of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Gill, Thomas H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Gordon, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Green, Milton M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Gardner, Frederick, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Grove, Henry B., must. in Sept. 1, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent, in hospital, at must. out.
Geisinger, David, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Garner, Jacob, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Garner, Matthew, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Green, Franklin P., must. in Sept. 3, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 10, 1865.
Hicks, Thomas, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Horton, Joseph G., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Huff, Henry, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hetrick, George F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Harker, Andrew, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Havens, John, must. in Aug. 23, 1864.
Hagans, John, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Houp, Joseph, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Hawn, Samuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hawn, Albert, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Kyler, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Kyler, James, must. in Sep . 1, 1864.
Long, Jacob, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Lane, James, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Moyer, Daniel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Magill, Samuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Morgan, William, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Megahan, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Miller, John, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Maguire, George, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
McIlwaine, William, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McCall, Alexander D., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McCall, Matthew, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McConnell, Thomas H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McCarty, Joseph, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
McCafferty, James, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Norris, Thomas, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Nail, David E., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Nelson, William, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Newman, Holliday, must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Pott, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Plympton, Elijah, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Parker, David, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Randolph, James, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Rebble, James, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Ramsey, Brice, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Reed, William J., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Ready, John, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Reber, Effinger L., must. in Sept. 2, 1864; pro. to adjt. Sept. 3, 1864.
Simpkins, Charles, must. in Aug. 15, 1864.
Snare, Jonathan, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Snyder, Adam, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Stinson, David, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Stouffer, Benjamin, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sankey, Samuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Swope, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Storm, Jerome, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Steel, Samuel, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Snyder, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sheeder, Jacob, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sankey, William, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Smith, William H., must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Sharp, Fleming, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
Shinefelt, David, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Thomas, John W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
White, Andrew, must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Worley, William, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Weight, George, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Wilson, Henry, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Yocum, Elmer W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.

Company I.

(This company was mustered out of the service of the United States, except a few of its members, whose date of muster out is otherwise noted, June 2, 1865.)

Capt. Ira Shipley, must. in Sept. 4, 1864; disch. Oct. 29, 1864.
Capt. John A. McCahan, must. in Sept. 4, 1864; pro. from 1st lieut. Dec. 17, 1864; brev. maj. April 2, 1865.
First Lieut. Henry Hawk, must. in Sept. 2, 1864; pro. from 1st sergt. Dec. 18, 1864.
Second Lieut. Henry Elway, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
First Sergt. Robert T. McClellan, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Sergt. Alexander W. Little, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sergt. John S. Elway, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Sergt. Jacob Lott, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sergt. Andrew A. McClure, must. in Sept. 2, 1864; pro. from corp. March 1, 1865.
Corp. George W. Ross, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Corp. Anson Laport, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Israel S. Trastle, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Corp. Thomas M. Johnson, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Corp. John York, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. George W. Lightner, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. George F. Miller, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Corp. Jeremiah Cochran, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; pro. to corp. March 1, 1865.
Musician Franklin Noel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Musician William V. Ganoe, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Alwine, Francis, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Albert, Henry, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Bowers, William A., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Bowers, William M., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Buckmaster, Henry, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Baird, Jacob, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Cramer Matthew, must. in Aug. 25, 1864.
Crum, Moses, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
Claubaugh, John E., must. in Sept. 7, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va April 2, 1865; absent, sick, at muster out.
Colabine, William D., must. in Aug. 20, 1864.
Constable, Philip, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 26, 1865.
Carl, Lemuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Daniels, Charles, must in Sept. 13, 1864.
Ewing, Alexander, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Felix, Daniel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Felix, Francis, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Feltenburger, Jacob, must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Fields, John, must. in Aug. 22, 1862; trans. to Company F Sept. 13, 1864.
Gardner, Winfield S., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Gardner, Peter, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Garver, Daniel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hollen, Joseph G., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hollen, John, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 19, 1865.
Hollen, William C., must. in Aug. 30, 1864.
Houck, Jesse H., must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Harshbarger, William, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hill, Oliver, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hossler, Henry H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.

Hannah, Robert F., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Harbaugh, Allen, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Howard, Andrew H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Hite, John, must. in Aug. 17, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; buried in Ninth Army Corps Cemetery, Meade Station.
Harman, George, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; trans. to Co. H Oct. 26, 1864.
Kyle, Hugh, must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Keffer, Francis, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Keffer, Andrew, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Kessler, Matthias, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Keely, John, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Kelly, Joseph E., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
King, Joseph E., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Keffer, Matthias, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Kelly, Matthias, must. in ——; not on muster-out roll.
Laughlin, William, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Lockard, George W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Little, Samuel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Lias, John W., must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Lenard, James, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Murphy, Edmund must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Myers, Michael, must. in Sept. 6, 1864.
Myers, Benjamin F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Myers, George W., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; disch. by G. O. June 8, 1865.
Myers, Amos, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; trans. to Co. H Oct. 26, 1864.
Miller, Nathaniel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
McDonald, James, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
McCormick, Charles, must. in Sept. 2, 1864; trans. to Co. H Oct. 26, 1864.
Noel, Addison, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Noel, Henry, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Noel, Jacob, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent, in hospital, at must. out.
Orndorf, John A., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Powell, Samuel D., must. in Aug. 30, 1864; died at Baltimore, Md., Feb. 9, 1865; buried in Loudon Park National Cemetery.
Plunkett, William, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; trans. to Co. H Oct. 26, 1864.
Rutherford, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Ross, Christian, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Ruggles, Benj. F., must. in Aug. 19, 1864; disch. by G. O. July 12, 1865.
Rhodes, Jacob, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, March 25, and at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; absent, in hospital, at must. out.
Richardson, Jonathan, must. in Aug. 22, 1864; trans. to Co. A Sept. 13, 1864.
Sharp, Fleming, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; trans. to Co. D Sept. 12, 1864.
Schwerdt, David, must. in Sept. 5, 1864.
Snare, Abraham, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Sortman, Jacob, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Stephens, Shadrach G., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Snyder, William, must. in Sept 1, 1864.
Snider, Hezekiah, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Snyder, Jesse W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sipe, John A., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Smith, Levi, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Sauto, Andrew, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
Slonaker, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Stewart, James, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Smith, George, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Trostle, Moses, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Trostle, Daniel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Thompson, Samuel D., must. in Aug. 27, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Tates, Jacob, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Tates, Joseph, must. in Aug. 27, 1864.
Taylor, James R., must. in Sept. 1, 1864; pro. to sergt.-maj. Sept. 2, 1865.
Wright, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; not on must.-out roll.
Walters, John, must. in Aug. 17, 1864.
Warrick, John, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Wilson, David A., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Wintrode, William S., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Wilt, Isaac W., must. in Sept. 2, 1864.
Webb, John H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Wolf, David W., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Williams, John R., must. in Sept. 1, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 24, 1865.
Widensall, John H., must. in Sept. 1, 1864; disch. by S. O. Dec. 1, 1864.
Womer, Aaron, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; trans. to Co. C.
Young, Charles F., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.

Two Hundred and Eighth Regiment. — One company of the Two Hundred and Eighth Regiment was composed principally of men from Blair County. This was designated as B company.

The rendezvous of the regiment was at Camp Curtin, where it was organized Sept. 12, 1864, under the following-named field-officers, viz.: Col. Alfred B. McCalmont, Lieut.-Col. M. T. Heintzelman, Maj. Alexander Bobb, of Blair County. The regiment moved (September 13th) from Harrisburg, and proceeded to Bermuda Hundred, on the James River, where it was assigned to the brigade of Col. Potter. On the 27th of November it joined the Army of the Potomac, where it was assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division, of the Ninth Corps, the division being under command of Gen. Hartranft. During the winter the regiment was on active duty in the front, and frequently under fire. In February, 1865, it took part in an expedition to Hatcher's Run, and returned after five days' marching, but without having participated in a general engagement.

On the 25th of March the enemy assaulted the Union lines with great fury and captured Fort Steadman. The regiment was ordered forward, and made a vigorous attack, driving the enemy from a position in its front, and bravely holding the ground gained. In the general assault made to retake the works, the Two Hundred and Eighth captured Battery No. 12, with three hundred prisoners, suffering a loss of forty-two killed and wounded. From the morning of the 27th it was constantly in motion until the 2d of April, when it took part in the final assault on Petersburg. Its position was a point in front of Fort Sedgwick, where the works were carried and held against repeated attacks made by the enemy during the day. The loss of the regiment in this engagement was forty-eight killed and wounded. At daylight on the 3d it was found that the Confederates had abandoned their last defenses, and the Union troops entered Petersburg. In the pursuit of the retreating enemy, the regiment moved with its division to Nottoway Court-House, arriving there on the 9th, in the evening of which day the news was received of Lee's surrender. It remained there until April 20th, when it moved to the rear, passing through Petersburg to City Point, whence it proceeded by transports to Alexandria, near which place it remained in camp till the 1st of June, when the recruits were transferred to the Fifty-first Regiment, and the Two Hundred and Eighth was mustered out of service. The officers and men from Blair County were as follows:

COMPANY B.

(This company, with the exception of a few of its members otherwise noted, was mustered out of the service of the United States June 1, 1865.)

Capt James S. Shollar, must. in Aug. 18, 1864; pro. from private Sept. 8, 1864.
1st Lieut. Calvin C. Hewitt, must. in Aug. 18, 1864; pro. from private Sept. 8, 1864.

2d Lieut. William B. Blake, must. in Aug. 18, 1864; pro. from private Sept. 8, 1864.
1st Sergt. Miles C. Huyett, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Sergt. James Houck, must. in Aug. 29, 1864.
Sergt. Robert Fray, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Sergt. Joseph H. Long, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Sergt. George M. Metz, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. Thomas L. Houck, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. William T. Brunell, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. Samuel Buterbaugh, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. Samuel H. Brubaker, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Corp. Thomas L. Enyeart, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 5, 1865.
Corp. Enoch Piper, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. William G. Butts, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Corp. Daniel Stitzel, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Musician J. A. B. McKamey, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Musician Thomas N. Brunell, must. in Aug. 31, 1864.
Alexander, John S., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Alexander, W. H., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Boyles, John, must. in Aug 26, 1864.
Blake, James, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; disch. by G. O. May 19, 1865.
Bookhammer, W. G., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Brantner, James, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Briney, Michael, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Bertram, Peter A., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Clapper, Daniel, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Carles, Henry V., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Conaghan, Cyrus, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Ditch, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Decker, Isaac J., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Daughenbaugh, E., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Deck, Frederick, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Eckard, Winfield S., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Edmiston, Lewis, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Everheart, William, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Estright, Henry, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Fouse, William D., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Fouse, Henry G., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865.
Fleigle, William W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Fox, Watson R., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Ginter, John E., must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Hershel, Anthony, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.
Hetrick, Michael, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Hainley, John D., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Hershel, Lemuel, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Kutchell, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Kyle, William F., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Kyle, Silas, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Keyes, John M., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Kennedy, Johnston, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Kiler, Jacob, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Lang, Benjamin F., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Long, Elijah, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Moyer, Martin, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Megahan, William B., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Miller, Hezekiah, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Myers, George W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Merretts, John, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Morgan, Zachariah T., must. in Sept. 8, 1864.
Miller, Henry T., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; died Jan. 1, 1865; buried in National Cemetery, City Point, Va., section C, division 3, grave 78.
Nash, Benjamin, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Negley, John C., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Nupper, Charles, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865.
Pugh, Henry, must. in Sept. 9, 1864.
Richards, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Riley, Thomas, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Riley, James K., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Royer, Martin, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Rosenberger, Matthias, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Schollenberger, G., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Sleighter, Levi, must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
Snyder, Isaac, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Shiveley, Daniel, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Shively, Samuel L., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Slonaker, Lemuel A., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Smith, Andrew J., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Schwedner, Frederick, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Sharer, Christian, must. in Sept. 3, 1864.
Shaffer, Samuel B., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Shives, Isaac W., must. in Aug. 26, 1864; killed at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.
Trees, Francis, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Tetwiler, William, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Troxell, James, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; died March 2, 1865.
Wentling, Jacob R., must. in Sept. 1, 1864.
White, Lysander M., must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Withers, Henry, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Wagner, Joseph, must. in Aug. 26, 1864.
Weysel, John, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 24, 1865.
Whitesel, James, must. in Sept. 7, 1864.
Yohn, Henry, must. in Sept. 9, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; disch. by G. O. June 24, 1865.

Huntingdon and Blair Men in other Regiments.—Besides the regiments whose formation and services have been sketched in preceding pages, there were many others, serving with equally honorable records in the war of the Rebellion, which contained men and officers from Huntingdon and Blair Counties, though less numerous than they were found in the organizations already mentioned. Among the many such regiments may be mentioned the following, viz.: Second Reserve Regiment, in which were a considerable number of men from Huntingdon County, principally in Company F. Eighth Reserve, Company F raised partly in Huntingdon County; Capt. John Eichelberger and First Lieut. Lewis B. Waltz were of this company. First Artillery, Battery D, Capt. Ed. Flood, raised partly in Blair County. Fifty-fifth Regiment, Co. I, Capt. David W. Madara, was raised partly in Blair. Fifty-sixth Regiment contained soldiers from Huntingdon; among them Lieut. J. T. Hutchinson. Seventy-eighth Regiment, Company K (new company: Captain, John Brewster; First Lieutenant, David G. Enyeart; Second Lieutenant, M. H. Sangree) was from Huntingdon County. One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment, Companies C and D contained men from Huntingdon County. One Hundred and Fifty-second Regiment, Company E, Capt. E. H. Miles, and Company F, First Lieut. John N. Blake, both contained Huntingdon County men. One Hundred and Eighty-first Regiment (Twentieth Cavalry), Company M (six months), Capt. William W. Wallace, Company E (three years), Capt. Samuel Montgomery, and Company B (three years), First Lieut. William L. Spanogle, all contained a considerable number of Huntingdon County men. One Hundred and Ninetieth Regiment, Company D, Lieut. Frank D. Stevens, men from Huntingdon County. One Hundred and Ninety-first Regiment contained men from both Huntingdon and Blair. One Hundred and Ninety-fifth Regiment contained men from Blair. The Fourteenth United States Infantry, of which Maj. William Williams, of Blair County, was one of the field-officers, contained in its ranks a considerable number of men from that county.

Soldiers from Blair and Huntingdon also served in several of the Pennsylvania batteries. And many men from both counties went to the field with the militia of 1862, and with the emergency troops of 1863, under the calls for forces to repel the Confederate invasions of those years.

Third Regiment Emergency Men.—This regiment was called into service Sept. 11–13, 1862, to assist in repelling the threatened invasion of the State at that time, and discharged Sept. 23–25, 1862. In this regiment were many of the most prominent men of the State, together with two companies, F and G, from Huntingdon and Blair Counties:

Field and Staff.—Colonel, William Dorris, Jr.; Lieutenant-Colonel, William C. Lawson; Major, William Frick; Adjutant, Robert P. Allen; Quartermaster, Charles A. Lane; Surgeon, Frank A. Bushey; Assistant Surgeons, E. W. Waltons, Jacob S. Bender; Chaplain, Justin R. Loomis; Sergeant-Major, John B. Linn; Quartermaster-Sergeant, Jacob Stambaugh; Commissary-Sergeant, William B. Holmes; Hospital Steward, W. Cook Caldwell; Principal Musicians, William Cooper, D. J. Wharton.

Company F.—Captain, George W. Garrettson; First Lieutenant, William Lewis; Second Lieutenant, Abram A. Jacobs; First Sergeant, Roger C. McGill; Sergeants, George Jackson, James A. Brown, William Africa, Abram V. Westbrook; Corporals, William Williams, Livingston Robb, Peter C. Swoope, Samuel G. Whittaker, Christian Long, Henry McManigill, David Grove, Robert Martin; Musician, Charles Bivins; Privates, David Blair, Samuel T. Brown, Washington Buchanan, James Buchanan, James Brewington, George Bradley, John M. Bailey, William Bolen, Joseph R. Carmon, John Chilcott, Augustus L. Chestnutwood, Andrew Clark, Theodore H. Cremer, William C. Cunningham, William C. Clement, James Findley, Abram Fay, Benjamin Graffius, Henry Glazier, John L. Gleim, David P. Gwin, Samuel Hatfield, William Hatfield, Joseph Hanigar, Adam Hoffman, John Heffner, Orlady Heffner, David Houpt, John Hatfield, Thomas King, Urish B. Lewis, P. Marion Lytle, John Low, Isaac Long, John Myers, John A. Miller, John G. Miles, John McCracken, Daniel Newingham, William A. Orbison, John P. Orr, George W. Patterson, James Post John Roland, Jr., David Roland, David Reed William K. Rahm, R. Milton Speer, Michael Snyder, John Skees, John Straighthoof, Henry Snare, Samuel Steel, William Stapleton, John Scott, Henry Stouffer, James L. Thomas, John Vandevander, William S. White, Robert Woods.

Company G.—Captain, Joseph Johnston; First Lieutenant, James Long; Second Lieutenant, Benjamin M. Elliott; First Sergeant, William H. De Armitt; Sergeants, James R. McCauley, William W. Stricker, John Hagans, Joseph Houp; Corporals, Smith D. Elliott, John S. Wright, Isaac N. Stevens, George M. Cresswell, John Yocum, Joseph McCarty, William Quinn, Jr., Benjamin L. Neff; Musicians, William Cooper (pro. to principal musician), D. S. Bryan; Privates, Timothy Barnacle, William Benton, Matthew E. Cresswell, Samuel Conrad, L. J. Curley, Thomas L. Chilcotte, Nicholas Conroy, William Chesney, William Conrad, William P. Davis, Henry Davis, Jr., James H. Davis, Samuel D. Davis, John G. Decker, Paul H Dillinger, John T. Dopp, John Forbes, James Gilland, Wesley Gregory, William Gilland, Matthew Gilland, Elias Hewitt, Henry Heffright, Samuel Hammus, John Hagen, David H. Harvey, Solomon Hamer, John P. Johnston, Thomas J. Jackson, Thomas Johnston, David Kuhn, William Lewis, Jacob Long, John Myton, Kennedy J. Myton, Albert Maffet, Samuel H. Myton, John A. Myers, M. F. McCartney, James McCafferty, John Nelson, Jr., Rudolph Neff, Jacob Roush, Theodore Renner, Thomas Rogers, George Reeder, William A. Stevens, J. H. Smith, Jacob Shuder, Samuel Steele, Abraham Stevens, Asberry Thompson, George Wall, Jonathan Wall, Edward C. Wilson, James Wilson, Henry Wilson, James Whitesell, Joseph L. Wilson, George Worley, Henry S. Wood, Miles Yocum, Emanuel Zeek.

CHAPTER XXIX.

REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS AND THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Congress.—In 1788, Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, Henry Wyncoop, Thomas Hartley, George Clymer, Thomas Fitzsimmons, Thomas Scott, Peter Muhlenberg, and Daniel Heister were elected for the commonwealth on a general ticket.

An act passed March 16, 1791, divided the State into eight districts. The Sixth District was composed of the counties of Northumberland, Bedford, Franklin, Huntingdon, and Mifflin. The first election was held on the second Tuesday of October following, when Andrew Gregg was chosen to serve until March 4, 1793. An act approved April 7, 1792, provided that at the following October election representatives should be chosen by general ticket. The act of April 22, 1794, divided the State into twelve districts. The Tenth District was composed of the counties of Bedford, Franklin, and Huntingdon. The names of the gentlemen elected in this district were not obtained. In April, 1802, a redistricting for eleven members was made, when Dauphin, Cumberland, Mifflin, and Huntingdon were united and formed the Fourth District, entitled to two members. Thereafter members were chosen as follows:

Fourth District. Dauphin, Cumberland, Mifflin, and Huntingdon.

1802. David Bard, of Huntingdon.
1804–10. David Bard, of Huntingdon; Robert Whitehill, of Cumberland.

1812. Ninth District. Mifflin, Huntingdon, Centre, Clearfield and McKean.

1812. David Bard, of Huntingdon.
1814. Thomas Burnside, of Centre.
1816–18. William P. Maclay, of Mifflin.
1820. John Brown.

1822. Twelfth District. Huntingdon, Mifflin, Centre, and Clearfield.

1822. John Brown.
1824–26. John Mitchell, of Centre.
1828. John Scott, of Huntingdon.
1830. Robert Allison, of Huntingdon.

1832. Fourteenth District. Huntingdon, Mifflin, Centre (and Clinton in 1839).

1832–34. Joseph Henderson, of Mifflin.
1836–38. William W. Potter,[1] of Centre.
1839. George McCulloch.
1840–42. James Irvin, of Centre.

1843. Seventeenth District. Centre, Huntingdon, Juniata, and Mifflin.

1844–46. John Blanchard, of Centre.
1848. Samuel Calvin, of Blair.
1850. Andrew Parker, of Juniata.

1852. Eighteenth District. Somerset, Cambria, Blair, and Huntingdon.

1852. John McCulloch, of Huntingdon.
1854–56. John R. Edie, of Somerset.
1858–60. Samuel S. Blair, of Blair.

1862. Seventeenth District. Cambria, Blair, Huntingdon, and Mifflin.

1862. Archibald McAllister, of Blair.
1864. Abraham A. Barker, of Cambria.
1866–68. Daniel J. Morrell, of Cambria.
1870–72. R. Milton Speer, of Huntingdon.

[1] Died Oct. 28, 1839, and at a special election held November 20th following, George McCulloch was chosen to fill the vacancy.

1873. Eighteenth District. Franklin, Fulton, Juniata, Huntingdon, Snyder, and Perry.

1874–76. William S. Stenger, of Franklin.
1878–80. Horatio G. Fisher, of Huntingdon.
1882. Louis M. Atkinson, of Juniata.

Representatives in the State Legislature.—SENATE.—The Constitution of 1790 provided that the first Senate should consist of eighteen members, to be chosen for four years. Northumberland, Luzerne, and Huntingdon formed one district. Elections were held in the several districts to which Huntingdon was attached as follows:

Northumberland, Luzerne, and Huntingdon.

1790. William Montgomery, of Northumberland (elected to Congress).
1793. William Hepburn, of Northumberland (to fill vacancy).

Apportionment of 1794.[1] Huntingdon and Bedford.

1794. John Canan, of Huntingdon.
1797. Richard Smith, of Huntingdon.

Apportionment of 1801. Bedford, Huntingdon, and Somerset.

1801. John Piper, of Bedford.
1805. Henry Wertz, Jr.
1807. Jacob Blocher.

Apportionment of 1808. Huntingdon and Mifflin.

1808. Ezra Doty, of Mifflin.
1812. William Beale, of Mifflin.

Apportionment of 1815. Huntingdon and Mifflin.

1816. Alexander Dysart, of Huntingdon.
1820. Michael Wallace, of Huntingdon.

Apportionment of 1822. Huntingdon and Mifflin.

1822. William R. Smith, of Huntingdon.
1824. Christian Garber, of Huntingdon.
1828. Thomas Jackson, of Huntingdon.

Apportionment of 1829. Huntingdon, Mifflin, and Cambria.

1832. George McCulloch.

Apportionment of 1836. Huntingdon, Mifflin, Juniata, Perry, and Union.

1836. David R. Porter, of Huntingdon.[2]
1838. Robert P. Maclay; James M. Bell, of Huntingdon.
1840. James Mathers.
1842. Henry C. Eyer.

Apportionment of 1843. Huntingdon and Bedford.

1844. John Morrison, of Huntingdon.
1847. Alexander King, of Bedford.

Apportionment of 1850. Huntingdon, Blair, and Cambria.

1850. R. A. McMultrie, of Blair.
1853. John Cresswell, Jr., of Blair.
1856. John Cresswell, Jr., of Blair.

Apportionment of 1857. Huntingdon, Bedford, and Somerset.

1857. William P. Schell, of Bedford.
1860. Samuel S. Wharton, of Huntingdon.[3]
1862. Alexander Stutzman, of Somerset.
1863. George W. Householder, of Bedford.

Apportionment of 1864. Huntingdon, Blair, Centre, Mifflin, Juniata, and Perry. (Two senators.)

1864. L. W. Hall, of Blair; Kirk Haines, of Perry.
1867. J. K. Robinson; C. J. McIntyre, of Perry.
1870. R. Bruce Petrikin, of Huntingdon; David M. Crawford, of Juniata.

Apportionment of 1871. Huntingdon, Centre, Juniata, and Mifflin.

1873. Joseph S. Waream.

Apportionment of 1874. Huntingdon and Franklin.

(Under Constitution of 1873 the length of term was restored to four years.)

1874. Chambers McKibbin, of Franklin, for two years.
1876. Horatio G. Fisher, of Huntingdon.
1880. John Stewart, of Franklin.

HOUSE.—The members elected from Huntingdon County since its formation, or from the districts of which it formed a part, were as follows:

Huntingdon alone.

1787–88. Hugh Davidson.
1789–90. David Stewart.
1791–93. John Canan.
1794–95. David McMurtrie.
1796–97. Samuel Marshall.
1798–99. John Blair.
1800. James Kerr.
1801. James Kerr.
John Blair.
1802. William Steel.
John Blair.
1803. Richard Smith.
Lewis Mytinger.
1804–6. Arthur Moore.
James McCune.
1807–8. Arthur Moore.
Alexander Dysart.
1809–11. Alexander Dysart.
William McAlevy.
1812. Alexander Dysart.
R. James Law.
1813–14. R. James Law.
John Crum.
1815. Alexander Dysart.
Conrad Bucher.
1816–17. Conrad Bucher.
Christian Garber.
1818. Robert Young.
J. D. Aurandt.
1819–20. John Scott.
David R. Porter.
1821. John Scott.
John Royer.
1822. John Ashman.
David R. Porter.
1823. Henry Shippen.
Peter Cassidy.
1824. Henry Shippen.
John Ashman.
1825. Matthew Wilson.
Joseph Adams.
1826–27. Matthew Wilson.
John Blair.
1828. John Blair.
John Owens.
1829. John Blair.
Henry Beaver.
1830. John Blair.
John Williamson.
1831. John Porter.
Henry Beaver.
1832. Samuel Royer.
James Clarke.
1833–34. James Clarke.
Thomas T. Cromwell.
1835. Henry L. McConnell.
George Hudson.
1836. Jeremiah Cunningham.
James Crawford.
1837–38. Jeremiah Cunningham.
John Morrison.
1839. John Morrison.
Joseph Higgens.
1840. J. George Miles.
Joseph Higgens.
1841. Jesse Moore.
Thomas Weston.
1842–43. Jonathan McWilliams.
Brice Blair.
1844. Henry Brewster.
R. A. McMurtrie.
1845. H. L. Patterson.
Alexander Gwin.
1846–47. David Blair.
1848–49. Augustus K. Cornyn.
1850–51.[5] William B. Smith.
Seth R. McCune.
1852. Samuel S. Wharton.
James L. Gwin.
1853. James Maguire.
James L. Gwin.
1854. George Lens.
George W. Smith.
1855–56. John H. Wintrode.
John M. Gibboney.
1857.[6] Daniel Houtz.
1858. R. B. Wigton.
1859. J. Simpson Africa.
1860. Brice X. Blair.
1861. John Scott.
1862. Adin W. Benedict.
1863. David Etnier.
1864.[7] John N. Swoope.
John Balsbach.

[1] The act of April 22, 1794, directed that the Senate should consist of twenty-four senators, and the House of Representatives of seventy-eight members. Huntingdon and Bedford constituted a senatorial district, and Huntingdon was allotted one member of the House. At the next septennial period, 1801, the number of senators was fixed at twenty-five and representatives at eighty-six. Bedford, Huntingdon, and Somerset were made a senatorial district, and Huntingdon given two members of the House.

[2] Nominated for Governor in 1838, and resigned senatorship.

[3] Died, and Alexander Stutzman elected to fill unexpired term.

[4] Blair County erected and representation of Huntingdon reduced.

[5] Huntingdon and Blair united under apportionment of 1850 into one district.

[6] Huntingdon alone.

[7] Under apportionment of 1864, Huntingdon, Mifflin, and Juniata constituted a district for the election of two members.

1865. Ephraim Baker.
James M. Brown.
1866. Henry S. Wharton.
James M. Brown.
1867. Henry S. Wharton.
John S. Miller.
1868. Samuel T. Brown.
Amos H. Martin.
1869–70. H. J. McAteer.
Abraham Rohrer.
1871–72.[1] Franklin H. Lane.
1873. W. K. Burchinell.
1874.[2] William P. McNite.
H. H. Mateer.
1876. Alexander Port.
P. P. Dewees.
1878. Benjamin R. Foust.
M. P. Doyle.
1880. Alexander Port.
Henry C. Marshall.
1882. Thomas H. Adams.
Thomas W. Myton.

CHAPTER XXX.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

PRESIDENT JUDGES.

Robert Galbraith, commissioned Nov. 23, 1787.
Thomas Smith, commissioned Aug. 20, 1791.
James Riddle, first presided August session, 1794.
Thomas Cooper, first presided November session, 1804.
Jonathan Walker, commissioned March 1, 1806.
Charles Huston, first presided August session, 1818.
Thomas Burnside, first presided August session, 1826.
George W. Woodward, commissioned April 9, 1841.
Abraham S. Wilson, commissioned March 30, 1842.
George Taylor, commissioned April 6, 1849, elected October, 1851, October, 1861.
John Dean, elected October, 1871, November, 1881.

JUSTICES OF THE COMMON PLEAS.

Lazarus B. McLene, commissioned Sept. 25, 1787.
Andrew Henderson, commissioned Sept. 25, 1787.
Isaac Thompson, commissioned May 5, 1790.

The act of April 13, 1791, divided the State into five Common Pleas districts, and provided for the appointment in each district of "a person of knowledge and integrity skilled in the laws" to be president and judge of the Courts of Common Pleas, and of a number of other persons, not fewer than three nor more than four, to be commissioned in each county as judges of the Courts of Common Pleas. Cumberland, Franklin, Bedford, Huntingdon, and Mifflin Counties constituted the Fourth District, for which Thomas Smith was appointed and commissioned president judge in August following. Under the act mentioned there were appointed,—

ASSOCIATE JUDGES.

David Stewart, commissioned Aug. 17, 1791.
John Canan, commissioned Aug. 17, 1791.
Robert Galbraith (3d), commissioned Aug. 17, 1791.
Benjamin Elliott (4th), commissioned Aug. 17, 1791.
Hugh Davidson (2d), commissioned Nov. 4, 1791.
William Steel, commissioned April 2, 1804.
Joseph McCune, commissioned Dec. 1, 1810.
Joseph Adams, commissioned July 10, 1826.
John Ker, commissioned Dec. 25, 1838.
James Gwin, commissioned Feb. 25, 1843.
John Stewart, commissioned March 23, 1846.
Jonathan McWilliams, commissioned April 4, 1851.

Under the Constitution, as amended in 1850, the office was made elective, and the term fixed at five years. Those elected were as follows:

[1] Huntingdon alone.

[2] Huntingdon was assigned two members under the Constitution of 1873.

1851. Jonathan McWilliams.
Thomas F. Stewart.
1856. Benjamin F. Patton.
John Brewster.
1859. John Long.[3]
1860. William B. Leas.
1861. Benjamin F. Patton.
1865. Anthony J. Beaver.
1866. David Clarkson.
1870. Anthony J. Beaver.
1871. David Clarkson.
1875. Adam Heeter.
1876. Graffus Miller.
1880. John Laporte.
1881. George W. Johnston.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The following list contains the names of the justices appointed from the organization of the county to 1793:

Thomas Duncan Smith, for the town of Huntingdon, commissioned Nov. 23, 1787.
John Williams, for the township of Huntingdon, commissioned Nov. 23, 1787.
Thomas McCune, for the township of Tyrone, commissioned Nov. 23, 1787.
William Phillips, for the township of Woodberry, commissioned Nov. 23, 1787.
Hugh Davidson, for the township of Dublin, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
George Ashman, for the township of Shirley, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
Robert Riddle, for the township of Barree, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
William Phillips, for the township of Woodberry, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
Thomas Wilson, for the township of Hopewell, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
John Holliday, for the township of Frankstown, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
John Williams, for the township of Huntingdon, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
Abraham Robinson, for the township of Frankstown, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
Andrew Porter, for the township of Franklin, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
Samuel Kyle, for the township of Tyrone, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
John Patton, for the town of Huntingdon, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
James Sommerville, for the township of Shirley, commissioned Sept. 1, 1791.
Isaac Thompson, for the township of Dublin, commissioned Jan. 3, 1792.
Thomas Morrow, for the township of Dublin, commissioned June 13, 1792.
Alexander McConnell, for the town of Huntingdon, commissioned April 11, 1793.
Abraham Wright, for the township of Springfield, commissioned June 7, 1793.
Benjamin Davidson, for the township of Franklin, commissioned June 7, 1793.

By a law passed Feb. 5, 1777, the freeholders of each township were authorized to elect two, and of each unincorporated county town six persons for justices of the peace. From the names of the persons so chosen one-half were commissioned.

CHAPTER XXXI.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

SHERIFFS.

1787. Benjamin Elliott.
1788. John Patton.
1792. John Galbraith.
1795. John Patton.
1798. James McMurtrie.
1801. John Patton.
1804. John Miller.
1806. John Patton.
1809. Patrick Gwin.
1812. John Patton.
1815. Patrick Gwin.
1818. John Patton.
1821. Patrick Gwin.
1824. William Speer.
1827. William Simpson.
1830. Thomas Johnston.

[3] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by the death of John Brewster, Dec. 5th.

1833. James Henderson.
1836. Thomas Lloyd.[1]
1837. Joseph Higgins.[2]
1838. Joseph Shannon.
1841. John Shaver.
1844. John Armitage.
1847. Matthew Crownover.
1850. William B. Zeigler.
1853. Joshua Greenland.
1856. Graffus Miller.
1859. John C. Watson.
1862. George W. Johnston.
1865. James F. Bathurst.
1868. D. R. P. Neely.
1871. Amon W. Houck.
1874. Thomas K. Henderson.
1877. Samuel H. Irvin.
1880. William J. Geissinger.

PROTHONOTARIES.

Lazarus B. McLene, commissioned Sept. 25, 1787.
Andrew Henderson, commissioned Dec. 13, 1788.
William Steel, commissioned Feb. 28, 1809.
John A. Henderson, commissioned Feb. 9, 1821.
David R. Porter, commissioned Dec. 19, 1823.
Robert Campbell, commissioned Jan. 2, 1836.
James Steel, commissioned Jan. 7, 1839.
John Cresswell, commissioned Jan. 1839.
James Steel, elected October, 1839, October, 1842, October, 1845.
Theodore H. Cremer, elected October, 1848, October, 1851.
Matthew F. Campbell, elected October, 1854.
David Caldwell, elected October, 1857.
William C. Wagoner, elected October, 1860, October, 1863.
J. Randolph Simpson, elected October, 1866.
M. M. McNeil, elected October, 1869.
Thomas W. Myton, elected October, 1872.
Lewis M. Stewart, elected November, 1875.
W. McKnight Williamson, appointed Nov. 22, 1877;[3] elected November, 1878, November, 1881.

REGISTERS, RECORDERS, AND CLERKS OF ORPHANS' COURTS

Andrew Henderson, commissioned Sept. 29, 1787.
William Steel, commissioned Feb. 28, 1809.
Richard Smith, commissioned Feb. 9, 1821.
William Ker, commissioned Jan. 1, 1824.
David R. Porter, commissioned Feb. 16, 1827.
John Reed, commissioned Jan. 2, 1836.
Thomas P. Campbell, commissioned Jan. 2, 1839.
John Reed, elected October, 1839, October, 1842.
Jacob Miller, elected October, 1845.
Matthew F. Campbell, elected October, 1848, October, 1851.
Henry Glazier, elected October, 1854, October, 1857.
Daniel W. Womelsdorf, elected October, 1860, October, 1863.
John E. Smucker, elected October, 1866, October, 1869.
William E. Lightner, elected October, 1872, November, 1875.
Irvin D. Kuntzelman, elected November, 1878, November, 1881.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The first election for county commissioners occurred in 1787, when three commissioners were chosen, one of whom was to serve for three years, one for two years, and one for one year, and one each year thereafter, to serve for three years, unless in case of vacancy.

1787. David Stewart.
John Dean.
James Sommerville.
1788. Patrick Cassidy.
Robert Riddle.
1790. John Cadwallader.
1791. John Blair.
1792. Patrick Galbraith.
1793. John Shaver.
1794. James Kerr.
1795. Thomas Morrow.
1796. William Steel.
1797. Hugh Morrison.
1798. John Steel.
1799. John Cadwallader.
1800. Benjamin Elliott.
1801. Joseph Patton.
1802. Thomas Wilson.
1803. William Wilson.
1804. John Crawford.
1805. Joseph Patton.
1806. John Robison.
1807. John Huyett.
1808. David Lloyd.
1809. R. James Law.
1810. Robert Provines.
1811. John Sharrer.
1812. William Simpson.
1813. Maxwell Kinkead.
1814. John Morrison.
1815. Matthew Wilson.
1816. Philip Roller.
1817. Peter Cassidy.
1818. Samuel Gooshorn.
1819. James Simpson.
1820. William Reed.
1821. John Stewart.
1822. John Cresswell.
1823. John McMullen.
1824. William Simpson.
1825. Conrad Bucher.
1826. Henry Beaver.
1827. James Steel.
1828. George Ashman.
1829. John Stewart.
1830. Jacob Hoffman.
1831. Samuel Smith.
1832. John Lutz.
1833. Robert Lytle.
1834. John Stewart.
1835. Peter Hewitt.
1836. John Stever.
1837. Peter Swoope.
1838. James Moore.
1839. Joshua Roller.
1840. Kenzie L. Greene.
1841. Robert Moore.
1842. Alexander Knox.
1843. John F. Miller, for one year.
Mordecai Chilcote.
1844. John F. Miller.
1845. William Bell.
1846. Daniel Teague, two years.
Robt. Cummins, three years.
1847. Joshua Greenland.
1848. William Hutchison.
1849. Isaac Poightal.
1850. Benjamin Leas.
1851. Robert Stitt, two years.
Eliel Smith, three years.
1852. Samuel Wigton.
1853. Thomas Hamer.
1854. Benjamin K. Neff.
1855. Jacob Baker.
1856. H. L. McCarthy.
1857. George W. Mattern.
1858. John Flenner.
1859. M. F. Campbell.
1860. John Cummins.
1861. John S. Isett.
1862. P. M. Bare.
1863. John Householder.
1864. Jacob Miller.
1865. Adam Warfel.
1866. Adam Fouse.
1867. Samuel Cummins.
1868. Simeon Wright.
1869. George Jackson.
1870. A. B. Miller.
1871. Jonathan Evans.
1872. David Hare.
1873. N. K. Covert.
1874. W. J. Ammerman.
1875. Andrew G. Neff.
David B. Weaver.
A. Wesley Wright.
1878. James Smith.
W. H. Benson.
Benjamin Isenberg.
1881. Henry Davis.
Nicholas Isenberg.
Samuel P. Smith.

COUNTY TREASURERS.

Formerly county treasurers were appointed by the county commissioners, and May 27, 1841, the law was changed, making it an elective office. In 1787, David McMurtrie appears upon the treasurer's bond as having been appointed, and in 1788 and 1789, Benjamin Elliott's name appears, also in 1799, and no name for the intervening years between 1789 and 1799, therefore it is supposed he held the office continuously from 1788 to 1799. There is also lacking the documentary evidence of who the incumbent of the office was for the years 1802, 1804, 1805, and 1828.

1800–3. John Johnston.
1806–8. Robert Allison.
1809–11, 1815–17, Thomas Ker.
1812. John Huyett.
1813–14, 1818–20, Samuel Steel.
1821–23, 1829–31. Isaac Dorland.
1824–25. John Miller.
1826–27. Walter Clarke.
1833–34. Jacob Miller.
1835–37. Thomas Fisher.
1838. David Snare.
David Blair.
1838–40. David Blair.
1841. Andrew H. Hirst.[4]
1843. George Taylor.
1845. Joseph Law.
1847. Isaac Neff.
1849. John A. Doyle.
1851. John Marks.
1853. Joseph M. Stevens.
1855. A. B. Crewitt.[5]
1859. H. T. White.
1861. J. A. Nash.
1863. David Black.
1865. Thomas W. Myton.
1867. M. M. Logan.
1869. Samuel J. Cloyd.
1871. A. W. Kenyon,
1873. T. W. Montgomery.[6]
1875. G. Ashman Miller.
1878. A. P. McElwaine.
1881. Harris Richardson.

[1] Died Oct. 30, 1837.
[2] Appointed by the Governor.
[3] To fill vacancy occurring by the death of Lewis M. Stewart.
[4] Mr. Hirst was the last appointed, and the first elected under the new law, which election took place in October, 1841, for a term of two years under the then existing law.
[5] He died in office, when, April 14, 1857, F. H. Lane was appointed to fill the vacancy, and in 1857 was elected for the full term.
[6] Prior to the election of 1875 the State Constitution had been changed, and the term of treasurer extended to three years, to which office G. Ashman Miller was elected.

DEPUTY SURVEYORS.

John Armstrong, commissioned 8th October, 1750, for Cumberland County.

Richard Tea was commissioned 20th September, 1764, for that part of the county of Cumberland "which is bounded to the westward by the Allegheny Hills, to the southward by the Province of Maryland, and to the eastward and northward by the yellow lines as marked and set off in the annexed map."[1] Bond, £200 province money.

William Maclay, commissioned 24th September, 1764, for "that part of the said county of Cumberland bounded to the eastward by the river Susquehanna, to the southward by the river Juniata and Tuscarora Mountain, to the westward by the district in the said county allotted to Richard Tea, surveyor, and to the northward by a line to be drawn from John Penn's Creek to the Allegheny Mountain, according to the late purchase made by the said proprietaries of the Indians." Bond, £200. Adam Hoops, surety.

Thomas Smith, commissioned 29th March, 1771, "to be surveyor of the western part of the county of Cumberland and part of the county of Bedford, formerly the district of Richard Tea." Bond, £500. Bondsmen, William Smith, D.D., and David Franks.

George Woods, commissioned 25th May, 1782, for the whole county of Bedford. Recommissioned 10th November, 1789, for the whole county of Bedford except that part of it already granted to Alexander McLean, Esq. (west of Allegheny Mountain). Canceled the 21st December, 1791, and George Woods, Jr., appointed.

John Canan, commissioned 27th September, 1787, for the county of Huntingdon. David Stewart and Andrew Henderson, sureties.

Same, 30th September, 1791.

Same, April 11, 1792, for District No. 3 (late purchase).

Same, 25th April, 1800.

John Morrison, commissioned April 13, 1809, May 11, 1812, Dec. 9, 1813, May 11, 1815.

Peter Cassidy, commissioned April 17, 1818.

William Reed, commissioned June 20, 1821.

Daniel Africa, commissioned June 7, 1824, May 24, 1827.

William Reed, commissioned May 31, 1830. Oath dated 10th June, 1830, taken before James Saxton, J. P.

Same, May 15, 1833. Oath taken 1st June, 1833, before Daniel Africa, J. P.

Francis Cassidy, commissioned May 30, 1836.

Jacob Cresswell.

William Reed, commissioned May 16, 1839.

Samuel Caldwell, commissioned May 15, 1845.

Same, commissioned June 2, 1848.

COUNTY SURVEYORS.

William Christy, elected Tuesday, 8th October, 1850. Christy, 1632 votes; Samuel Caldwell, 1262 votes. Christy sworn by Cremer, clerk of Court of Quarter Sessions, Nov. 21, 1850. Oath filed Nov. 23, 1850. P. O., Alexandria.

J. Simpson Africa, elected Oct. 11, 1853. Oath filed Dec. 15, 1853. P. O., Huntingdon.

J. Simpson Africa received 2013 votes, John F. Ramey received 2013 votes, Oct. 14, 1856. "Each having received the same number of votes, there is no choice, and the court must appoint."

John F. Ramey appointed. Certificate of oath filed 24th April, 1857, by Court of Quarter Sessions. P. O., Huntingdon.

John F. Ramey, elected Oct. 11, 1859. Oath filed Aug. 2, 1860.

John A. Pollock, elected 14th October, 1862. Oath filed April 25, 1863. P. O., Mount Union.

Henry Wilson, appointed by Court of Quarter Sessions, 21st November, 1864. Oath filed Dec. 12, 1864. P. O., Wilsonia.

James E. Glasgow, elected Oct. 10, 1865. Oath filed Nov. 8, 1865. P. O., Cassville.

Same, elected Oct. 13, 1868. Oath filed Feb. 12, 1869.

Henry Wilson, elected Oct. 10, 1871. Oath filed Nov. 23, 1871. P. O., Wilsonia.

Henry Wilson, elected Nov. 3, 1874. Oath filed Jan. 19, 1878. P. O. Huntingdon.

William H. Booth, elected Nov. 6, 1877. Oath filed March 23, 1878. P. O., Maddensville.

John S. Lytle, elected November, 1881. P. O., Spruce Creek.

[1] A map filed in the land office.

DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

1850-53. J. Sewell Stewart.
1856. Theodore H. Cremer.
1859. Samuel T. Brown.
1862. J. H. O. Corbin.
1864. James D. Campbell.
1866. K. Allen Lovell.
1869. Milton S. Lytle.
1872. H. Clay Madden.
1875. J. Chalmers Jackson.
1878-81. George B. Orlady.

DIRECTORS OF THE POOR.

On May 6, 1850, an act was approved providing "for the erection of a house for the employment and support of the poor in the county of Huntingdon," when Thomas Fisher, Kenzie L. Greene, Benjamin Leas, James Gillam, John McCulloch, John Porter, Isaac Taylor, A. P. Wilson, John Watson, Caleb Greenland, and S. Miles Green were appointed to select and purchase a site, provided the people at the next annual election voted in favor of the erection of such house. The vote was taken in accordance with the act, which resulted as follows: For the erection of a poor-house, 1299, and against the purchase of site and building the house, 952.

After the purchase of site and building the house thereon, an act of the Assembly was passed authorizing the people to vote upon the question of sale of said property, which resulted: For the sale, 892, and against sale, 2802.

The act of 1850 provided for the election of three directors the first year, and one yearly thereafter.

1851. James Clarke, James Saxton, George Hudson.
1852. John Brewster.
1853. Samuel Mattern.
1854. J. A. Shade.
1855. Kenzie L. Greene.
1856. Joseph Gibbony.
1857. James Murphy.
1858. David Clarkson.
1859. William Moore.
1860. Samuel Peightal.
1861. James Henderson.
1862. Samuel Heckadorn.
1863. John Logan.
1864. Henry Davis, three years; Henry A. Mark, one year.
1865. John Flenner.
1866. Jackson Harman.
1867. Adam Heeter.
1868. John Miller.
1869. James Smith.
1870. John P. Stewart.
1871. Harris Richardson.
1872. Michael Kyper.
1873. Gilbert Horning.
1874. Aaron W. Evans.
1875. John Griffith.
1876. Daniel Conrad.
1877. James Harper, three years; Michael Stair, two years.
1878. Abram B. Miller.
1879. Jacob Haffly.
1880. James Harper.
1881. Jacob H. Isett
1882. Jacob Haffly.

JURY COMMISSIONERS.

1867. George W. Shontz, N. K. Covert.
1870. S. B. Chaney, John Vandevander.
1873. John G. Stewart, Samuel Brooks.
1876. John X. Lutz, Nicholas Isenberg.
1879. Richard Wills, Adam Krugh, and James Henderson, appointed in 1881 to fill vacancy by reason of Adam Krugh's removal from the State.
1882. Jonathan Evans, Henry Chamberlain.

CHAPTER XXXII.

POPULATION AND POST-OFFICES.

Census of 1880.—The tenth census of the population, wealth, and industry of the United States was taken pursuant to acts of Congress approved respectively on March 3, 1879, and April 20, 1880. An office was established in the Department of the Interior designated the Census Office, the chief officer of which was called the superintendent of the census. The secretary arranged the counties of the several States into groups of contiguous territory called supervisors' districts, for each of which a supervisor of the census was appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. In Pennsylvania there were ten such districts. Each supervisor, with the approval of the superintendent, apportioned his district into sub-divisions most convenient for the purpose of enumeration. The Seventh District of this State consisted of fourteen counties, to wit: York, Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Perry, Juniata, Snyder, Union, Mifflin, Huntingdon, Fulton, Centre, Clinton, and Clearfield. J. Simpson Africa, of Huntingdon, was commissioned supervisor. The territory of this district was arranged into two hundred and seventy-nine sub-districts. Huntingdon County contained twenty-seven. The names of the sub-districts and of the enumerators appointed are as follows:

Sub-dist. No.	District.	Enumerator.
180.	Warrior's Mark township and Birmingham borough	William L. Rider.
181.	Franklin township	Samuel Wigton.
182.	Morris township	David Wilson.
183.	Jackson township	J. L. McIlvaine.
184.	Barree township	Robert G. Miller.
185.	West township	B. Frank Brown.
186.	Logan township and Petersburg borough	George B. Porter.
187.	Porter township, north end, and Alexandria borough	J. Russell Cross.
188.	Porter township, south end	John Huyett.
189.	Oneida and Henderson townships	J. Glasgow Simpson.
	Huntingdon Borough.
190.	First Ward, and that part of the Third Ward east of Warm Springs Avenue	Peter Gerlach.
191.	Second Ward	William Africa.
192.	Fourth Ward, and that part of the Third Ward lying west of the Warm Springs Avenue	Rev. A. G. Dole.
193.	Brady township	George Eby.
194.	Juniata and Walker townships	Abraham S. Simpson.
195.	Penn township and Marklesburg borough	John G. Beaver.
196.	Lincoln and Hopewell townships	John H. Hess.
197.	Union township and Mapleton borough	James S. Gillam.
198.	Cass and Tod townships and Cassville borough	James Henderson.
199.	Broad Top City, Dudley, Coalmont boroughs, and Carbon township	John Ronan.
200.	Mount Union borough and that part of Shirley township which constitutes the Mount Union election district	George W. Lukens.
201.	Shirley election district and Shirleysburg borough	Louis A. Brown.
202.	Orbisonia borough and Cromwell township	William H. Miller.
203.	Clay township, Saltillo borough, and Three Springs borough	Mrs. Mary E. Greene.
204.	Springfield township	James Norris.
205.	Dublin township and Shade Gap borough	Miss Mary E. Taylor.
	Tell township	James G. McClure.

POPULATION—CENSUS OF 1880.

Alexandria borough		484
Barree township		1,085
Birmingham borough		233
Brady township		909
Mill Creek village	288
Broad Top City borough		298
Carbon township		1,393
Barnet village	110
Friendship village	217
Ground Hog Valley	55
Little Valley	69
Minersville	248
Robertsdale	694
Cass township		720
Cassville borough		188
Clay township		891
Coalmont borough		171
Cromwell township		1,709
New Rockhill village	200
Old Rockhill	190
Dublin township		925
Dudley borough		203
Franklin township		1,129
Henderson township		738
Hopewell township		579
Huntingdon borough		4,125
First Ward	895
Second Ward	1351
Third Ward	1018
Fourth Ward	861
Jackson township		1,655
Ennisville village	70
Greenwood Furnace village	225
McAlevy's Fort village	145
Juniata township		438
Lincoln township		604
Logan township		611
Mapleton borough		444
Marklesburg borough		232
Morris township		678
Spruce Creek village	218
Water Street village	60
Mount Union borough		764
Oneida township		353
Orbisonia borough		766
Penn township		998
Grafton village	133
Grantsville village	73
Petersburg borough		381
Porter township		1,039
Barree Iron-Works village	260
Saltillo borough		227
Shade Gap borough		170
Shirley township		1,703
Shirleysburg borough		367
Springfield township		816
Maddenville village	26
Meadow Gap village	26
Tell township		1,058
Three Springs borough		239
Tod township		848
Union township		780
Walker township		1,002
McConnellstown village	308
Smithfield village	151
Warrior's Mark township		1,240
Spring Mount village	94
Warrior's Mark village	206
West township		763
Fairfield village	33
Mooresville village	48
Total		33,956

LIST OF POST-OFFICES, WITH THEIR LOCATION, JANUARY, 1883.

Post-Office.	Township or Borough.
Airy Dale	Brady.
Alexandria	Alexandria borough.
Anghwick Mills	Shirley.
Barree Forge	Porter.
Birmingham	Birmingham borough.
Broad Top	Broad Top City borough.
Calvin	Union.
Cassville	Cassville borough.
Coalmont	Coalmont borough.
Coffee Run	Lincoln.
Cceleraine Forge	Franklin.
Cole's Summit	Tod.
Colfax	Union.
Cornpropst's Mills	Miller.
Cottage	West.
Cove Station	Hopewell.
Donation	Oneida.
Dudley	Dudley borough.
Dutton
Eagle Foundry	Tod.
East Broad Top	Tod.
Ennisville	Jackson.
Franklinville	Franklin.
Grafton	Penn.
Graysville	Franklin.
Greenwood Furnace	Jackson.
Hare's Valley	Cass.
Hill Valley	Shirley.
Hubelsville	Clay.
Huntingdon	Huntingdon borough.
James Creek	Marklesburg borough.
Lutta Grove	Cass.
McAlevy's Fort	Jackson.
McConnellstown	Walker.
McNeal
Maddenville	Springfield.
Manor Hill	Barree.
Mapleton Depot	Mapleton borough.
Masseysburg	Barree.
Meadow Gap	Springfield.

Post-Office.	Township or Borough.
Mill Creek	Brady.
Morrell	Morris.
Mount Union	Mount Union borough.
Neff's Mills	West.
Nossville	Tell.
Orbisonia	Orbisonia borough.
Page	Union.
Paradise Furnace	Tod.
Pennsylvania Furnace	Franklin.
Petersburg	Petersburg borough.
Robertsdale	Carbon.
Saltillo	Saltillo borough.
Saulsburg	Barree.
Shade Gap	Shade Gap borough.
Shade Valley	Tell.
Shirleysburg	Shirleysburg borough.
Shy Beaver	Lincoln.
Spruce Creek	Morris.
Three Springs	Three Springs borough.
Tod	Tod.
Trough Creek	Tod.
Union Church	Henderson.
Valley Point	Shirley.
Warrior's Mark	Warrior's Mark.
Water Street	Morris.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

BARREE TOWNSHIP.

THIS township, as will be noticed by reference to Chapter III., was formed by the Cumberland County Court at October sessions, 1767, and then embraced all of the area of Huntingdon County west of Jack's Mountain and Sideling Hill and the greater portion of Blair County. The name was originally written BARRÉ. As the township was created during the times when the people of the colonies were protesting against the taxes imposed upon them by the mother-country, it is supposed the name was conferred in honor of Col. Isaac Barré, who by a speech delivered in 1765 in the British Parliament on the celebrated Stamp Act, patriotically defended the colonists. The name soon became written "Barree," and long usage has established that as the correct orthography. In the changes of more than a century it was so shorn of its extensive proportions as to be reduced to an area of about twenty-five square miles, it being about four miles wide, with an average length slightly exceeding six miles. Its general shape is that of a parallelogram, with its northern end resting on the summit of Tussey's Mountain, which separates it from Centre County. Jackson bounds it on the east, Miller on the south, and West on the southwest.

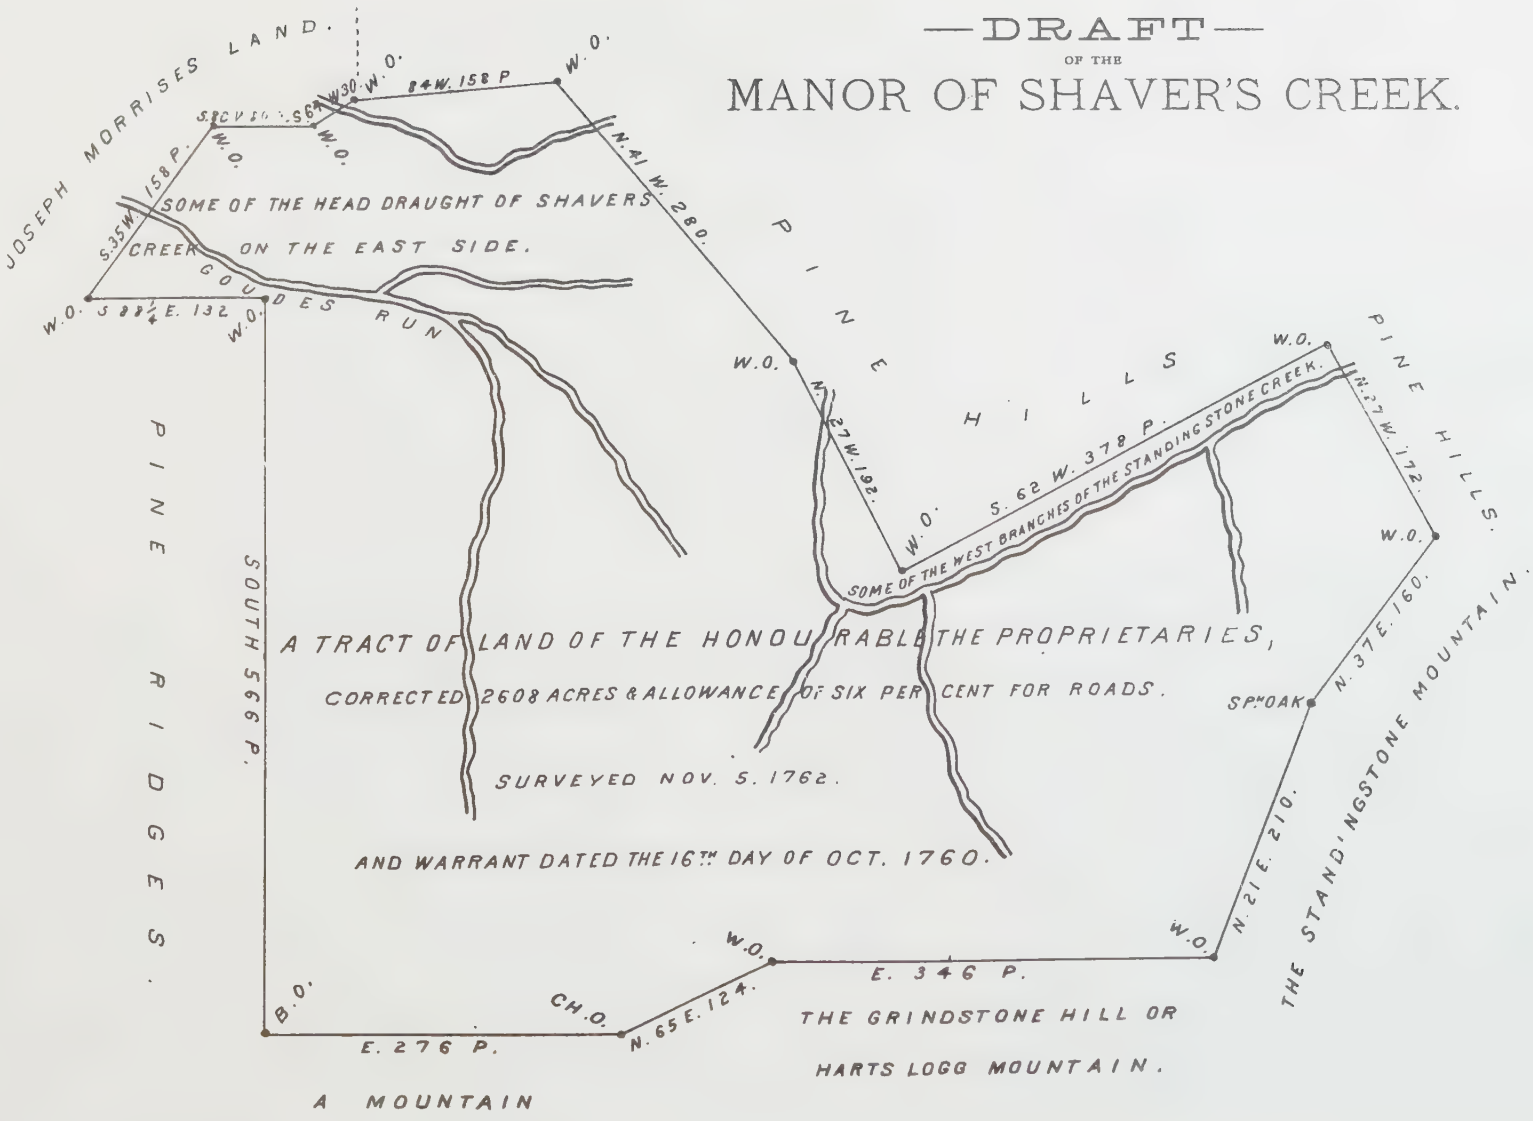
With the exception of Herrad's Run, a tributary of Standing Stone Creek, the drainage of the township is by way of Shaver's Creek. This stream flows through Shaver's Creek Valley.

Numerous springs issue from the mountain-side and from the high lands east and south of the creek, which feed that stream with fresh and clear water, whose appearance is quite unlike that which distinguishes the waters of Shaver's Creek when it flows into the Juniata. The discoloration is caused by the peculiar earths through which it flows in West and Logan townships. In Barree are also springs of mineral waters, several of them being highly charged with sulphur. Iron ore abounds in considerable quantities, and although but partially developed has been found to yield a large percentage of excellent metal. The soil of the tillable parts of the township is, in the main, somewhat thin, but is fairly fertile, and under skillful cultivation yields fine returns. It appears well adapted for fruit culture. There are some fine improvements and well-tilled farms.

The first assessment of the property in this township after the formation of Huntingdon County was in 1788. The following extracts have been arranged as nearly as possible according to the territory of the township as it has been since subdivided.

The abbreviations used are "W," for warranted land; "L," for land held by "locations" or orders of survey; "Imp.," for land held by improvement-right; "a.," for acres; "h.," for horses; "h. c.," for horned cattle; "c.," for cows.

Robert Smith, collector, made a return of the lands upon which there was no property to pay the taxes. These tracts are designated with an *, and were either unimproved or untenanted.



BARREE AND MILLER.

Bell, Arthur, 90 a., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Collins, Moses (for Manor), 125 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
China, Gilbert (for Manor), a. L. 125, a. W., 1 h., 1 h. c.
China, Isaiah (for Manor), a. L., 125 a. W., 1 h., 1 h. c.
China, Edward, 1 h., 1 h. c.
Cope, Jacob (for Cox), 350 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Ewing, Thomas, 300 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Ewing, Samuel, 50 a. I., 2 h , 2 h. c.
Ewing, John, Sr. (for Harshaw), 300 a. L., 2 h., 1. h. c.
Ewing, John, 50 a. I., 1 h., 1 h. c.
Ferguson, Thomas, 160 a. W., 4 h., 5 h. c., 1 still.
Ferguson, John, 160 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Galagher, Thomas, 150 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Green, Clement, 100 a. Imp., 2 h.
Green, George, 300 a. L., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Heaney, James, 100 a. I., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Montgomery, Wm. (for Dewitt), 100 a. W., 1 h., 2 h. c.
McMahon, Benj., 100 a. L.
McGaffock, Benj. (Manor), 125 a. W., 2 h., 3 h. c.
McAlice, Danl. (Manor), 125 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.
McAlhenny, Widow, 2 h., 1 h. c.
McAlhenny, Wm. (for Manor), 125 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.
McGinnis, John (for McMurtrie), 170 a. W., 1 h., 1 h. c
McMahon, William, 3 h., 3 h. c.
McDermot, James, 150 a. L., 1 h., 2 h. c.
Nelson, Abraham (Manor), 125 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Nelson, William, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Riddle, Robert, 200 a. W., 3 h., 3 h. c., 2 stills.
Riddle, William, 150 a. W.
Rickets, China (for Manor), 125 a. W., 3 h., 2 h. c.
Ricketts, Edward (for Manor), 125 a. W., 1 h., 1 h. c.
Ricketts, Jeremiah (for Manor), 125 a. W.
Ricketts, Jeremiah, 100 a. I., 1 h., 1 h. c.
Ricketts, John, 150 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Ricketts, Reson, 125 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Sinkey, Richard (John Agnew), 300 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c
Vanderider, Matthias (Manor), 50 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Wason, Robert (for Manor), 125 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Ferguson, Henry, 160 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.

Non-Resident Lands.

David Kennedy, adj. Manor land, 400 a. L.
*John Cox, at the forks, 275 a. I.
John Agnew, in the forks.
*John Edwards, adj. Robert Riddle, 200 a. W.
*Moses Woods, on the head-waters of Shaver's Creek, 100 a. L.

—DRAFT—
OF THE
MANOR OF SHAVER'S CREEK.

*Andrew Boggs, deceased, on the Warrior's Ridge, 300 a. L.
*James Elliott, adjoining Thomas Ewing, 170 a. L.
*John Cox, adjoining the Manor, 300 a. L.
*Thompson, Isaac, 100 a. Imp.

JACKSON.

Boggs, Andrew, 300 a. L., 1 h., 1 h. c.
Cree, John, 150 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Feress, Moses, 50 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Glen, John, 150 a. L., 2 h., 3 h. c.
Glen, Archibald, 150 a. L., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Glen, Andrew (for Ritchy), 233 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Glen, James, 100 a. L., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Hueston, William, 250 a. L., 1 h., 2 h. c.
Little, John, Esq., 150 a. W., 3 h., 2 h. c., 1 grist-mill, 1 saw-mill.
McAlevy, William, 150 a. W., 300 L., 4 h., 5 h. c., 1 still.
Miller, Richard, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Oburn, Joseph, 230 a. L., 3 h., 3 h. c.
Porter, Samuel, 200 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Porter, William, 220 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Porter, James, 2 h., 2 h. c.
Smith, Robert, 200 a. W., 3 h., 3 h. c.

Non-Resident Lands.

*Samuel Meredith, adj. William McAlevy, 2000 a. L.
*James Smith, adj. William McAlevy, 492 a. L.
*Robert Stephenson, adj. John Wilson (in name of John Miller, said to be William McClay or Stephenson), 300 a. L.
*Patterson, adj. Joseph Oburn, 220 a. L.
*John Shea, adj. Robert Smith, 200 a. W.
*John Shea, adj. William McAlevy, 150 a. W.
*George Frie, adj. Arthur Bell, 150 a. W.
*John Camble, on the long ridge, 100 a. L.
*John Davis, on the long ridge, 100 a. L.
*John Cox, adj. William Patterson, 300 a. L.
John Harris, adj. John Little, 200 a. W.
George Frie, adj. or lying on the head of Squire Little's, Mill Creek, 200 a. W.

LOGAN AND WEST.

Anderson, James, 300 a., 3 h., 4 h. c.
Armstrong, Thomas, 280 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Cresswell, Robert, 150 a. W., 1 h., 2 h. c.
Cresswell, James, 150 a. L., 2 h., 3 h. c.
Cotton, John (for Kirkpatrick, property of Mrs. Bond), 150 deed, 2 h., 2 h. c.
Dickey, John, 200 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Gray, George, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Gray, Thomas, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Graffass, Nicholas, 200 a. W., 2 h., 3 h. c.
Johnston, William, 300 a. W., 3 h., 3 h. c.
Leonard, Patrick, 50 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Long, William, 100 a. W., 1 h. c.
Long, Thomas.
McCormick, Alexander, 300 a. W., 5 h., 5 h. c., 1 grist-mill, 1 saw-mill.
Ralston, David, 500 a. W., 4 h., 6 h. c.
Wilson, William, 100 a. D., 2 h., 3 h. c.
Wilson, George, 200 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Wilson, John, 200 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Wilson, James, 2 h., 2 h. c.
Ward, Edward (for McMutrie), 150 W., 1 h., 2 h. c.

Non-Resident Land.

*William Wilson, deceased, 180 a. L.
*John Cox, Shaver's Creek, adj. David Ralston, 111 a. W.
*David McMutrie, 830 W.
*Cox, on the south of the ridge, near the Warm Spring, 600 a. L.
*Cox and Patterson, adj. James Dickey, 300 a. L.
*Philip Benezet and James Childs, on the Globe Run, 600 a. W.
*John Taylor, on the Globe Run, 170 L.

BARREE.

Not Classified.

Brown, Moses, 100 a. Imp., 2h , 1 h. c.
Brown, Michael, for John Rickey, 250 a. loc., 1 h., 1 h. c.
Conner, James, 200 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Collins, Jacob, 50 a. Imp., 2 h.
Connor, John, for Patterson, 200 a. loc., 1 h., 1 h. c.
Frogg, Boston, 119 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Graffass, John, 100 a. Imp., 2 h., 1 h. c., 1 still.
Gordon, David, 100 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Jenkins, William, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Irwin, James, for Ritchey, 233 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Kennedy, John, 100 a. W., 2 h., 3 h. c.
Kerr, John, 75 a. W., 2 h., 2 h. c.
Longue, John, 250 a. L.
Linn, James, 40 a. L., 1 h., 2 h. c.
Lisle, John, 2 h. c.
McClellan, John, 2 h., 1 h. c.
McCartney, Bartholomew, 60 a. L., 1 h , 1 h. c.
Seaburn, George, 1 h., 1 h. c.
Seaburn, Peter, 3 h.
Thompson, David (for Kirkpatrick, property of John Swift), 150 a. W., 2 h., 1 h. c.
Turbitt, John, deceased, 50 a. W.
Thompson, Widow, 100 deed, 1 h.
Young, John, 2 h., 1 h. c.
William Porter, sessor; William McAlavy, George Gray, assistants.

ONEIDA.

Dickey, Moses, 150 a. W., 1 h., 1 c.
*Frogg, John (for Mifflin), 300 L., 1 h., 2 h. c.

Non-Resident.

*Samuel Mifflin, deceased, Warm Springs, Stone Creek, 1200 a. L.

The Shaver's Creek Manor.—Within the limits of this township is located one of the tracts reserved by the proprietaries of the province for their own use. It is known as the Shaver's Creek Manor, and contains two thousand six hundred and eight acres. The warrant for its survey was dated Oct. 30, 1760, and the survey was made by Samuel Finley, an assistant of John Armstrong, then deputy surveyor of Cumberland County, Nov. 5, 1762. From this tract the village of Manor Hill, located within its lines, derived its name. In November, 1788, James Hunter, a surveyor then and for some years thereafter in active practice, divided the Manor tract into lots as follows:

No. 1.	Robert Wason	161	acres,	142	perches.
" 2.	Abraham Nilson	254	"	9	"
" 3.	Gilbert and Edward Cheany	212	"	20	"
" 4.	Jeremiah Rickets	113	"	96	"
" 5.	Widow Talbot	196	"	106	"
" 6.	Daniel McIlhence	371	"	3	"
" 7.	Benjamin Magafok	248	"	44	"
" 8.	Chain and Edward Rickets	284	"	50	"
" 9.	Jacob Collins	189	"	9	"
" 10.	Hugh Gallagher	383	"	53	"
" 11.	William McIlheny	209	"	38	"

The village lots were chiefly laid off on Manor lot No. 10.

Although the township was not wholly free of Indians, no outrages seem to have been committed within its borders. To be prepared in case an incursion occurred, a stockade fort was built at Manor Hill on one of the Rickets farms. It was designed primarily for temporary defense, and its existence doubtless gave the settlers assurances of safety which they otherwise would not have entertained. It was occupied on several occasions of Indian alarms, in one of which, it is said, occurred the birth of Jacob Chaney. The farm was sold by the Rickets to Arthur Moore, who in turn conveyed it to John Crum, who used the timbers in building a sheep barn on the same farm, which was demolished not many years since.

JOHN DICKEY, who came from Carlisle, Pa., was one of the earliest settlers of the present township. Some years before the Revolution he took up a large tract of land in the neighborhood of the "Manor," but the unsettled condition of the country caused him to return to Carlisle, where he lived several years, then returned to Barree, which was his residence until his death in 1814, at quite an advanced age. Of his six children one of his daughters married Michael Murray, who lived on the Manor; another John Phramton, who lived on the small stream which bears his name, formerly called Ewing's Run; while the third daughter married John Henderson, and lived on an adjoining tract of land. The sons John and Thomas removed to the West, and James died in the township.

THE MASSEY FAMILY originally lived in Chester County. Soon after the Revolution two brothers, Mordecai and Phineas, settled in the Spruce Creek Valley, where they built the first forge in Franklin township, some time before 1800. They sold out their interests to John Gloninger & Co., and Mordecai crossed Tussey's Mountain into Barree, and purchased a large tract of land in the Shaver's Creek Valley along the base of the mountain. Here he died at the age of ninety years. He had daughters who married,—Sarah, John Henry; Phœbe, John McCartney; and Jane, Israel Pennington, of Centre County. His sons were Mordecai, a physician at Masseysburg, in Barree, until his death in 1855. His widow survived him until 1881, dying at the age of eighty-seven years, leaving no issue. The second son, Robert, was married to Martha, daughter of Joseph Jackson, and lived on the farm now occupied by his son Reuben until his death, aged eighty-two years. Besides Reuben he had children,—Mordecai B., an attorney at Huntingdon; and sons named Daniel and John. A daughter, Jane, became the wife of William Miller, of West township.

JOHN BELL.—Another early settler in this part of the township was John Bell, who lived on the place now owned by Alexander Oaks until his death in 1833, a very aged man. He was the father of sons,—George W., who was married to Margaret McMahan, and who died in 1864, at the age of eighty-two years; Alexander, married to Elizabeth Moore; William, married to Elizabeth Henry; Thomas, married to Margaret Ewing; and John and Arthur, who were single men.

MCMAHAN FAMILY.—After the Revolution, Benjamin McMahan came from the Tuscarora Valley, and settled on the place now owned by his son John, where he died in 1829. During the war he served in the garrison at Northumberland, where his brother James settled, not far from Danville. He was married to a daughter of Daniel McAleece, and reared three sons and two daughters. The latter married George W. Bell and James Johnston, both of Barree. John McMahan, the oldest son, was born in Barree in 1794, and was married to Ann Bell, who died at the age of seventy-six years. They reared sons named Benjamin, George, Marshall, James, Jackson, and daughters who married Robert Wilson, David Little, and Jonathan Johnston. John McMahan is one of the oldest men in the county. He is a carpenter by trade, and attained wonderful skill in the use of the broad-axe, his exploits in that direction being remembered by many of the old people of Barree and Jackson. Daniel, a second son of Benjamin McMahan, removed to St. Louis, and Benjamin, another son, died at Altoona. The McAleece, or McClees family removed to Kentucky at an early day. The young man McClees, killed by the Indians in Jackson township, was a nephew of Daniel McAleece, his parents never living in the county.

WILLIAM MAFFITT.—In the upper part of the valley, above the McMahan farm, lived William Maffitt, who moved there from Woodcock Valley, in Bedford. He was the father of three sons named John, Robert, and James, and of daughters who married William Johnston, James McClelland, and Joseph Ross.

CASPER CROYL lived in the Maffitt family, and some of his family now occupy the Maffitt homestead. He had sons named George, Samuel, Henry, Philip, Jonas, and Thomas.

MCCARTNEY FAMILY.—Farther down the valley lived George McCartney, and Daniel and James McCartney lived in Jackson, all being of different parentage, and not related to one another. They were among the early settlers, and their descendants have become quite numerous.

THE RUDY BROTHERS, George and Barney, came from York County after the Revolution, the former having been engaged in that struggle. He occupied what is known as the Rudy homestead, where he lived until his death. His five daughters married John Scott, Casper Croyl, and A. Morrison, of Barree, and John Warefield and Robert Wilson, of Jackson. His sons were John, George, Jacob, Henry, Samuel, and Jonas, the latter living on the homestead until his death in 1854. His sons Martin, Reuben, Samuel, and John yet live in that locality.

JOHN HENRY, an Irishman, was an early settler on the farm which is now owned by John Smith. Here he reared three sons, named James, John, and Samuel, and daughters who married John Hutchinson, of Barree, Asa Fagan, of the same township, and Samuel Morrison, of Huntingdon. The oldest son moved to Clearfield, Samuel went out in the war of 1812 and never returned, and John married Sarah Massey, and lived in Barree until 1844, when he moved to near Fairfield, where he died in 1856, leaving sons, Jesse, James, Mordecai, and John.

DAVID GILLILAND, of Irish birth, was one of the first settlers below the Manor, rearing a large family, one of the daughters, Mary, yet being a resident of the township, at the age of about eighty years. John Henderson, an Irishman, settled in the same locality, on one of the Dickey farms. He was the father of two sons, John and George. The former married Sally Campbell, and moved to Cass County, Iowa. George married Harriet Taylor, of Mifflin County, and settled on the William McIlhenney farm, on the Manor tract. He died near Petersburg in 1855. A son, Miles, is yet living on the homestead.

In the neighborhood of Saulsburg settled Thomas Forrest a few years before the Revolution, and lived there until his death in 1806. The two daughters he reared married John Morrill and Isaac Myton, both of whom moved to Ohio. The oldest son, John, married Martha Wilson, and settled in Barree. He was the father of Joseph Forrest, at present one of the oldest citizens of the township, and James and John Forrest, who moved to the West. Other sons of Thomas Forrest were Joseph and Thomas, who were among the first settlers of the northwestern part of the State. Along the northwest base of Warrior Ridge James Watson improved what later became known as the Oyer and Gibbony farms. Christian Oyer was from Chester County. He had a son, also named Christian, who made the substantial improvement now on the farm, removing to Ohio more than a quarter of a century ago. The daughters of Christian Oyer, Sr., married George Wilson and Richard Sankey. John Gibbony, the father of Joseph Gibbony, came from Lancaster County about 1824.

WILLIAM STEWART, a pioneer, lived south of the Manor. He was the father of Judge John Stewart, who lived in the same locality; James and Samuel, other sons, lived in Jackson, while Thomas Stewart died on the homestead. Several daughters were married to James Sample and John Oaks, the latter of Jackson township. William Hirst came about 1795 and settled in the upper part of the township, where he died in 1852 at the age of seventy-eight years. His daughters married into the Fowler, Evans, and Peightal families. Of his sons, John died at Saulsburg; William became a Methodist minister and died at Washington City; Andrew H. served as county treasurer, and afterwards became a merchant at Philadelphia; and James was a physician in Illinois. Near the Jackson line lived John Duff, who came to the place from the Kishacoquillas Valley. He reared ten sons, namely, William, Samuel, John, Cornelius, Andrew, Edward, James, David, Reuben, and Charles. There were also four daughters who attained womanhood.

Some time about 1800, John Crum, a very active Methodist, settled at Manor Hill, on one of the Ricketts farms. His sons Cornelius and John moved to the West, while his daughters married John M. Smith, of Jackson, and Joseph Adams, who had the first store at the Manor, and who afterwards became widely known as Judge Adams.

Abraham Hagan, a native of Newark, N. J., removed to Baltimore, and from that city to Huntingdon County, moving to Manor Hill in 1810, and followed his trade, shoemaking. One of his sons, John, is yet an esteemed citizen of that locality, while James lives in Jackson, and William removed to Indiana. Some of his daughters married James Myton, George Hutchinson, and David Gilliland.

In 1812, after West was set off, the township contained the following taxables:

	Acres.
Austin, Owen	70
Averill, Nicholas	100
Adams Joseph	.....
Barr, Samuel	100
Black, Robert	208
Brooks, John	300
Bowersock, Henry	.....
Bickett, William	75
Bell, John	150
Brooks, John, Jr	150
Bradley, James	100
Barr, John	80
Bowersock, Valentine	51
Belford, James	220
Bell, Alexander	100
Black, John	.....
Baumgardner, George	200
Barr, David	250
Barr, Robert	36
Baumgardner, Jacob	.....
Carman, John	244
Campbell, Isaac (saw-mill)	177
Covenhoven, Thomas	122
Coy, John	150
Cunningham, Robert	300
Crum, Cornelius	.....
Crum, John	279
Couch, Edward (grist- and saw-mills)	240
Chaney, Martha (village lot)	153
Coy, Jacob	195
Caroles, John	30
Campbell, John (saw-mill)	1197
Campbell, Alexander	.....
Connelly, Adam	.....
Coy, Christopher	180
Dunn, John	.....
Dickey, John, Sr	217
Dickey, John, Jr	.....
Davis, Samuel	150
Davis, John	.....
Ennis, Joshua	107
Fox, Jacob (for landlord)	300
Fox, George	30
Fagan, Asaph	170
Faris, Moses	70
Forrest, John	150
Fitzgerald, James (two lots)	.....
Fox, Christopher	200
Flemming, James	173
Goodwin, Benjamin	251
Goodwin, David	2 0
Green, Elijah	120
Graham, William	106
Green, George	.....
Gilleland, Matthew	.....
Gilleland, David, Jr	.....
Green, George, Jr	302
Gilleland, David	215
Godfrey, Robert	50
Gale, David	.....
Green, Nathaniel	.....
Gettis, Robert	.....
Henry, Samuel	100
Henon, John	130
Hutchinson, John	100
Hirst, William	152
Hays, William	300
Henry, John, Jr	.....
Henon, William	.....
Householder, Andrew	.....
Hagan, Abraham	.....
Horning & Myers	600
Jackson, Joseph, Esq (saw-mill)	265
Jenkins, Mary	200
Jackson, Garnet	112
Jackson, Jonathan	150
Johnston, William	.....
Kyler, Thomas	260
Kerns, Peter	.....
Livingston, Alexander	81
Logan, William	.....
Logan, Robert	20
Lightner, Matthias	196
Little, John (grist-mill)	200
Leonard, Robert (distillery)	320
Leonard, James	.....
Maffitt, Wm. (fulling-mill)	130
Maffitt, Robert	170
Morrell, Robert	200
Mitchell, Robert	.....
Massey, Mordecai	300
McAlevy, William (distillery, grist- and saw-mill)	1035
McAlevy, William, Jr	100
McElroy, James	100
Mitchell, Thomas	279
McMongal, Daniel	.....
McMahan, Benjamin	150
Morton, Josiah	.....
McVicker, Duncan	75
McCartney, Daniel (distillery)	100
McMillan, Robert	100
McCartney, James	182
Moore, Robert (distillery)	400
Miller, Matthew	330
McGill, John (saw-mill)	286
Myton, Joseph	.....
McElhaney, William	103
McCrum, George	70
McGowen, Samuel	59
Murray, Martha	119
McCrum, Michael	180
McGill, William	342
Marsh, John	200
Myers, Samuel	.....
Morrison, Samuel	65
McGinnis, John	.....
Maffitt, William	.....
Nelson, Robert	250
Neal, John	100
Oburn, Joseph, Jr	230
Oburn, Joseph	58
Oaks, John	200
O'Donald, Neal	200
Oyer, Christian	330
Potter, William	.....
Porter, Samuel (distillery)	169
Paightal, David	40
Riddle, Robert, Esq	150
Rainey, James	.....
Rudy, George	173
Runcha, Joseph (distillery)	162
Rudy, Daniel	.....
Robb, William	225
Riddle, Samuel	.....
Rudy, John	.....
Riddle, Joseph	260
Ross, Stewart	200
Smith, John	50
Scott, David	150
Scott, Thomas	100
Scott, John	.....
Stewart, Robert	254
Silknitter, Michael (saw-mill)	283
Sinkey, Richard	130
Sinkey, Richard, Jr	.....
Stewart, William	300
Simonton, George	50
Shadel, John	150
Smith, Hugh	200
Sample, David	300
Stewart, John (Manor)	.....
Sample, Joseph	232
Steffey, Leonard	100
Scott, Benjamin	.....
Stewart, John	.....
Thompson, James	200
Vance, Samuel	152
Wilson, Robert	.....
Walker, William	55
Wilson, James	.....
Wilson, John	.....
Work, Alexander	100
Work, Aaron	80
Watt, Hugh	200
Watson, James	196
Wilson, Alexander	100
Watson, William	100
Warren, Robert	140
Wilson, Nathaniel	256
Watt, John	85

Single Freemen.

Armstrong, Samuel.	Martin, Isaac.
Black, James.	Morrell, Joseph.
Bell, George.	Miller, David.
Brooks, Frederick.	McElroy, John.
Brooks, William.	Miller, Thomas.
Bell, William.	McGill, John.
Breckenridge, Thomas.	Myton, Joseph.
Burr, Robert.	Morrell, Samuel.
Chaney, James.	McMonegal, William.
Chaney, John.	Miller, Samuel.
Campbell, Josiah.	Jenkins, William.
Campbell, Alexander.	Porter, James.
Campbell, John.	Porter, William.
Cunningham, Robertson.	Riddle, John.
Crossman, James.	Stewart, James.
Dearmont, John.	Silknitter, Philip.
Dickey, Samuel.	Smith, James.
Graham, Mark.	Stewart, William.
Henry, Samuel.	Sinkey, James.
Huston, William.	Simonton, George.
Henry, William.	Thompson, Alexander.
Hight, James.	Wilson, George.
Ferris, Thomas.	Williams, Hugh.

The owners of village lots were Martha Chaney, Robert Gettis, Joseph Jackson, Robert Stewart, and James Wilson. The number of acres of land owned by residents was 26,715; of unseated land, 6785. There were 255 head of horses, 267 head of horned cattle, 2 grist-mills, 7 saw-mills, 6 distilleries, and 25 inhabitants having occupations other than farming.

In 1880 the population of Barree, including the present township of Miller, was 1085.

Civil Organization.—Barree township had, when Huntingdon County was formed, very extensive limits. Hence in the following list of officers may appear the names of persons who resided in what is now one of the following townships: West, Logan, Jackson, Oneida, Miller, or the township proper, if elected before those townships were set off. Miller was included until the spring election of 1881. The principal officers have been:

CONSTABLES.

1788, James Glen; 1789, William Porter; 1790, John Graffius; 1791, George Wilson; 1792, John Case; 1793–94, James Anderson; 1795, James Glen; 1796, Thomas Forrest; 1797, Samuel Mitchell; 1798, David Wherry; 1799, George Green; 1800, James Watson; 1801, William McAlevy; 1802, David Gilliland; 1803, George McCartney; 1804, Hugh Tolland; 1805, Robert Morrell; 1806, William Potter; 1807, Robert Leonard; 1808, Robert Moore; 1809, Isaac Myton; 1810, William Hirst; 1811, Samuel Henry; 1813–14, William Hirst; 1815–16, Thomas Kyler; 1817–19, William McCrum; 1820, Samuel Morris; 1821–22, Thomas Kyler; 1823, Charles Woolverton; 1824–32, William Price; 1833–34, Samuel Rainey.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

1789, Joseph Oburn, James Anderson; 1790, James Glen, George Gray; 1791, James Glen, Nicholas Graffius; 1792, Joseph Oburn, William Porter; 1793, William McAlevy, James Ausrie; 1794, George Jackson, Samuel Porter; 1795, George Gray, Richard Miller; 1796, Alexander McCormick, William McAlevy; 1797, James Glen, William McAlevy; 1798, Nathaniel Murray, Robert Moore; 1799, Joseph Jackson, David Riddle; 1800, James Thompson, Michael Murray.

ROAD SUPERVISORS.

1789, William McAlevy, Nicholas Graffius; 1790, George Wilson, Richard Miller; 1791, George Wilson, James Haney; 1792, Nicholas Graffius, James Glen; 1793, John Cree, David Ralston; 1794, James Anderson, William McAlevy; 1795, John Beatty, John McGill; 1796, Michael Murray, Samuel Anderson; 1797, Joseph Potter, Thomas Warren; 1798, David Gilliland, Samuel Mitchell; 1799, Robert Stuart, Robert Leonard; 1800–1, Morris Ferris, James McIlroy; 1802, Thomas Warren, Benjamin McMahan; 1803–4, Thomas Warren, Robert Moore; 1805, William Wallace, Samuel Kenney; 1806, David Riddle, Robert Morrell; 1807, James Watson, Mordecai Massey; 1808, John McGill, Samuel Morrison; 1809, James Watson, George Rudy; 1810, John Campbell, Robert Leonard; 1811–12, John Watt, John McIlroy; 1813, Joseph Runsha, William Ricketts; 1814–15, George McCrum, Christian Oyer; 1816, John Carmon, William Maffitt; 1817, Joseph Clayton, William Maffitt; 1818, John Watt, Thomas Coughenour; 1819, David Gilliland, James Watson; 1820, David Gilliland, James Watson; 1821, Asaph Fagan, Samuel Morrison; 1822, Asaph Fagan, John Forrest; 1823, Andrew Householder, Thomas Mitchell; 1824, John Stryker, George Fox; 1825, John Stryker, Alexander Livingston; 1826, John Oaks, Livingston Carmon; 1827, Alexander Bell, Charles Cummins; 1828, Joshua Green, William Maffitt; 1829, James Stuart, William Maffitt; 1830, Samuel Stewart, William Oaks; 1831, John Duff, James Leonard; 1832, John Evans, James Leonard; 1833, Robert Cummins, John McMahan; 1834, Philip Silknitter, Hugh Smith, George McCrum, John McMahan; 1835, Josiah Cunningham, Alexander Thompson, Philip Silknitter, Robert Massey; 1836, Samuel Mitchell, Thomas Blair; 1837, Robert Barr, Andrew Couch; 1838, John Duff, John Stuart; 1839, John Horning, Daniel Malley, David Porter, John Jackson; 1840, David Massey, William Porter, William Couch, Samuel Hawn; 1841, James Ewing, William Means, Henry Lee, Daniel Covenhover; 1842, James Livingston, Philip Silknitter, William Maines, Thomas Smith; 1843, James Coy, Robert Cummins, William Randolph, Samuel Johnson; 1844, Alexander Bell, A. T. Stryker, James Coy, William Randolph; 1845, John McMahan, Thomas Miller; 1846, Philip Silknitter, David Peightal; 1847, George Hutchinson, John Chaney, Alexander Bell; 1848, Thomas Crownover, Christian Oyer; 1849, John Logan, James Livingston; 1850, John Steel, John Stewart, John Hofford; 1851, John Gilland, William Morrison, William Couch; 1852, John Logan, George McCrum, Joseph Gibbony; 1853, Nicholas Decker, John Logan, John McMahan; 1854, Joseph Smiley, John Love, Alexander M. Oaks; 1855, John Smith, James Ewing; 1856, Isaac Horning, James Ewing; 1857, John Love, William Oaks, Thomas Crownover; 1858, John Love, William Couch, John McMahan; 1859, John Hirst, C. T. Green, John McMahan; 1860, James Stewart, William L. Couch, Thomas Stewart; 1862, David Ramsey, Solomon Trautwein, Gilbert Horning; 1863, Martin Rudy, David Ramsey, Henry Cornpropst; 1865, Thomas Stewart, George Scott, J. C. Miller; 1866, Thomas Stewart, George Hutchinson, Andrew Chaney; 1867, John L. Hofer, George Hutchinson; 1868, Joseph Henderson, John McMahan, Timothy Darley; 1869, William Couch, Joseph Gibbony, John Stewart; 1870–71, George Hutchinson, A. Chaney, John Stewart; 1872, John Bell, L. Morrison; 1873, William Ewing, Patrick Gettis; 1874, Joseph Gibbony, E. Rudy, J. A. Couch; 1875, William Eckley; 1876, John McMahan, William Hallman, F. Corbin; 1877, William Hallman, John Harris, Alexander Myton; 1878, William McAlevy, David Huhn, Samuel Morrison; 1879, Daniel Troutwein, Christian Peightal; 1880, W. W. French, Daniel Troutwein; 1881, H. C. Harshbarger, William P. Walker, Jesse P. Wilson.

AUDITORS.

1835, William Couch, William Maffitt; 1836, David Massey; 1837, James Stewart; 1838, John Crum; 1839, Gilbert Chaney; 1840, John Oaks; 1841, Samuel Miller; 1842, Samuel Stewart; 1843 (no report); 1844, George McCrum; 1845, Andrew Couch; 1846, James Maguire; 1847 Samuel Miller, John Stewart; 1848, John Stewart; 1849, Robert Massey; 1850, John Love; 1851, Isaac Horning; 1852, Reuben Massey; 1853, John Love; 1854, Isaac Horning; 1855, Thomas Bell; 1856 (no report); 1857, C. C. Ash; 1858, George McCrum; 1859, Thomas Covenhover; 1860, C. C. Ash; 1861, —— ——; 1862, Barton Green; 1863, Robert R. Green; 1864, —— ——; 1865, Christian Peightal; 1866, James M. Stewart; 1867, A. M. Oaks; 1868, C. C. Ash; 1869, James M. Johnston; 1870–71, R. R. Ramsey; 1872, Silas Gibbony; 1873, Miles L. Green; 1874, William Ewing; 1875, Solomon Troutwein; 1876, C. C. Ash; 1877, William Ewing; 1878, Solomon Troutwein; 1879, James Blair; 1880, J. T. Livingston, William Couch; 1881, James Houck, Solomon Troutwein, John Rudy.

Since the adoption of the free school system the following have been elected as directors:

1835, Daniel Massey, James Stewart; 1836, James Cummins, Cornelius Crum; 1837, James Ewing, Christian Oyer; 1838, John Campbell, George Jackson, David Massey; 1839, Robert Stewart, Andrew Couch, John Love; 1840, John W. Myton, Gilbert Chaney; 1841, William B. Smith, John Smith, Alexander Bell; 1842, James Gillam, William B. Smith, John Love; 1843, no report; 1844, Samuel Miller, David Ramsey; 1845, Josiah Cunningham, Thomas Stewart, George Bell; 1846, Alexander Oaks, Isaac Anderson; 1847, Gilbert Chaney, Thomas Crownover; 1848, Moses Robinson, James Gillam; 1849, Josiah Gibbony, Job Slack; 1850, John Chaney, George McCrum, Jr.; 1851, John McGregor, Christian Peightal; 1852, William Couch, John Harper; 1853, James Ewing, Thomas Wilson; 1854, William Morrison, John G. Stewart, James Horning; 1855, George Bell, Joseph Forrest, Jacob C. Miller; 1856, Thomas Stewart, William Oaks; 1857, Israel Smiley, George Bell; 1858, Gilbert Horning, Lee T. Wilson; 1859, Thomas Stewart, Joseph Gibbony; 1860, John Smith, Samuel Myton; 1861, H. J. McCarthy, Thomas Morrison, Henry Cramer; 1862, William Miller, T. P. Love, Joseph Gibbony; 1863, John Smith, Elijah Gillam; 1865, Thomas Bell, William Ewing, R. A. Ramsey; 1866, Thomas Bell, John Peightal; 1867, G. Horning, G. M. Johnston; 1868, Joseph Forest, John Smith; 1869, Solomon Troutwein; 1870, James M. Johnston, N. Gregory, Thomas Ganoe; 1871, James M. Johnston, N. Gregory, Thomas Ganoe; 1872, Martin Rudy, S. Troutwein, William Couch; 1873, Christian Peightal, A. M. Cheney; 1874, C. F. Green, J. M. Johnston; 1875, Samuel Myton, Reuben Duff; 1876, Thomas Crownover, Miles L. Green; 1877, H. C. Crownover, Robert Wilson; 1878, Samuel Myton, Reuben Duff; 1879, William Coy, Shadrach Cheney; 1880, Henry McCrum, William Jackson; 1881, Leonard Rudy, John Archey, Reuben Rudy, William Gettis.

In 1880, when Barree yet included the present township of Miller, there were ten school districts, in each of which a five months' school was maintained. The number of males attending was one hundred and sixty-nine, of females one hundred and thirty-three. The cost of tuition for each pupil was eighty-seven cents per month. The total amount levied for school and building purposes was $1751.06. The township contains several fine school buildings, and all the old houses are being gradually displaced by a better class of buildings, which are equal to those in other parts of the county.

General Industries and Hamlets.—In the present township of Barree there is but little water-power, and but few manufacturing interests consequently are carried on, agriculture being the chief occupation of the people. The most important manufacturing interest ever carried on in Barree was Monroe Smelting Furnace, in the northwestern corner of the township. It was built on Shaver's Creek by Gen. James Irwin about 1845, and was successfully operated by him several years. Following him as an operator was George W. Johnston, who did considerable casting in connection, making stoves of the Philadelphia pattern. The metal produced by the furnace was grayish, and was esteemed superior for casting purposes. The furnace was of the quarter pattern, and had a good capacity, but was unfavorably located for an extensive business. It has not been in blast for the last twelve years, and the property connected therewith is somewhat dilapidated. It belongs to the Logan Iron and Steel Company. Not far from this locality John Rudy began distilling whiskey in May, 1878, the distillery being of small capacity and operated only about five months in a year. The Rudy family also carries on a small saw-mill, and Reuben and Martin have manufactured brick the past four years. In the same section a small saw-mill, operated by John McMahan and others, has long since passed away, and small mills on Herrad's Run have outlived their usefulness.

MASSEYSBURG is a small hamlet in the northwestern part of the township, and owes its name to Dr. Mordecai Massey, who resided at this place nearly all his lifetime. It was formerly more of a business point than at present, there being but half a dozen houses and a store carried on by Samuel Troutwein. The first store in the place was kept by Asbury R. Stewart, in a building which has now fallen into disuse, and was opened nearly forty years ago. Intermediate tradesmen have been John C. Walker, Henry Kocher, Silas Hutchinson, John Rudy, Jacob S. Reed, and probably a few others. Prior to this John McCartney opened a public-house, which was discontinued before 1840. Among the mechanics who carried on their trades a number of years were John Phramptom, William Maffitt, and George Everts, blacksmiths.

MANOR HILL, in the southeastern part of the township, is a hamlet of several dozen buildings, arranged without any attempt to form a village, the place never having been regularly platted. Its name was derived from being located on a hill on Shaver's Creek Manor, which was surveyed for the proprietaries in 1762. Among those who lived here soon after the hamlet had its beginning were the Gettis, Jackson, Stewart, Wilson, and other families. In 1824 there was a tavern kept by William Couch, a blacksmith-shop by John Garver, and a hat-shop by Robert McFadden. Garver was a mechanic here a number of years, and Cyrus Gerhart was a later smith.

The first regular store at this place was kept by Joseph Adams, near the present Methodist meeting-house. At his tavern stand William Couch had a small store, and Robert Moore engaged in the same business, putting up an addition to that building, in which he sold goods. Another addition made a shoe-shop for John Hagan, where he carried on his trade many years. In the same building merchandised William Moore, James Lyons, John Love, Smith & Hartman, J. C. Walker, and, at present, Robert Crownover. At the time the Moores were in trade John Cresswell and John Walker each had stores at other stands, and near the Cresswell stand Alexander B. Gillam is at present in trade. Among other merchants have been Silas Cresswell, Henry Kocher, Wm. Harper, and Andrew Wilson.

The first postmaster of the Manor Hill office was John Love, who was succeeded by Benjamin Hartman, and he by John Davidson, the cabinet-maker. Then came J. C. Walker, Andrew Wilson, and the present Robert Crownover. A daily mail is supplied by the stage line from Petersburg. One of the early mail-carriers on this line was Hiram Price, a son of Wm. Price, who lived near Masseysburg. The family was very poor, and Hiram's outfit consisted of an old horse, so poor that it was an object of general ridicule. This he rode, and with a small fish-horn announced his coming to the several post-offices on the route. The family removed to Iowa, where Hiram became a representative in Congress, and later was an Indian commissioner.

Among the keepers of public-houses besides Wm. Couch were Josiah Cunningham, Alexander McMurtrie, Samuel Hays, L. W. Port, Alexander Wingate, James Carmon, James and Samuel Fleming, and Wm. Morrison, there being no inn in 1881.

SAULSBURG is a hamlet several miles northeast from Manor Hill, and containing about the same number of houses as that place. The hamlet took its name from Henry Widersall, who set aside some lots for village purposes about 1836. The proprietor was often called simply "Sall," and the change from this to Saul with the word burg added was very easy. At the sale of lots, George McCrum bought the Spring lot and erected thereon a distillery, which was carried on by his son James. John Harper also built one of the first houses, which became a tavern, and, with additions and changes, has been the public-house ever since. Among the principal keepers have been Peter and James Livingston, James Coen, James Fleming, John G. Stewart, George Randolph, Robert Ramsey, and Jacob Hallman. The house by the distillery was also a place of entertainment. No regular public-house has been maintained for some years. Andrew H. Hirst sold the first goods in the place, and among others who subsequently merchandised there were Love & Oyer, James Maguire, Samuel W. Myton, James Gillam, John Couch, and, since 1859, Andrew Crownover, occupying since 1871 a fine business house. He is also the postmaster of the Saulsburg office, which was formerly in charge of Job Slack and John Couch. Slack was for many years a wagon-maker in the hamlet, and the ordinary mechanic shops are all at present maintained. In the upper part of the hamlet John Houck established a tannery many years ago, which is yet carried on by his family near Saulsburg. John Scott projected a village which bore the name of Belle Isle. A few lots were sold and a house built, which was afterwards removed, the site being deemed unfavorable. It is now a part of the Joseph Forrest farm.

In the southern and eastern part of Barree, Dr. William R. Finley was one of the first physicians. He removed to Frankstown, and later to Altoona. Dr. John Rankin followed next as a practitioner. He came from Centre County and established himself at Saulsburg, where he lived until his death. In 1845 Dr. Miller Stewart began a practice at Manor Hill, which was continued five or six years, when he removed to West Virginia. He was a graduate of Jefferson Medical College. Dr. Joseph F. Wilson graduated the same year, 1845, and after being at Manor Hill for a period located at Saulsburg, where he has lived more than a quarter of a century. Since 1878 Dr. Richard M. Johnson, who graduated from the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery in 1877, has been established in the practice of medicine at Manor Hill, coming from Mooresville, where he had been the preceding year. In years gone by, among other physicians in the township, were Dr. James Hirst and Dr. Hyskill, the latter being a contemporary for a short time of the present Dr. Wilson.

Religious and Educational.—In the history of Porter township in this book may be read an account of the old Hart's Log Presbyterian Church, with which the Presbyterians of Shaver's Creek Valley were connected many years. These members had the same ministry and shared the burdens of a church organization with the Hart's Log members. For the accommodation of

The Shaver's Creek Congregation, a meeting-house was built on the Manor about 1790, on a tract of ground set aside for church and burial purposes, which has been in longer consecutive use than any other ground in the county devoted to the same purpose. There were originally four acres, but owing to an error in locating the new building additional land had to be purchased in 1835 from William Hennon and James Ewing, making the entire lot more than five acres in extent. On the 23d day of February, 1805, the congregation became an incorporated body as "The Presbyterian Church of Shaver's Creek Manor," with a board of trustees as follows: Matthew Stevens, David Riddle, James Watson, Samuel Henry, Alexander McCormick, Jr., William McAlevy, Jr., and William Stewart. At this time Matthew Stevens was the pastor, and among the members of the church were Alexander Drummond, Robert McCormick, Alexander McCormick, Sr. and Jr., Samuel Johnston, George McCartney, James Bradley, Hugh Morrison, William Maffitt, Charles Cunningham, Hugh Tolland, Matthew Gilliland, George Riddle, John Little, Joseph Jackson, John Wilson, Alexander Work, John Stewart, Robert Nelson, John Brown, William McAlevy, Sr. and Jr., James McIlroy, Patrick McDonald, John Magill, James Thompson, Robert McKee, Thomas McKee, John Cree, James Logan, John Christy, Thomas Warren, Samuel Cowen, John Christy, John Hennon, Hugh Watt, Charles Rainey, John Fitzgerald, James Hennon, Matthew Miller, John Rennison, James Belford, Gilbert Chaney, John Forrest, Andrew Dunn, John Cunningham, Thomas Forrest, James Wilson, Moses Forney, Joseph Osburn, Matthew Gilliland, Hugh Tolland, John Stewart, David Gilliland, Sr. and Jr., John Eustice, William Hennon, John Murray, Matthew Cresswell, William Myton, Samuel Myton, Thomas Ralston, John McClure, James Shannon, David Riddle, and Robert Wilson.

The same year Michael Murray willed a sum of money to the trustees of the congregation, the interest of which was to be devoted for the use of the congregation "in maintaining the gospel, and the other half to school poor children in the parish."

The congregation of Shaver's Creek Manor has contributed of its membership to form other congregations, and since 1844 has maintained a meeting-house in Jackson township, where the larger number of its members at present reside. At Manor Hill a stone church was built in 1823, which in a repaired condition is yet the place of worship of the members residing in Barree, although meetings have not been regularly held there the past few years. The trustees of the church property, including the meeting-house at McAlevy's Fort, in Jackson, in 1881 were James Stewart, James M. Stewart, John B. Smith, Samuel Smith, William Davis, and Thomas Mitchell. The elders at the same time were Hugh A. Jackson, James Smith, and David McAlevy. This office has also been filled in later years by Alexander Thompson, Samuel Mitchell, William D. Black, Robert Huey, George McAlevy, and Robert Fleming.

The congregation has had the ministerial services of the following reverend gentlemen, and probably a few others for short periods: the Revs. John Johnston, of Huntingdon, James Johnston, of Mifflin County, Matthew Stevens (the first regular pastor), James Thompson, until his death, in 1851, when the congregation was no longer served with Hart's Log; Samuel Wilson, David Sterritt, for about fourteen years; Richard Curran, for about eight years; Samuel Hill, for half a dozen years; Moses Floyd, about eight years; John C. Wilhelm, W. W. Campbell, and since October, 1878, the Rev. William Prideaux, of Huntingdon.

The cemetery by the old Manor Church contains a large number of graves, many being those of the earliest settlers of the valley. It has lately been inclosed by a neat fence, and made more attractive in other respects.

Manor Hill Methodist Episcopal Church.—In the southeastern part of Barree and northwestern part of Miller among the early Methodists were John Crum, Sr., Cornelius Crum, Christian Oyer, John Chaney, Shadrach Chaney, John Miller, William Couch, Andrew Wilson, Thomas Wilson, Samuel Myton, William Myton, John Myton, Samuel Myton, Jr., Wesley Gregory, Dennis Coder, George Wilson, George McCrum, Robert Logan, Joseph Gibbony, Philip Silknitter, John Wakefield, Solomon Stevens, Mark McDonald, Joshua Green, Elisha Green, and John Green. For the accommodation of these worshipers a small brick meeting-house was built at Manor Hill, but as the membership increased so rapidly a larger church edifice was required, and the brick church yet in use was built about 1837. Recent repairs have made it comfortable and sufficiently attractive. It is a two-story building, and the lower part has been fitted up for class-rooms and other purposes of the church. On the same lot is a neat cemetery, the whole property being controlled by a board of trustees, which in 1881 was composed of Wesley Gregory, Andrew Myton, J. B. Myton, James Stewart, Carmon Green, Samuel Myton, Samuel Gregory, Robert Green, and H. C. Crownover.

The church at Manor Hill was served by the ministers of Huntingdon and other circuits until a new circuit was formed in 1853, which embraced at that time and for many years all the Methodist appointments in Shaver's Creek and Standing Stone Valleys. By the formation of Petersburg and Ennisville Circuits the limits of Manor Hill Circuit have been very much reduced, there being in 1881 but four appointments, namely, Manor Hill, Mooresville, Fairfield, and Donation. The circuit owns a parsonage at Manor Hill, which was controlled by Trustees Joseph Gibbony, Robert Johnston, Thomas Bell, James Stewart, George Myton, Joseph Oburn, and James F. Thompson. The entire circuit had nearly 200 members, divided as follows: Manor Hill, 61; Mooresville, 75; Fairfield, 23; and Donation (in Oneida township), 39. The Sunday-school at Manor Hill had 80 members, and was superintended by Carmon Green.

The following have been the ministers of Manor Hill Circuit since 1853:

1853, Revs. A. Brittain, T. W. Gottwalt; 1854, Revs. Elisha Butler, Samuel Creighton; 1855–56, Revs. J. W. Haughawant, Wilber F. Watkins; 1857–58, Revs. J. A. Melick, James T. Wilson; 1859–60, Revs. A. A. Eskridge, G. F. Gray; 1861, Revs. A. M. Barnitz, J. C. Clarke; 1862, Revs. W. A. Houck, John Moorhead; 1863–64, Revs. John Moorhead, Luther Smith; 1865, Revs. John Anderson, James H. McGarrah; 1866, Revs. John Anderson, O. M. Stewart; 1867, Revs. John A. De Moyer, O. M. Stewart; 1868, Revs. John A. De Moyer, William J. Owens; 1869, Revs. John A. De Moyer, J. A. Woodcock; 1870–71, Revs. William Gwynn, Wesley Ely, William Schriber; 1872–74, Rev. W. A. Clippinger; 1875, Rev. D. Castleman; 1876–77, Rev. W. R. Whitney; 1878–79, Rev. W. M. Meminger; 1880, Rev. H. M. Ash; 1881, Rev. J. W. Olewine, Richard Hinkle (presiding elder).

CHAPTER XXXIV.

BRADY TOWNSHIP.

BRADY is one of the border townships of the county, situated north of the Juniata River. On the northeast, east, and southeast it is bounded by Mifflin County, being separated from it in the latter course by Jack's Mountain. West and northwest is the township of Henderson, and on the north is Miller township. The Juniata separates Brady from Shirley and Union townships on the south and southwest. The township is mainly mountainous, the foot-hills of Jack's Mountain extending far into the interior. Beyond these is Standihg Stone Mountain and its attendant ridges, trending in a general northeast to southwest direction. The intermediate areas form small valleys, and embrace also a portion of the noted Kishacoquillas Valley, which may be said to begin about three miles from the Juniata, widening from that point in its extent to the lower part, twenty miles distant in Mifflin County. That part of the valley in Brady drains to the southwest, but the principal drainage is to the northeast, and in local terms the former configuration of the land is disregarded and entirely subordinated to the latter, the course of the valley being regarded as down from its head, despite the direction of the water-courses. The part in Brady is drained by Saddler's Creek and its affluent runs, which form a junction with Mill Creek, the other stream of the township, about two miles from its mouth. The latter rises in the ridges of Henderson, and having a very rapid descent affords several small but good water-powers. Many years ago it was called Pridmore's Mill Run. There are numerous springs in the township, several of them being strongly impregnated with mineral properties, among the most noted being a sulphur spring in the northeastern part of the township. The soil of the Kishacoquillas Valley is fertile, resting upon a limestone base, and in this part are some finely improved farms. In other localities the soil is a slaty loam and but moderately productive. Sandstone of superior quality for the manufacture of glass is obtained from Rocky Ridge, and iron ore and fire-clay abound in almost inexhaustible quantities. The development of these minerals and the ordinary agricultural pursuits constitute the chief employment of the people.

Pioneer Settlers.—The accounts of the early settlements of Brady are obscure and conflicting. A number of pioneers lived within its borders prior to the Revolution, of whom little can be said. The Pridmore, Vandevender, Eaton, Loudenslager, and several other families were among the inhabitants of that period. The former removed before 1800. The memory of the Eaton family and young Loudenslager is perpetuated in connection with the Indian troubles in 1778. It is stated by the historian of the Juniata Valley that these parties lived near the head of the Kishacoquillas Valley, and that in the year mentioned they became the victims of savage atrocity. It seems that young Loudenslager had determined to go to Standing Stone, to join the men then being enlisted by Capt. Clugage for the protection of the lead-mines. With this purpose he mounted his horse and rode unsuspectingly through the gap towards the river, when he was fired upon by a small party of Indians and a white man and very severely wounded. Yet he managed to cling to his seat in the saddle, and reached Huntingdon in a fainting condition. After receiving such treatment as the place afforded it was determined to send him to Middletown, where proper attention might be given him. He was accordingly placed in a canoe to be conveyed down the river, but did not proceed far before life became extinct. The same day that Loudenslager was assassinated the Indians visited the cabin of the Eaton family, and finding the husband away, took captive his wife and two children, plundered the house, and set it on fire. Before it was entirely destroyed Mr. Eaton reached his home, and saw enough to lead him to believe that it was the work of the savages. Quickly mounting his horse he sped to Standing Stone to alarm the garrison, and there learned from the lips of the wounded man that his suspicions were only too true. A scouting party set in pursuit of the savages, but failed to find their trail, and although the search was continued for several days no trace of the Indians could be found. Mr. Eaton became a heart-broken man, and persisted in the search of his loved ones, being satisfied that they had been murdered only when their blanched bones were found years afterwards by some hunters in the mountains of Warrior's Mark township. The Eaton house was on the hillside by the spring below the present Eagle Mills. Whether rightfully or not, Jacob Hare, of Hare's Valley, was accused of being the white man who was with the Indians when they fired upon Loudenslager, and the feelings the people entertained towards Hare for his affiliations with the enemies of the patriot cause came near costing him his life. At this time Peter Vandevender was living on the Juniata, on a fine tract of meadow lands, in the locality which became known later as Vandevender's Bridge. He was of Holland descent, moving from New Jersey to Montgomery County, Pa., from there to Virginia, and thence to the above place some time before the Revolution, being attracted thither by the beauty and fertility of the lands along the Juniata. He brought with him a negro slave, and had an Irish servant working for his passage-money. He carried on a distillery, and, owing to the prominent location of his place, his house was somewhat of the nature of an inn, where every one enjoyed the old gentleman's freely-dispensed hospitality. Although not a soldier in the cause for independence, he was an ardent patriot, and thoroughly detested the Toryism of his neighbors, and especially the pronounced sentiments of Jacob Hare. On the day following the events above related Vandevender was attracted to the door of his house by the rattle of a drum in the possession of some of Capt. Blair's Rangers, who were coming up the road on their march in pursuit of the Tory John Weston. Upon their approach Vandevender demanded the cause of the noise, and being told that they were hunting John Weston and his Tory adherents, exclaimed, "Hunting Dories, eh? Well, Capt. Blair, you chust go and hunt Jake Hare. He is the vilest Dory in all Bennsylvania. He told Weston he would fight mit him when he came down here with his Inchians." This little speech and the whiskey Vandevender was dealing out freely induced the Rangers to hunt up Jacob Hare at once for the purpose of castigating him. When they reached his little valley they found him at work in his barn. A rope was fastened around his neck and the other end thrown across a beam in the building, but before he was seriously injured the soldiers listened to the entreaty of Capt. Blair and spared the life of Hare, under promise that he would leave the country.

Peter Vandevender was a great hunter, and many stories of his skill and narrow escapes used to be related. He died in Brady. Of his family he had sons named Isaac, Abraham, Jacob, and John. His daughters married,—Sarah, George Armitage; Catharine, Samuel Shaver, of Hill Valley; Rebecca, Samuel Hampson, of Brady; Elizabeth, a man named Echelberger, who moved to Alabama, he and his wife going thither on horseback; Dorcas, Alexander Jacobs, of Hollidaysburg; Martha, Peter Swoope, of Huntingdon, a hatter by trade, and for many years a justice of the peace. Dorcas received for her patrimony the negro slave, but not liking his disposition, traded him off for a horse and saddle. The sons Abraham and John Vandevender lived and died in Brady, Jacob migrated to Indiana, and Isaac married Mary Enyeart, and lived in McConnellstown until his death, in 1844, at the age of sixty-four years. He served as captain in the war of 1812, and held the office of justice many years. He was the father of John Vandevender, of Walker; Peter, who was assassinated near Barree Forge in 1763; and of a third son named William. His daughters married Thomas Lucas, James Patton, Charles Geissinger, John Householder, Thomas G. Strickler, John Dean, and Henry Barrick.

Caleb Armitage, a German, after his emigration to America lived at Germantown, but before the close of the Revolution the family settled near the mouth of Mill Creek, and he became owner of the Pridmore Mills. For a time he was an officer in the struggle for independence, but left the service at the time indicated. He had sons named John, who was born in 1767 at Philadelphia, and lived at Petersburg, but was drowned in the Juniata near Huntingdon. He was the father of sons named Benjamin and Valerias, who removed to the West. Benjamin, the second son, after living many years in Henderson, died at Huntingdon. Caleb, the third son, married Jane Simpson, of Brady, and settled in that township. His daughters married Joseph Galbraith, Robert Wallace, Samuel Hemphill, William Rung, John Houck, and Sarah remained single. His sons were Caleb and Alexander, the latter yet living in Huntingdon. George Armitage, the fourth son, was in the war of 1812, where he contracted a disease which caused him to be lame for life. He was married to Sarah Vandevender, and lived in Henderson. Of his family, John, elected sheriff in 1844, died at Huntingdon; Margaret married John Cresswell, Jr., an attorney at Hollidaysburg. Another son of Caleb Armitage died while a youth. His daughters were Nancy, who married a Mr. Alexander and moved to Western Pennsylvania; Sally, who became the wife of Alexander Powers, and lived in the Kishacoquillas Valley; Jane became the wife of John McConnell, proprietor of the Black Bear Hotel at Huntingdon. He was the father of Dr. James McConnell, of Sandusky, Ohio, and of daughters, who became the wives of David McMurtrie, Augustus Banks, William Williams, and Seth T. Hurd. Margaret became the second wife of John Miller, Esq., of Huntingdon, the father of Dr. George A. Miller, who lost his life in the Mexican war. His daughters by this marriage became the wives of Albert J. Gower, of Staunton, Va.; George Welch, of Bellefonte; William Welch, of the same place; and Judge George Taylor, of Huntingdon. The descendants of the Armitage family became very numerous, and live in all parts of the country.

Alexander Simpson, an Irishman, came to Brady some time after the Revolution, living many years near the mouth of Mill Creek, but later made his home on the ridge in the western part of Brady, where he died about sixty years ago. His son Robert married Katie Houck, and moved to McKeesport, Pa.; James married Anna Goodman, and lived on the homestead until his death in 1862, aged seventy-eight years. He was the father of Samuel G. Simpson, living in Brady; Capt. William H., of Illinois; David P., of Mill Creek; John, of Henderson; James, of Illinois; Dr. George W., of Mill Creek; Alfred, deceased; and Andrew P., of Brady. His daughters married A. V. Westbrook, of Philadelphia, and E. A. Shaver, of Illinois.

Foster, another son of Alexander Simpson, lived in Henderson until his death about forty years ago. His daughters married John Westbrook (of Huntingdon), Caleb Armitage (of Henderson), and William Copeland (of Wisconsin).

The Rev. Samuel Lane was one of the pioneers of Brady, settling on Mill Creek some time about 1790; but his residence at Three Springs was many years earlier. The Lane family came from England, and from the parental home in Virginia some of the members found their way to Maryland and later to Pennsylvania. The life of Samuel Lane was mainly given to the ministry of the Baptist Church, and, as its missionary, he rode through many parts of Huntingdon County when it was almost an unbroken forest and he had to blaze his own paths to the homes of the poor settlers, who heard him gladly as he preached in their cabins or in the open air. He attained the advanced age of ninety-five years, dying about 1812 on his farm on Mill Creek, which is now owned by Amos Smucker. He was thrice married, and reared twenty-one children, all of whom became heads of families and had numerous children of their own. Of his sons, Joshua moved to Ohio, Jacob lived in Springfield township, Caleb in Maryland; George lived in Brady, and had sons named Michael, Washington, and John, the latter living in Mifflin; Abner was an early teacher, and later a merchant at Williamsburg and at Freeport, Pa.; John moved to Ohio. Of the daughters, Delia married Matthew Hall (of Henderson); Sarah, Capt. Levi (of Lewistown), yet living at Milesburg, Pa., at the age of eighty-six years; Ellen,

Paul Orlady, of Brady, who was for many years a blacksmith at Roxbury, where the widow now resides at the age of eighty-four years. James Lane was the oldest of the second family of children. He purchased the old homestead, to which he moved in 1827. He was by trade a miller, and engaged in that business in Brady, erecting several mills. He was twice married, his first wife being Martha Steel, his second Eleanor Postlethwaite, of Henderson, and thirteen of his children attained mature years. He had sons,—Samuel M., who was a merchant in Butler County and in Allegheny City, but is now a citizen of Philadelphia; William S., an attorney at Philadelphia; James R., a minister of the Dunkard Church, living in Hill Valley; Frank H., a merchant at Huntingdon, and candidate for Governor on the Prohibition ticket in 1876; Abner P., George W., and John (who removed to the West). The daughters married,—Mary, the Rev. G. W. Hamilton, of Mifflin County, and for her second husband Robert Brown, who moved to Illinois; Eliza became the wife of Isaac Woolverton, of Juniata County; Eleanor, of John McCarthy, of Brady, who moved to Mifflin County; Martha Jane, of John Allison, of Henderson, who moved to Illinois; Hannah Isabella, of William Porter, of Henderson, who moved to the same State; and Sarah, who married John E. Smucker, of Brady, and lives in Huntingdon.

On Mill Creek, above the Lanes, lived the Hall family, of which Adam was a son, dying some time about 1809. His daughters married Samuel M. Lane and William Buchanan. The farm was afterwards occupied by John Hampson, who died on the place, and his wife at Huntingdon at the age of ninety years. They had a large family, among the sons being Evans and John, the latter living in Union township opposite Mill Creek. He was the father of James K. Hampson, for many years the keeper of the public-house at the village of Mill Creek. In the same neighborhood lived John and Israel Smiley, the latter afterwards settling on Murray's Run. George Snack lived near the Lane school-house many years, but becoming reduced in circumstances, was taken to the almshouse, from which he wandered a few years ago and perished, being more than ninety years of age.

James Miller, a tailor by trade, and a man of more than ordinary intelligence, lived in the western part of Brady. His sons, Thomas and Joseph, yet reside in the county, and James became a government official, losing his life while on service among the Indians. In the same neighborhood lived Matthew Glasgow, on the farm which was afterwards occupied by Jesse Yocum, the father of Marshall and Lewis Yocum, of Mapleton. Several of the Glasgow daughters married,—Mary Jane, Matthew Postlethwaite, of Henderson, who removed to Illinois; and Eleanor, John McDonald, of Mill Creek.

On a place which had been improved by Adam Hall, on Saddler's Creek, lived William Woolverton, and after his death there his wife removed to Missouri. He was a miller by trade, yet carried on a large farm. Nearly all his sons became millers. John H. removed to Indiana. He was the father of William Woolverton, of Philadelphia, noted in railway circles. Charles removed to the West; Isaac resides in Juniata County; Washington, Franklin, and William removed to the West.

Lewis Metz, a native of Lancaster County, settled first in Huntingdon and afterwards in Logan township, in the early history of the county, from which place he moved to Ohio. He had two sons, John and Lewis. The latter was a tailor, and died while working at his trade at Johnstown. John was a physician, and settled in Brady on the farm now occupied by Samuel K. Metz, in the upper part of the township, but died on the old Jackson farm, in Logan, in 1874, aged eighty-nine years. He was the father of John K. Metz, the proprietor of the "Eagle Mills," of Brady; of Henry K. Metz, living on the old Jackson farm in Logan; of Samuel K. Metz, living on the homestead in Brady; of Jonathan K. Metz, living in the same neighborhood; of Jacob K. Metz, who became a physician, and after practicing in Standing Stone Valley and Brady, moved to Allenville, Mifflin Co., where he yet resides. He is a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College. His father, Dr. John Metz, was a physician in the county more than sixty years, having a ride which not only embraced all the township of Brady, but extended across the mountains on either side of the valley. He was a highly-esteemed and successful practitioner. His daughters married,—Maria, Jacob Shaffner, of Brady; Elizabeth, John Baum, of Dauphin; Frances, George P. Wakefield, of Brady, but at present living in Logan township. The latter is a son of Eli Wakefield, who occupied a place in the valley which had been improved by Christian Detwiler. Other sons were Caleb, Robert, and Bennett, yet living in Brady.

In this part of the valley Christian Yoder, a Mennonite, was a pioneer settler. He was a corpulent man, weighing more than two hundred and eighty pounds, and from this circumstance was commonly called "Big Christian." He had a son named Christian, who lived in Mifflin County, near the Brady line, moving from there to Ohio. Jacob, another son, lived many years on the Eli Wakefield place, also removing to Ohio, where he was killed by a horse running away. Daniel lived above Roxbury, and was the only son that died in the township. He was the father of John, Christian, Daniel, and Benjamin Yoder. Of the daughters, several married David Hostetter and Jacob Zook, of Mifflin County.

The settlement of Christian Detweiler, of Quaker parentage, was much earlier. He located near the Sulphur Springs, on the present J. Bennet Wakefield farm, where he died more than sixty years ago. His son Jacob settled on the Joel Kaufman farm, where he reared sons named David, Jonathan, Jacob, and Benjamin, the former yet living in the township. Christian, the second son, lived near the Mifflin County line, where some of his family yet reside.

John Brown, of Scotch-Irish descent, came from Berks County, Pa., after the Revolution, and settled near the head of the valley. His family at that time consisted of his wife and one child, and the journey was made on horseback, over very rough roads, causing the mother at one time to drop her child, fortunately without injuring the boy. This son was named William, who lived on the homestead until his death in 1850, aged sixty-four years. He was the father of sons named John, died in Brady in 1862; James and Samuel, also deceased; Cyrus, living on a farm adjoining the homestead; and William, living near Hollidaysburg. The daughters of John Brown, Sr., were never married, and the last of his children died in January, 1880, aged eighty-nine years. The Livingston family came about the same time as John Brown, and although it owned lands in Brady, the settlement was made in other parts of the county. The Browns were related with them, the Hustons, Robbs, and other pioneer families of Huntingdon.

Jesse Yocum came from Chester County and settled in Henderson about 1812, keeping a public-house at the old Fee stand below Ardenheim Station. This house was destroyed by fire in 1814. In 1813, Yocum became a citizen of Brady, settling in the valley, where he also kept a public-house. He died in that locality a few years ago, more than ninety years of age. Several of his sons yet reside in that neighborhood, where the Oatenkirk, Shoup, and Ross families were also among the early settlers. John Ross, a son of Joseph Ross, is now a citizen of that part of the township.

Some time about 1800, Michael Speck settled on Jack's Mountain, several miles from Mill Creek. Here he planted a peach orchard, containing a large number of trees, some of which are yet in bearing condition. He had a son named Martin, who moved to Juniata township, where he reared a large family, among them being a son Abraham, now a well-known citizen of Brady. The daughters of Michael Speck married,—Margaret, Joseph Robinson; Mary, George Lane; and Eve, Michael Hawn. The latter was a son of John Hawn, who settled near Mill Creek village in 1793, occupying a farm on which was a small barn and a log cabin, erected by an earlier settler. He died Sept. 9, 1805, and most of the family removed to Walker township in 1814, and later to Juniata. Michael Hawn lived in Brady. He was the father of George Hawn, and has brothers living in the township at present. A pioneer neighbor of theirs was Abraham Kurtz, who lived where is now the village of Mill Creek. Christian Stover lived farther up Mill Creek, at one time owning the Pridmore Mills, and after him came Matthew Wilson, who carried on the mills a number of years, and reared sons named John, Benjamin, Matthew, and William Wilson. A daughter became the wife of Leonard G. Kessler, who now lives at Philipsburg, Centre Co. Above Jack's Narrows lived Peter Igo, one of the earliest of Brady's citizens, dying in that locality, as did also his son Daniel.

Among the citizens of a later period may be classed William Lightner, who was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was born in Berks County in 1796, and was but sixteen years of age when he enlisted. He came to Brady in 1820, and has since resided there, both he and his wife being among the oldest inhabitants. The Goodman family came from the same county about the same period, and some of its members became actively identified with the milling interests of the township. Jacob Goodman died in the Kishacoquillas Valley. He was the father of John Goodman, of Roxbury, and of Dr. Edward Goodman, of Altoona.

As early as 1780, James Kelley settled on the Stackhouse farm in Brady, coming from Maryland. He died on that farm, but his sons and their families removed to the West. Stephen Kelley, a half-brother of James, settled on Pike Run, in Henderson township. The names of other pioneers appear in the assessment of Huntingdon township in 1788 and 1802, and of Henderson in 1820.

Mordecai Gosnell commenced an improvement on the tract of land that included the mouth of Mill Creek in the spring of 1766, and was residing there when the official survey was made on the 20th of June of that year. This family name is often incorrectly pronounced Goslin. The stream now known as Mill Creek was designated by the early residents as Goslin Run. The branch that issues from Kishacoquillas Valley was often called Beaver Creek. It was so known as early as 1774. After Joseph Pridmore had built his grist-mill, which stood near the site of the furnace, the main stream was known as Pridmore's Mill Creek, and when Caleb Armitage became proprietor the name was changed to Armitage's Mill Creek.

John Haun, of Juniata township, mentioned above, in a conversation with the writer Aug. 7, 1871, detailed his early experiences in Brady. From his statement the following facts are noted: The Haun[1] family, consisting of the father John, Juliana, his wife, Jacob, a son born Oct. 22, 1789, and John (the narrator), second son, born Aug. 3, 1791, moved in a wagon from Codorus township, York Co., in 1793, and settled on the Mill Creek farm owned by John Wartz. The dwelling-house was within Pridmore's fort; the stumps of the stockades were yet visible, and some of the block-houses remained; one of them was used to shelter the "shaving-horse." This fort included the ground on which Norris' hotel now stands.

Wartz lived in the house that stood below the lower end of the village. He knew Joseph Eaton, the surveyor, who was a tall man; his wife's name was Bathsheba, and his step-mother (wife of David Eaton) was called "Betty," whence the name of "Betty Eaton's Spring," applied to the stream that issues from Rocky Ridge near where the family lived. He was under the impression her maiden name was Razor. David Eaton was the first man buried at Mill Creek.

[1] The Juniata family spell the name Haun, while those in Brady write it Hawn.

John Cadwallader, of Huntingdon, who then owned "Sugar Grove," had a saw-mill erected on Mill Creek between the turnpike and the river. A man named Smith was the millwright, and was assisted by Benjamin Armitage. The mill was leased and run by Andrew Chambers.

The cotemporaneous settlers of the township were Caleb Armitage, James Kelley, who lived on Flush Run, Peter Vandevander, Jacob Hare, on the Plowman farm, who afterwards moved to Ohio, James Hampson, and Charles Kelley and Samuel Lane, up the creek; John and James Williamson, John Dorland, Stephen Kelley, Capt. John Fee, at the "Burnt House;" Jesse Adams and William Grady lived in Henderson.

In 1847 the property-owners and citizens of the newly-formed township of Brady were as follows, the figures opposite their names indicating the number of acres of land each one owned:

	Acres.
Allison, Robert K. (tan-yard)	37
Allison, John (tenant)	.....
Allen, Robert (tenant)	.....
Brown, William	75
Buchanan, William (tavern)	67
Boggs, James (tenant)	.....
Bard, James (tenant)	.....
Burns, James (tenant)	.....
Bailey, Israel (tenant)	.....
Barton, John (tenant)	.....
Byler, Joseph	60
Buchanan, Washington	.....
Coblantz, Henry	22
Carroll, John (tenant)	.....
Calombine, Anthony	.....
Cramer, John	.....
Calombine, Abraham	.....
Cornelius, Samuel D	.....
Cottrell, J. F.	8
Campbell, John A.	233
Campbell, William	.....
Daniels, William (tenant)	.....
Detweiler, David (tenant)	.....
Dillet, Adam	.....
Detweiler, Jacob	130
Drake, James, Estate	10
Dachenbach, Wm. (tenant)	.....
Ely, Bartlett (smith-shop)	11
Eshelman, David	68
Entriken, James, Jr.	25
Ely, John	67
Ely, Michael	.....
Fleming, James (saw-mill)	110
Fleming, Martin	113
Foster, David (tenant)	.....
Fife, Samuel	8
Fife, James	14
Garrett, Samuel (shop)	2
Gilliland, James (tenant)	.....
Gill, Matthew (tenant)	.....
Goodfellow, William	.....
Giles, John	.....
Hooley, Peter	215
Huey, William	30
Haller, Frederick	.....
Hampson, Samuel	.....
Hall, William	.....
Harris, James	.....
Hawn, Michael, Sr.	40
Hartzler, Benjamin (tenant)	.....
Hampson, James (saw-mill)	300
Harris, Elias	18
Haller, Philip, Sr. (tenant)	.....
Hare, William	184
Irwin, James (on Igo place)	133
Irwin, James & Co., lessees of lands belonging to Wilson, Milliken, Duncan, Lightner, and Warfel (furnace, grist-mill, and saw-mill)	.....
Johnston, Henry	.....
King, Jacob	317
King, Samuel	86
King, Solomon	67
King, John W. (tenant)	.....
Kelley, James	50
Lane, James, Sr. (grist-, saw-, plaster-, and fulling-mills)	134
Lane, James R. (tenant)	.....
Lautz, Henry (tenant)	.....
Lowry, Patrick	140
Laird, George W.	.....
Laudenslager, Daniel, Estate	.....
Metz, John K., Esq.	100
McCarthy, John, Sr.	80
McCarthy, Charles	56
Metz, Samuel K.	135
Miller, Christian (saw-mill)	367
Milliken, David (grist-, saw-, and fulling-mill)	300
Matson, Robert A	.....
McCoy, Francis A	.....
Musser, Jacob	280
Metz, Jonathan K.	61
McCarthy, John P. (teacher)	.....
McCracken, James (tenant)	.....
McDonald, James (chopping-mill, distillery, saw-mill)	107
Mateer, Henry (at Roxbury)	1¼
Milliken & Kessler	314
Morgan, Thomas (tenant)	.....
Moore, Alex. D. (tenant)	.....
Miller, Jacob	34
Metz, John, Dr. (physician)	.....
Myers, Henry M. (tenant)	.....
Newman, John	2½
Orlady, Paul	88
Platt, Benjamin	2½
Plowman, Absalom	200
Palmer, George A. (tenant)	.....
Parshall, Caleb	100
Piper, John	.....
Ross, Richard	2½
Ross, John, Jr.	.....
Robinson, Joseph (tenant)	.....
Ross, John, Sr. (tenant)	.....
Ross, Joseph (tenant)	.....
Ross, Christian (tenant)	.....
Ross, James	90
Ritter, David	.....
Ritter, John	.....
Ross, Thomas	.....
Reed, Thomas	100
Rickert, Nathaniel R.	.....
Rung, William	.....
Shadle, Hiram (tenant)	.....
Shadle, Abraham	108
Stevens, George W.	.....
Snack, William	.....
Simpson, James	415
Snyder, Frederick	.....
Shingler, Joseph	.....
Sharp, Henry	.....
Sanders, Jacob	6
Steffey, Jonathan	3
Smiley, John	426
Sharp, Solomon	109
Taylor, James E.	.....
Tate, John S.	.....
Tell, Thomas (tenant)	.....
Vandevender, Abraham	212
Waddle, John (tenant)	.....
Warfel, George (tenant)	.....
Woolverton, Isaac (tenant)	.....
Whitman, Isaac	10
Watson, John (clerk)	.....
Wolfkill, Peter	.....
Walters, Anthony	.....
Wise, Andrew (tavern)	200
Weston, John S. (tenant)	.....
Weaver, William (shop)	14
Wolfkill, John	195
Wakefield, Eli	120
Wiley, John F.	160
Warfel, Henry	.....
Yocum, Jesse, Sr.	55
Yocum, Jesse, Jr.	.....
Yoder, Benjamin	147
Yoder, Simeon	61
Yoder, Daniel, Estate	170
Yoder, Christian	80
Yoder, Levi (tenant)	.....
Zook, David	108

Single Freemen.

Boggs, Alexander (clerk).	McDonald, John.
Cupples, William.	Metz, Henry K.
Cramer, Cyrus.	Metz, Jacob K.
Fife, John.	Mealy, Michael (clerk).
Getz, Martin.	Miller, William V.
Hawn, Michael, Jr.	Miller, Thomas B.
Hawn, Daniel.	Miller, Joseph.
Hedding, James.	Miller, Joseph H.
Haller, Francis.	McCahan, Thomas.
Haller, Philip.	Newman, William.
Haller, John.	Naylor, John.
Humphrey, William H.	Naylor, Mercer.
Huey, John.	Parshal, Glasgow.
Huey, James.	Shudle, Samuel.
Kessler, Peter F. (clerk).	Snively, George W.
King, Joseph.	Sharp, Jacob.
Loudenslager, Peter.	Warfel, James.
McCarthy, William.	Wherry, John L.
McCarthy, Charles.	Yocum, John A.
Metz, Jacob.	Zook, John.

In 1880 the population of Brady, including Mill Creek village, was nine hundred and nine.

Civil Organization.—Brady became a separate civil body in compliance with the following report:

"To the Honorable A. S. Wilson, Esq., president, and his associates, judges of the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace at August Term, 1844:

"We, the undersigned, commissioners appointed by the order of the court to inquire into the propriety of granting the prayer of the petitioners therein set forth, having met and after being duly sworn or affirmed faithfully and impartially to perform the duties of our several appointments, do report that in pursuance of said order we went upon the ground in said township of Henderson, and having a county map before us, taking into consideration the great extent of the said township, and how inconvenient it is for citizens of said township to meet at any one place to hold their annual election, and to do other business of the township, and likewise the arduous task it must be for an assessor to travel all over the present township of Henderson to assess it as should be done, or for the collector of the county, State, and other taxes necessary to be collected, it would seem to us a hard task for any one man to perform. These, together with the inconveniences attending upon such a large township, induces us to be of the opinion that the prayer of the petitioners should be granted, and that the said township should be divided, and so far as our power extends we have carried it into effect; that is, we have made a division of said township, and for said division we began on the bank of the Juniata, at a beech-tree a short distance southwest of James Stevens' tavern; thence along the hill north fifteen degrees east, in all seventeen hundred and fifty perches to a post on the line of West township, a short distance south of John Postlethwaite's house, the division line as actually run being marked on the draft, a copy of which is hereunto annexed.

"Witness our hands 13th May, 1844.

"William Reed,
"James Murphy,
"Commissioners."

"And now, to wit, 25th April, 1846, the Court confirm the report of the commissioners, and order that the new township be called Brady, in honor of Gen. Hugh Brady, of the United States Army."

The following have held civil offices in the township:

ROAD SUPERVISORS.

1847, Abraham Shadle, John Weston; 1848, James Lane, James McCracken; 1849, John Wolfkill, Jacob Musser; 1850, Francis McCoy, James Gilbert; 1851, Dixon Hall, Solomon Sharp; 1852, George Hawn, Paul Orlady; 1853, George Hawn, Christian Yoder; 1854, Christian Miller, Jacob Shaffner; 1855, J. B. Bradley, T. A. McCoy; 1856, George Hawn, John Newman; 1857, Daniel Gray, Aaron Smucker; 1858, Philip Haller, John Newman; 1859, David Detweiler, Philip Haller; 1860, Elijah Wakefield, Jacob Hight; 1861, John S. Weston, Jacob Hight; 1862, George Hawn, Isaac Oatenkirk; 1863, Jonathan K. Metz, John McDonald; 1864, John Newman, John McDonald; 1865, Christian Detweiler, Francis Haller; 1866, Jacob Shaffner, William M. Thompson; 1867, M. Daughenbach, Dixon Hall; 1868, James G. Carothers, H. K. Metz; 1869, James G. Carothers, Joel Kaufman; 1870–71, William Creigh, S. B. Grove; 1872, L. Decker, J. Oatenkirk; 1873, John Talis, J. K. Metz; 1874, John McDonald, W. A. Miller; 1875–76, Jacob Hight, Joseph Rupert; 1877, George Hawn, S. K. Metz; 1878–79, John Ross, James G. Carothers; 1880, Abram Speck, Joel Kaufman; 1881, George Hawn, John C. Himes.

AUDITORS.

1847, William Brown, William Buchanan, J. R. McCartney; 1848, John Watson; 1849, James McDonald; 1850, Henry L. McCarthy; 1851, Leonard G. Kessler; 1852, James Templeton; 1853, John P. McCarthy; 1854, Peter Kessler; 1855, W. C. McCauley; 1856, James K. Hampson; 1857, Jacob Musser; 1858, John C. Watson; 1859, Joseph McCracken; 1860, John A. Campbell, J. K. Metz, George Eby, Jacob Shaffner; 1861, George Eby; 1862, Joseph D. Stackhouse; 1863, John A. Campbell; 1864, George Eby; 1865, Edward A Green, Jonathan K. Metz; 1866, Jonathan K. Metz; 1867, M. L. Shaffner; 1868, B. R. Foust; 1869, Isaac Oatenkirk; 1870–71, Benjamin R. Foust; 1872, J. D. Goodman; 1873, C. D. Brown; 1874, B. R. Foust; 1875, Jacob Goodman; 1876, John Huey; 1877, J. B. Wakefield; 1878, B. R. Foust, H. Z. Metcalf; 1879, James Huey; 1880, Thomas Gettis; 1881, J. G. Allison.

General Industries.—The water-power of Mill Creek was utilized before the war of the Revolution to operate a small grist-mill for Joseph Pridmore. It stood near where is now Mill Creek Furnace, and was probably not kept up more than a few years. Christian Stover next made some improvements, whereby the water-power on the same stream below was made to operate grist- and saw-mills, which were listed as his property as early as the organization of the county. The house he occupied stood near what is yet called Stover's Spring, above Mill Creek school-house. Matthew Wilson was a later owner of the property, and from him it passed into the hands of the furnace company about 1838. The present mill has been repaired several times, but remains in essentials as built by Wilson eighty years ago. It is now owned and operated by the Green family.

A mile above, Adam Hall had grist- and saw-mills about 1804, and about eight years later began to build a stone grist-mill, but before it was completed died, and the mill was finished by William Woolverton. After being operated by him and others for several score years it was allowed to go to decay, and nothing now remains there but the ruins of the stone walls. For a number of years other small interests were there carried on.

Less than a mile from this point, up Saddler's Creek, were a carding-machine and fulling-mill, owned by John Piper and operated by James Porter when James Lane purchased the property in 1843. The latter put in machinery for grinding corn, built a plaster-mill, and several years later a very good grist-mill, the millwright work on the latter being done by Samuel Goodman and his sons. When it first was set in operation it had no superior in the county and enjoyed a large patronage. In 1865 the property passed into the hands of George Eby, who repaired the mill and added another run of stones, making four in all, capacitating it to grind two hundred bushels per day. Since 1869 the mills have been owned and operated by John K. Metz, and are designated as the "Eagle Mills." The building is a frame, three stories high, and located so as to afford easy access to its patrons.

On the same stream James and John McDonald had a saw-mill and distillery, which later became the property of Jacob Goodman. The latter has long since been discontinued, but the former is yet operated to a limited extent. Above that point, on the same stream of water, small lumber-mills were formerly carried on. McDonald subsequently distilled liquor in the southern part of the township below Jackstown for G. W. Thompson and others. In other localities a number of small distilleries were carried on sixty years ago.

On Mill Creek the Lane family had a pioneer saw-mill, and there Amos Smucker has at present mills for the manufacture of lumber, which are operated by water- and steam-power. Above that point the Hampson family had a saw-mill, and yet farther above is a mill owned by Levi Decker, while in Henderson, on the same stream, John G. Miles had a small water-power saw-mill, whose usefulness has passed away.

Above the furnace mill, Kessler & Brother put up a mill in 1850 for the purpose of grinding the leaves of the sumach-bush and triturating it to a fine powder. It was successfully operated until 1868, since which time the mill has been idle, although the machinery remains in the building. The leaves crushed were gathered in the surrounding country in the months of June, July, and August, and after being shade-cured were purchased at the rate of one dollar per hundredweight. The ground material was sold chiefly in Philadelphia, and used for the purpose of coloring morocco leather.

Mill Creek Furnace was built in 1838, above the old Wilson Mills, by Dr. Jonathan H. Dorsey and Gen. S. Miles Green, proprietors of the Barree Forge. It contained one stack with a thirty-two-foot base, had two tuyeres, and was supplied with steam and water blast, the former being seldom used. The site was selected on account of the water privileges, on the line of the canal, and the abundance of wood, which could be used for charcoaling. The ore was chiefly brought from Franklin township by canal and later by railroad, although a quantity of the fossil ores found in Brady were combined with them, producing a metal which had a most excellent reputation among manufacturers, and which was used to a large extent to produce imitation Russia sheet iron. John Patton was the first manager, and was succeeded by James Wilson. After the failure of the firm in 1842 the furnace became the property of Gen. James Irwin and Joseph Green, of Centre County, and John McCahan, of Huntingdon, who had Alexander Campbell as manager. In the course of a year McCahan retired, and his place in the firm was taken for two years by Kessler & Co., Leonard G. Kessler being the manager at Mill Creek and Peter F. Kessler at the ore mines near Spruce Creek; John C. Watson serving as clerk, but afterwards becoming the manager. This firm carried on operations until 1857, when the remaining stock was placed in the hands of trustees and the business closed up in March, 1858. E. A. Green & Co. again put the furnace in blast in 1863, but after six years' operation blew out, and the furnace has since been idle. When fully operated about one hundred and twenty men were employed, and the location of the furnace in Brady caused more than forty houses to be built to accommodate the employés, and made the site of the furnaces the scene of great activity. The metal was nearly all taken to Barree Forge, where it was wrought into blooms, which were shipped to all parts of the country, adding greatly to the excellent reputation of Juniata iron. The furnace property in Brady embraces about three thousand acres of land (on which are found two veins of fossil ore, having an average thickness of eighteen inches, and of a quality yielding thirty-three per cent. of metal), a number of houses, and several mills.

Since the furnace has ceased to operate the principal industry of the township has been the quarrying and crushing of sandstone for the manufacture of glass. The enterprise was begun in 1854 by Ulrey, King & Co., who shipped the crude stone to Pittsburgh, where, after being reduced, the sand was found to be of a superior quality. Experiments were then made by Mr. King, of Pittsburgh, and Elliott Robley and D. H. Foster, of Brady, with a view to crush the stone at the quarry. A machine was finally devised to be operated by steam-power, which was successfully set in operation in 1857. Since that time other improvements have been made which enable the production of large quantities of sand annually, the principal processes being stamping and grinding. By the former method the stone is reduced to a sandy condition, screened, and shipped in a dry state. When the chaser-mill is used the sand is shipped wet, the process requiring the use of water in grinding. The mill in use by A. P. Burnham at his quarry since 1879 consisted of a large pan of iron, in which revolve two rollers, weighing more than a ton each, thoroughly crushing the rock, which is shoveled into the pan of the size of nuggets. Water is constantly added, and the crushed matter is run upon a revolving sieve, which throws off the coarser particles, while the clean sand is taken up by the water on the inside, thoroughly washed, and thence passed into a receptacle ready for shipment. Mr. Burnham employs from fifteen to twenty men. Two other quarries in Brady were successfully worked in 1881, that of the "Juniata Sand Company," half a mile below Mill Creek, which employs fifteen men under the management of Thomas Logan; and B. R. Foust's, at the old Elliott Robley quarry, which has been under the present management since 1875, and which employs twenty men. A fourth quarry was opened by John McCombe a few years ago, which employed eight men, but which has not been in operation for some time past. The aggregate shipments amount to about two hundred car-loads of sand per month. Near Standing Stone Mountain, where the above quarries are, is a large deposit of fire-clay, which is controlled by A. P. Burnham, on a lease from the owners of the land. Practical tests have demonstrated it to be absolutely fire-proof, its equal not being found in this country. It has not been successfully used for pottery purposes. A limited quantity of clay is being shipped each week.

Hamlets and Villages.—The hamlet of Roxbury is in the upper part of the Kishacoquillas Valley, about five miles from Mill Creek. It consists simply of a few houses along the public highway, and was never regularly laid out, having its beginning from the sale of a few lots to mechanics from the lands of Paul Orlady and others. The post-office here maintained bears the name of Airy Dale, and was established with Robert K. Allison as postmaster. Subsequently the duties of the office were discharged by George D. Metz, John Goodman, and William J. Wagner, the latter being the present postmaster. The mail service is from Mill Creek several times per week.

About 1850, Samuel Secrist opened a store at Roxbury, and was a merchant there about ten years, when he removed to Allenville. The next in trade in that neighborhood was George D. Metz, who has merchandised a number of years, and is yet in trade. More recently Jonathan K. Metz opened a store which he is yet carrying on. Bartlett Ely has for many years had a blacksmith-shop, and William and Robert Gregory are the carpenters. Robert K. Allison began a tannery at Roxbury about forty years ago, which after his death was continued some time by his son, J. G. Allison, but for the past few years has been idle. It had but a small capacity, but produced good work.

MILL CREEK is a village of two hundred and eighty-eight inhabitants, situated at the mouth of Mill Creek and on both sides of that stream. The original plot of the village embraced ten lots, sixty-six by one hundred and fifty-four feet, on the north side of the turnpike leading from Huntingdon to Lewistown. It was laid out Oct. 12, 1848, by James

B. R. Foust

Hon. Benjamin R. Foust, second son of Anthony Foust, was born in Shirley township, Huntingdon Co., Pa., Dec. 20, 1830. His father was a farmer. Benjamin lived with his parents until he was twenty years of age, when he began an apprenticeship with George Foust, a relative, who was a cabinet-maker at Pleasant Hall, Franklin Co., Pa. After finishing his trade he went to Fredericksburg, Va., where he spent a year in making patent grain fans.

He came to Shirleysburg and spent the three following summers at the Juniata Academy, teaching school during the winters intervening. In the spring of 1856 he associated himself with James G. and Col. John A. Doyle in the mercantile business at Mount Union, Huntingdon Co., and continued with them for ten years; then went to Mill Creek and engaged in the same business. In May, 1856, he was united in marriage with Miss Julia, the youngest daughter of Peter Etnier. Their only child is a son, I. Newton, born August, 1857.

During the year 1864 Mr. Foust was financial agent of Shirley township while recruiting to fill the quota for volunteers for the Union army. While thus engaged he disbursed eleven thousand five hundred dollars in bounties. The incidental expenses attending the securing of thirty-six substitutes were only one hundred and seventy dollars, while many other townships spent thousands of dollars in the performance of the same or less work.

Mr. Foust's son, I. Newton, attended the academy of Bell Fount and Port Royal. He married Miss Charlotte, daughter of James Willson, Esq. They have two children, I. Newton and Harry, aged three and one year. I. Newton, Sr., is now his father's partner. The firm is B. R. Foust & Son. They are proprietors of the Mill Creek Glass Sand Works, Juniata Steam Flouring-Mills, and dealers in general merchandise, grain, coal, and lumber.

In 1878 Mr. Foust was elected as a Greenback-Democrat to serve his county in the Legislature. Has served as school director almost continuously for twenty-five years. He has been active in local politics. Is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Simpson, for David Zook & Co., on part of a larger tract of land surveyed June 14, 1786, in pursuance of a warrant granted to Joseph Pridmore March 11, 1786. Additional lots were sold adjoining these and on the other side of the turnpike, but no other plan appears to have been recorded. The location of the village on the canal and the Pennsylvania Railroad made it favorable for a business point, and the place has an active trade from the townships of Henderson, Union, and the Kishacoquillas Valley. Mill Creek Station is about five miles below Huntingdon, and the depot building is spacious and well arranged, while all the surroundings are neatly kept since the spring of 1880. A. M. Menold has been the agent, and this position had been filled for more than ten years previously by A. P. Burnham. Telegraphic and telephonic privileges are supplied.

The village of Mill Creek at present has a large school building, Methodist and Baptist Churches, three stores, a hotel, and a number of mechanic shops.

One of the first stores in this locality was kept at Wilson's Mills, by David Snively, as early as 1828; and soon after Milliken & Thompson sold goods in part of the "Old Red House," moving from there to the centre of the present village of Mill Creek, occupying a building which they had erected for business purposes on the lot where now is the store of Foust & Son. They occupied the room before the canal was finished, and had at once a good trade. Subsequently the McGees sold goods, and in 1840, J. & J. Milliken. In 1845 the merchants were Millikens & Kessler, and later Leonard G. Kessler alone. Subsequently the firm became Kessler & Brother. In 1856, George Eby was Kessler & Brother's successor, and nine years later was succeeded by Adam Hershberger. In 1866 the merchants were Etnier & Foust, who were followed in 1874 by B. R. Foust, the senior member of B. R. Foust & Son, who have been extensively engaged in trade at that stand since July, 1877. In the upper part of the village small stores were kept as early as 1865 by John Thomas and others, and the building is now occupied by a co-operative store opened in January, 1881, of which J. G. Allison is the manager, the store being in charge of D. Etnier. Near by is a store which has been carried on the past four years by A. P. Burnham, in which is kept Mill Creek post-office, of which Mr. Burnham has been postmaster since May, 1880. His predecessors in the order named have been Jane E. Mehaffy, S. A. Hughes, Perry O. Etchinson, Isaac Woolverton, John G. Stewart, George Eby, Lloyd Meredith, Leonard G. Kessler, and William G. Wagoner. The office has daily mails from points east and west, in addition to an extra daily mail from Huntingdon, and is the distributing office for the Cassville region and the Kishacoquillas Valley.

Stores have been kept at West Mill Creek, in addition to the one named as having been in the "Red House," by Washington Buchanan and Jesse Diffenbach. At the furnace small stores have usually been kept by the proprietors of the works, and at Jack's Narrows, near the old tavern stand. Washington Buchanan was in trade a short time. The tavern was long kept by Andrew Wise, and enjoyed the distinction of being a local stopping-point in canal and turnpike times, where packet and stage-horses were changed. The predecessors of Wise were John Houck and Thomas Wallace. The house was of stone, and nothing but its walls remain to indicate the site.

Near Mill Creek public-houses have been kept by Samuel Hampson, Edward and Richard Plowman, James Stevens, William Buchanan, Samuel G. Simpson, and James Kerr, the house at West Mill Creek being destroyed by fire while owned by the latter. In the village proper, among the keepers of the public-houses have been James McDonald, the Widow Hampson, Adam Hall, James K. Hampson, James Thompson, Valentine Crouse, Robert Kyle, John G. Stewart, Thomas McGarvey, and Harry Z. Metcalf until 1879. The hotel is pleasantly located, and is a spacious brick building.

Among the mechanic shops at Mill Creek were the smithy of Frank Haller, opened in 1851, and continued by him until his death in 1880. After 1865 another smith-shop was opened by Adam Warfel, which has been occupied for a number of years past by Isaac Gorsuch, being the only shop on the east side. On the west side the Simpsons put up a shop, in which Aquilla Long carried on that trade until his death, when Charles Fultz became the blacksmith, and yet continues. Near by Samuel Goodman has a wagon-maker's shop. Others who have been mechanics at Mill Creek have been William Hall, Philip Haller, James Stell, Don Civils, Martin Haller, Robert Fritz, George Berkstresser, Joseph Cornelius, and Peter Smith. The latter was the only gunsmith that ever opened a shop to carry on that trade at Mill Creek.

The first physician at Mill Creek was a Dr. Chestnutwood, who came about 1846 and remained a few years. He was accounted a good physician. His successor was Dr. J. M. Haggerty, whose stay here was also limited to a few years, removing thence to the West.

The third practitioner was Dr. G. W. Thompson, who removed from this place to Mount Union. His successor was a young man named Dr. J. A. Kerr, who died at Mill Creek in 1868. Dr. I. J. Meals located here about 1869, and at the time of his death, in June, 1874, had a good practice, being regarded a successful physician. He was a native of Adams County, Pa., and but thirty-three years of age at the time of his death.

Dr. Samuel L. McCarthy is a native of Brady. He was born in 1844, and is a son of John R. McCarthy, for many years a teacher at Roxbury. He was educated in the common schools, and graduated at the Jefferson Medical College in 1870, beginning the practice of medicine at Mill Creek the same year, and continuing to the present.

Dr. George W. Simpson, a contemporary physician at Mill Creek, is also a native of Brady, and born in 1844. He received his education in the common schools and at Kishacoquillas Seminary, read medicine with Dr. S. L. McCarthy, graduated from Jefferson in 1876, and has since been a practitioner at Mill Creek.

Educational and Religious.—The pioneer schoolhouse at Mill Creek stood near the spot where are now the churches. It was a small log building, if anything, ruder than the cabins of the patrons of the school. It was, nevertheless, kept comfortable from the cold of winter, as there was an unlimited supply of wood close at hand. The school was attended by the Kelley, Wilson, Igo, Woolverton, Robinson, Armitage, and Lambert children, and among the teachers were men named Starr, Enyeart, and McCullough. The school at Roxbury, since the free school system has prevailed, has always ranked as superior to the ordinary country school, and is noted for the number of teachers and professional men it produced. Among the teachers were Jacob Kryder, Henry McCarthy, and John R. McCarthy, the latter two teaching many years. A well-known teacher of a recent period is John Goodman. Among those who were pupils of the Roxbury school who have become teachers were Samuel, Jacob, Rebecca, and Edward Goodman, the latter being at present a physician at Altoona; John, Nancy, Rebecca, Martha Jane, Cyrus S., and William Brown; John McCarthy; James, Scott, William, Samuel, Virgil, Willard, and Miles McCarthy; Henry McCarthy, physician at Petersburg; Samuel McCarthy, physician at Mill Creek; Alvin R. McCarthy, physician at Mount Union; James Hinua, Jennie Weston; E. R. Wagner, minister of Lutheran Church; James H. Wagner, Jennie L. Wagner, Annie C. Wagner, John D. Wagner, M. L. Shaffner, and M. R. Shaffner.

The officers of the school board of Brady in 1846 were Dr. John Metz, president; John A. Campbell, secretary; and L. G. Kessler, treasurer. The directors for subsequent years were as follows:

1847, Solomon Sharp, William Hare, William Brown, Isaac Woolverton, Eli Harris, James Miller; 1848, Jacob Musser, James Miller; 1849, Isaac Woolverton, William Brown; 1850, Daniel Detweiler, John Watson; 1851, Jacob Musser, Christian Miller; 1852, John K. Metz, Samuel Sharer; 1853, John A. Campbell, John Watson, Henry McCarthy; 1854, Jacob Musser, Jesse Yocum, John Montgomery; 1855, J. A. Campbell, John Vandevender; 1856, Adam Warfel, Charles McCarthy; 1857, John Rupert, Christian Ross; 1858, Dutton Madden, F. A. McCoy, Chris. Detweiler, Thomas Morrison; 1859, Adam Warfel, John A. Campbell, Jacob Musser; 1860, James K. Hampson, Chris. Detweiler, Jacob Sharp, Thomas Morrison; 1861, H. J. McCarthy, Thomas Morrison, Henry Cramer; 1862, George Hawn, Jacob Hight, John Weston, Elliot Robley; 1863, Christian Yoder, G. W. Thompson; 1864, Jacob Musser, E. A. Green, Caleb Wakefield; 1865, George Eby, Samuel Grove; 1866, Jacob Goodman, Jacob Sharp; 1867, John W. Miller, Joseph N. Hamilton; 1868, George Eby, D. H. Foster; 1869, Caleb Wakefield, Isaac Gorsuch, J. M. Stonebreaker; 1870-71, George Eby, D. Etnier; 1872, Felix Smucker, James Huey; Amos Smucker, William M. Thompson, F. Gates; 1874, George Eby, Abraham Wagner; 1875, James Huey, Thomas J. Gates; 1876, Amos Smucker, A. P. Burnham; 1877, Isaac Oatenkirk, H. Z. Metcalf; 1878, George Eby, H. H. Mollier, D. Etnier, Frank Wolfkill, George Hawn; 1879, Cyrus S. Brown, David Detweiler; 1880, Henry Withers, Samuel G. Simpson; 1881, George Eby, John K. Metz.

At this period the officers were Henry Withers, president; George Eby, secretary; and S. A. Hughes, treasurer.

In 1846 three months' school per year were maintained, in which were employed three male teachers at twenty dollars per month and two female teachers at ten dollars per month. The number of male pupils was seventy-five; of female, thirty; and thirty pupils were reported as studying German. The total cost for instruction was one hundred and eighty dollars, or thirty-nine cents per pupil for each month of school. No report of the value of school buildings appears. The township has made commendable progress in matters pertaining to its schools, having in 1881 five school buildings, in which six schools were taught. These houses have an average value of one thousand dollars, and were erected as follows: The Concord building, on the Eli Wakefield place, in 1859, of brick, twenty-four by thirty feet; the Roxbury house, of the same material and size, built in 1863; the Mill Creek edifice, of brick, twenty-eight by thirty-six feet, and two stories high, built in 1870, at a cost of two thousand five hundred dollars; the Lane house, a frame, twenty-two by twenty-eight feet, built in 1878; the Centre building, erected of wood in 1880, the size of the house being twenty-four by thirty feet. All the buildings are supplied with seats of the Rankin pattern, and have good wall boards and other requisites.

The schools were maintained five months per year, and were in charge of five male and one female teachers, whose average salary was $24.75 per month. The male pupils numbered one hnndred and thirty; the females, one hundred and twenty-two; and the average attendance was one hundred and thirty-five. The total amount levied for all purposes was $1126.86.

Mill Creek Baptist Church.—As early as 1790 the Rev. Samuel Lane preached in this locality, which was probably regarded as an out-station of the Baptist Church in Trough Creek Valley, of which he was the pastor. At that time the Rev. Lane was living on his farm on Mill Creek, and the services were held at his house and in groves, one of his favorite preaching-places being beneath two fine oak-trees which stood not far from the site of the present meeting-house. When the country had become more settled, about 1800, he urged upon his neighbors, regardless of church distinction, the importance of having a house of worship in their midst, and by united effort a log meeting-house was built on Mill Creek, two miles from its mouth. In this house shortly after was formed the Mill Creek Baptist Church as a separate and distinct body. The constituent members were James Hampson, Nathan Gorsuch, Ann Hall, Mary Hampson, Temperance Brown, Lydia Plowman, Samuel Lane, James Davis, Daniel Brown, Rachel Kelley, and Rachel Davis. In 1806 were added Peter Cornelius, Rachel Morgan, Elizabeth Corbin, Eleanor Dean, and Mary Kelley; in 1807, William Dean, Mary Lane, William Carson, Hannah Carson, Arthur Smith, and Jonathan Dean; and later there were added George Smith, Jane Smith, Thomas Kelley, Mary Kelley, Rebecca Lambert, Margaret Briggs, Tillotson Fuller, Esther Kelley, Elizabeth Cornelius, Sarah Sollers, Ann Sollers, Prudence Sollers, Thomas Thomas, Sarah Cravin, Ann Doyle, Thomas Sollers, Robert Thompson, William Thompson, Amelia Thompson, and Mary Evans, all belonging before 1825. For the next few years the church languished, and was reduced by removals to a small membership. But in 1832 the Rev. George Higgins held a series of revival meetings which resulted in thirty accessions to the church membership, and once more the society became flourishing.

The records of the church indicate that in 1809 Jonathan Dean was chosen treasurer, and in April of that year Samuel Lane and James Hampson, two of the trustees, are instructed "to employ Robert Carter to get the rest of the collar beams and couple the rafters of the meeting-house," which was enlarged or newly built at that time. In September, 1827, Matthew Glasgow and John Shaw were appointed a committee to procure a drum for the stove.

In 1835 a new meeting-house was built by a committee composed of John H. Woolverton, W. M. McGee, and James Lane, treasurer. Thomas McGee did the plastering on this building, which in a repaired condition yet remains, being at present used as a house of worship by the Lutherans. In 1838, E. C. Hampson, Asahel H. Brown, and Matthew Hall were appointed trustees.

In 1850 the brethren Wray and Yoder were appointed to request the Lutheran congregation to repair the house for the use of it, and on the 29th of March, 1853, "it was voted that the Legislature be petitioned to appoint Samuel Grove, Samuel Sloan, and John C. Watson trustees, with power to sell the old meeting-house at a fair price," the demand for a place of worship at Mill Creek village, which now began to assume importance, warranting such action; but it was not until 1857 that the present brick house of worship was erected. The year after the house was occupied the church had a membership of sixty-two, of which number seventeen had but recently been baptized. John C. Watson was the clerk of the church, filling a position which was first occupied by Jonathan Dean, and later by Nathan Gorsuch. James Wilson, Thomas Irwin, and Lloyd Meredith were official members. The Sabbath-school had twelve teachers and forty-six scholars. Ten years later the membership of the church was only thirty-two, while the Sabbath-school had but thirty-eight scholars. James Wilson was the clerk, and had as successors in that office J. K. Hare, J. H. Boring, W. T. Boring, and the present (1881) Charles Fultz. The other official members were Trustees W. D. Calabine and M. T. Boring, and Deacons David Hare and M. T. Boring. In 1880 the total number of baptisms reported was two hundred and thirty-one, and the actual membership at that time as thirty-six. In the summer of that year the meeting-house was thoroughly repaired, and in the fall the Rev. W. P. Hile became the pastor, serving the church one-fourth of his time in connection with other churches.

Mill Creek Church was admitted into the Baltimore Association in 1817, helped from the Juniata Association in 1821, and was admitted into the Centre Association in 1834, which connection has since been maintained.

The pastors of the church from its organization to the present have been as follows:

The Rev. Samuel Lane, for a number of years, probably until his death, about 1812, was the first to supply the church with preaching. He was zealous in well-doing, rarely accepting pay for preaching, and delighted in Christian fireside conversations, which endeared him to many homes where his visits were always made welcome. He performed hundreds of marriage ceremonies in the new country which constituted his parish, and usually bestowed half his fee upon the bride. After his decease there does not appear to have been a regular preacher until some time about 1820, when the Rev. J. Davis, who had served in the Revolution, was reported as the pastor. Then came Rev. Jesse Ash, 1825–32; Rev. Thomas E. Thomas, 1836–37; Rev. W. M. Jones, 1840–42; Rev. W. T. Bunker, 1843–45; Rev. A. A. Anderson, 1849–51; Rev. J. B. Williams, 1854–55; Rev. J. L. Holmes, 1859–61; Rev. A. H. Sembower, 1862; Rev. T. C. Gestford, 1863–64; Rev. J. W. Plannett, 1865–67; Rev. S. K. Boyer, 1869; Rev. J. D. Thomas, 1871–74; Rev. George Chappell, 1875–76; Rev. R. C. Black, 1877–80; Rev. W. P. Hile, since the fall of 1880.

The Methodist Episcopal Church of Mill Creek.—In 1840 the Methodist class at Mill Creek was under the leadership of Jacob Isenberg, and among its members were Leonard G. Kessler and wife, Mrs. Spielman, Mrs. Buchanan, William Pryor and wife, John Ritter, and a few others, numbering about twelve in all. These enjoyed preaching at stated periods, belonging to a widely-extended circuit. The services were usually held in the school-house, but with the increase of membership measures were taken to build an appropriate house of worship. But this purpose could not be accomplished until 1852, when the church edifice which is yet used at Mill Creek was erected. It is a plain brick house, capacitated to seat three hundred persons, and has lately been placed in good repair. The builders of the church were Jesse Meredith and Matthew Gill, the brick being furnished by Leonard G. Kessler.

George Hawn and Philip Haller were among the workmen. The graveyard on the same lot is somewhat neglected. The trustees of the church in 1881 were S. A. Anderson, S. A. Hughes, Anderson Cozzens, Samuel Prough, and B. R. Foust.

Until 1875 Mill Creek was served in connection with Mount Union and Mapleton as a circuit, but at the date given was connected with West Huntingdon in forming a new charge. The ministers since that period have been: 1875, Rev. J. S. McMurray; 1876–77, Rev. J. R. Eckert; 1878–79, Rev. Fred. Rogerson; 1880, Rev. William H. Dill; 1881, Rev. C. V. Hartzell.

The church has about sixty members, forming a class, led by Anderson Cozzens. A Sabbath-school has been maintained the past fifteen years, having at present a membership of one hundred, and S. B. Hughes for superintendent.

The Mill Creek Evangelical Lutheran Church.—Some of the earliest settlers of the township were adherents of the Lutheran Church, having their membership at other points. Later a small congregation was formed in Brady, which had among its members John Piper and wife, John Wolfkill and wife, Michael Hawn and wife, Joseph Camp and wife, and, later, Franklin and Margaret Wolfkill, George Hawn, and Amos Smucker. The ministerial service for many years was in connection with Belleville, and of late with Lick Ridge and McAlevy's Fort, the present minister being the Rev. S. Croft, whose pastorate began July 1, 1881. The congregation in 1881 had some seventy members, and the following church council: Abraham Speck and Amos Smucker, elders; Frank Wolfkill and J. G. Corbin, deacons. The services are held in the old Mill Creek Baptist Church, to which the congregation obtained a right by lease in 1858. It has since been repaired and made more inviting. The cemetery in connection is the oldest in the township, and one of the first persons interred there was Adam Hall. His remains were carried to the yard by an ox-team driven by Jacob Hawn.

The Sunday-school, which was formerly held in this house, has been transferred to the Lane Schoolhouse, and has Isaac Bagshaw for superintendent.

CHAPTER XXXV.

CARBON TOWNSHIP.

CARBON, so named because of its abundant coal deposit, was erected into a township April 23, 1858. The territory which it includes was taken from the township of Tod, which bounds it on the north. Clay township lies east from it. Fulton and Bedford Counties form its southwestern boundary, and Hopewell township bounds it on the northwest.

Topography.—The surface of the township is mountainous. In the eastern part three ranges of heights pursue a nearly parallel course northeasterly and southwesterly. They are known as Sideling Hill, Wray's Hill, and Rocky Ridge. The northern part of the township is occupied by Broad Top Mountain, and is almost a wilderness.

Streams.—Sideling Hill Creek runs southwesterly between Wray's Hill and Sideling Hill. Trough Creek crosses the township in a northeasterly direction, along Wray's Hill and the eastern base of Rocky Ridge. Cook's Run rises on Broad Top Mountain, and runs southwesterly, to unite near Dudley with a small stream from the south and form Shoup's Run, which pursues a tortuous course through the southwestern part of the township, and debouches into Raystown Branch in Hopewell township. Miller's Run, Sugar Camp Run, and another stream in the western part of the township unite with Shoup's Run in its course.

Highways.—The most important highways in the township are one that passes from New Grenada, in Fulton County, to Robertsdale and to Broad Top City, and down the valley of Shoup's Run to Saxton, in Bedford County; another from Wells' tannery, in Fulton County, that passes northeasterly through Broad Top City and into Tod township; and two roads that lead southerly from Dudley and Coalmont respectively.

The Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad enters the township at its southwestern corner, and follows the valley of Shoup's Run to a point two miles above Dudley. The East Broad Top Railroad follows the valley of Trough Creek from the northeastern boundary of the township to Robertsdale. The coal-mines in the township are opened along the valleys of Shoup's Run and Trough Creek, where the railroads afford transportation for their products. The other portions of the township are very sparsely settled. There are two saw-mills remaining in the township, one on Sideling Hill Creek, and the other on Shoup's Run. Both are, like most of the saw-mills in this region, passing to decay.

The township has three boroughs, those of Coalmont, Broad Top City, and Dudley, and several villages, the largest of which are Robertsdale and Barnet. Its four post-offices are Coalmont, Dudley, Broad Top City, and Robertsdale.

Pioneers.—Anthony Cook, the founder of the Cook family in the southern part of Huntingdon County, first settled at what is now Broad Top City. The year of his coming cannot be learned with certainty, but he was one of the earliest settlers. He took up large tracts of land there, which afterwards became the property of his children. His wife was Sarah Elder; his sons were Isaac, Jesse, William, and John; and his daughters were Sarah (Mrs. Hudson) and Nancy (Mrs. J. W. Edwards). Of the sons, Jesse and William went West, Isaac and John lived and died on Broad Top.

Isaac Cook's children were Isaac, who married

W. H. Sweet

Rachel McClain; Margaret (Mrs. Benson), Nancy (Mrs. James McClain), and Sarah (Mrs. John Maston).

The children of Isaac (2) reside in Tod township. They are Samuel Washington, James Allison, William McClain, O. E., and Solomon.

Of the descendants of John, only Mrs. Edward Horton and Mrs. Charles Horton remain in Huntingdon County.

Among the other pioneers of Carbon were Walter Clark, Philip Barnet and his sons Christian and Philip, Henry Miller, James Crawford, Henry Houpt, Henry Horton, Isaac Miles, William Houck, John White, and —— Alloway. Most of these came from Maryland at a very early day, and but few of their descendants remain in the township. They were farmers, and when mining land rose in price they sold their farms and removed elsewhere.

Tradition says that a few came here during the Revolution, and that some of these were Tory refugees, who had been guilty of mixing ground glass with the flour that was purchased for the American army at Valley Forge. This was then supposed by them to be far enough away from the "borders of civilization" to insure them safety from the vengeance of those whom they had sought to destroy.

There were in the township of Carbon about twenty farms, and the owners and occupants of these lived comfortably in the midst of surroundings that would now be considered hardly tolerable. They raised and manufactured nearly all the necessaries of life, and were able to indulge in many of what were then regarded as luxuries. Their superfluous produce was drawn to market on wagons or sleighs, often as far as Chambersburg or Hagerstown, and the articles of merchandise which they required were few. The so-called refinements of modern times had not multiplied their wants beyond their ability to supply them, and what would now be regarded as privations were not then felt as such. They followed the "noiseless tenor of their way," lived on the results of their honest toil, were contented and happy.

Coal-Mines.—The Old Barnet Mine, at the village of Barnet, was opened in 1856 by Orbison, Dorris, Burroughs & Co., and was worked by them and their lessees during about twenty years, when operations ceased. In the spring of 1882 work was recommenced by the present lessees, P. Madigan & Sons. At first the Barnet vein was worked, but afterward a tunnel was driven to the Cook vein, which is the one now operated. This vein has a thickness here of two and one-half feet, and the heading extends three hundred yards. The capacity of the mine is forty tons daily. The lessees are the superintendents.

The Fisher Mine, on the railroad about one mile below Broad Top City, was opened previous to the building of the railroad. It was worked by Fisher & Miller from 1870 till 1880, when work was suspended in it during a year. In January, 1881, the present lessees, Reed Brothers, came in possession. It is a drift, opening a quarter of a mile from the railroad, to which a tramway leads. The heading extends into the Barnet vein, which is here two and one-half to four feet in thickness, four hundred and fifty yards. Thirty hands are employed, and the daily output is sixty tons. W. Scott Reed is the superintendent.

The same firm is opening a mine on the Benedict property, about one-fourth of a mile below the borough of Dudley. The Barnet vein, which here has a thickness of four feet, has been reached through a tunnel of four hundred yards, and preparations for shipping coal are in progress. The daily capacity of this mine will be three hundred tons. This work is under W. Scott Reed's superintendence.

The Clift Mine, about one-half mile above Prospect Mine, was opened in 1858 by the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad Company, and was operated by that company during three years. It was then abandoned, and was not again worked till March, 1882, when it was leased by W. H. Sweet & Co., by whom it is now operated. Like all mines in this part of Carbon it is a drift, and the heading extends about one-fourth of a mile. Eighteen hands are employed at this mine, and the daily output is fifty tons. The drift opens within a few yards of the railroad. What is known as the Barnet vein is worked. Operations are superintended by Mr. Sweet in person.

The following is a brief biography of Mr. Sweet, senior member of the firm of W. H. Sweet & Co.:

William H. Sweet was born in Brownsville, Fayette Co., Pa., Oct. 10, 1847. His father, John Sweet, was an Englishman by birth and a miner by occupation, having worked for several years in the bituminous coal-fields of England previous to his coming to America and engaging in the bituminous coal-fields of Fayette County, where the subject of this sketch was born. Like a large majority of miners, Mr. Sweet's earnings were barely sufficient for the support of his large family, and William, at the tender age of seven years, was compelled to go into the mines to assist in the laborious task better fitted for stronger arms. Here young Sweet learned the first lessons of coal-mining, which in after-years has been of great benefit to him in the prosecution of his business as a miner and coal operator. To add to his already heavy burden, at the age of nine years his father died, leaving him as the main support of his widowed mother and her family.

As his boyhood arms waxed stronger and stronger his mind began to develop, and his young ambition to become a man among men has been freely realized. For the last twenty years he has been a resident of Dudley and vicinity, in Huntingdon County, and in 1878 he commenced mining and operating in coal on his own account.

He is also engaged in the mercantile business in connection with his mines. In the early part of 1880 he associated with himself in the mining and mercantile business Mr. George W. R. Swoope, of Huntingdon, under the firm-name of W. H. Sweet & Co., who are still doing business at Dudley, on the line of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad.

In October, 1881, work was commenced by Mr. Sweet on "Defiance Tunnel," on Six-Mile Run, just over the line in Bradford County, which resulted Jan. 18, 1883, in striking one of the richest veins of coal known in the Broad Top coal-fields.

To Mr. Sweet, more than any other, is due the tribute of success in the vicinity of Dudley. From the wilderness of wood and brush he has caused to be presented cleared fields, dotted here and there with more than twenty homes of happiness and comfort. His progressive spirit extends to all the section of country around his mines, and in the furtherance of education he has given unstinted aid, and that without ostentation or vanity, knowing full well its value. He is truly a self-made man, and all that such an one should reap in the harvest of universal regard will doubtless be his.

July 4, 1870, Mr. Sweet married Miss Sarah A., daughter of Mr. Jonathan Barnet, one of the pioneers of Huntingdon County. Their children are Jesse Alvin, born March 22, 1871; Elsie Jane, Nov. 2, 1872; Mary Ellen, March 30, 1874; James Herbert, Aug. 25, 1876; Cloyd Edgar, March 7, 1879.

The Ocean Mine, about one-half mile east from Dudley, was opened in 1879, by W. H. Sweet & Co., in the Barnet vein. It is a drift, the opening of which is near the railroad, so that cars are loaded as the coal is taken from the mine. The heading extends two thousand feet. The average thickness of the vein here is thirty-two inches. Fifty-eight hands are employed, and the daily capacity is one hundred and twenty-five tons.

Prospect Mine, on the railroad, one mile above Coalmont, was opened in 1857 by the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad Company, and was first operated by R. B. Wigton as lessee. The first superintendent was John Whitney. It was subsequently operated by the railroad company, but in 1863, Robert Hare Powel purchased the mine, and operated it for a short time, then abandoned it. In 1881 he recommenced operations here, and the mine has been steadily worked since that time.

This, like the other mines in Carbon township, is a drift, and is in the lower seam, which has a thickness of from three to four feet. A heading into this seam has been driven nearly half a mile, and the coal is brought out in cars drawn by mules. Twenty-five hands are employed in this mine, and the daily output is forty tons. The superintendent is John Palmer.

Another drift was opened by Mr. Powel near the first, but forty or fifty feet higher, and located in the upper or Barnet vein. This vein has a thickness here of four to six feet, and this is considered the best coal property in the region. This drift extends about half a mile. It is not at present worked, but is intended, in connection with the Prospect drift, to furnish coke for the extensive furnace of Mr. Powel, at Saxton. The coal will be conveyed in cars from the mouth of the drift over a tramway and down an inclined plane to the railroad, where it will be "dumped" in railroad cars or taken over a side track to the coke-ovens.

Coke-Ovens.—Near the mouth of this drift Mr. Powel has erected a set of coke-ovens. This set consists of one hundred and five ovens, each of which is eighteen feet in length by six feet in height and eighteen inches wide. They are of the Belgian pattern, built of fire-brick from Mr. Powel's brick-yard in Clearfield County. The length of the set is three hundred and forty feet. Each oven is charged with coal from above, through two apertures in the arched roof, from cars which pass over a track from the platform a short distance from the mouth of the drift.

On one side of the set of ovens is a platform to receive the coke that is pushed from the ovens, and alongside of this runs a branch railroad track at such a grade below the platform that the coke can be conveniently loaded into cars. On the other side of the set, or rather at the other ends of the ovens, is a track eighteen feet in width on which runs a "pusher," or machine for forcing the coke from the ovens. This pusher is worked by an engine of thirty horse-power, which moves along the track from oven to oven and forces out the contents of each in about one minute. This, if done by a man, would require four hours. The capacity of these ovens is one hundred tons of coke per day. Forty-eight hours are required for converting each charge of coal to coke, and alternate ovens are charged and emptied each day, so that when in full operation the ovens are not allowed to cool, but are at once charged on being emptied.

At these ovens twenty-five men are employed, though many more would be required but for the convenient location and excellent arrangement of the ovens and the improved labor-saving machinery used. Charles Bradley is the superintendent of these ovens.

Cook Vein Colliery.—In 1859, George Mears came to what is now Broad Top City and opened a mine then known as the Broad Top Colliery. This was abandoned six years since. He opened several other mines, one of which, Carbon Colliery, is still worked. He died in 1879, and was succeeded in the business by his sons, J. F., George A., C. A. H., and Harvey J. F. Mears, who operate under the firm-name of Mears Brothers. This firm in 1880 reopened the Cook Vein Colliery within the limits of Broad Top City borough. This colliery was first opened in 1860 by Blair & Port, and was abandoned when the heading reached a roll in the vein. It is a drift, as its name indicates, in the Cook vein, which here has a thickness of five feet of coal, besides the intervening stratum of slate. The heading extends six hundred yards in this vein. Sixty men are employed, and the daily output is one hundred and seventy-five tons. Harvey J. F. Mears is superintendent.

J. F. Mears.

Carbon Colliery, also within the borough of Broad Top City, was opened in 1872, by the elder Mears, and it is still operated by his sons. The mouth of the drift is seven hundred yards from the railroad, which is reached by a tramway and a self-acting plane. This mine is nearly worked out, and will soon be abandoned.

Mears Brothers are opening a new mine one thousand yards west from the opening of the Carbon Colliery. A tunnel has been driven twenty-five yards, and the mine will soon be in operation. The Cook vein will be worked. H. J. F. Mears is the superintendent of this work. The following is a brief sketch of J. F. Mears, of the firm of Mears Brothers, coal operators.

Dr. George Mears, the father of the subject of this sketch, was at one time engaged in the coal business in Luzerne district, and about the year 1857 he went to Broad Top, where he was identified with the coal operations of that region, in connection with the mercantile business, for many years, and up to the time of his death, which occurred in July, 1879. He was a man of great integrity, genial disposition, mild and pleasant address, and was highly respected by all who knew him.

Jacob Fisher Mears, the eldest of six sons, was born April 29, 1844; his educational advantages were limited. At the age of fifteen years he began doing various kinds of work about the coal-mines of Broad Top. When he was eighteen years of age he took charge of the books, and superintended the work about the mines. After his father's death he became sole proprietor of the Carbon and Cook Vein Collieries, also the mercantile business. In 1881 he gave his brothers an interest in the business.

On April 25, 1869, Mr. Mears married Miss Malissa A., daughter of Paul Ammerman, Esq., of Broad Top City. They have four children, daughters,—Maud F., Ada M., Clara D., and Bertha Virginia. Mr. Mears is a gentleman possessed of rare business qualities, strict integrity, and great force of character; is social and generous, and commands the respect of every one.

The firm of Mears Brothers continues to do an extensive business in mining and shipping coal, and in general merchandise.

Mooredale Mine.—This was first opened one mile above Dudley, by Paul Ammerman, and worked by him till 1862, when a dip below the water-level was reached, and the mine was abandoned. In 1876, Reakert, Brother & Co. leased the mine, and drove a tunnel through the strata about one hundred yards, till the vein (the Fulton, here called the Cook) was reached again. In 1877 they commenced the shipment of coal, and the mine has been steadily worked since that time. The heading extends fourteen hundred yards, and the seam has an average thickness of four feet. It is divided by a stratum of rock from ten to eighteen inches in thickness, making the aggregate thickness between five and six feet. The mouth of the drift is fifty yards from the railroad. Twenty hands are employed, and the daily production is sixty tons. David E. Conrad is the superintendent.

Robertsdale Collieries.—These collieries, which are owned and operated by the Rockhill Iron and Coal Company, are at Robertsdale, on Trough Creek, in the eastern part of the township of Carbon. They consist of three drifts and a shaft. The first drift was opened about fifty years since, and was operated only to a limited extent.

In 1873 the Rockhill Iron and Coal Company, which had purchased a large tract of land here, commenced operations in this and two other drifts. The East Broad Top Railroad was at the same time completed to this place, affording an outlet for the coal mined. These mines have been worked since that time without a suspension. Two hundred and fifty hands are employed in these mines, and the average monthly output of coal is twelve thousand tons. The company contemplate sinking another shaft, and otherwise increasing the facilities for mining coal here to the amount of twenty-five thousand tons per month. James Finley is the superintendent, and Henry R. Shearer the company's clerk here.

Villages.—ROBERTSDALE is a village that exists only by reason of the existence of the mines. The houses of which it consists are all owned by the Rockhill Iron and Coal Company, and occupied by their employés. These houses are seventy in number, and are capable of accommodating one hundred and forty families. The population of the village is seven hundred. There is one store here, kept for the accommodation of the miners, and only such shops as their wants necessitate. There are here four church organizations, though there is no church edifice.[1] These churches are of the Roman Catholic, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Church of God denominations. None of these have resident pastors. Of the miners residing here a majority are Welsh, though English, Scotch, Irish, French, and Americans are among them.

MINERSVILLE is located near the Prospect and Clift Mines. It consists of about twenty houses erected by Mr. Powel for the miners and other employés at the mines. Here, also, Mr. Powel has a store, and a shop for the repair of mining-cars and tools.

POWELTON lies farther up the mountain, above the opening of these mines, and at the edge of a plateau, where Mr. Powel has a large farm. The town was built and is owned by Mr. Powel, after whom it is named. It consists wholly of miners' houses, of which there are between thirty and forty. A school-house has been erected there by Mr. Powel for the miners' children. The following brief sketch of Mr. Powel's life is herewith given:

[1] A Presbyterian Church has been since erected and dedicated.

The man to whom Powelton owes its name and development is Robert Hare Powel, son of John Hare and Julia de Veaux Powel, who was born on the 16th of October, 1826, at his father's residence, Powelton, West Philadelphia. During his early life he was often taken to Europe by his parents, and was principally educated in France and England. In 1848 he left his home and drove from Philadelphia to Trough Creek Valley, Huntingdon Co., to examine and direct the estate owned by his father. Upon this property he resided from 1848 to 1855, and in the interim was married to Amy Smedley Bradley, daughter of John Bradley, of Chester County. During his sojourn on the above property, Mr. Powel devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, and especially in rearing improved stock, with which he had great success. He displayed them at various State exhibitions and received many premiums for their superiority, as shown by the records of the State Agricultural Society. The sheep and cattle were sent abroad in various directions, and it is thought much of the improvement now discernible in the breed of animals in Central Pennsylvania has resulted from his exertions. While occupied as a farmer he acted as a farmer, and was willing to assume the hardships of his position; often he, with his assistants, drove his own cattle and sheep to the Philadelphia market, and when he had completed the duties of his errand went to his home, corner of Nineteenth and Walnut Streets, and was always affectionately received by a kind father, who has long since passed away. In 1854 or thereabouts the Broad Top Railroad was projected. He then conceived the idea of entering into coal operations. With a view to this end he exchanged a portion of his land in Trough Creek Valley (which had then been given him by his father) for the coal estate of Henry Miller, on Shoup's Run. The balance of his farm property he disposed of to Messrs. Isaac Cook and John Griffith. With the funds realized from these sales he entered into the coal business.

Much exertion was required in the introduction of this new fuel, none of it having previously reached tide-water. Carrying out his old motto, "that no one should be ashamed of an honorable occupation," he bought a horse and phaeton, and with the aid of two or three peach-baskets, drove from city to city, determined to impress upon the manufacturers the utility of his product. At last he accomplished his end by inducing C. L. Bailey & Brother, of Harrisburg, to buy one car-load, and persuading at the same time C. E. Pennock & Co. and Brooks & Brother to send their cars to his works to obtain samples of this fuel.

For several years he carried on successfully the sale of Broad Top coal. In 1861 the Tyrone and Clearfield Railroad was completed, and Mr. Powel became conscious that it was important for him, occupying as he then did the position of the largest semi-bituminous coal shipper in the State, to secure mineral lands along that road. This he did by the purchase of several hundred acres at a point which was subsequently named "Powelton." About 1870 he secured the control of a large body of land in Clearfield County. This he highly improved, and introduced the first underground engine in that region. This estate is now operated under the firm-name of Robert Hare Powel & Co., which, beside himself, is composed of his brother-in-law, John C. Bradley, and his son, Robert Hare Powel, Jr. Shortly before the purchase in Clearfield County, Mr. Powel bought a property on the Youghiogheny River, the coal from which passes over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and is shipped from Baltimore. It may be stated in this connection that the traffic of Robert Hare Powel & Co. during the past year has reached almost eight hundred thousand tons, and would have exceeded that amount had it not been for the threatened strike during the early portion of the year.

Shortly after the introduction of Clearfield coal, Mr. Powel discovered that the demand for his Broad Top out-put gradually diminished; then he saw the necessity of guarding his interests in that region, and to do so purchased at various times a large extent of ore territory on and adjacent to Tussey's Mountain, Huntingdon and Bedford Counties. Seeing clearly the future value of this estate, in connection with his Broad Top lands, he invested, year after year, much of his earnings in securing the necessary quantity of mineral to justify the erection of a blast furnace.

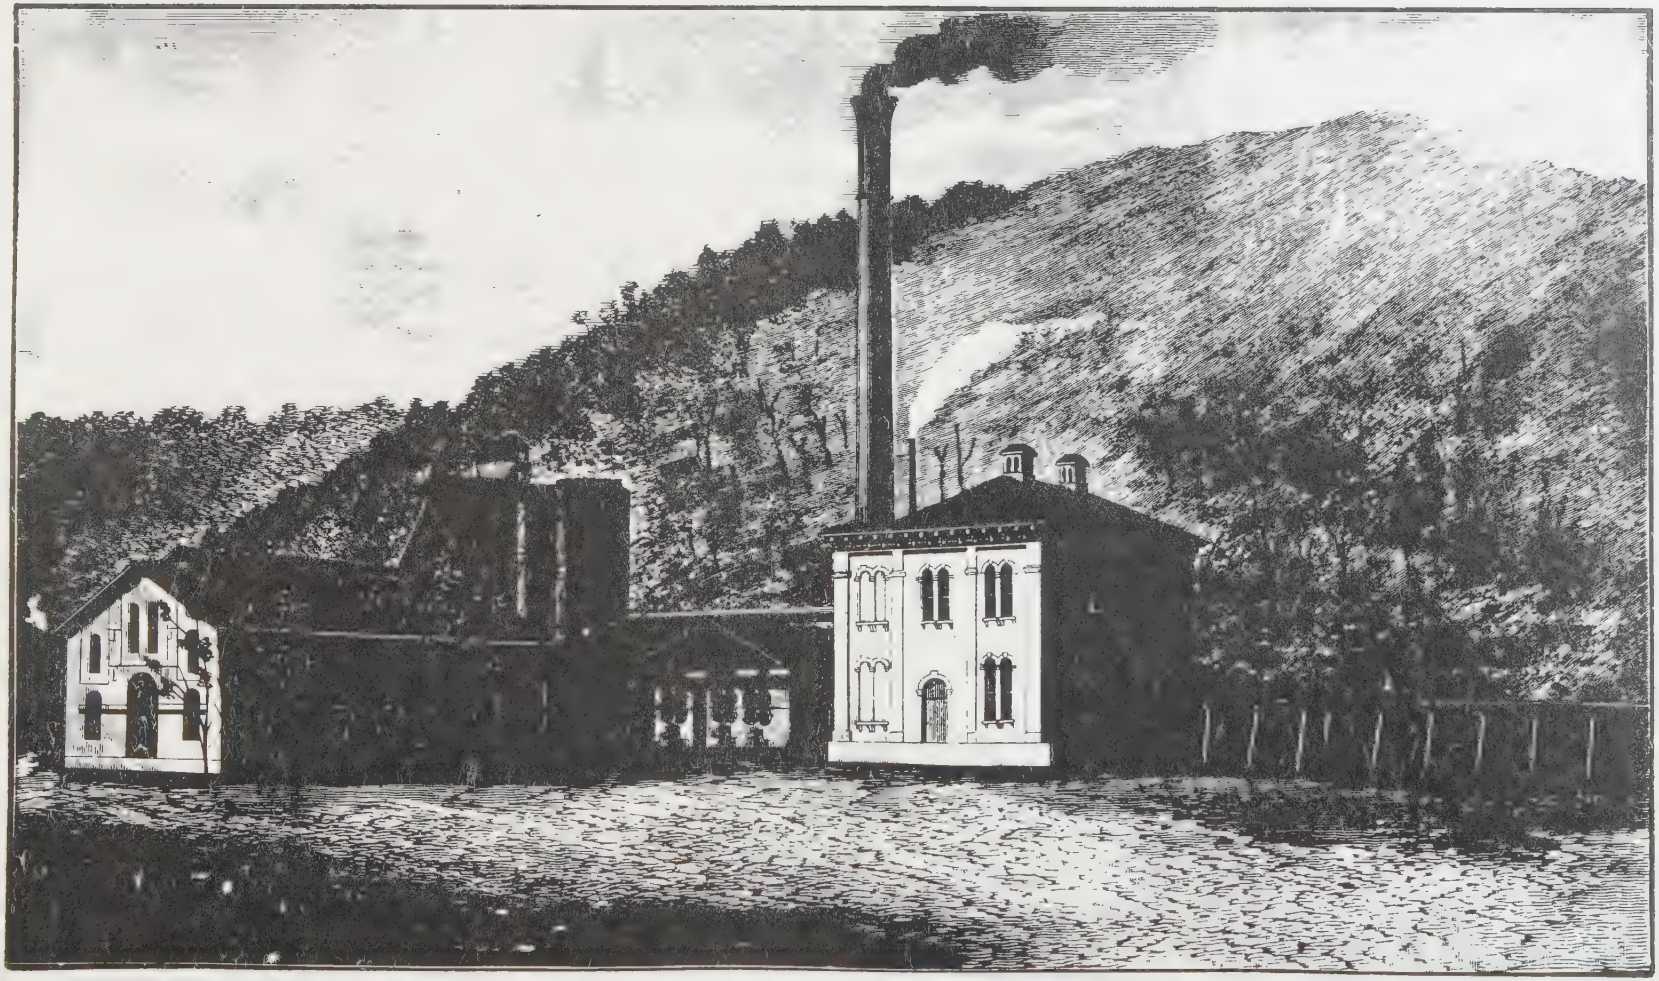
In 1879, entertaining the idea that he had acquired all that was essential for the success of this enterprise, he commenced its construction and the development of the iron ores.

On the fifty-sixth anniversary of his birthday, Powelton Furnace (which was built with the most approved appliances) was put into blast amid the congratulations of several hundred people who had voluntarily assembled to witness the sight. Since that time this furnace has been remarkably successful, and is now producing from sixty-five to seventy tons of coke metal per day, of a quality unsurpassed by any produced in this country. This furnace is now managed by E. J. Bird, an English gentleman of great distinction, who was years ago commissioned by Queen Victoria and the Spanish government to erect furnaces within their respective realms.

De Veaux Powel, the second son of Mr. Powel, controls the executive department of this establishment, and displays an ability which warrants its future success, when his father shall no longer be here to guide his head or hand.

Mr. Powel, since the age of twenty years, has devoted himself to the development of industrial enterprises.

The furnace plant and its connections, it is stated, will give employment to about eight hundred men. When this is taken into consideration, with the hundreds who are engaged in the development of his coal interests, an adequate conception may be formed of his efforts in the development of minerals and in the sustenance of the poorer class. It is asserted by one who has been in the employ of Mr. Powel for many years that he has contributed to the support annually of five thousand people for the past twenty-five years. This assertion was made before the furnace plant was constructed, which must necessarily largely augment the number. Mr. Powel has been admirably successful in the management of his men, who manifest great respect for him. For many years not one strike has originated at his collieries, but the men connected therewith have on almost every occasion, during such difficulty continued to work for him until compelled by outside pressure to abandon their posts.



Mr. Powell has five children. His eldest bears the name of his mother, Julia de Veaux, and is married to S. W. M. Peters, the son of Richard Peters, grandson of Judge Peters, of Philadelphia; his eldest son has his own name; his second daughter is named after his sister and wife, Amy Ida Powell; De Veaux Powel is the next in age, and is the namesake of his great-grandfather, Gen. De Veaux, who came to this country, settled in South Carolina, and ultimately moved to the banks of the Hudson River, where he built for himself an elegant mansion.

Mr. Powel's youngest son is now about eighteen years of age, and is at present studying chemistry and mining engineering, in order to fit himself for his future position in the coal business. This young man has the name of Henry Baring, which was given him to perpetuate the name and memory of his uncle, as well as of the late Lord Ashburton, who married a relative of the family.

Mr. Powel possesses great force of character, and is loved by his friends and respected by his enemies, as well as being a living example of the fact that a perfectly successful business can be conducted on strictly honorable principles.

Robert Lowell

PRODUCT:

Highest Grades of Foundry, Machine,
Stove, Forge, and Chill Iron.

POWELTON FURNACE, SAXTON, BEDFORD CO., PA.

The Property of ROBERT HARE POWEL, of Philadelphia.

E. J. BIRD, Furnace Manager.

GENERAL OFFICES:

424 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

CRAWFORD, which took its name from the old settler who owned the land there, is on the opposite side of Shoup's Run from Minersville, and farther down the stream. It consists of some fifteen houses, a portion of which are the original log buildings, and many of these are passing rapidly to decay.

BARNET, so named after the former owner of the land here, is a mining village, which commenced at the time operations were begun in the old Barnet mine, near Dudley. During the prosperous times between 1860 and 1870 this village grew till it came to contain about forty houses. Of these many were vacant during the financial depression between 1870 and 1880. In addition to the dwelling-houses now here there is one store.

COOKSTON, a hamlet of fifteen miners' houses, is a mile above Dudley. It was named from Jesse Cook, an owner of coal land here.

The population of the township in 1860 was 1511; in 1870 (including Broad Top City), 1883; and in 1880, exclusive of the boroughs, 1393.

Besides the borough schools the township has nine public schools, which were kept during five months in 1881. The number of pupils instructed in these schools during that year was four hundred and sixteen.

Cemeteries.—There are cemeteries in Carbon at Coalmont, Barnet, Dudley, and Broad Top City. None of these are incorporated; they are simply cemeteries by dedication.

Civil List.

CONSTABLES.

1858, William Wimer; 1859, James Dunn; 1860, William E. Heeter; 1861, Alexander Barber; 1862–65, Michael McCabe; 1866–67, James B. Burns; 1868, John Long; 1869, Patrick Dunnigan; 1870–71, Henry Brode; 1872, S. B. Donaldson; 1873–75, Edward Dalton; 1876, J. Cattle; 1877, Thomas Mulvihill; 1878, William Dodson; 1879–80, Thomas Mulvihill; 1881, John Bolinger.

SUPERVISORS.

1858, Samuel Stinson, Jesse Cook; 1859, Samuel Brooks, Charles Duffy; 1860, John Hamilton, Samuel Stinson; 1861, Charles Duffy, John Hamilton; 1862, Samuel Brooks, John Dhrein; 1863, Samuel Brooks, J. Gormans; 1864, W. T. Pearson, J. Fagan; 1865, Joseph Diggins, Michael McCabe; 1866, Martin Mira, Daniel J. Logan; 1867, Samuel Stinson, Martin Mira; 1868, Martin Mira, Samuel Stinson; 1869, Patrick Dunnigan, Quintin Campbell; 1870, William Carrigan, Samuel Stinson; 1871, —— ——; 1872, M. Cody, S. Stinson; 1873, Michael Cody, Luke Hilgrove; 1874, John Canty, Patrick Sweeny; 1875, Patrick Sweeny, Michael Cody; 1876, John Cypers, A. Black; 1877, J. O. McLain, Andrew Moffit; 1878, Christian Dwren, Benjamin O'Neil; 1879, Jeremiah Sullivan, Christian Dunn; 1880, Jesse Sullivan, Patrick Sweeny; 1881, Michael O'Brien, George W. Richardson.

Boroughs in Carbon.—BOROUGH OF COALMONT.—In 1842 no house stood within the present limits of the borough of Coalmont. A camp-meeting ground at that time occupied a portion of the borough. The land was owned by John Berkstresser and David E. Brode. The house was built in the summer of 1843 by Mr. Brode. It was a log house, and it now constitutes a part of the residence of Andrew H. Hickes, near Shoup's Run. No other house was built till 1854, when another log dwelling was erected by John J. Hamilton, and two frame houses by John and Thomas White. Work on the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad, which was then commenced, brought hither many workmen and settlers, who came to labor on the railroad and in the mines which then were opened. Between 1854 and 1858 most of the houses in the village were erected. The time of greatest prosperity here was from 1862 to 1865. At that time a New York company was constructing a branch railroad and opening new mines here, and these operations made business very brisk. The village then had three hotels and three mercantile establishments, all of which did a thriving business.

The hotels were built and kept, one by Ezekiel White, one by Thomas Fagan, and one, the largest of the three, was built by William P. Schell, and first kept by Frank Reamer. The stores were first kept by Evans Brothers & Co., Ezekiel White, and Berkstresser & Moore. Samuel G. Miller was the first blacksmith who carried on a shop here, and Ezekiel White was the pioneer shoemaker. A saw-mill was erected in 1856 by John Hamilton. The machinery of this mill was a few years later removed to a locality in Fulton County. The people who came here were miners or those engaged in business that was subservient to the mining interest, and the borough was prosperous in proportion to the activity and extent of mining operations here. From 1864 to 1874 the place maintained its status without much change. The population during that period was about four hundred. The financial crash that followed was disastrous in its effects on this borough, and in 1876–77 nearly one-half of the houses were without inhabitants. Although the borough has to some extent recovered from this depression, it has not reached its former prosperous condition. No hotel is now kept here, and only one store and a grocery. The population in 1880 was one hundred and seventy-one.

Incorporation.—On the 10th of August, 1864, a petition was presented to the judges of the Court of Quarter Sessions, praying for the incorporation of the village of Coalmont as a borough, in accordance with the acts of Assembly in such cases made and provided. The petition set forth, among other statements, that the number of inhabitants within the limits of the proposed borough was three hundred and twenty-one. It was signed by Levi Evans and twenty-six other freeholders of the village.

On the 15th of the same month a remonstrance against such incorporation was filed, signed by J. Brooks and eight other citizens and freeholders of the village. It set forth that a borough government would necessitate increased burdens of taxation, which the inhabitants were illy able to sustain.

The grand jury reported favorably on this petition, and on the 22d of November, 1864, the court by a decree constituted the village of Coalmont a borough, and a separate election and school district.

The boundaries were described as follows:

"Beginning at a post on the northeast corner of the proposed borough, on the Huntingdon and Broad Top railroad; thence south seventy-three degrees west eighty-six perches to a post at the head of the curve; thence west forty perches to a post at Red Rock; thence north sixty-seven degrees west fifteen perches to a post; thence north twenty-six degrees west sixty-four perches to a white-oak; thence south sixty degrees west thirty-three perches to a poplar; thence south twenty-three degrees east one hundred and twenty-eight perches to stones; thence south forty-five degrees east thirty-five perches to stones; thence north eighty-three degrees east eighteen perches to a pin-oak; thence north twenty-six degrees east sixty perches to a red-oak; thence north sixty degrees east eighty-two perches to a white-oak; thence north thirty degrees west twenty-four perches to the place of beginning.

Civil List.—The burgesses have been as follows:

1865, J. S. Berkstresser; 1866, —— ——; 1867, Jacob Haffly; 1868, Paul Woner; 1869–70, Samuel Brooks; 1861, —— ——; 1872, S. Brooks; 1873, G. Reisterer; 1874, J. A. Hickes; 1875, Thomas Thompson; 1876, L. Hughes; 1877, G. Reisterer; 1878, John A. Hickes; 1879, G. Reisterer; 1880–81, Silas Hess.

COUNCIL.

1865, John H. Benford, Thomas Richards, John Roland, L. G. Dom, Jacob Hafflins; 1866, —— ——; 1867, Richard Owen, Thomas Richards, John H. Benford, L. Hughes, Owen Fagan; 1868, G. A. Heaton, Richard Owens, John Richard, John Cypher, David Elsrode; 1869, Henry S. Isenberg, A. Estep, Andrew Hicks, C. F. Bradly, Richard Owen; 1870, —— ——; 1871, —— ——; 1872, J. J. Wighaman, Thomas Thompson, G. A. Heaton, H. S. Isenberg; 1872, J. A. Hickes, G. W. Stuller, James Collins; 1873, J. A. Hickes, G. A. Heaton, G. W. Stuller, Thomas Thompson, Richard Owens; 1874, G. A. Heaton, George Wighaman, J. W. Lytle, L. Hughes, Thomas Wilson; 1875, J. G. Reister, George Wighaman, R. Owens, J. N. Barnett; 1876, George B. Kelly, J. G. Reister, G. W. Taylor, John Hamilton, W. H. Barnet; 1877, Silas Hess, A. Hickes, J. G. Reister, L. Hughes, George Wighaman; 1878, Samuel Brooks, Silas Hess, J. W. Barnet, Abraham Brode, Thomas Wilson; 1879, Samuel Brooks, J. G. Reister, J. W. Barnet, W. S. Hamilton, Amos Hess; 1880, J. F. Reed, W. Keith, J. G. Reister, W. S. Hamilton, Amos Hess, J. W. Lytle; 1881, J. F. Reice, James Thompson, J. Hess, J. G. Reister, Samuel Hess.

CONSTABLES.

1865, James Edwards; 1866–67, John H. Herbert; 1868, G. Wighaman, H. S. Isenberg (high); 1869, George Wighaman; 1870–71, George Meghan; 1872–73, G. Wighaman; 1874, J. J. Wighaman; 1875, George Wighaman, F. P. Hamilton (high); 1876, Thomas Wilson, G. W. Taylor (high); 1877, James Thompson; 1878, L. W. Flanagan; 1879, Henry C. Estep; 1880, George Struble; 1881, Henry Brode, F. P. Hamilton (high).

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1865, Charles T. Bradley, Dr. C. W. Moore, Thomas Hill, Levi Evans, A. Estep, Thomas Thompson; 1866, John Roller, David Elsrode; 1867, John H. Benford, Richard Owen; 1868, Arthur Estep, Charles H. Reed, G. Reisterer; 1869, J. H. Benford, David Elsrode, George A. Heaton; 1870, —— ——; 1871, —— ——; 1872, George Hamilton, R. Reister, F. Flegal; 1873, Richard Owens, Paul Wonn, Samuel Brooks, C. A. Heaton; 1874, Samuel Sutherland, J. M. Barrett; 1875, J. M. Shanefelter, Richard Owens, Andrew Hickes; 1876, A. H. Hickes, R. H. Crum, H. C. Estep, J. F. Reed; 1877, J. W. Barnett, L. F. Flanagan, T. Wilson; 1878, J. A. Hickes, James Thompson; 1879, G. Reister, J. F. Reed, Silas Hess, George Struble, W. S. Hamilton; 1880, J. F. Hamilton, George Gillespie; 1881, James Thompson, H. Brode.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—By reason of the death and removal of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Coalmont who were active in early times, the history of that denomination here prior to 1860 cannot be learned.

At that time a society existed here, and regular services were held. The denomination was prosperous till the time of the panic, about 1874, when, by reason of the removal of many of the active members, and the financial embarrassments of that period, it declined, and during several years no services were held here.

In the autumn of 1881 the society was reorganized, with ten members, and worship has been regularly attended since that time. The Methodists never erected a house of worship here. Formerly schoolhouses were used for that purpose, but Odd-Fellows' Hall has been the place of meeting in more recent years.

The clergymen in charge of the circuit of which this society is a part are Revs. Piper and Lloyd.

Church of God in Coalmont.—A society of this denomination, sometimes called from their founder Winebrennarians, has existed in Liberty township, Bedford Co., during many years. In August, 1879, a society was organized in the borough of Coalmont, the constituent members of which were Daniel Abbot, elder; John A. Hickes, deacon; Samuel Graffius, W. S. Hamilton, George Donaldson, Mrs. Samuel Donaldson, Mrs. Samuel Graffius, Mrs. Johan A. Hickes, Mrs. Amos Davison, Miss Emma Creppinger, and Miss Belle Kriger.

The society has from its organization worshiped in Odd-Fellows' Hall. The pastors have been Revs. S. B. Howard, Simon Flegal, and the present incumbent of the position, D. C. Jackson.

The public school in Coalmont was kept five months in 1881, and was attended by forty-nine scholars.

Coalmont Lodge, No. 561, I. O. O. F.—This lodge was instituted March 6, 1860, with the following charter members: Addison Moore, N. G.; Paul Wonn, V. G.; Levi Evans, S.; Jacob S. Berkstresser, Asst. S.; James Dunn, T.; William Graham, Andrew Patrick, Ezekiel White, Gervas Reisterer, John L. Williams, Michael McCabe, John Hamilton, Nathan White, Samuel G. Miller, Silas White, Edmund A. Jockler, John A. Osborn, Charles A. McCalip, Henry Nicodemus, and Joseph S. Reed.

The lodge first met in what was known as the Hamilton building, near Shoup's Run. In 1862 a brick building called Odd-Fellows' Hall was erected on Schell Street. This building has a basement of stone and two stories of brick. In the upper story is the lodge-room, and the floor above the basement is used for church and Sunday-school purposes.

The present officers are John Sweet, N. G.; John Morgan, V. G.; John A. Hickes, T.; John S. Haffly, S.; and E. E. Poorman, Asst. S.

BOROUGH OF DUDLEY.—In 1859 what is now Dudley borough commenced as a village. At that time the land on which it stands belonged to L. T. Wattson, Orbison, Dorris & Co., and the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad Company. The completion of the railroad to this point gave to mining an impetus which resulted in the springing up of a village here. It was named Dudley, after a place of that name in England. It reached its greatest growth about 1864, after which time it slightly diminished in population till 1882, when an increase commenced.

Incorporation.—In the summer of 1876 William Brown and thirty-nine other freeholders of the village petitioned the court for a borough charter. The application was approved by the grand jury, and on the 13th of November in that year the court decreed that the town be incorporated as a borough, and constituted a separate election and school district. The boundaries were fixed as follows:

"Beginning at a spruce-pine near the old Barnet coal opening; thence up Shoup's Run south eight degrees east twenty-four perches to a large rock on the bank of Shoup's Run; thence south sixty degrees east one hundred and thirty-two perches to a stone-heap; thence south eighty-nine degrees east seventy-four perches to a stone-heap near the House Colliery opening; thence due south twenty perches to a chestnut-tree marked for a corner; thence south seventy-two degrees west forty perches to a pine-stump, now a stone-heap; thence south eighty degrees west two hundred and ninety-four perches to a post near the corner of Jonathan Schultz; thence by lands of the Broad Top Coal and Iron Company north ten degrees west one hundred and eight perches to a stone-heap at the corner of the inclosed lot of William Brown, Esq.; thence north sixty-one degrees east one hundred and sixty-six perches to a stone-heap; and thence south fifty-nine degrees east thirty-one perches to a spruce-pine, the place of beginning."

The area thus included is 173.35 acres.

The burgesses have been William Brown, 1876; John Palmer, 1878; William Stinson, 1879; Michael Gorman, 1880; Ephraim Mears, 1881; and William Brown, 1882.

The borough contains thirty-five dwellings, and has two hotels, three stores, two millinery establishments, a tin-shop, two blacksmith-shops, and a railroad depot. It is the passenger terminus of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad. Its population in 1880 was two hundred and three. Its public school was sustained during six months in the year 1881, and the whole number of pupils was forty-five.

Churches in Dudley.—Up to 1855 no church organization existed in the vicinity of Dudley. In that year John Palmer came here and first opened a Sunday-school in a school-house at Crawford. From this house religious services were excluded by the school directors, and afterwards services were held in the railroad depot at Dudley. The efforts thus put forth bore fruit, and in 1866 Mr. Palmer and John Whitehead resolved to inaugurate measures for the erection of a church. To aid in this undertaking the coal operators in this vicinity contributed coal, which the Huntingdon and Broad Top and the Pennsylvania Railroad Companies carried to Philadelphia free of charge. Of these operators Wood & Bacon contributed one hundred tons; Dr. George Mears, twenty tons; Reakert & Brothers, twenty tons; Newton Sheets & Co., twenty tons; Orbison, Dorris & Burroughs, twenty tons, and others whose names are not recalled, till the amount reached two hundred and fifty tons. In addition to these donations, L. T. Watson contributed the site for the church and three lots, which sold for one hundred dollars; R. B. Wigton, fifty dollars; and R. H. Powel, one hundred dollars in cash. Thus the church was built, and was dedicated as a non-sectarian house of worship. As such it has since been used by different denominations with unbroken harmony. The Methodist Protestant and Methodist Episcopal denominations, both of which have church organizations here, have principally occupied it.

The Union Sunday-school, which was organized by Mr. Palmer twenty-seven years since in an orchard, is continued in this church, and its organization has never been suspended. Of this school Mr. Palmer was the superintendent during twenty-three years. The present superintendent is William H. Sweet.

Catholic Church.—The first Catholic services in the vicinity of Dudley were held in 1855 by Rev. Father Hayden, from Stonerstown. Mass was first celebrated in a log house on Dudley Hill. Father Hayden was succeeded by Rev. P. M. Doyle, who became a resident pastor here in 1856. He erected a small church building in Barnet. Rev. Peter Hughes succeeded him in 1857. He enlarged the church, and continued his ministrations during a year and a half. Father Doyle returned in the autumn of 1868, and remained till the autumn of 1861, when Father Hughes returned, and remained till 1867. During a portion of this time Rev. Francis O'Shea was his assistant. After them came Rev. William A. Nolan in the spring of 1867. His pastorate continued till the summer of 1870, when he was succeeded by Rev. P. B. O'Halloran, who remained two months, and was followed by Rev. P. G. Herman, who remained till the end of 1870. The next pastor was Rev. William A. Nolan again. He continued this time till December, 1871. During this period the church building was destroyed by fire. Worship was then held in the Barnet school-house till another church edifice was erected on the site of the one burned. This building cost eight thousand dollars. Rev. Richard Brown succeeded Father Nolan early in 1876. During this period the financial depression set in, and its influence was distinctly felt by the church. Rev. James B. Tahaney succeeded Father Browne, and remained from February till August, 1876. In this interval the church was a second time burned, and with it the parochial residence. Rev. J. F. Gallagher came next, and continued till February, 1879, when Rev. John J. Bullion came, and remained till 1880, and was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. J. F. Tobin.

Measures have been taken for the erection of a new church, which will probably be completed during the present year (1882).

A Welsh Baptist Church formerly existed in Dudley, but it has become extinct.

BURGESSES.

1877, William Brown; 1878, John Rolmer; 1879, M. B. Brenneman; 1880, Michael Gorman; 1881, Ephraim Mears.

COUNCIL.

1877, J. Shultz, John Palmer, J. S. Hoffley, James Reagan, Patrick McGowen; 1878, William Stinson, John Morgan, Patrick McGowan, Garner Edwards, James Reagon, E. F. Gould; 1879, D. F. Horton, E. F. Gould, G. G. Gould, John Sweet, M. Corroll; 1880, F. Stinson, William Leary, E. F. Gould, P. Harrington, I. Leary, James Hooper; 1881, E. F. Gould, J. S. Hoffley, John Lewis, John Morgan, William Maher, William Leary.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1877, J. Fogerty, P. Harlington, Matthew Powell, Luke Hillgrove, John Palmer, J. S. Haffly; 1878, James Reagan, M. B. Brenneman, E. F. Gould; 1879, John Morgan, Michael Gorman; 1880, E. F. Gould, William Mahn, D. F. Horton; 1881, W. H. Sweet, A. J. Wright.

CONSTABLES.

1877, William Harr, Samuel Stinson; 1878, Samuel Wise; 1879–81, P. Harrington.

BOROUGH OF BROAD TOP CITY.—In 1854 the Broad Top Improvement Company purchased the farm of Miles Cook, and on it laid out a part of the village of Broad Top City. Jesse Cook, whose land joined this on the north, also laid out a portion of the village at the same time. At this time the company erected a saw-mill and commenced the erection of a hotel, which was completed in 1855. From this time the growth of the village kept even pace with the development of the coal interest, and it reached its height about the year 1861. During eight years from that time it neither increased nor diminished in size, but after 1869 business became less active here as the coal interest declined. The population, however, never diminished to any great extent. In 1868 the village was incorporated as a borough by a decree of the court, which prescribed its boundaries thus: "Beginning at a red-oak, thence south eleven degrees west one hundred and sixty perches to stones; thence south fifty-nine degrees west one hundred and fourteen perches to stones; thence north fifteen degrees west three hundred perches to a sugar-tree; thence north fifty-five degrees east one hundred and sixteen perches to a locust-tree; thence south fifty degrees east two hundred and forty-four perches to the place of beginning."

The chief burgesses have been Paul Ammerman, 1869; E. J. Jones, 1873; Amon Houck, 1875; Ephraim Mears, 1876; Jacob Mountain, 1877; William S. Pearson, 1878; Amon Houck, 1879; George A. Mears, 1880; S. H. Houck, 1881; and W. J. Ammerman, 1882.

The borough contains fifty-eight dwellings and four hundred inhabitants. It has two hotels, one of which has been much patronized as a summer resort, the mountain scenery and healthful surroundings of the place attracting hither many who desire to escape from the dust and heat of crowded cities. There are also two stores, a millinery store and a confectionery establishment, a blacksmith's shop, a gunsmith's shop, a wagon-shop, a cabinet-shop, two churches, and a public school, in which sessions were held during six months of 1881, and seventy pupils were instructed.

Of the Methodist Episcopal Church no definite information could be obtained by reason of inaccessibility of the records.

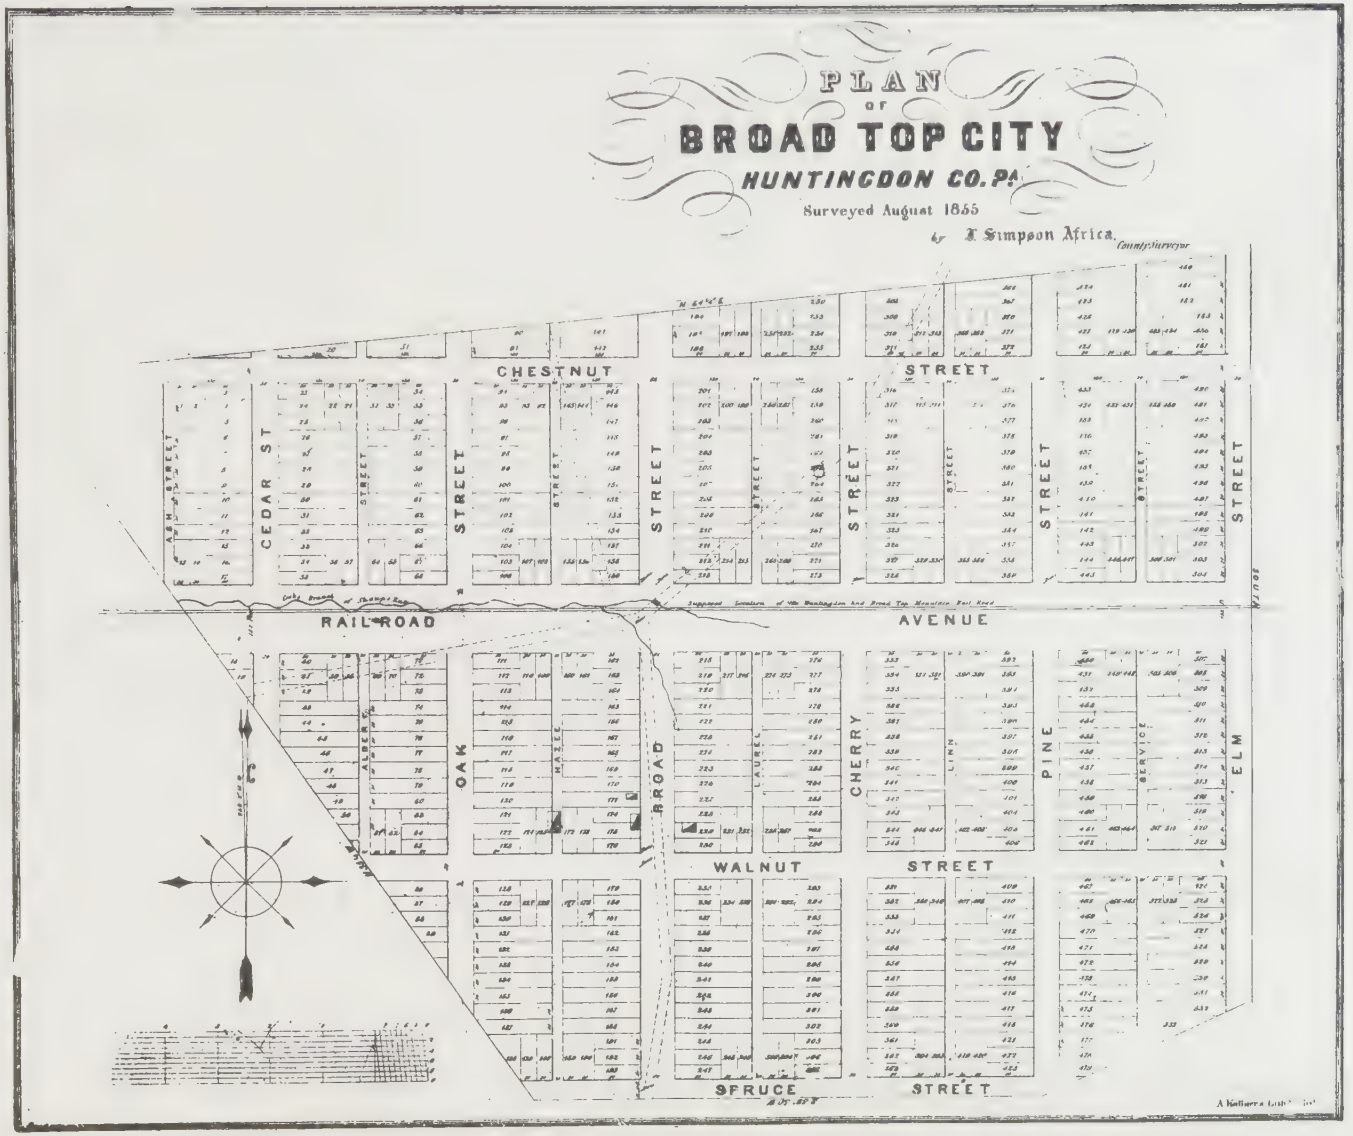
First Baptist Church of Broad Top City.—The first preaching by a Baptist clergyman in Broad Top City was on the 28th of October, 1861, when Rev. William H. Purdy visited the place and preached in the school-house. At that time Paul Ammerman and his wife were the only Baptists here. Mr. Purdy afterwards labored here successfully, and on the 22d of March, 1862, a church was organized under the above title. Of this society Isaac Trout was chosen deacon; Paul Ammerman, treasurer; W. J. Ammerman, clerk; and George Evans, sexton. In addition to these, Mrs. Paul Ammerman and David Persing were constituent members.

The society worshiped in the school-house till the completion of their present church edifice, which was dedicated Nov. 10, 1863. It is a wooden structure, with a seating capacity of three hundred, and the cost was fifteen hundred dollars.

The pastors have been Revs. William B. Purdy, till 1864; then T. C. Gessford, till 1866; J. D. Thomas, till 1869; J. W. Evans, till 1875; and the present pastor, D. J. R. Strayer.

Broad Top City Lodge, No. 579, I. O. O. F.—This lodge was organized Dec. 25, 1865, with the following charter members: S. G. Miller, N. G.; Henry Cook, V. G.; J. B. Gussinger, Sec.; J. W. Ammerman, Asst. Sec.; John Mitchel, Treas.; W. J. Ammerman, Ephraim Mears, Charles K. Orton, Samuel Pheasant, R. Trout, E. White, William Alloway, James L. Miller, L. E. Edwards, O. W. Taylor, W. S. Myers, J. Mountain, Thomas Lobb, Thomas M. Lewis, and Zopher P. Horton.

At first the lodge held its meetings in the hotel, but after six months removed to a building which it had purchased, and where its meetings are still held. The lodge not only has no debt but has a fund of two thousand three hundred dollars invested. The present membership is fifty-one. The officers are William Preece, N. G.; A. J. Blair, V. G.; W. J. Ammerman, Sec.; S. A. Blair, Asst. Sec.; and A. Houck, Treas.



The Noble Grands have been S. G. Miller, H. Cook, John Mitchell, W. J. Ammerman, J. N. Sheets, J. Mountain, J. F. Mears, J. W. Ammerman, C. R. Horton, W. T. Pierson, F. Cook, J. D. Lewis, E. Mears, W. B. Carrigan, W. Evans, F. Prosser, James Williams, T. M. Lewis, J. Brown, E. Brown, G. N. Wilkins, D. C. Megahan, B. F. Garret, J. F. Griffith, M. J. McGee, A. Schult, J. G. Hughes, A. Houck, and J. A. Crewitt.

BURGESSES.

1868–70, P. Ammerman; 1881, I. H. Houck.

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

1868, J. W. Ammerman, Henry Cook, J. F. Mears, Joseph Peck, Thomas Cook, Amon Houck, W. J. Pierson, Samuel Wilkins, Casper Reecy; 1869, E. J. Jones, Sr., Amon Houck, C. K. Horton, W. T. Pearson, Casper Reecy; 1870, T. Cook, J. F. Mears, J. Mountain, C. K. Horton, J. G. Mills; 1881, Thomas Heath, W. J. Ammerman, J. F. Beers, Joshua Edwards, C. Reecy, Thomas Wagoner.

PLAN
OF BROAD TOP CITY
HUNTINGDON CO. PA.
Surveyed August 1855
by T. Simpson Africa, County Surveyor
CHESTNUT STREET
ASH STREET
CEDAR ST
ALDER STREET STREET
RAIL ROAD AVENUE OAK HAZEL
BROAD LAUREL
CHERRY
LINN
PINE SERVICE
ELM
WALNUT STREET
SPRUCE STREET

CONSTABLES.

1868, Henry Cook; 1869, C. K. Horton, O. W. Taylor (high); 1870–71, S. H. Houck; 1872, —— ——; 1873–74, W. B. Carrigan; 1875, J. D. Lewis; 1876, J. Hoffman; 1877, W. S. Chilcoat; 1878, W. J. Ammerman; 1879, Jacob Mills; 1880, D. K. Fleck; 1881, James Williams.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1868, Michael Leader, Edward Pool, James Edwards, Evan J. Jones, I. N. Sheets, Jacob Mountain; 1869, Joshua Edwards, J. W. Ammerman, E. J. Jones, Sr., J. M. Sheele, S. G. Miller, Thomas Cook; 1870, Thomas Cook, P. Ammerman; 1871, —— ——; 1872, —— ——; 1873, O. W. Taylor; 1874, P. Ammerman, A. Ceath, H. Cook; 1875, B. F. Gehrett, G. A. Mears, S. G. Miller, J. Mountain, S. H. Houck; 1876, J. Hoffman, T. M. Lewis, S. H. Houck; 1877, W. T. Pierson, Jacob Mountain; 1878, C. Horton, S. H. Houck, G. A. Mears; 1879, John D. Lewis, John Lebhart; 1880, Felix Tool, J. F. Mears; 1881, J. Mountain, Joseph Brown.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

CASS TOWNSHIP.

THIS township was named in honor of Hon. Lewis Cass, of Michigan, and was erected Jan. 21, 1843. Its territory was taken from the township of Union, which had been taken from Hopewell in 1791. Penn and Union lie north of it, Shirley and Cromwell form its eastern boundary, and Clay and Tod bound it on the south and southwest.

In its physical features Cass is similar to the township of Union. Jack's Mountain is on its eastern boundary, and extending in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction, parallel with this, are Clear Ridge and Sideling Hill. Between Jack's Mountain and Clear Ridge lies Hare's Valley, through which, from its central point in the township, runs Hare's Valley Creek towards the north and Three Springs Creek in a southwesterly direction. A highway runs through the township in this valley, and along this farms are scattered, though by reason of the narrowness of the valley agricultural operations are not extensive.

Between Clear Ridge and Sideling Hill is Smith's Valley, which, like Hare's Valley, is traversed by a highway, and in it runs Smith's Valley Creek to the northeast from a point south of the middle of the valley in the township. From near the same point an affluent of Three Springs Creek runs southerly, then turns to the east through Clear Ridge Gap into Hare's Valley.

West from Sideling Hill lies Trough Creek Valley, which is much wider than the others, and embraces the principal agricultural region of the township. Little Trough Creek runs southerly through this valley, and two highways pass through the township in a northerly and southerly direction, while others ramify through the valley in different directions. The "Barrens" occupy a large area in the western part of the township.

The borough of Cassville lies a short distance west from the geographical centre of the township, and a post-office called Hare's Valley is near its southern boundary. Agriculture is the sole industry of the township, and for the pursuit of this the valleys were long since denuded of the heavy forest growths by which they were covered. Much of the valuable timber has been taken from the mountain-sides, but from the forests that remain are now taken large quantities of oak railroad ties, and of bark, which the abundant oak timber supplies, for tanning purposes.

No railroad touches this township. The available avenues of egress for travelers and produce lead to Mill Creek and Mapleton on the north, and Saltillo on the south.

Pioneers.—The date of the first settlement in Cass township cannot now be obtained. William Shirley settled on the tract since divided into two farms, and owned respectively by Martin Stever and Mrs. Sarah A. Heaton, in July, 1774. From him the name of the elevation at the foot of which Cassville is located, "Shirley's Knob," was derived. Shirley was married in 1773. After the murder of the Breckenridges by the Indians in Woodcock Valley he moved his family to a place of greater safety, and afterwards settled on the eastern side of the Raystown Branch, in Penn township, on a farm now owned by Isaac Norris.

Peter Thompson settled on Little Trough Creek in November, 1773, and was yet residing thereon in December, 1794. Richard Dowling improved an adjoining tract, between Thompson's and Shirley's, in the fall of 1774. Both had surveys made in 1784. Dowling took out a warrant March 22, 1785, on which a survey of three hundred and forty acres and seventy-five perches was made, and patented to him April 30, 1789. The tract was called "Blunders." About, or possibly before, this time he removed to a farm on Raystown Branch, in the lower corner of Penn township, where his son William died a few years ago, and where his daughter Polly yet resides. Thompson obtained a warrant for his tract Dec. 22, 1794. The survey, containing three hundred and sixteen acres and one hundred and fifty-eight perches, called "Shady Grove," was patented to him July 2, 1795. Thompson also moved to the Raystown Branch region, where some of his descendants yet reside.

Philip Curfman settled on the farm now owned by Nathan G. Horton about 1788. He had an oil-mill on or near the site of the saw-mill, and made oil from the flaxseed raised in the valley. Flax was once a staple production of the valley, and every farmer raised a patch of it. From it was made thread for sewing and for the loom. It was woven into cloth for wearing apparel, sheets, bags, wagon covers, and many other purposes. The cheapness of Irish linen and muslin long since rendered flax culture unremunerative. Jacob Dean commenced an improvement on the Abraham Shore farm in 1784, and Jonathan on the adjoining farm to the southwest in 1791.

Moses Greenland moved from Baltimore County, Md., to Trough Creek Valley before the close of the last century, and purchased the Peter Thompson farm and some adjoining land, which he subsequently divided into three farms, and divided one to each of his sons, Nathan, Caleb, and Joshua. He had two daughters. Nancy married Amos Loughery, who had served as a captain in the Maryland forces in the Revolutionary war, and Sarah married Lawrence Swope. Nathan's children were Sarah, who married Andrew Shaw, resided for many years in Fulton County; Keziah, who married Nicholas Shenefelt, died in Clarion, Pa.; Moses, who resides at the old homestead; Nathan, died about three years ago near the head of Trough Creek Valley, in Union township; Benjamin, resides in Wells township, Fulton Co.; Joshua, resided many years in Cassville, now lives in the borough of Huntingdon, elected commissioner in 1847, and sheriff in 1853; Mary, married Abraham Myerly, and died in Cass township; Caleb, now resides in Clay township; Missouri, married Reuben Chilcott, and now lives in Jefferson County, Iowa; and Ezra, who lives in Union township. Caleb (the elder) had several sons and daughters. The latter married, respectively, Joshua Edwards, William Brown, and Jordan Wright. One of the sons married a daughter of Abraham Shore, and is now deceased, leaving a son, Clayton, residing in Cass township. Joshua (the elder) raised a large family, who, after his death, all removed to the Western States.

The Lovell Family.—Zebulon Lovell resided about the middle of the last century in Baltimore County, Md. His children, as far as the family records now extant show, were Jonathan, who married —— Stevens, Oct. 8, 1770; Rebecca, who married John Lane, Nov. 4, 1771; Ruth, who married Richard Chilcott, May 29, 1774 (see Union township); and Zachariah, born July 29, 1765. Zebulon's wife's name was Mary, and she died May 2, 1770.

Zachariah Lovell married Ruth, daughter of William Kelly, and moved to Trough Creek Valley about the year 1794, and purchased from Samuel Shannon the tract of land on Little Trough Creek, nearly two miles west of Cassville, where he afterwards lived and died. This tract had formerly belonged to Thomas Coal, and was improved as early as 1775. Here his only son Amon was born Dec. 19, 1803. Ruth, his mother, died Dec. 15, 1850, aged eighty-two years and twenty days.

Amon Lovell married Wealthy, daughter of Elijah and Delia Corbin Houck, March 11, 1834, and died Nov. 24, 1850. Their children were Emeline, b. Jan. 12, 1835, m. —— Heaton; Lavinia, b. July 24, 1836, m. —— ——; Albert G., b. April 3, 1839, practices medicine in Maryland; K. Allen, b. July 20, 1841, resides in the borough of Huntingdon (see Chapter XVII., Bench and Bar); Mary A., b. April 19, 1843, m. Dr. R. Myers, and resides in Huntingdon; Henry C., b. Aug. 8, 1845, died young; Jesse B., b. July 21, 1847, resides in the West; and Amon J., who died young.

The Smith Family.—George Smith, a tailor by trade, after residing some time on the Weston Run, Baltimore County, Md., moved to Trough Creek Valley in 1803. The only resident of the village of Chilcoatstown (now Cassville) at that date was William Lovell, who kept a public-house. The settlers in the valley were Philip Kurfman, Henry Elias, who lived where his son Henry lived and died, Zachariah Lovell, Joshua and Daniel Gosnell, Michael Myerly, Moses Greenland and his sons Nathan, Caleb, and Joshua, John Taylor, grandfather of Isaac, Michael Bumgardner, William Estep, John Wright, Richard Chilcott, George Stever, Jacob Dean, Elijah Corbin, who lived in Plank Cabin Valley, Michael Houck, Samuel and John McClain, John Loughery and James Loughery lived in Smith's Valley. John's son Amos had served as a captain in the Revolutionary war and settled here afterward.[1]

George Smith's children were, Eliel, who served a term as county commissioner, moved to Iowa and died there; William died in Union township a few years ago, Daniel moved to Ohio many years ago, Levi died in Union township. Two of his sons are physicians, another, Samuel P., is one of the county commissioners, George resides in Cass township, Jesse lives in Tod township, Andrew is a physician and resides near Colvin, Isaac moved to Iowa, Sarah married John Chilcote, and Elizabeth married Samuel Miller, who now resides at Mount Union. George Smith, the elder, died Dec. 20, 1839.

Philip Curfman, who was mentioned above, appears to have purchased the Nathan G. Horton farm in 1788, and soon thereafter settled upon it. His children were Jacob, who received from his father the farm now owned by David Hamilton; Philip owned and lived where his son Joseph now resides; Conrad owned and lived where his son Jesse now lives; Daniel owned the farm now the property of Mrs. Sarah A. Heaton; John settled on the farm now occupied by his son Adam; Peter became, on the death of the father, the proprietor of the old homestead; Elizabeth, the only daughter, married John R. Gosnell.

The Stever Family.—George Stever, of German extraction, moved from Bucks County to Trough Creek Valley some time prior to the year 1800, and purchased a part of the tract that had been improved many years before by William Shirley, as well as other lands, sufficient to make several good farms. Beside conducting extensive farming operations he carried on blacksmithing, and from his shop several young men graduated.

His children were Philip, who purchased from the father the farm where his son Lewis lived and died; Adam moved to Jefferson County, Iowa, and died there; Joseph, who settled in Hare's Valley, and died there; John resided upon his part of his father's estate, and died there, serving one term as county commissioner; David died on his farm lying between his brother John's and the borough of Cassville; Sarah married John Myerly; Elizabeth married Solomon Fink; Catharine died unmarried; Mary is now living in Cassville.

[1] Recollections of William Smith, taken down in October, 1873.

A part of the Stever land had been owned by Ignatius Notts, and was called in the patent "Nottingham." The title papers show that it had been improved in the year 1776.

The Greene Family.—Thomas Greene, the ancestor of the family of that name in Hare's Valley and other parts of the southern end of the county, was born in Maryland about the year 1740. He and four brothers migrated to Huntingdon County. The brothers, Isaac, George, Elisha, and Clement, settled on the waters of Standing Stone Creek, some time between the years 1780 and 1785. George and Elisha brought some slaves with them. One, known as "Black Tom," lived in Huntingdon many years after he became free, and died there at an advanced age. George built a grist-mill on the creek, on or near the site of Cornpropst's mills. Thomas settled in the southern end of Hare's Valley, and on the 5th of May, 1796, obtained a warrant for two hundred and fifty-four acres, in the application for which it is stated that the improvement had been commenced in 1776. On this tract he built a grist-mill, about 1785, on the Mountain Branch of Three Springs Creek. A part of the original wall is under the present mill. On the 26th of February, 1785, he took out a warrant for three hundred acres "in the valley called Clear Ridge Valley, between Clear Ridge and Rocky Ridge, on the north side of Corbin's improvement, to the line agreed on by William Corbin[1] and William Read, near the head of the Mountain Branch." This land, now situated in Cass township, was improved about the year 1774. Read, above mentioned, resided upon the ground prior to the issue of the warrant to Thomas Greene, and it is supposed he was the improver.

Thomas Greene (1) married a sister of John Wright. Their children were Elisha and John, who married daughters of Hercules Camp; George, married a Miss Skinner, of Path Valley; Thomas (2), married a Miss Campbell; Abraham, married a Miss Rutter; Isaac and Caleb I., unmarried; and a daughter. George and Thomas settled on the Cass township tract, which was divided between them. George's children were Lemuel, died in Cassville; George Morris, died at the mill at Saltillo; Elisha, died in Springfield township; Archibald, died in Iowa; Matilda, married Daniel Curfman; Susan, died unmarried; —— ——, married John Walls. Thomas (2) had sons, Thomas C. and Andrew, and two daughters, Rebecca, who married Jacob Gehrett, and Harriet, who married James Hanawalt. Thomas C. married a Miss Baker, and now resides upon a part of the land above described. His son, Samuel B., is now engaged in teaching school and surveying.

[1] Ancestor of the Corbins of Raystown Branch.

Besides the pioneers named, others are recalled by very old present inhabitants, of Matthias Saylor, John Chilcote, George Stever, Cornelius Poston, Zachariah Lovett, and Daniel Gosnal. In Smith's Valley, beginning near the line of Clay township and going north, there were Jacob Barnett, Andrew Park, John Chaney, John Park, Jr., Philemon Reynolds, Michael Bauman, Hugh Johnson, and John Park, Sr. Reynolds was a colored man and a slave, who purchased his freedom, and afterwards bought from his former master six hundred acres of land opposite Cassville for one hundred dollars. Mr. James L. Glasgow now owns and resides on a part of this land.

In Hare's Valley John Shields, James Campbell, Jacob Crotsley, Henry Freed, William Wright are remembered as very early residents. Probably not many of those named were original settlers in the township, but many were the children of pioneers, and nearly all left children, who have in their turn multiplied till their families are numerously represented here.

Some of these pioneers came here from Maryland, over Indian trails that were not passable except on foot or with single animals. They brought their scanty effects on their backs, or on the backs of horses and cows, and drove the few sheep and swine that, if spared by the wolves and bears, were to be the beginnings of their future flocks. They camped in the forest at night, and patiently toiled over the rugged paths by day, sustained by their hopes of future happiness and independence in the homes which they were seeking.

It is not necessary to enter into a detail of the experiences of these pioneers, for almost every one has heard and read of them. They were not the effeminate children of luxury, whose pampered appetites required to be tempted with delicacies; but active, energetic men and women, who were ready to encounter and able to surmount the difficulties which lay before them in the wilderness where they sought their homes. They built their cabins, cleared their lands, and with the labor of their own hands provided for their few and simple wants. Their neighbors were few and distant, and there were among them none of the rivalries and the jealousies which crept in as the country became more thickly settled. Each rejoiced with his neighbor in his prosperity, or sympathized with him in his adversity. Their visits, though few and far between, were cordial and sincere interchanges of heartfelt civilities. They were anticipated with pleasure and remembered without regret. The children of these pioneers grew up with robust health and stalwart frames, free from the vices with which the dwellers in cities and town are contaminated. The log church and school-house soon made their appearance, and in these they were taught the precepts of morality, and as much of science as circumstances would allow. In the midst of the environments which they had made for themselves, they were contented and happy, and rather to be envied than pitied by their less energetic cousins, who had preferred lives of ease within the shade of their ancestral mansions to the toils and dangers which these people had encountered and overcome.

In the midst of pioneer surroundings these people lived and died and were succeeded by their children, for the country did not then, as do now regions in these days of rapid transit, put on the appearance of age in a decade. Gradually the forest disappeared, fields widened, houses multiplied, old cabins went to decay and were replaced by more pretentious residences, till the present varied and beautiful landscape presents itself in place of the unbroken forest through which at long intervals more than a century since came the pioneer couples, whose remains repose in the land which they came to reclaim.

The township had a population in 1850 of 714; in 1860, 1030; 1870, 818; and 1880, 720.

Civil List.

CONSTABLES.

1843–45, Caleb Swoope; 1846, Elijah Kurfman; 1847, Lemuel Green; 1848, Lemuel Green; 1849, Andrew Crotzley; 1850, Michael Bowman; 1851–52, Nicholas Miller; 1853, Joseph Stever; 1854, Michael Bowman; 1855–57, Samuel Pheasant; 1858–59, A. J. Henderson; 1860, Samuel Pheasant; 1861, William Forcie; 1862, Samuel Pheasant; 1863, Samuel McClain; 1864, Nicholas Miller; 1865, Isaac Bowman; 1866, George W. Chilcote; 1867, John G. White; 1868, George Chilcote; 1869, G. B. Wilson; 1870–71, Samuel McClain; 1872, G. M. Parks; 1873, James E. Glasgow; 1874–75, W. Forshey; 1876, George W. Chilcoat; 1877, J. A. Parks; 1878, J. D. Crotzley; 1879, William Forshey; 1880, A. W. Pheasant; 1881, J. Dell.

SUPERVISORS.

1843, Daniel Turner, Robert Speer; 1844, Robert Speer, Daniel Turner; 1841, John Stever, Joseph Stever; 1846, John Stever, Joseph Stever; 1847, Matthias Saylor, John Bowman; 1848, M. Saylor, John Bowman; 1849, M. Taylor, Joseph Stever; 1850, John Stever, William Park; 1851, Caleb Greenland, James Johnston; 1852, James Johnston, David Stever; 1853, David Stever, Benjamin Fink; 1854, Jacob H. Dell, J. Hoover; 1855, Peter Kurfman, ——— ———; 1856, John Curfman, George Quarry; 1857, George Seinth, George M. Green; 1858, J. Stever, J. Posten; 1859, Andrew Park, George Roland; 1860, John R. Gosnell, Michael Dell; 1861, Philip Pheasant, Abraham Taylor; 1862, Abraham Myerly, Philip Pheasant; 1863, Henry Shaffer, William Forshey; 1864, Henry Shaffer, Benjamin Kyler; 1865, James Rosten, Abraham Pheasant; 1866, Jacob Park, Samuel Pheasant; 1867, Ephriam Bowman, John Rosten; 1868, John Rosten, George Quarry; 1869, Lewis Stever, Abraham Pheasant; 1870, A. Crotzley, P. Gosnell; 1871, ——— ———; 1872, ——— ———; 1873, Isaac Bowman, John Spangler; 1874, Michael Stever, Joseph Harbaugh; 1875, Wilson Evesel, Joseph Harbaugh; 1876, J. C. Shaffer, John M. Querry; 1877, Walter Stever, William Forshey; 1878, ——— ———; 1879, John R. Gosnel, J. A. McClain; 1880, W. W. Crotzley, George Bate; 1881, W. W. Crotzley, George Baith.

OVERSEERS.

1843, David Stever, Jacob Crotzley; 1844, Jacob Crotzley, David Stever; 1845, David Stever, James Park; 1846, Peter Kurfman, Matthias Miller; 1847, Daniel Curfman, Cochram Fleming; 1848, John Stever, Joseph Kurfman; 1849, John R. Gossnell, Jacob Barrett; 1860, John Bowman, M. Taylor; 1851, Joshua Greenland, George Quarry; 1852, A. W. Clarkson, E. B. Hissong; 1853, Joshua Gosnell, A. L. Smith; 1854, Matthias Saylor; 1855, J. Stever, John Spangler; 1856, John Saylor, John Wilson.

Huntingdon Baptist Church.—This church was organized about the commencement of the present century, when the population was very sparse, hence the name that was given to it by reason of its being the earliest Baptist Church in the region. Among the early members may be named William Lovell, Jacob and Jonathan Dean. The place of worship was during many years the house of Jacob Dean, three miles northwest from Cassville. In 1825 the present house of worship was erected, on land donated by Mr. Dean, near his house. It is a log structure, thirty by thirty-two feet. At first it was furnished with slab benches, but these have been replaced with slips, and the outside has been "pebble-dashed."

The pastors of this church have been, as nearly as can be recollected, Revs. Samuel Lane, James Davis, Moses Starr, Richard Proudfoot, Nathan Everett, Zopher D. Pasco, George L. Elgin, Joseph Furr, and the present incumbent, Joseph Corell.

Bauman's Methodist Episcopal Chapel.—As early as 1854 a class existed in Smith's Valley, on the road between Mapleton and Saltillo, two miles from Cassville. Of this class, Philip Curfman, Abraham Taylor, and D. P. Pheasant were leaders. Their place of worship was a school-house during some years, but finally the present chapel was erected. It is a wooden building, thirty by forty feet, with a seating capacity for two hundred and fifty.

While this charge was a part of the Cassville circuit, the same clergymen served this and the Cassville charge. Since its change from that circuit it has had Revs. E. Shoemaker, G. W. Bowse, G. W. Dunlap, J. W. Orwine, J. W. Bell, and the present pastor, L. S. Crone.

United Brethren Church.—In 1858–59, a society of United Brethren in Christ was formed in the northern part of Cass township, and for some years it worshiped in Harmony Grove school-house, near Calvin. In 1868 a house of worship was erected, three-fourths of a mile south from that village, with a seating capacity of three hundred.

Among the many clergymen who have officiated here the names are recollected of Revs. Baker, Spangler, Shirk, Potter, Clem, Jones, McClay, Mattern, Messer, and the present pastor, Rev. Gale.

Cornelius Methodist Episcopal Chapel.—This is located in Hare's Valley, a mile and a half from the south line of Cass township. It was named in honor of Rev. George W. Cornelius, who was active in promoting its erection. It was built for the accommodation of Methodists in that vicinity, who had long worshiped in a school-house there. A prosperous society has been maintained here, and has been served by the same clergymen that have been in charge at Cassville and at Bauman's Chapel.

Cemeteries.—There is in Cassville a cemetery, another near Bauman's Chapel, and one in Hare's Valley. None of these are incorporated.

Education.—Nathan Greenland,[1] who resided on

[1] Father of ex-Sheriff Joshua Greenland.

Little Trough Creek, two miles northwest of Cassville, taught school in the winter for many years, beginning as early perhaps as 1810. The term was usually three months.

One of the early school-houses stood on the southwest side of the road leading from Cassville via Solomon Myerly's, on land lately owned by Col. John Stever, deceased. A man named Berger taught school there. Another stood on land now owned by J. Calvin Shaffer, east of the public road, in a place then well known as the school-house woods. Hugh Johnston, who lived in Smith's Valley, taught here. The house was afterwards moved to the eastern end of the Long Bridge, on land of Michael Myerly, where the large house built by the Glasgows now stands. After the removal, one of the first teachers was John G. Corbin,[1] who, after a service in the war of 1812, migrated from Baltimore County, Md., to this valley. To this school-house all the pupils from the upper end of the valley came until another school was opened in a house that stood on land of William Chilcott on the opposite side of the creek from his residence. Cass township has six schools, in which two hundred and seventeen children were taught during five months of 1881.

On the Jesse Curfman farm a school-house was erected before the introduction of the common-school system. Jacob Dever taught here. He resided near Cook's Station, and made a business of dressing deerskins.

A school was taught by Jonathan Dean in a house on the farm now occupied by Clayton Greenland. Dean was a surveyor, and among his pupils were many of the residents of the valley now passed away. Eliel Smith and William Edwards taught at the Long Bridge, and also at the Stever school-house.

On the farm recently occupied by Daniel Turner, now owned by Ralph Smith, John McDonald, from the north of Ireland, settled at an early day. He had sons named James, Alexander, and others. James remained on the farm and died there. The father, after the death of James, sold the place to Col. John Park and Andrew Johnston (who sold to Daniel Turner), and went to Ohio to his other sons.

The McDonalds and Hugh Johnston were the only Presbyterians in that neighborhood.

Borough of Cassville.—Previous to 1797 Salisbury, also known as Chilcotestown, was laid out by Benjamin and Roberson Chilcote. The plan of the lots was recorded February 22d of that year. Lots were sold at twenty dollars (seven pounds ten shillings) each. When the village was laid out three buildings stood on its site, only two of which remain, and one of these is used as a stable.

A tavern was kept here by William Lovell, the first in the village, previous to 1815. The second hotel was kept by Robert Speer, who was also the first merchant here, and contributed largely by his energy in business towards building up the village.

An addition to the village was laid out in 1830, by Andrew Shaw and Robert Baird, who sold lots at from forty to fifty dollars each. Several lots were purchased, and a number of buildings were erected at about that time. Within the next decade John S. Gehrett, James Henderson, and Dr. Jesse Wright became residents. Hon. David Clarkson, who served during ten years as associate judge in the county, came to Cassville in 1840.

Incorporation.—Measures for the incorporation of the borough were inaugurated in 1849, and the present name was selected by a committee consisting of Robert Speer, D. Stever, and D. Clarkson. It was incorporated under that name by an act of the Legislature March 3, 1853. In the act the boundaries were described as follows: "Commencing at a post corner of land of Nicholas Miller, thence north fifty-eight degrees west thirty-six and five-tenths perches to stone in the run; thence south fifty-two degrees west eight and five-tenths perches to a cherry; thence south seventeen and one-half degrees west seventy-six and five-tenths perches to a stone; thence north seventy-two degrees west ten and five-tenths perches to a post; thence south thirty-one degrees west twenty-six and five-tenths perches to corner of church lot; thence north eighty degrees west forty-eight perches to a post; thence north fifty degrees west twenty-two perches to stones; thence south seven degrees west sixty-six perches to post; thence south twenty-six degrees east seventy-one perches to stump; thence south sixty-five degrees east seventy-two perches to white-oak stump; thence north eighteen degrees east one hundred and twenty-six perches to stones; thence north five degrees west thirty-four perches to a pine stump; thence north twenty-five degrees east sixty-seven perches to the post at the place of beginning." The charter conferred the usual corporate privileges, and constituted the borough a separate school district.

No special industry has ever been established here, and there has been nothing except the pleasantness and healthfulness of its location, its excellent surroundings, and the existence here of a flourishing literary institution to cause its growth. Of this the historian Lytle gives the following account: "Cassville Seminary had its origin in the fall of 1851. The Rev. Zane Bland, in a conversation with George W. Speer and Hon. David Clarkson, suggested the place as admirably adapted for the location of a seminary. The enterprise was taken hold of by those gentlemen, stock subscribed, an association formed, and officers elected. On the 26th of May, 1852, the board of trustees entered into an article of agreement with Robert Madden for the erection of the building, who at once entered on the work and completed it the next fall or winter. While this was being done the first session of the school was held in the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Ralph Pierce, principal, and his wife, an adopted daughter of Bishop Peck, preceptress. In 1854 and 1855 another building, for the accommodation of boarders, was erected by Robert Madden. The school was under the supervision of the Methodist Church, and continued in operation until the beginning of the late war. It gained considerable popularity and patronage, having at various times as high as one hundred and twenty-five students.

[1] Father of Ferdinand Corbin.

"This property was purchased in September, 1865, by Professor A. L. Guss for a soldiers' orphans' school. It included four acres of land, and was bought for two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars. The erection of additional buildings and other improvements cost five thousand dollars more. The farm cost three thousand dollars, and lots and adjoining grounds one thousand dollars.

"The school was opened Nov. 6, 1865. During the time it was in operation four hundred and eighty-four pupils were admitted and discharged.

"The school closed April 10, 1874, after having been open nearly eight and one-half years. The testimony of the outside world and the records of the department show that it had 'been well managed.'" One of the most prominent and influential preceptresses of the Cassville Seminary was Mrs. Kate W. Clarkson.

Mrs. Kate Walsh Clarkson, wife of Hon. David Clarkson, of Cass township, Huntingdon Co., has for some time occupied a place of some prominence in not only Huntingdon County, but in Central Pennsylvania as well, as a worker in the cause of foreign missions, and in that field has come into familiar and applauded notice in many places. She is a native of Rochester, N. Y., where she was born April 13, 1832, and comes of Irish ancestry, her father (John D. Walsh) and mother (Anna McNamara) having both come to America from the Green Isle. John D. Walsh was a school-teacher in Ireland, and soon after reaching this country took charge of a school in Maiden Lane, New York City, which he conducted many years. His health failing he gave up his school and retired to a rural home near the city of Rochester. He was a stanch Democrat, and took an active part in local political campaigns. He was long the postmaster at O'Connellsville (his home), and at the time of his death, in 1847, was collector of the port of Genesee. He left eight children, of whom six survive. They are John D. Walsh, of Rochester (financial agent for the estate of the late Isaac Butts), Michael McN. Walsh (a prominent lawyer of New York City), Mrs. Daniel E. Converse (of Wayne County, N. Y.), Mrs. David Clarkson, Mrs. George Robinson (of Schenectady, N. Y.), and Mrs. Turner (of Rochester, N. Y.). Mrs. Clarkson was educated at the Rochester High School and the Charlotteville Seminary in Schoharie County, N. Y., from which last-named place she was called to be the preceptress of the Cassville Seminary in Huntingdon County, Pa. She continued to occupy that post with signal ability until July, 1856, when she retired to private life, having previously (April 21, 1856) been married to David Clarkson, Esq.

As has already been recited, Mrs. Clarkson has devoted much of her time and energy to work on behalf of foreign missions. She has for eight years been a working member of the Cassville Auxiliary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society (representing the counties of Juniata, Mifflin, Perry, and Huntingdon, and portions of Fulton and Franklin), has been its president for the past six years, and during the same period district secretary of the society. To this field of labor she has devoted herself with conspicuous zeal and enthusiasm. She has upon frequent occasions delivered lectures and addresses in various portions of the State upon the subject of foreign missions, and in winning much help for the cause has won for herself a name that is widely known and honored. She is, moreover, deeply concerned in church work, has been president of the Sunday-School Auxiliary, and for a long time has been an industrious and earnest laborer on behalf of temperance reform.

The borough has now one public school, in which fifty-nine pupils were instructed in 1881. The school was kept during five months of that year.

The population of the borough was, in 1860, 265; in 1870, 416; and in 1880, 188.

Of the early physicians in Cassville the names are preserved of Drs. Robert Baird and William Westover, both of whom were practitioners previous to 1830. After them have been Drs. H. L. Brown, James Bunn, James Haggerty, William A. Hinchman, Isaac Guss, and A. J. Hamilton, who is at present a practitioner here.

The borough has now one hotel, two stores, one tannery, two potteries, a tin-shop, two cabinet-shops, three carriage-shops, one smithery, two shoe-shops, and one pump manufactory.

The names of the burgesses of Cassville during the first three years of its existence as a borough do not appear in the record. The following have since held that office:

BURGESSES.

1857, John S. Gehrett; 1858, G. W. Bouse; 1859, Joshua Greenland; 1861, John Moyer; 1862, E. B. Hissong; 1864, Robert Beers; 1865, Lemuel Green; 1866, E. B. Hissong; 1867, E. B. Wilson; 1868, George M. Green; 1869, A. L. Guss; 1870, Dr. I. Guss; 1872, A. W. Brown; 1873, Rev. J. Frazier; 1874, William A. Hinchman; 1875, H. M. Corbin; 1876, George M. Green; 1877, A. W. Chillcott; 1878, H. M. Corbin; 1879, A. J. Hamilton; 1880, George M. Green; 1881, H. M. Corbin; 1882, Thomas Dean.

SUPERVISORS.

1856, G. W. Speer; 1857, J. S. Gehrett; 1858, G. W. Bouse; 1859, Joshua Greenland; 1860, N. Corbin; 1861, John Moyer (C. B.), G. W. B. Sipes (Asst. B.); 1862, David Clarkson (C. B.), H. L. Brown (Asst.); 1863, E. B. Hissong, John Frank (Asst.); 1864, Robert Beers, Lemuel Green (Asst.); 1865, Lemuel Green, Joshua Greenland (Asst.); 1866, E. B. Hissong; 1867, Dr. Isaac Guss, George M. Green (Asst.); 1868, George M. Green; A. C. Greenland (Asst.); 1869, A. L. Guss; Robert Beers; 1870, I. Guss; 1871, ——; 1872, A. W. Brown; 1873, J. Frazier, John Heaton (Asst.); 1874, W. A. Hinchman, David Stever (Asst.); 1875, R. S. Giffin, S. Prough (Asst.); 1876, George M. Green, H. M. Corbin (Asst.); 1877, A. W. Chilcott, Frank Buchanan (Asst.); 1878, H. M. Corbin, W. E. DeForest (Asst.); 1879, A. J. Hamilton; 1880, G. M. Green; 1881, H. M. Corbin; 1882, Thomas Dean.

TOWN COUNCIL.

1860, J. Creawell, M. W. Heaton, J. Noble, J. O'Donell, J. S. Gehrett; 1861, James Henderson, J. P. Heaton, John S. Gehrett, A. W. Evans, Jacob Cresswell; 1862, John S. Gehrett, David Stever, John Boring, John Moyer, A. W. Evans; 1863, John D. Boring, J. S. Gehrett, James Henderson, M. W. Heaton, D. Clarkson; 1864, Austin Green, Joshua Greenland, Thomas Dean, David Clarkson, A. W. Evans; 1865, R. Beers, E. B. Hissong, George M. Green, Jr., A. W. Evans, M. W. Heaton; 1866, John D. Boring, N. Miller, D. Stever, William Snyder, E. B. Wilson; 1867, A. W. Evans, James E. Glasgow, D. Clarkson, J. P. Heaton; 1868, John Noble, A. C. Greenland, James Henderson, E. B. Hissong, J. E. Glasgow, Thomas Dean; 1869, M. W. Heaton, D. H. Miller, Adam Gehrett, W. L. Gehrett, L. W. Heaton; 1870, D. Clarkson, A. H. Wiedman, A. T. Gehrett, A. Gran, A. C. Greenland; 1871, ——; 1872, E. B. Hissong, D. H. Miller, S. Prough, A. W. Evans, A. C. Greenland; 1873, D. H. Miller, A. W. Evans, Dr. I. Guss, W. F. Gehrett, J. M. Mason; 1874, John Noble, Silas Prough, N. W. Greenland, Arthur Weston, George Pardoner; 1875, F. Buchanan, D. H. Myers, D. Stever, A. G. Gehrett; 1876, A. C. Greenland, Thomas Dean, E. B. Hissong, N. W. Greenland, D. Clarkson; 1877, H. M. Corbin, Silas Prough, E. B. Hissong, R. S. Giffin, J. W. Heaton; 1878, Austin Green, David Stever, J. S. Gehrett, J. A. D. Noble, J. M. Wilson; 1879, Daniel Hoffman, Joseph Wilson, David Stever, Frank Buchanan, J. W. Heaton; 1880, Isaac Guss, Austin Green, A. C. Greenland, D. Clarkson, A. W. Brown; 1881, Austin Green, A. W. Brown, David Stever, G. W. Buchanan, Isaac Guss, D. Hoffman.

CONSTABLES.

1853, Nicholas Miller; 1854, A. P. Fields; 1855, M. W. Heaton, N. Miller; 1856, J. M. Height; 1857, —— ——; 1858, Isaac Smith; 1859, Isaac Ashton, John Frank; 1860, I. S. Devarre; 1861, Isaac Ashton, Austin Green (high); 1862–64, Isaac Ashton; 1865, Isaac Ashton, William Snyder (high); 1866–67, Isaac Ashton; 1868, Isaac Ashton, L. M. Green (high); 1869, L. M. Green (high), I. Ashton; 1870, Isaac Ashton, T. Dean; 1871, —— ——; 1872, T. Dean; 1873, T. Dean, F. Buchanan; 1874, Thomas Dean, E. B. Hissong (high); 1875, J. H. Rindlaub, James Black (high); 1876, J. Rindlaub, G. W. Buchanan (high); 1877, J. H. Rindlaub, James Black (high); 1878, L. E. Edwards, James Black (high); 1879, L. E. Edwards; 1880, A. J. Henderson, J. C. Wilson (high); 1881, A. J. Henderson, James Black (high).

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1855, N. Miller, Isaac Smith; 1856, —— ——; 1857, —— ——; 1859, L. Green, John S. Gehrett; 1861, D. Clarkson, J. Greenland; 1862, Jacob Creswell, J. P. Heaton; 1863, A. W. Evans, John S. Gehrett, E. B. Wilson; 1864, Joshua Greenland, D. Clarkson; 1865, E. B. Hissong, R. Beers; 1866, H. J. Brown, A. G. Greenland, James Henderson; 1867, David Stever, M. W. Heaton, John Noble; 1868, —— ——; 1869, A. C. Greenland, Isaac Guss; 1870, E. B. Hissong; 1871, —— —— 1872, John Noble, A. W. Brown; 1873, A. C. Greenland, W. L. Gehrett, James Henderson; 1874, E. B. Hissong, G. M. Green; 1875, John Noble, James Henderson; 1876, W. L. Gehrett, A. C. Greenland; 1877, R. S. Giffin, Silas Prough; 1878, John Noble, H. M. Corbin, E. B. Wilson; 1879, A. W. Brown, A. C. Greenland; 1880, Samuel Croft, William Snyder; 1881, E. B. Hissong, L. Stever, Silas Prough.

CASSVILLE TANNERY.—This was built in 1830 by Lemuel Green. At first it had only six vats. In 1852 six vats were added and another building was erected, and from time to time since additions have been made till now there are twenty-two vats. All ordinary varieties of leather are manufactured here. The present proprietor is Austin Green.

POTTERIES.—In 1842, Jacob Greenland established a pottery in Cassville. He was the pioneer in the pottery business here. The ordinary grades and varieties of stoneware are manufactured here from clay that is found within a short distance of the borough. This pottery has one kiln.

Mr. Greenland died in 1867, and the business has since been conducted by his son, N. W. Greenland.

In 1853, E. B. Hissong established in Cassville a stone pottery, which he still conducts. This pottery has one kiln, and employs two hands. All the ordinary varieties of stoneware are manufactured here.

Mount Hor Lodge, No. 736, I. O. O. F., was instituted Nov. 2, 1870, with the following charter members: Andrew W. Decker, N. G.; Jonathan Evans, V. G.; Martin J. Elias, S.; James A. Cook, Asst. S.; Adam H. Weidman, T.; and Daniel Locke, William H. Wright, M. B. Hysong, Thomas Mensenberger, and S. W. Gehrett.

During seven years the lodge met in rented rooms, but in 1878 it purchased a building at a cost of six hundred dollars, and in this the meetings have since been held. The lodge not only has no debt, but has a surplus in the treasury.

The following have served as Noble Grands in this lodge: Andrew W. Decker, Jonathan Evans, Martin J. Elias, W. W. French, H. D. Taylor, E. H. Heeter, Oliver Curfman, J. W. Brown, A. C. Greenland, Michael Stever, William McClain, N. W. Greenland, M. Luther Stever, J. B. F. Green, Isaac Guss, George M. Green, A. G. Brown, D. Hamilton, John R. Hamilton.

The present officers are Michael Stever, N. G.; William A. Hamilton, V. G.; M. Luther Stever, S.; D. Hamilton, Asst. S., and J. B. F. Green, T.

Cassville Evangelical Lutheran Church, of the General Synod.—This was organized in 1804, with the following constituent members: Philip Schneer, Michael Mierly, Ludwig Keller, John Bumgartner, David Bumgartner, Jacob Bumgartner, Sabina Schneer, Anna Maria Mittern, and Sarah Schneer.

The congregation worshiped during many years in the old log school-house at Cassville, but in 1826 the Lutheran and German Reformed congregations jointly erected a log church, which was the place of worship till the erection of the present church. The corner-stone of this was laid in 1856, and it was dedicated in 1857. It is a brick house, with two hundred and fifty sittings. The present membership is forty-eight, and the value of the church property is two thousand dollars.

The pastors of this church have been Revs. Fred. Haas, 1804–14; John D. Aurand (Reformed), 1804; Ludwig Rebenauer, 1818–19; J. Fred. Osterloh, 1819–20; William Schultz, 1823–26; Nicholas Sharetts, 1826–32; Daniel Moser, 1832 (doubtful); J. G. Ellinger, 1838–41; Benjamin Lanbach, 1847 (doubtful); J. N. Burkett, 1847–49; P. M. Rightmyer, 1849–53; Cyrus Rightmyer, 1853–55; R. H. Fletcher, 1855–57; W. B. Bechtel, 1857–59; J. R Bricker, 1859–60; J. Forthman, 1860–61; J. Ebert, 1861–62; J. E. Honeycult, 1865–66; J. Frazier, 1871–

74; S. Croft, 1875–80; and the present pastor, J. W. Lingle, from 1880.

Cassville Methodist Episcopal Church.—As early as 1818 a Methodist society existed in Cassville (then commonly called Chilcotestown), and Rev. Tobias Riley was the preacher who served this little flock. Services were then held in the house of George Smith, a tailor, two of whose sons still reside in the valley. It is not possible now to recall the names of the other members of this class. They were probably not numerous.

For many years they continued to worship in private houses and in the school-house, but in 1840 the present house of worship was erected. It is a framed building, and, except a rearrangement of the seats, it has had only ordinary repairs.

The following names of clergymen who officiated on this circuit in early times are gathered from tradition and from the recollections of old residents and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They are given without reference to the order of their pastorates. Probably most of these ministered to this charge:

Revs. Joshua Gosnell, James Sansom, —— Haas, William Hank, Jacob Larkin, James Hudson, —— Sexsmith, —— Dorsey, Nathaniel Mills, Jacob Gruber, Peter McNally, John McNally, James Riley, Tobias Riley, —— Stevenson, Isaac Collins, Edward E. Allen, Jared H. Young, William Butler, Amos Smith, Robert Beers, Barton De Forest, Josiah Forest, Thomas Hildebrand, Thomas F. Dyerly, Richard Hinkle, Joseph Spangler, Zane Bland, —— McMullen, John Moorehead, John Hoover, David Trout.

Since 1855 the following have been in charge in the order named: Revs. George Berkstresser, G. W. Bouse, G. T. Gray, Hugh Lynn, James A. Coleman, J. F. Brown, J. D. Moore, Cambridge Graham, Thomas Greenly, R. E. Kelly, D. B. McCloskey, John Guss, J. W. Leckey, J. McKendless, S. A. Creveling, A. W. Decker, G. W. Dunlap, T. F. McClure, E. Shoemaker, and the present pastor, William Memminger.

One of the most prominent members of this church, and for many years recording secretary of the Cassville Circuit, is the Hon. David Clarkson. The first American progenitor of the Clarkson family was John Clarkson, an English gentleman of landed estates, who exchanged his home in England for one in America during the Revolutionary war, and settled in Philadelphia, in which town he rose to be a man of some prominence, and with the laying out of a portion of which he had much to do. His wife was a sister of Benjamin West, the great painter. They had two sons and one daughter, and ended their days in Philadelphia. Samuel Clarkson, one of the sons, was born in Philadelphia in 1787, and was early bred to the trade of carpentering. He married Susan, daughter of Michael Bowman, of Montgomery County, and in 1816 followed his father-in-law to Cass township, Huntingdon Co., where both located upon farms. Samuel pursued his trade until his death in 1830. His widow died Dec. 4, 1874, aged eighty-four. They had seven children, of whom they raised four. Those living are Hon. David Clarkson and Mrs. John Mierly, of Cass township. David Clarkson was born in West

D. Clarkson

Philadelphia Dec. 15, 1814. He was but two years of age when his father came to Huntingdon County. At the age of nineteen he was sent to William P. Dean, of Cass township, to learn the carpenter's trade, and with him remained nearly three years. He then went to Huntingdon and worked with William Hildebrand at cabinet-making and undertaking. Nov. 10, 1836, he married Eleanor, daughter of Caleb Corbin, of Cass township. He then began business on his own account in Cass township as carpenter, and in 1840 purchasing the property he now occupies in Cassville, removed his home and business to the village. From 1840 to 1854 he followed the business of cabinet-making and carpentering at Cassville, and in the latter year made undertaking his sole occupation. For a period of forty-three years, or from 1840 to the present, Judge Clarkson has been an undertaker, and in many Huntingdon County families has buried representatives of two generations, while in the aggregate he has buried as many, if not more persons than any man in the county. In 1842 he procured his first hearse, which, it is claimed, was the first hearse used in the county.

In 1840 he was elected school director, and for eighteen years was secretary of the board. He is now secretary of the borough school board. In 1850 he was elected justice of the peace, and for three consecutive terms was re-elected. While serving in his fourth term was, in the fall of 1866, elected as one of the associate judges of Huntingdon County. In 1871 he was re-elected to that office, serving all told a period of ten years, and retiring from the bench to private life after honorable and esteemed public service. In 1878 he was again chosen justice of the peace, and is still in that office. He was director of the poor from 1858 to 1861. His wife died Sept. 2, 1854, aged thirty-five. Their children were J. Calvin (the well-known "Jason" of Huntingdon County journalism), Samantha A. (Mrs. W. E. Crane, of Altoona), Benjamin F. (a Methodist Episcopal minister, now of Baltimore), William Monroe (enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and killed in the battle of Fredericksburg), Sarah Bell (of Illinois), Susan Ida (Mrs. R. M. Lewis, of Altoona), and Mary Ellen (a school-teacher at Altoona). April 21, 1856, Judge Clarkson married for his second wife Miss Kate Walsh, a native of Rochester, N. Y., from whence she had come to Cassville to be the preceptress of the Cassville Seminary. Their children have been Emrette F., James A. C., Lorena B. (deceased), Cora L. (deceased), and Anna L. Judge Clarkson was one of the projectors and founders of the Cassville Seminary, and was trustee and treasurer until the property passed into the hands of Mr. Guss. He was reared in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and for thirty-six years or more has been recording steward of the Cassville Circuit.

Cassville Methodist Protestant Church.—This church was organized in 1833, a year after the organization of the Trough Creek (now Cassville) charge. Among its constituent members were Robert Speer, Henry Lovell, and others of sterling worth who have passed away. The pastors of this church since its organization have been,— 1833, Hugh Doyle, Jesse Wright, M.D.; 1834, Jesse Wright, M.D., J. W. Rutledge; 1835, James Crouse; 1837, J. W. Rutledge; 1838, Timothy Remick; 1839, A. S. Eversole; 1840, Daniel Collier; 1841, John S. Christine; 1842, Timothy Remick, R. S. Norris; 1843, William Fisher, Nicholas Lemon; 1844, R. S. Norris, T. K. Helmbolt; 1845, R. S. Norris, J. D. Brook; 1846, J. K. Helmbolt, W. D. Hamilton; 1847, J. M. Elderdise; 1849, R. T. Boyed; 1850, J. M. Dennis; 1851, J. Clay; 1852, Theopolis Burton; 1853, J. F. Whiteside; 1855, W. G. Holmes; 1857, T. C. Ewell; 1858, J. M. Elderdise; 1860, J. D. Ewell; 1861, J. Clay; 1862, G. W. Simpson; 1864, J. Clay; 1865, A. Hutton; 1867, J. M. Mason; 1873, D. H. Myers; 1876, J. R. Kahle; 1877, H. Sinerter; 1879, C. P. Jorden; 1879, W. H. Gladen; 1880, D. F. Williams; 1881, J. M. Mason.

Dr. Jesse Wright, son of John Wright, was born on the "Wright farm," in Union township, and married, July 10, 1810, Ruth, daughter of Richard Chilcott. After a residence of some years on the homestead farm he moved to Cassville, where he devoted his time to the practice of medicine up to the time of his death, which occurred May 19, 1852, in his sixty-third year. His wife died Nov. 28, 1879, in her ninety-first year. They had nine children. Three died in youth, and of the others, Betsey married Joshua Greenland and died in the borough of Huntingdon, July 23, 1880; Jemima married Rev. James Crouse. Both are now dead. Louisa married James Henderson, and died in Cassville; Selina married Rev. R. Scott Norris, and now lives in Baltimore; Mary married Rev. J. F. Whiteside, now deceased; Sarah Ann married George Heaton, now deceased. The two last-named daughters reside at Cassville.

Cassville Cemetery.—Inscriptions from tombstones taken Sept. 10, 1877:

Baumgartner, Jacob, died July 7, 1857, aged 79 years, 11 months, 3 days.
Curfman, Jacob, died April 11, 1860, aged 83 years, 5 months, 20 days.
Curfman, Elizabeth, born Nov. 23, 1778, died April 2, 1850. (She was daughter of Philip Snare, and wife of the above.)
Curfman, Conrad, died June 30, 1870, aged 86 years, 27 days.
Dell, Henry, died Feb. 17, 1860, aged 83 years, 8 months.
Fink, Elizabeth, died Feb. 14, 1863, aged 66 years, 2 months, 12 days.
Fread, Henry, died Nov. 3, 1867, aged 88 years, 23 days.
Fread, Mary M., died March 13, 1867, aged 85 years, 7 months, 7 days.
Gosnell, John R., died Nov. 21, 1861, aged 73 years.
Gibboney, Mary, died Oct. 14, 1864, aged 77 years, 3 months, 3 days.
Gehrett, John, died May 10, 1866, aged 85 years, 3 months, 8 days.
Green, Lemuel, died Oct. 28, 1862, aged 70 years, 5 months, 4 days.
Greenland, Jacob, died Feb. 12, 1867, aged 62 years, 5 months, 6 days.
Johnston, Hugh, died Dec. 11, 1857, aged 89 years.
Johnston, Sarah, died Feb. 8, 1853, aged 75 years.
Myerly, Michael, died July 2, 1857, aged 93 years, 6 months, 21 days.
Miller, Jacob, died July 19, 1867, aged 95 years, 1 month, 9 days.
Park, John, died Dec. 10, 1851, aged 78 years, 1 month, 5 days, father of Joseph.
Stever, George, died Oct. 9, 1827, aged 61 years, 24 days.
Stever, Catharine, died Jan. 16, 1844, aged 75 years, 11 months, 6 days.
Stever, Catharine, died Aug. 29, 1874, aged 69 years, 5 days.
Stever, John, died June 17, 1854, aged 50 years, 9 months, 20 days.
Stever, David, died Oct. 25, 1872, aged 64 years, 3 months, 21 days.
Stever, Lewis, died May 12, 1873, aged 54 years, 7 months, 25 days.
Stever, Philip, died Aug. 26, 1827, aged 34 years, 4 months.
Steel, John, died Jan. 8, 1869, aged 66 years.
Speer, Agnes, died Oct. 24, 1851, aged 49 years, 4 days.
Wright, Rev. Jesse, died May 19, 1852, aged 62 years, 6 months, 17 days.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

CLAY TOWNSHIP.

Geographical, Descriptive, and Natural Features.—Clay is one of the south border townships of this county, formed from Springfield township, April 15, 1845, and named in honor of the late Henry Clay, of Kentucky. It is bounded on the northeast by Cass and Cromwell townships, on the southeast by Springfield, on the southwest by Fulton County, and on the northwest by Carbon and Tod townships. In form it is nearly an oblong square, lying northeast and southwest. Its entire length is two thousand five hundred perches, with an average width of fourteen hundred perches. The face of the township is quite uneven, there being but very little of what would be termed level land within its boundaries.

Sideling Hill Mountain runs along the entire length of the northwest line of the township, and Clear

Ridge runs from Hubbelsville school-house, in the south end of the township, in a northeasterly direction across the line into Cass township. Jack's Mountain terminates between Three Springs borough and Saltillo, while Cave Hill is immediately south of Three Springs, and a series of ridges or mountains form the southeast boundary along the Springfield line. Between these mountains and ridges are narrow valleys, through which are laid the several public highways of the township. The principal stream in the south part of the township is the Sideling Hill Creek, which flows through Sideling Hill Gap at New Grenada in a northeasterly direction to near W. Corbin's residence, where it turns to the southeast, passing into Fulton County. Its principal tributary in this township is the Shore Creek, rising near S. Rupert's, in the Sideling Hill Valley, flowing southerly into Sideling Hill Creek. Lick Branch and North Branch are the head-waters of Mountain Branch, flowing easterly through the north part of the township, and Three Springs Creek, rising in the central portion of the township, flows northeasterly and receives the Mountain Branch at Three Springs borough.

There are several mineral springs in the township, and through the central portion of the township are several outcrops and indications of hematite and fossil ores.

The East Broad Top Railroad runs across the northeast end of the township, following the valleys of Mountain and Lick Branches as they wind around the base of mountains and ridges, passing through Three Springs and Saltillo boroughs and Clear Ridge Gap, in the extreme north part of the township, and out through a tunnel under Sideling Hill Mountain near P. Hoffman's.

Early Settlers and Pioneer Beginnings.—Among the pioneers of what is now Clay township we find Col. George Ashman, who came here about 1779, and purchased the land called "The Three Springs Tract," containing over eighteen hundred acres, still known as the Three Springs farm. He built a house thereon, which became his future residence, and is still standing. He brought with him his "human chattels," as at that early day slavery had not been abolished in the Keystone State. The plantation was subsequently divided into eight or nine farms, but the original homestead is still in possession of his heirs, of whom Richard Ashman, of Three Springs borough, is principal.

Benjamin Long settled at the same time on what was then known as an "improvement right." His tract was located southwest from what is now Three Springs borough.

Henry Hubbell was also one of the pioneers of this territory, locating here as early as 1794, taking up a tract of land in the north part of the township, on which a portion of the borough of Saltillo is situated. He also brought with him his slaves, and it is but recently that the last of them died.

George Hudson "warranted" a tract of land instead of by improvement. Rev. Samuel Lane, a Baptist preacher, Thomas Green, Richard Bradley, Daniel Stain, Thomas Hooper, John Kyler, Miles Bunn, William Bunn, George Stain, William Hudson, Tobias Moore, John Hudson, and Daniel Heck were all here previous to 1800. Mr. David Heck, now a resident of Three Springs borough, and son of Daniel Heck, remembers all of these persons as being middle-aged and old men when he was a boy. He was born in this township, Sept. 14, 1802. His father came from Maryland.

The pioneer grist-mill of this township was built before 1785 by George Ashman, nearly half a mile up Mountain Branch from what is now Three Springs borough, and in 1827 was taken down and rebuilt where it now stands, a few rods west from the railroad depot, and now owned by Richard Ashman. Ashman also built a saw-mill above where the grist-mill now stands in 1825 or 1826, which went to decay, and a second saw-mill was built by George Ashman, Jr., and is now nearly abandoned. A saw-mill was built in 1825 or 1830 half a mile below the borough, on Mountain Branch, by William Hudson, which went to decay many years ago, and the present mill was built by George D. Hudson, present owner.

CONSTABLES.

1846–49, Jacob Gehrett; 1850, Jacob S. Myers; 1851, Samuel Moreland; 1852, Daniel Kurfman; 1853, Samuel Kough; 1854, Hezekiah Stuller; 1855, Abraham Wagoner; 1856, D. Heck; 1857–58, J. Park; 1859, David Swoope; 1860–61, George H. Stephens; 1862, George J. Wagoner; 1863, J. M. Marlin; 1864, James S. Chilcote; 1865, A. S. Stephens; 1866, George W. Corbin; 1867, Charles Corbin; 1868, Elias B. Swoope; 1869, E. S. Swoope; 1870–73, Charles Corbin; 1874–77, G. J. Wagoner; 1878–79, Daniel Swartz; 1880, George W. Corbin; 1881, Henry F. Bolinger.

SUPERVISORS.

1846, John W. Walt, George Long; 1847, David Heck, Robert McNeal; 1848, John Baker, John Banks; 1849, John Kyler, Charles Carson; 1850, George Kriger, Abraham Wagoner; 1851, Adam Heeter, Adam Black; 1852, Adam Heeter, John Rupert; 1853, John Rupert, John B. Logan; 1854, Adam Heeter, Joshua Shore; 1855, K. L. Greene, Abraham Wagoner; 1856, Abraham Wagoner, K. L. Greene; 1857, G. W. Cohel, A. Shore; 1858, M. Detwiler, S. Bowser; 1859, S. Bowser, Charles Rhineheart; 1860, Adam Heeter, A. Wagoner; 1861, A. Wagoner, William Keith; 1862, Samuel Grissinger, George D. Hudson; 1863, Samuel Kough, Samuel Grissinger; 1864, Samuel Kough, Samuel Shue; 1865, G. D. Hudson, D. F. Stevens; 1866, D. F. Stevens, G. D. Hudson; 1867, Samuel McVitty, David F. Stever; 1868, Robert Hampson, Jeremiah Nead; 1869, Eli E. Shore, Charles Corbin; 1870, Andy Wagoner, Eph. Kyler; 1872, Martin Grissinger, G. Nonemaker; 1873, Daniel Price, William McClain; 1874, A. Wagoner, William Thompson; 1875, John Drake, A. Wagoner; 1876, B. W. Hudson, P. Hoffman; 1877, G. J. Wagoner, Philip Rink; 1878, E. L. Roher, W. Shope; 1879, Alexander McNeal, William Bradley, A. Wagoner, W. C. Hudson; 1880, Ben. K. Miller, William Bradley, Fred. Nale, Abrm. Wagoner; 1881, Philip Spahn, Eph. Kyler, John B. Houck, Frederick Nale.

OVERSEERS.

1846, Moses Greenland, John Ashman; 1847, William Cunningham, Charles Carson; 1848, Elijah R. Green, A. McNeal; 1849, Samuel Moreland, R. Ashman; 1850, George Hudson, James Steves; 1851, —— ——; 1852, Henry Matthias, Christian Wagoner; 1853, —— ——; 1854, —— ——; 1855, George Hudson, David Stevens; 1856, E. Kyler, A. Wagoner.

Boroughs and Hamlets.—THREE SPRINGS BOROUGH.—The town was laid out April 5, 1843, and named Scottsville in honor of Gen. Winfield Scott, and a post-office of that name established. There being another office of the same name in this State and of a prior date caused many letters to be miscarried and finally lost, consequently a new name had to be adopted for this office, and the name of Three Springs was reported to the Post-office Department at Washington, and the name changed. The office, however, has never been kept much nearer the springs from which it was named than at present, and when the town became incorporated, Nov. 10, 1869, the inhabitants adopted the name of the post-office for that of their borough.

Pioneer Beginnings.—The pioneer merchant of this town was Richard Ashman, who commenced the mercantile business at this place May 7, 1847, in the old Ashman store, corner of Ashman and Freedom Streets. Mr. Ashman, together with Thomas E. Orbison, continued the business at this place for thirty-one years, Mr. Orbison for only a portion of the time. The old Ashman store is now occupied by William J. Hampson, who is also postmaster.

The second merchant at Three Springs was William White, who kept store in the old Hudson house, and was succeeded by Dennis O'Connor, and O'Connor by James E. Glasgow, in what is known as the Covert store. Glasgow's successors were John Long & Co., and then came Thomas H. Adams in 1862, who remained three years, and in 1865 the firm became Covert & Stevens, and then Covert & Heck, Covert & Rank, and N. E. Covert alone in 1882. A. S. Stevens was in business alone for a few years after the dissolution of the firm of Covert & Stevens, and is now (1882) in the hardware trade on Hudson Street, opposite the Bowser House.

The pioneer cabinet-maker at this place was John M. Wallace, who established the business here in 1844 and remained till 1850, when he was succeeded by D. G. Doyle from 1852 and 1855, when he gave place to P. H. Bence, who is the only cabinet-maker and dealer at Three Springs.

The pioneer hotel at this place was built in 1849–50 by George D. Hudson. It is the stone mansion standing at the southeast end of the town, and was kept as a hotel till 1876 or 1877, when the Bowser House, kept by Samuel Bowser, corner of Hudson and Freedom Streets, was built, and the Hudson House abandoned as a hotel.

The pioneer blacksmith at Three Springs was Isaac Gorsuch. His shop stood on the site now occupied by Covert's store, corner of Mill and Ashman Streets. His successors have been Swope & Still, DeVore, George Sinnett, and Anderson Hockenbury, the present blacksmith.

The pioneer school-house at this place was built in 1838 on the site now occupied by Union Hall. This hall was built in 1863 for a town hall and school-house combined. The lower room is now used for school purposes, and the upper room for what it was intended.

The first school, however, in this vicinity was taught in the old Hudson House kitchen, a short distance east of the borough. Some of the pioneer teachers were John Starr, Samuel Kittson, and Christian Moore.

The first resident physician of this town was Dr. Robert Baird, who came here in 1853, and remained two years. He was succeeded by his son, Barton F. Baird, who died in 1863. Robert Baird, M.D., died in 1880, aged eighty years. The successors of B. F. Baird at this place have been —— Myers, J. F. Thompson, —— Greene (who was killed), —— James, —— Madden, —— Stever, and Dr. Oellig, the present physician, who located here in the early spring of 1882.

The population of the borough in 1880 was two hundred and thirty-nine.

Civil Organization.—As has been stated, the borough of Three Springs was chartered Nov. 10, 1869. We herewith give a list of a portion of the borough officers from that time to the present, as gleaned from the borough records:

CHIEF BURGESSES.

William J. Hampson, 1869–70; P. H. Bence, 1872; N. K. Covert, 1873, B. T. Stevens, 1874, 1878; D. G. Doyle, 1875; Richard Ashman, 1876–77, 1879–82.

TOWN COUNCIL.

1869, George D. Hudson, Robert Hampson, H. H. Herter, W. L. Stevens, D. M. Heck; 1870, G. D. Hudson, Elijah G. Heck, Elias S. Swoope, J. S. De Vore, Robert Hampson; 1872, G. D. Hudson, E. G. Heck, E. S. Swoope, J. S. De Vore, D. M. Heck; 1873, D. M. Heck, D. B. Heck, D. G. Doyle, P. H. Bence, R. Hampson, E. A. Hudson; 1874, R. Hampson, assistant burgess; D. G. Doyle, J. B. Swoope, J. S. De Vore, A. S. Stevens, H. T. Stains; 1875, N. K. Covert, J. S. De Vore, A. S. Stevens, H. C. Waite, R. Hampson; 1876, D. G. Doyle, H. T. Stains, R. M. McNeal, J. F. Thompson, Samuel Bowser, Jacob B. Swoope; 1877, D. G. Doyle, W. J. Hampson, E. A. Hudson, R. M. McNeal, A. Hockenberry, John H. Long; 1878, David Mansberger, D. G. Doyle, H. C. Waite, A. Hockenberry, D. M. Heck, P. H. Bence; 1879, N. K. Covert, W. J. Hampson, A. S. Stevens, E. G. Heck, E. A. Hudson, A. Hockenberry; 1880, E. A. Hudson, B. T. Stevens, A. Hockenberry, Robert Hampson, H. C. Waite; 1881, W. J. Hampson, John McNeal, E. A. Hudson, R. Hampson, A. Hockenberry; 1882, R. Hampson, E. A. Hudson, Samuel Bowser, D. M. De Vore, George Heeter, H. C. Waite.

SECRETARY OF COUNCIL.

1870, Elijah G. Heck; 1872, B. T. Stevens; 1878, H. T. Stains; 1879, M. F. Hudson; 1873–77, 1879–82, P. H. Bence.

CONSTABLES.

1870, B. F. Stevens; 1871, —— ——; 1872, E. Swoope; 1873, C. S. Swoope; 1874, B. F. Stevens; 1875–76, H. F. Stains; 1877–78, D. G. Doyle; 1879–81, B. F. Stevens.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1870, P. H. Bence, J. B. Swoope; 1871, —— ——; 1872, B. Hampson, J. Norris; 1873, N. K. Covert, B. F. Stevens; 1874, H. F. Stains, E. A. Hudson; 1875, W. J. Hampson, P. H. Bence, D. M. Heck; 1876, B. T. Stevens, E. G. Heck; 1877, J. S. De Vore, N. K. Covert, R. Ashman; 1878, B. F. Stevens, A. Hockenbury; 1879, R. Ashman, E. G. Heck; 1880, N. K. Covert, J. S. De Vore; 1881, A. Hockenberry, E. A. Hudson.

Local Paper was established at this place by P. H. Bence, in 1877. It is a four-column quarto, issued on the 15th of each month. The first number was issued in September, 1877.

Mineral Spring.—There is in the borough of Three Springs a very nice spring of water, the curative properties of which are said to be quite efficacious in some of the diseases to which the human flesh is heir.

This spring was accidentally discovered in 1820 by David Heck, when at work for Mr. Hudson. Being somewhat thirsty he started for the creek, and in passing the mound that was then around the spring, he saw water issuing from the top and drank of that instead of going to the creek, and found it strongly tinctured with minerals of some kind. The mound has been removed, an excavation made, and walled up on either side, and the clear, health-giving waters are running free for all who desire to test their healing virtues.

The East Broad Top Railroad was opened to this place in 1874, and the first train of cars ran to Three Springs on July 1st of that year.

The business of the borough in 1882 was conducted by A. Hockenberry, blacksmith; D. B. Heck, wheelwright; D. M. Heck, Darius G. Doyle, Joseph Stevens, contractors and carpenters; Barto & Rambaugh, steam saw-mill, built in 1880; Richard Ashman, grist-mill and lime-kiln; A. S. Stevens, tailor; Samuel Willetts, undertaker; R. Hampson and James Hill, shoemakers; W. J. Hampson and S. A. Covert, general merchants; Stevens Hardware Company; D. G. Doyle and D. G. Heck, confectioners; Mrs. P. Swoope and Nettie Stevens, millinery; J. C. Stever and J. B. Oellig, physicians; P. C. Bence, furniture-store. There are also at this place Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, and United Brethren in Christ Churches, and hotel by Samuel Bowser. Railroad station of East Broad Top Railroad, with R. M. McNeal station agent.

Three Springs Lodge, No. 790, I. O. of O. F.—This lodge was instituted Feb. 20, 1882, at Three Springs borough, Pa., with the following-named charter members, viz.: James F. Thompson, N. K. Covert, J. S. De Vore, P. H. Bence, Robert Hampson, H. H. Heeter, W. J. Hampson, W. H. Marlin, Calvin Greene, Steele Barcus, Luden Greenland, William Keister, Hend Rutter, J. F. Ramsey, Abram Lamberson, William Swayers, Calvin Hooper, Rev. G. W. Bouse, W. W. Knowles, and Levi Anderson.

The first officers of the lodge were as follows: J. F. Thompson, N. G.; Joshua Brown, V. G.; W. G. Hampson, Sec.; P. H. Bence, Asst. Sec.; J. S. De Vore, Treas.; H. Rutter, R. S.; L. Greenland, L. S.; J. F. Ramsey, W.; C. Greene, C.; A. Lamberson, R. S. S.; H. H. Heeter, L. S. S.; W. W. Knowles, O. G.; W. H. Marlin, I. G.; R. Hampson, R. S. to V. G.; W. Keister, L. S. to V. G.; N. K. Covert, Rep. to G. L.

The regular meetings of this lodge are held in Three Springs borough, on Saturday evening of each week. Present membership, twenty-one.

The present officers of the lodge (June, 1882) are Philip Fisher, N. G.; E. A. Hudson, V. G.; N. K. Covert, Sec.; L. Anderson, Asst. Sec.; M. Chilcote, Treas.; E. A. Hudson, Rep. to G. L.

Three Springs Methodist Episcopal Church.[1]—The first chapel, built of hewn logs, was erected in 1790, and stood in the graveyard above the town, on part of a large tract of land which had been warranted by Benjamin Long, the warrant bearing date Nov. 9, 1784.

The pulpit of the church was very likely supplied by the preachers who traveled the Huntingdon Circuit at that time, as this was undoubtedly a part or included in the Huntingdon work.

We find in the history of the church, "In 1788 Samuel Breeze and Daniel Combs were appointed to Huntingdon Circuit, with Nelson Reed as elder."

I have learned that the following preachers traveled and preached in these parts: Dating back to 1797, we have the names of Seeley, Bunn, and John Philips as preachers, and J. Everett as presiding elder. In 1802 the preachers were Isaac Robins and Joseph Stone, with W. Lee as presiding elder. Some time between 1803 and 1814 this appointment appears to have been given to Lewistown Circuit. Jacob Gruber and James Reily are said to have preached here as early as 1818 and 1820. In 1824, John A. Gere traveled Aughwick Circuit and preached at this place. In 1828, Josiah Forrest was on Bedford Circuit and preached here occasionally.

Benjamin Long, the owner of the land upon which the old church stood, conveyed it to William Hudson by deed dated Sept. 9, 1806, and Hudson, by deed dated July 24, 1822, for and in consideration of fifty cents paid by each, conveyed the same to Thomas Long, Micajah Chilcoate, Thomas Hooper, Joshua Hooper, and Benjamin Chilcoate, trustees, and their successors, in trust, for the use of the ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church forever. In the deed of conveyance the trustees were empowered and required to do certain repairs and make improvements to the seating arrangement of the house.

After the title to the land had been perfected, the trustees then proceeded to repair the building as required by the deed.

There is nothing on record to show that there was a regular organized class prior to 1822, or until Micajah Chilcoate was made leader. The leaders since Chilcoate have been William Cornelius, who was succeeded in 1842 by John Hampson, an Irishman, who came from Ireland with his family and settled in this place in 1836. Hampson was class-leader until his death, which occurred Dec. 25, 1849. In 1850, Ephraim Shore was appointed class-leader, and was succeeded by John F. Meminger in 1855, who is the present leader.

During the year 1841 the old meeting-house was vacated on account of its dilapidated condition, and preaching and class-meetings were held in a school-house which had been recently erected within a short distance of the church. During the same year the first Sunday-school in these parts was organized in this school-house, with John Hampson as superintendent, and Jacob Gruber preacher in charge.

[1] By P. H. Bence.

In 1845 a new meeting-house was built and dedicated by John Miller, presiding elder, and Joseph G. McKeehan, then the preacher on Shirleysburg Circuit, with W. Grim as colleague. From that time till 1869, when the Scottsville Circuit was formed, the pulpit was supplied by preachers on the Shirleysburg Circuit. A town having been laid out and named Scottsville, the circuit was named after the town. Elisha Shoemaker was the preacher until 1871, when he was succeeded by G. W. Bouse. The town of Scottsville having been incorporated into a borough, and the name changed to Three Springs, necessitated the changing the name of the circuit to Three Springs. G. W. Bouse was succeeded in 1874 by Elisha Shoemaker, who remained three years, during which time the present (third) church or meeting-house was built at a cost of three thousand eight hundred dollars, and dedicated Jan. 26, 1876. The ministers participating in the dedicatory services were Rev. M. K. Foster, presiding elder, and Revs. J. S. McMurray, A. R. Miller, and the pastor, Elisha Shoemaker. The following-named trustees presented the church for dedication: Adam Heeter, R. M. McNeal, P. H. Bence, N. K. Covert, and B. T. Stevens. The steward at that time, and for several years previous, was Adam Heeter. Rev. Elisha Shoemaker was succeeded in 1877 by George W. Dunlap. In 1879, J. W. Olewine became pastor, and remained until 1881, when J. W. Bell was appointed to this charge, and was succeeded in 1882 by Rev. Levi S. Crone.

The class at this time (July, 1882) numbers fifty-five members.

The officers of the church for 1882 were Levi S. Crone, preacher in charge; John F. Meminger, class-leader; Benedict Stevens, local preacher; Daniel M. Heck, exhorter; P. H. Bence, Sunday-school superintendent; B. T. Stevens, steward; Adam Heeter, P. H. Bence, N. H. Covert, and B. T. Stevens, trustees.

First Baptist Church of Scottsville.—This organization is an outgrowth from the Baptist Church at Shirleysburg, and their meeting-house is a frame building, erected in 1850, and dedicated in 1853 by Elder D. M. Hunter. The meeting-house is located in the borough of Three Springs, and cost, for lot and building, nine hundred dollars.

The following-named persons comprise the constituent members: Kenzie L. Greene, Diana Greene, Samuel McVitty, Hester McVitty, Emeline McVitty, Conrad Hoffman, Jemima Hoffman, B. D. F. Baird, M.D., George D. Hudson, Ruth L. Hudson, William C. Hudson, Joseph Cornelius, Eliza Cornelius, Benjamin Cornelius, John Baird, John M. Wallace, Rebecca Wallace, Diana Doyle, Ruhannah C. Heeter, William P. Taylor, Elizabeth Taylor, Hettie Hudson, James Marlin, Delilah Kyler, Catharine Skipper, Thomas Williams, Robert G. McNeal, Margaret McNeal, Sarah Chilcote, Robert C. Sipes, Rebecca Saxe, Rachel Saxe, Mrs. Thompson, and Rachel Heeter.

The above-named persons were constituted and recognized as a separate Baptist Church by the following council held in the Baptist meeting-house at Three Springs, or Scottsville, Pa., Nov. 3, 1859: Moderator, Elder George W. Young, of Logan's Valley Church; Clerk, John C. Watson, of Mill Creek Church; Delegates, Elders A. B. Still, a missionary, W. Kidder, J. L. Holmes, Laymen Robert McDivitt, David Hare, John Larimore, Michael Boland, William B. Leas, William Drake, David Leas, and John Lotts.

The following preachers have served this church and people since the organization of the church at this place: Elders David Williams, J. L. Holmes, Anderson J. Kelley, W. Kidder, supply De Von Krevling, supply Simon Bolivar Boyer, John W. Evans, and D. J. R. Strayer, the present pastor.

Since the building of the meeting-house, it has been repaired, enlarged, and improved by the addition of new furniture, organ, and bell, and is now (1882) valued at three thousand six hundred dollars.

Present membership, eighty.

The Sunday-school connected with this church was organized in 1850. The present superintendent is Samuel Heeter, with six officers and teachers, and an average attendance of thirty-two scholars.

United Brethren in Christ.—Just when this church or society was organized we were unable to ascertain; the church edifice, located on the northwest side of Church Street, in Three Springs borough, is a frame building, erected in 1852, and dedicated in December of the same year. Rev. J. W. Bonewell was the first pastor.

Among the pioneer members of this organization we find the names of James Devor, Rebecca Devor, David Swoope, Mary Swoope, Jacob Swoope, Mary Bollinger, Elizabeth Swoope, Charles Stevens and wife, Joseph Creamer and wife, and Mary Marlin.

The preachers for this people have been, since Mr. Bonewell, Rev. R. G. Rankin, Jeptha Potts, —— Talhelm, G. W. Scott, —— Pringle, —— James, and L. M. Gates, present pastor.

Present membership, fifteen. Value of church property, one thousand dollars, including parsonage.

The trustees are Abraham Wagoner and Samuel Willetts. The Sunday-school connected with this church numbers twenty-five, with Samuel Willetts superintendent.

SALTILLO BOROUGH.

Early Settlers and Pioneer Beginnings.—The pioneer settler of this immediate locality was Henry Hubbell, who located here in 1796, and in the same year he, together with Thomas Greer,[1] an adjoining owner, laid out the town of Springville, now Saltillo. Mr. Hubbell was one of those wide-awake, energetic men who saw nothing but sunshine in the future. He had on his town plat a large lot set apart for a court-house and county buildings, another for a market-house, also a survey and plan for supplying Springville with water of different kinds from the various mineral springs in and around the borough. He succeeded in selling quite a number of lots to residents of Philadelphia, and had there been any way of access to this then wilderness spot besides the old system of pack-horse transportation, there is no doubt, with all the natural advantages of the immediate surroundings and Mr. Hubbell's energy, Springville to-day would have been a thriving city of thousands of inhabitants, instead of the small borough of Saltillo, with a hundred or two of souls.

The plan of Springville was recorded at Huntingdon in Book E, page 368, etc., Aug. 20, 1796, by Andrew Henderson, recorder.

Mr. Hubbell's residence, long since gone to decay, stood on the site now occupied by Mr. McCarthy's residence. In 1797 he built a grist- and saw-mill on the site occupied by the present mill. The Hudson heirs rebuilt the grist-mill in 1850, and the saw-mill was rebuilt in the spring of 1882. The saw-mill near Leas & McVitty's tannery was built in 1857 by P. E. Weaver, who now owns both saw-mills and the grist-mill.

Samuel McVitty was born in Shirleysburg, Huntingdon Co., Nov. 4, 1815. His father, Thomas McVitty, who was a tanner, established a tannery at Shirleysburg in 1812, and continued the business there till his death, which occurred about 1825. From this time till 1834 the tannery was rented, and Samuel worked at the business at different places to acquire a knowledge of the trade. In 1834 he rented the tannery and commenced business on his own account. He afterwards purchased the property, which he sold in 1847, and engaged in farming till 1855, when he sold his farm property and established a partnership with William B. Leas, and rented a tannery in Black Log Valley. This they conducted during four years, when they erected the tannery at Saltillo and commenced business there. They afterwards enlarged their works, and their sons, D. P. Leas and T. E. McVitty, became partners, the firm taking the name of Leas, McVitty & Sons. Mr. McVitty superintended the business at the tannery till 1879, when he retired from active labor, and his son-in-law, Calvin Greene, became superintendent. Since that time he has led a more leisurely life, and has traveled in various portions of the United States and Canada.

He was married in January, 1838, to Esther McKinstry, of Shirley township, and they have had five children,—Mary Ellen, who died in infancy; Emeline, now Mrs. Richard W. Hudson; John, deceased; Thomas Edward, and Amanda J., now Mrs. Calvin Greene. Mr. McVitty has been twice chosen justice of the peace.

The property at Saltillo consists of between three and four thousand acres of land, and the tannery covers an area of twelve thousand one hundred and sixty-two square feet. The machinery is driven by a thirty horse-power engine, nine tons of oak bark are used daily, and the annual capacity of the tannery is five thousand six hundred pounds of sole leather.

The pioneer store at Saltillo was opened for the accommodation of the public in 1860, by J. & J. C. Brewster, in what is now Henry Hudson's shop, on the upper side of Main Street. They remained in business here till the spring of 1862, when they were succeeded by Thomas L. Uttley. He was succeeded by T. R. Henderson, and since Henderson left the building has been occupied by Mr. Hudson as a picture-frame manufactory and clock and watch repairing shop. Two new stores were then built at the foot of Main Street by J. Brewster and Benjamin Shope. Brewster and Shope have been succeeded in their stores by David F. Shope and R. W. Hudson, the present merchants.

The pioneer hardware-store in this place was built and stocked in the spring of 1882, by John W. Senft, the present proprietor.

The pioneer tin- and stove-store was that of F. H. Senft, on Main Street, who came here in 1875. The blacksmiths have been John W. Marshall, George V. Senft, and Mr. Hildabrandt, the present blacksmith. Mr. Fleming, the pioneer wheelwright, located here, on lower Main Street, in the spring of 1882. The pioneer hotel in this town was built in 1882, by Samuel McClain, and now kept by Miles Brown.

In 1797, Rev. Samuel Lane built what was known as a tub-mill, for grinding grain. It stood in the bend of the creek, between the railroad and Saltillo, on property now owned by Henry Hudson.

Civil Organization.—When the projected city of Springville was finally abandoned, which was no doubt a source of annoyance to the philanthropic projector, and the Philadelphians surrendered all claim to lots purchased, the site of the embryo city returned to its native forest, and for many years was the habitation of wild beasts. As time sped its way on the march of civilization and industry enlarged their borders, and the site of Springville was again the centre of business for a certain scope of country. A few descendants of Mr. Hubbell remained in the vicinity, and more pioneers came in, and again the prospect brightened, and in 1873 the present town of Saltillo was laid out by Henry Hudson, and a borough charter was obtained from the court November 10th, and recorded Dec. 1, 1875. We herewith give a list of burgesses and Town Council from the organization to the present time:

[1] For an account of the Greer family, see Cass township.

S. Merritt

BURGESSES.

1876–78, Samuel McVitty; 1880, R. W. Hudson; 1879–81, D. Shope; 1882, Henry Hudson.

TOWN COUNCIL.

1876, Henry Hudson, Benjamin Shope, William Crum, T. R. Henderson, George Fulton; 1877, Henry Hudson, B. Shope, T. R. Henderson, William Crum, G. W. Fulton; 1878, B. Shope, W. H. Cornelius, C. Green, W. A. Finlay, L. G. Cornelius, Isaac Long; 1879, B. Shope, John Drake, John Senft, Samuel Grove, J. W. Kough, Philip Fisher; 1880, Samuel McVitty, John Senft, William Crum, P. Fisher, L. G. Cornelius, C. Green; 1881, B. Shope, John Drake, J. W. Senft, Samuel Grove, J. W. Kough, P. Fisher; 1882, Samuel McVitty, B. Shope, J. H. Senft, L. G. Cornelius, W. Crum, P. Weaver.

CONSTABLES.

1876, John Stake; 1877–78, W. H. Cornelius; 1879–80, Samuel McClain; 1881, S. W. Kimmel.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1876, Samuel McVitty, Henry Hudson, G. M. Green, W. H. Cornelius, C. Green, W. Poles; 1877, Samuel McClain, Thomas Barber; 1878, C. R. McCarthy, Benjamin Shope; 1879, H. Hudson, P. Fisher, G. W. Fulton; 1880, J. A. Struger, H. Hudson; 1881, Samuel McVitty, J. M. Hilyard.

Saltillo borough is at an altitude of seven hundred and eighty-one feet above the sea level. There are running through under the borough two veins of iron ore, one hematite and the other fossil. The pioneer postmaster at this place was Samuel McVitty, who was appointed in 1867. The present postmaster is Thomas L. Uttley. The East Broad Top Railroad was finished to this town in 1875. The present telegraph operator, express and ticket agent is F. H. Senft. The population of the borough in 1880 was two hundred and twenty-seven.

It was proper that the old town was named Springville, and would have applied as well to the present, as there are within the borough limits twenty springs, containing almost as many grades or kinds of mineral water. It is said that one of these springs affords the strongest magnetic water of any spring in the United States.

First Baptist Church of Saltillo.—This is an outgrowth or out-station from the Baptist Church at Three Springs borough. The distance from and the inconvenience to which many of the members were subject induced the leading members to build a meeting-house and have Baptist preaching at Saltillo; accordingly a church edifice of brick was erected in 1879, at a cost of fifteen hundred and five dollars.

The following names comprised most, or all, of the members at Saltillo in 1879: Samuel McVitty and wife, John M. Wallace and wife, Emma McVitty, Amanda J. McVitty, George Senft and wife.

The present membership is thirty-five. For list of preachers, see Three Springs Baptist Church.

The Sunday-school connected with this branch reports an average attendance of sixty pupils, with Samuel McVitty, superintendent.

Reformed Church of America.—When the society at Saltillo was organized we are unable to state. The pioneer members of this church at this place were Philip Spahn, wife and two daughters, Anthony Hoffman, John Hoffman, Michael Brodbeck, Warner Thomas and wife, Mrs. Kimmell and daughter, Edward Cornelius and wife.

In 1880 the society built a neat frame church located on Pine Street, Saltillo, at a cost of eight hundred dollars. Present membership, twenty-five. Their preachers have been Rev. John Shick, and —— Writer, the present pastor.

The Sunday-school connected with this church numbers twenty scholars, with William Abbott superintendent.

Union Hall.—This is a frame building, erected in 1873 by a joint-stock company, and located on Pine Street in the borough of Saltillo. It is occupied by all denominations who wish to occupy it for religious purposes, and is used by the Union Sunday-school, which numbers fifty pupils, with T. H. Senft as superintendent.

Saltillo Methodist Protestant Church was organized in 1873 by Rev. J. M. Mason, with the following official members: Walter Cornelius, John Carl, and Peter Cornelius. This society worships in Union Hall.

Meadow Green Methodist Protestant Church was organized in Harmony Grove school-house in 1853, with the following-named members: D. Price, James Stevens, James Shore, and John B. Moreland. The Harmony Grove school-house was destroyed by fire, and the meetings have since then been held in Meadow Green school-house, Clay township.

Saltillo Cemetery.—The graveyard at Saltillo was deeded to the Old School Baptist denomination by Richard Ashman, the then owner of the plantation upon which it was located, and contains one acre and one hundred and seventeen perches. The old meeting-house was built in the graveyard on the hill, and went to decay many years ago. The first marble stone put up in this yard was brought from Lewistown on horseback by Henry Hubbell in 1795, and this is a part of the inscription: "In Memory of Phebe, the wife of Mr. Henry Hubbell, in the 32d year of her age. She Left this tabernacle on the 22d of April, 1795. Departed this Life Lamented by Husband & Neighbors as a Dutiful Wife."

Among the number of inscriptions upon tombstones in this city of the dead may be found the following:

Nancy Cornelius, died Nov. 9, 1850, aged 95.
Samuel Cornelius, died May 13, 1833, aged 72.
Hannah McNeal, died May 1, 1850, aged 63.
Joshua McNeal, died Feb. 17, 1864, aged 76.
James McNeal, died June 26, 1851, aged 66.
William Cornelius, died Nov. 30, 1876, aged 86.
William M. Cornelius, died Dec. 17, 1876, aged 51.
Peter Cornelius, died April 7, 1879, aged 72.
Josiah Kimmel, died May 11, 1877, aged 60.
Nancy McNeal, died Feb. 15, 1863, aged 70.
Archibald McNeal, died March 28, 1871, aged 80.
Jane Taylor, died April 13, 1869, aged 44.
Samuel Kough, died March 7, 1870, aged 70.
Christian Drake, died Aug. 15, 1860, aged 70.
Ann Mary Renecker, died June 5, 1879, aged 81.
Robert Baird, M.D., died June 3, 1880, aged 81.

Barton D. F. Baird, M.D., died April 19, 1863, aged 29.
John Hudson, M.D., died Jan. 15, 1857, aged 27.
George Hudson, Esq., died May 24, 1855, aged 60.
Henry Hubbell, Esq., died June 7, 1827, aged 73.
Sarah Drake, died April 30, 1870, aged 67.
Jacob Drake, died Jan. 1, 1863, aged 61.
Margaret Jane Bence, died Oct. 11, 1863, aged 22.
George Senft, died Nov. 4, 1871, aged 46.
Rebecca Cunningham, died July, 1864, aged 74.
Elizabeth Bowser, died Aug. 19, 1856, aged 23.
Lucy Ann Bowser, died Sept. 11, 1861, aged 23.

Educational.—The school-house at Saltillo is a frame building erected in 1881 for the accommodation of two schools. Dallas Bernhardt and Fanny Green were the first teachers in this school-house. In 1881 there was five months' school taught, with an average attendance of fifty-three scholars. Total amount raised by tax for the year was $173.53; State appropriation, $60.70. Total expenditures for the year, $178.72.

Three Springs Borough.—In 1881 there were two schools in the borough, in which the pupils of the town were instructed five months in each school. One male and one female teacher were employed, at twenty-five dollars for the male and twenty dollars for the female teacher. There was an average attendance of forty-five pupils per day during the term of school. Total expenditures for the year, $358.69.

Clay township has seven school districts, in which school was taught five months each in 1881. There were employed during the term six male and one female teacher, at twenty-three dollars each per month. The average number attending school during the term was one hundred and forty-seven. Total expenditures for school purposes during the year, $1316.94.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

CROMWELL TOWNSHIP.

Geographical, Descriptive, and Natural Features.—Cromwell is one of the interior townships of the south part of Huntingdon County, and was erected from Shirley and Springfield townships in January, 1836, and named "in honour of Col. Thomas Cromwell, deceased, who was an early settler and a distinguished and hospitable citizen," and is bounded on the northeast by Shirley, southeast by Tell and Dublin, southwest by Springfield and Clay, and on the northwest by Cass and Shirley townships. Its southeast line, running along the summit of Shade Mountain, is nearly nine miles in length. To the northwest, and nearly parallel with Shade Mountain, is Black Log Mountain, running the entire length of the township. Sandy Ridge, quite an elevation, lies nearly north from Orbisonia. Saddle Back Ridge is a range of mountains or ridges, lying nearly north and south, between Orbisonia borough and Aughwick Creek. From Aughwick Creek to Jack's Mountain, which forms the boundary line between this and Cass township, are several ridges, knolls, and hills, the largest of which is Coaling Ridge, in the southerly part of the township.

The principal stream is Aughwick Creek, which flows through the township from south to north. Its principal tributary is the Black Log Creek, flowing in a southwesterly direction down through the narrow valley between Shade and Black Log Mountains to the gap or narrows just east of Orbisonia borough, where it breaks through the mountain, running northwesterly along the southwest side of the borough, passing through a gap in Saddle Back Ridge, and empties into the Aughwick Creek near the residence of H. Jones. Shade Creek comes through Shade Gap into Black Log Valley at the late location of Lupfer's steam tannery and saw-mill, whence it flows northerly down the valley and empties into Black Log Creek a short distance above the narrows. From the west are several small streams flowing into Aughwick Creek, the largest of which is Old Woman's Run, which empties into the Aughwick a little below the mouth of Black Log. The East Broad Top Railroad passes through the township nearly northeast and southwest, alongside the borough of Orbisonia, and through the town of Rock Hill.

There are under the surface of Cromwell township large quantities of iron ore, both hematite and fossil, principally owned by the Rock Hill Iron and Coal Company, whose furnaces are located just outside the borough of Orbisonia.

The farming lands of this township, scattered as they are through the small valleys, are susceptible of a high state of cultivation, and upon some are raised large crops of corn, wheat, oats, and potatoes.

Early Settlers and Pioneer Incidents.—This township being on the old path from the lower Susquehanna to the Ohio country, and a portion of the gap or gateway through which many of the pioneers to the then far-off West journeyed, it would naturally attract the attention of some of the pilgrims in search of future homes. Of this class were

THE CLUGAGE FAMILY.—This family of pioneers settled in Black Log, which was sometimes called Horse Valley, about the year 1763, and consisted of Robert, the father, who died a few years thereafter, and sons named respectively Robert, George, Thomas, Francis, James, and Gaven, each of whom became owners of land in the valley between the Shade and Black Log Gaps. For some time their neighborhood was known as Clugage's Valley. Robert, the most prominent man of the family, one of the justices appointed after the erection of Bedford County, marched his company in 1775 to the defense of Boston. Some time prior to 1771 he had built a grist-mill on the Black Log Creek, above the junction of the Shade Creek, near the William B. Gilliland brick house. Being the first mill erected in that section of the county, its trade came from the adjacent country for many miles.

From the Clugage military papers remaining with William B. Gilliland, a descendant of the family, the following extracts were made:

"WAR OFFICE, June 24, 1778.

"SIR:

"In consequence of your application and the information of others in that quarter, a company of forty Continental troops is ordered to take post at Huntingdon for the protection of that village, and the grist-mill[1] near it, and to guard provisions, etc., to Fort Roberdeau, and perform any other Services in their power for the common good. The stay of this company there will probably not be long; nevertheless, they will afford an immediate relief, and when it shall be necessary to draw them off, other measures we trust will remove the danger further from you. In the mean time it is expected that the inhabitants join hand in hand with the troops, and assist in their own defense; for those who will not help themselves as far as their own power extends, do not deserve aid from others. We are aware the frontiers are distressed, and feel disposed to yield them all possible relief; but the inhabitants there should consider that we have a formidable enemy to encounter which demands more men, and even stores, than can readily be found. But let the people take courage and not abandon their settlements; the enemy have left Philadelphia, and such measures are planning and forwarding as we hope will in a few months induce the Savages to retire from the frontiers.

"We are, Sir,
"Your Obed't Servants,
"By order of the Board,
"TIM PICKERING.

"P. S.—We have paid Roger McLean, the bearer of your letter, forty five dollars for his time and trouble.

"TO MAJOR ROBERT CLUGGAGE.
"(On Public Service)."

Inscription:

"TO MAJOR ROBERT CLUGGAGE,
"At Fort Roberdeau.
"(War Office)."

A letter from Richard Peters.

"SIR:

"Deliver to Capt. Robert Cluggage or order—a Number of Suits of Clothes not exceeding one hundred, either ready made or out of the Materials you have in your Possession delivered by Lt.-Col. Campbell, of the 13th Virginia Regiment. This Receipt shall be your Discharge. The Suits to consist of one Coat, one Vest, one pair of Breeches, two pair of Stockings, and two pair Shoes, two Shirts and one Hatt, if you have them, if not such as you have in your Care, informing the Board and Sending Capt. Cluggage's Duplicate Receipt or that of the Person sent by his Order.

"Your Obed. Serv't,
"RICHARD PETERS.

"WAR OFFICE,
"Nov. 5, 1778.
"COL. D. KENNEDY, Winchester, Virginia."

Maj. (or, as he was afterward called, colonel) Clugage died about the close of the year 1787, and it appears from a draught of a letter he had written on the 21st of March of that year that the government yet owed him a considerable amount for money expended for the public service during the war. Among the items of personal property that appear on the inventory made after his death are one negro man named Ham, valued at £100, and one negro boy, named Joe, valued at £15. His sword was appraised at £7 10*s*. The account of Gaven Clugage, sole executor, was passed by the register Jan. 19, 1792.

A paper relating to Capt. Thomas Clugage is as follows:

[1] Cryder's mill.

"A Praisement Bill of the guns and Blankets for Capt Thomas Clugage's Company in the First Battalion of Bedford County now in actual service under the Command of Colon[l] John Piper.

"December the 13, 1776.

	£	s.	d.
"Joseph Harbison one Rifle Gun	6	10	0
Alexander Anderson one Rifle gun	6	0	0
Thomas Morgan one Rifle gun	5	0	0
Thomas Coal one Rifle gun	6	0	0
David Sunderlin one Smooth gun	1	15	0
John Rodgers one Rifle gun	5	0	0
Jacob Ginnon one Rifle gun	5	0	0"

The old mill became as noted in its day as any county-seat within a hundred miles of it. Col. Clugage was the man of the times and of this section of country. After the war of the Revolution, when the patriotic fires were still burning on the altar of many hearts, regiments, battalions, and companies were organized throughout the country, and training days were established, either by law or custom, and Clugage's mill was designated as one of the places for company and regimental trainings or drills. The company drills were usually attended monthly, or at farthest once in two months, during the summer and fall. The first Monday in May was the great day of all the year, not excepting the glorious Fourth of July. This was the time fixed for general or regimental training, and at these musters the officers and men usually had a "big time." Rival companies from different sections of the surrounding country were present, and each company thought themselves the best man of the crowd, and it was not unusual, and in fact was thought to be a dull day if there was not several pugilistic encounters between the rival military men or their friends.

Col. Gaven Clugage was considered one of the best hunters of the time in which he lived, and would always "bring down" his game at the first shot. He left home one fine morning upon a short hunting excursion, which lasted but an hour or two, as he had had extremely good luck. By his request, his brother Thomas hitched up the horse and sled and started in pursuit of the game the colonel had shot. He had gone but a short distance when he found the game. It was a good-sized rattlesnake, measuring fifteen feet in length, and nearly a foot through in the thickest part. Had this occurred in the snake season of the year we could not doubt its truthfulness had the snake measured twenty feet, but in the winter, with the snow four feet deep, it beats any fish story and smells rather snaky.

After years of toil and pleasure Col. Gaven Clugage died in 1823.

The black log, or stopping-place for travelers, from which Black Log Mountain, Creek, and Valley take their name, was a short distance above the mouth of Shade Creek, midway between the David Grove and Samuel Adams places, up the Shade Gap road.

Grove now owns the farm, up Black Log Valley, formerly the property of Nancy and Esther Logan, who, in 1819, built the stone house in which David Galbraith resides. On this farm or plantation was a small tannery of four vats, which was in operation in 1825, and has since gone to decay. There was also a blacksmith-shop near the tannery in 1820.

Poplar Hill tract, located up Black Log Valley, near Shade Gap, was taken up by George Werrick, or Warrick, who died in 1853. Michael Stair now owns two hundred and sixty acres of the tract.

Mr. Stair, one of the oldest residents of the south part of Huntingdon County, was born in Guilford township, Franklin Co., Pa., Oct. 8, 1802. He is of German origin on both the paternal and maternal side. His grandfather and a brother came from Germany previous to the Revolution, and settled near Hagerstown, Md. The brother enlisted in the war for independence on the side of the colonies, and did good service. Samuel, father of Michael Stair, was born near Hagerstown, Md., and remained there until after his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Ressler, whose parents came from Germany and settled in Franklin County, Pa. After his marriage Samuel moved to Guilford, named above, where he worked at his trade, that of a cooper. He was also what in those days was called a rough carpenter. He was a noted athlete and a sciencedd boxer, and seldom, if ever, found his match in trials of strength and skill. At the breaking out of the war of 1812, he enlisted in the American army, and served until the close of the war. He then returned to Guilford, where he resided until his death. To him were born four sons and four daughters, of whom one daughter is now living; also one son, who is the subject of this sketch. When Michael was eight years old he was bound out to Simon Logan, who lived in Black Log Valley, Huntingdon Co., Pa. He was to receive one year's schooling and an outfit of a certain or prescribed amount. The latter he never got and but very little of the schooling. Michael remained with Mr. Logan until he was eighteen years of age, when he commenced life on his own account, his entire capital being a very poor suit of clothes. He was blessed with a grand constitution and a brave heart, elements that always bring success when backed up as in Mr. Stair's case with good judgment. His first work for himself was threshing (with a flail) wheat, oats, and rye for a Mr. John Logan. He was more than an ordinary thresher, and by working hard could earn twenty-five cents per day. He earned about four dollars, which was his start in life. Until 1830 we find Mr. Stair working at whatever he could get to do whereby he could earn a dollar. The cooper's trade was learned, and for a year or so he worked at it. At another time he would cut wood, again rail-splitting, working by the year driving team for seventy dollars per year. But when a dollar was earned it was a dollar saved, for he never spent money unnecessarily. On the 5th day of January, 1830, he was married to Miss Mary Hagie, daughter of Jacob Hagie, who was born in Germany. Miss Hagie was born in Tell township, Huntingdon Co., Pa., in June, 1796. On her marriage she received a small outfit, which, with his saving, enabled Mr. Stair to buy the tools and stock necessary to work a farm. He rented a farm of Mrs. Logan, and remained on it four years; then rented of Mrs. Gray the farm he now owns. In 1840 he bought the farm of the heirs, paying them off as they became of age. When it was paid for another tract was bought, and this he continued to do until he owned three hundred acres. He devotes his time and farm to stock-raising, at which he is very successful. In partnership with Mr. Krough, of Orbisonia, he in 1866 engaged in the mercantile business. At that time Orbisonia was but a small place, and Mr. Orbison's store the only one. The first year their trade amounted all told to not over five thousand dollars, but increased year by year until they sold in one year twenty-seven thousand dollars' worth of goods. After remaining in the business fourteen years he sold out to Mr. Jacob M. Krough. He still owns property in Orbisonia, and in one of his buildings his daughter, Frances J. Stair, has and manages a millinery store. He is a Roman Catholic in his religious belief, and has been a member of that church for half a century. His family also are members of the same church. In politics he is an ardent Democrat, and as such was elected poor director though his county at the time was strongly Republican. He has also held township offices at different periods. Mr. Stair came into the county a poor and friendless boy when it was in its infancy, and now, after a residence in it of seventy-one years, sees it traversed with highways and railroads,—sees villages and cities in the place of forests, and in the place of the poor bound boy finds himself a well-to-do farmer and business man, and honored and respected by all.

Up the Black Log Creek about one and a half miles lives Frederick Harmon, in a house built in 1775 by James Clugage. This was, no doubt, the best and most fashionable house in all this region of country, as it had matched flooring; the chimney-corner and mantel-work, as well as the shingles, were fastened with wrought nails made by the blacksmith. A large tract of land above Harmon's was owned by the Pollard family, who have no descendants of that name in Cromwell at the present time.

In the early part of the present century Black Log Valley, narrow though it was, and isolated from the rest of the world, had become quite a noted place, so much so that —— Blanchard, M.D., of Philadelphia, located here as early as 1809, and in 1826 Baltimore had caught the Black Log fever, and a Mr. Byram came into the valley with several six-horse teams loaded with household goods, and is reported to have commenced the erection of a house upon quite an extensive plan. It was to be sixty by eighty feet on the ground, and three or four stories high. When the building was nearly completed he abandoned the enterprise, sold out, and returned to Baltimore. Benjamin Chilcoate was an early settler here. He came from Maryland, and one of his sons died a few years ago at the age of eighty-two years.

Michael Stair

Lost Treasure.—Many incidents are related of the burying of treasure by different individuals in different localities, and Black Log is not without its "buried treasure" story and its hero. Capt. Jack, as Mr. Armstrong was familiarly known, was not an admirer of the copper-colored race, and lost no opportunity in making his dislike known to the Indians that frequented this part of the country. He in turn was both dreaded and hated, and driven from place to place as opportunity offered. Upon one occasion his flight was in the direction of Black Log, and being somewhat impeded in his flight by a leather bag filled with gold and silver which he was carrying, he secreted it as he was passing through the Narrows. He never returned to the spot for it, and it never has been found, or, at least, no knowledge of the fact has been made known. Some enterprising young men might employ their spare moments in hunting for the lost treasure in or around the Narrows.

Pioneer Transportation.—In the fourth quarter of the last century and the first decade of the present there was no means of transportation between Cromwell and the Susquehanna other than mules and farm teams, and there being next to no wagon-roads, freight of most kinds was carried upon the backs of mules or pack-horses; but mules were not introduced till after the iron-works here had been under way for several years. Oxen and heavy wagons were used to a large extent in hauling ore, limestone, and charcoal. In carrying ore on horses two large boxes or baskets were hung across the back of the horse and filled with the precious stuff, and so transported from the opening to the furnace. In this way, too, goods were transported from the Susquehanna, over the Tuscarora, and through Shade Gap to what is now Cromwell, or Orbisonia. The iron made at the old Bedford and other furnaces in this vicinity was transported to Pittsburgh on horses and mules by bending the iron to fit the back of the animal, upon which was laid a saddle or pad made for the purpose, and the iron laid across. Of course the cargo had to be unloaded at night in order to give the animals rest on their weary journey to the ty of smoke. On either side of these saddles or pads were a sort of wallet or sack, in which goods were placed in Pittsburgh to be brought back to the furnaces. Extra pack-mules or horses were provided to carry feed for the animals and rations for the men. One man could easily manage six or eight mules or horses. Thus goods and merchandise were carried till the advent of canals and railroads.

Pioneer Highway.—Following is the order of appointment of viewers to lay out a public highway leading from Burnt Cabins to Drake's Ferry, crossing what is now Dublin, Cromwell, and Shirley townships:

"At a court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, held at Bedford in and for the County of Bedford the second Tuesday in April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven. Before Barnard Dougherty, Esquire, and his associates, Justices of the same Court.

"William Morris, James Coyle, John Galbraith, Henry Warner, David Walker, and Hugh Logan, the six men who were appointed at the last Court to view, and if necessary to lay out a road from the Burnt Cabbins to Drake's Ferry, made their report to the Court in the words and figures following:

"Road beginning at the Burnt Cabbins, and Running thence N. 25 W. 40 perches; N. 3 E. 60; N. 30 E. 244; N. 5 E. 64; N. 58 W. 94; N. 24 W. 68; N. 42 W. 40; N. 7 E. 172; N. 32 E. 94; N. 60 E. 48; N. 20 E. 140; N. 16 W. 48; N. 5 E. 252; N. 30 E. 40 [here follow six courses and distances that are obliterated beyond recognition]; N. 25 W. 40; N. 5 E. 158; N. 23 E. 74; N. 3 E. 80; N. 28 E. 229; N. 11 E. 28; N. 26 E. 180; N. 2 E. 100; N. 70 W. 36; N. 43 W. 54; West 40; N. 78 W. 100; N. 52 W. 170; N. 26 W. 176; N. 22 E. 540; N. 3 W. 48; N. 20 E. 106; N. 43 E. 44; N. 38 E. 172; N. 17 E. 80; N. 6 E. 108; N. 10 E. 168; N. 13 W. 44; N. 62 W. 54; N. 28 W. 100; N. 45 E. 174; N. 20 E. 114; N. 8 E. 112; N. 4 E. 112; N. 12 E. 60; N. 5 E. 32; N. 11 E. 68; N. 21 E. 214; N. 7 E. 106; N. 11 E. 114; N. 13 W. 54; N. 37 E. 56; N. 5 W. 42; N. 17 E. 100; N. 22 W. 32; N. 46 W. 128; N. 22 W. 144; N. 34 W. 200; N. 40 200 perches to Drake's Ferry, on Juniata River, in all 24 Miles and forty-nine perches.

"Agreeable to your Worship's Order we have laid out a Road from the Burnt Cabbins to Drake's Ferry, on the Juniata River, and laid it out by courses and distances. [Here is another obliteration. The last line is legible, except day of the month, as follows:]

"In Testimony whereof we affix our hands this of April, 1787.

(Signed) "William Morris.
"James Coyle.
"John Galbraith.
"Henry Warner.
"David Walker.
his
"Hugh ✕ Logan.
mark.

"Whereupon it is considered by the Court and ordered that the same be and it is hereby confirmed as a public Road, and the Supervisors of the Highways of the Several Townships through which the same is laid out are ordered to open and Clear the Same accordingly of the Breadth of thirty-three feet.

"Bedford County ss.

"I do Certify the aforegoing to be a true Copy of the Record remaining in my Office at Bedford.

(Bedford Co. Seal.) "In Testimony whereof I have hereunto Set my Hand and Affixed the Seal of the said County the thirtieth day of October, Anno Domini, 1788.
"David" (balance obliterated).

Pioneer Land Claim and Testimony.—The following is the testimony of Gabriel Peterson in relation to "Turkey Hill" tract, now in Cromwell township:

Thomas Duncan, Esqr., vs. Robert Clugage, James Clugage, Jane Clugage. } Allegany County ss.

"In pursuance of a Rule of the Court of Huntingdon Co. to take depositions of Witnesses Between the hours of Ten and three o'clock in the afternoon Personalfy appeared, Gabriel Peterson, before me a justice of the peace in and for said County of Allegany and being sworn as law directs Saith about the year One thousand Seven hundred and sixty-three or four my father, Lawrence Peterson, made an Improvement On a tract of land called turkey hill, Built a cabin, cleared between three and four acres of land, fenced the same, & raised corn thereon. And Jacob Hair built his Cabin on the Northwest Side of the Said Turkey hill some time after this Improvement was made. Jacob Hair and my father showed me the Conditional line they had made between them, and this deponant saith that the said line run from black log mountain to Shade mountain & run along the top Of said Turkey hill, Some after George Armstrong was Surveying land in that County & Imployed my father & Hair to Hunt for said surveyors & promised that he would take out locations for each of their tracts of land & have them Surveyed for their Services as hunt ers; this deponent saith that his father & Hair hunted for Armstrong's Surveyors three or four months. At that time this deponent saith that there was at that time two or three acres cleared and fenced on Hair's tract and corn raised thereon. This deponent saith that his father & Hair Continued on the aforesaid tracts Untill they were drove off by the Indians.

"Question by Simon Logan.

"What age are you at this time?

"Answer. Sixty-three or sixty-four.

"Question. Which side of Turkey Hill was your father's Improvement?

"Answer. The southeast side.

"Question. Who lived on the land at the time the Improvements were made?

"Answer. My father and Hair.

"Question. How long did your father and Hair continue on said tract of land before they were drove off by the Indians?

"Answer. About one year.

"Question. Who was this land surveyed for?

"Answer. It was surveyed for my father, Lawrence Peterson, and Jacob Hair.

"Question. Where did you live at the time the Improvements were made on the land?

"Answer. With my father on said land.

"Question. What time was this land surveyed?

"Answer. In the year 1765, or thereabouts.

"Question. Who surveyed this tract of land?

"Answer. I do not know.

"Question. What was this tract of land worth at that time?

"Answer. Ten or fifteen pounds.

"Question. What was the common price surveyors gave to hunters per day at that time?

"Answer. One dollar per day and the skins to themselves.

"Question. Did you see the corn that grew on Your father's Improvement and Hair's pulled after it came to be ripe?

"Answer. I helped to pulling father's corn, but know Nothing about Hair's.

"Question. Was their cabins by Hair and your father for the purpose of Hunting or for the purpose of holding the land whereon they were built?

"Answer. For the purpose of holding the Land whereon they were built.

"Question. Are you Interested in this suit?

"Answer. I am not.

"Question. Is all the facts above Stated from your own knowledge or from Information obtained from others?

"Answer. From my own Knowledge.

"Question. Was there any agreement in Writing between Francis Clugget and You that if You gained this land of Hugh Logan that you was to give Said Clugget one hundred acres of said land?

"Answer. There was no agreement, either verbal or written, between Clugget and me respecting said land.

"A true Copy.

"Oct. 8, 1810."

The following, as well as the foregoing, is a copy of papers in possession of Simon P. Cook, of Orbisonia, great-grandson of Hugh Logan, a pioneer of this township, in relation to claim of Peterson and others for the Turkey Hill tract in Black Log Valley:

"HUNTINGDON, May 22, 1801.

"Brown, Heng, Smith.	Lessee of Gabriel Peterson, William Tucker and Nancy his wife, John Churchfield and Christiana his wife,	Ejectment for 3 houses, 2 barns, 2 gardens, 3 orchards, 100 acres of Arable land, 20 acres of Meadow land, and 250 of Woodland, in Springfield township. Demise 1st July, 1795. vs.
Ham. Watts.	Hugh Logan.	Suit in C. B. to Aug. 1793.

"Dun[l].

"Nov. 4, 1766, Application of Lawrence Peterson for 300 acres on Black Log Creek, including the Turkey Hill.

"1767. Survey of 441 a[s]. in the Handwriting of Richard Tea.

"Francis Cluggage (Examined on the voire dire).

"In March, 1772, I fell in with one James Ross below Jack's Narrows. He introduced me to Lawrence Peterson, who said he came from across the Laurel Hill to see about the Turkey Hill Tract, which he got from George Croghan for his services. He was going to Robert Cluggage's, my Brother, to procure some one to settle on the Land and pay the Taxes. I engaged to see about his business if my brother Robert would not. I put William Winton on the land to live on it for ten years, and if he made valuable improvements he was to be paid for them. The possession had been vacant for ten years before, at least, to my knowledge. In 1779 defendant bought from Winton, as he informed me, and had given him the price of a cow in Continental Money. In 1781 I told defendant the Land was Peterson's, his claim was notorious in the Country.

"X. I mentioned to my Brother what Peterson had said to me. He neither said yes or no. Logan brought an ejectment against me, which was discontinued on 20th of April, 1781. He bound me over about keeping bad fences, and I bound him over for putting his Cattle in my Grain. I have a Warrant for adjoining Lands.

"Deps. of John Clark.

"Lawrence Peterson was buried in June, 1783, in Westmoreland County.

"Depn. of Thomas Hays.

"Knew Lawrence Peterson. He removed to Black Log Valley from Bedford County.

"Pro. deft. 2d Nov. 1767.

"Letter from Robert McKinzie to Richard Tea, mentioning the application of Peterson, and that he made the same and other surveys for George Armstrong, for which he received an order from him, and charging him only 20s. for the making of each survey. Richard Tea's Indorsmt. thereon as an original paper, proved to have been found among the Office papers of Geo. Woods at Bedford, offered in evidence and objected to.

"Per curr. The Evid. may be well rec'd. It is tantamount to a rec[t]. for surveying fees, and shews at whose Instance the Survey was made. It therefore establishes an equitable Interest in this Location in Geo. Armstrong.

"(No date). George Croghan Mem. of a number of Surveys in his Hand Writing. '1 Tract, Col. George Armstrong, Turkey Hill, . . . run out.'

"Objected to.

"Ruled to be good Evid.; it repels the Idea that Croghan had presented Peterson with this Location.

"Gavin Cluggage. 10th Sept. 1762.

"Robert Cluggage, my Father, came into this county and bought Land of John Daley, and he said it adjoined Lands surveyed for George Croghan, the Turkey Hill Tract. Daley mentioned this several times at our House. Lawrence Peterson and Thomas Hall were hunting and encamped on the other side of black log creek; my Father asked them over to our encampment. Peterson I never heard claim any Title to the Land, tho' he hunted over it with me. About 3 weeks after Jacob Hare erected a cabbin on the Turkey Hill Tract, and Daley told him the Land had been surveyed for Croghan and he would loose his Labour. Peterson was alone in the World and hunted about. I hunted with him in 1767 and 1768, but he said nothing of his claim to this Land. He had a cabbin 22 miles off wich he mentioned to me. W[m] Winton first occupied this Land and made a Cabbin thereon, cleared 10 or 12 a[s]., and settled on it as Gentleman's Land. I shewed him the spring. He never held under Winton. It was publickly known as Gentleman's Land.

"X. Hare never told me that Peterson had Lands there. The first I ever heard of it was from Deft., who said he had found out at Bedford that the Land was Located in his name and belonged to George Armstrong.

"21st March, 1780, Wm. Winton conveys the Improvement to Deft. in consid. of £1325.

"Depo. of Charley Boyle.

"Wm. Henry called on Witns many yrs ago, and spoke of the Tract as Surveyed for George Armstrong.

"The Court thought that Geo. Armstrong was shewn to be intitled to the Location and Survey, and Plffs. Counsel immediately Suffered a nonsuit.

"The foregoing is a copy of my Notes on the Trial, and has been compared with the Original in my possession.

"J. YEATES."

PIONEER DEED.

"Know all men by these presents, that I, William Winton, of Dublin township, Bedford County, State of Pennsylvania, for and in consideration of the sum of thirteen hundred and twenty-five pounds current money to me in hand paid, at and before the sealing and Delivery of these presents by Hugh Logan, of County of York, and State aforesaid, hath granted, Bargained, and sold, and by these presents Doth Bargain and sell to said Hugh Logan, his Heirs or assigns, all my Right, title, Interest, property, Claim, and Demand whatsoever, in and to that tract of land whereon I now Liveth, Lying and being in said County of Bedford, adjoining Lands of George Cluggage, together with all the Improvements thereon made or erected, and the grain now in the grown on said premises, and a loom and other articles mentioned in an article of agreement between me and said Logan. To have and to hold said Improvements, grain in the grown, and loom aforementioned to said Hugh Logan, his Heirs or assigns, me, my Heirs, Executors, or Administrators shall and will warrant and forever Defend, and against no other pirson whatsoever, as witness my hand and seal the twenty-first day of March, in the fifth year of American Independence, and in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty.

"WM. WINTON. [SEAL.]

"Signed, sealed, and delivered in the presence of
"JAMES CARMICHAEL.
"BARS. DOYLE.

"Received the day of the Date of the above Indenture of the within named Hugh Logan, the first sum of thirteen hundred and twenty-five pounds, being the full consideration money above mentioned, as witnes my hand and seal.

"WM. WINTON.

"Testes.
"JAMES CARMICHAEL.
"BARS. DOYLE.

[Seal of Huntingdon County.] "Recorded in the office for recording Deeds for the County of Huntingdon, in Book E, page 95, the ninth day of November, A.D. 1795.

"AND. HENDERSON,
"Recorder."

St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church.—This church is located in Black Log Valley, southeast part of the township, near Shade Gap.

Services were held in this locality as early as 1765 or 1770 by Jesuits, or Roman Catholic priests, and in the early part of this century a house of worship was erected on the left bank of Shade Creek, on the Turkey Hill or Logan tract. In 1845 the present substantial stone church was built, costing twelve hundred dollars. This building stands upon the site of the old church. In the same lot with the church is St. Mary's Cemetery, belonging to the parish.

The parish is visited monthly by the priest in charge of Huntingdon parish. Present membership, one hundred.

Andrew Heage and Michael M. Stair are two of the trustees of the church property, which is valued at two thousand dollars.

Union School-House.—This is located two miles southwest from Orbisonia, and has been occupied by the different denominations for over fifty years. Revs. John Ball and Jonathan Monroe held a series of meetings here in the winter of 1837, which resulted in the conversion of over eighty persons, many of whom lived devoted and useful lives during their sojourn upon earth. Occasional services are still held here by Methodist and other preachers.

McKendree Methodist Episcopal Chapel.—This chapel is located in the south part of the township, and thus named in honor of one of the prominent pioneer preachers of Methodism.

This society was formed in 1832, with the following-named pioneer members: Benedict Stevens, Eve Stevens, Samuel Boher, Hannah Boher, Jacob Boher, Mary Boher, Sally Chilcoate, Alva Chilcoate, Catharine Chilcoate, and Benedict Stevens, Sr. Just who the first class-leader was is not positively known, but is supposed to be Benedict Stevens, Sr., and in 1850 Alva Chilcoate was leader.

The present and only chapel at this place was built in 1843 or 1844, and cost nine hundred dollars. The shingles for covering the roof were made by Benedict Stevens.

The pioneer trustees were B. Stevens, Sr., B. Stevens, Jr., Samuel Boher, and Alva Chilcoate.

The "McKendree" has been at times connected with Fort Littleton, Mount Union, Concord Circuit, and Shirleysburg Circuit, and is now a part of Orbisonia charge. For list of preachers at this place, see Orbisonia Methodist Episcopal Church. Present membership, thirty-two. The present trustees of McKendree Chapel are Rev. W. H. Stevens, J. F. Chilcoate, Henry A. Buckley, Joseph McKelvey, and Henry Beers; Steward, Henry A. Buckley; Class-leader, Rev. W. H. Stevens, who also holds a supernumerary relation. Mr. Stevens is also superintendent of the Sabbath-school, with an average attendance of thirty-five scholars.

Monroe Methodist Episcopal Chapel.—Monroe Chapel is located two and one-half miles west or northwest from Orbisonia, and named in honor of Jonathan Monroe, one of the pioneers of Methodism, who preached in that locality in the early part of this century. Like most other pioneer beginnings of Methodism, the old log school-house was made the sanctuary, also the house of William M. Chilcoate. When Mr. Chilcoate, who was the pioneer class-leader in that society, moved to the Wharton farm, the meetings were transferred to his house. Preaching services were held in the school-house in the winter of 1837, which resulted in building Monroe Chapel, or Church, in 1838, which has stood the storm for nearly half a century.

Among the pioneer members at this place are found the names of William M. Chilcoate, who was a class-leader for nearly half a century, Keziah Chilcoate, Benjamin Rinker, Ellen Rinker, John Smith, Ellen Smith, Levi Heck, Sarah Heck, Samuel Heck, Mary Heck, Andrew Beard, Thomas Robinson, Thomas Long, Rebecca Long, Susan Price, John Hardy, Ellen Hardy, Eliza Stewart, Thomas Kelley, James S. Chilcoate, John W. Chilcoate, Mary Ann Chilcoate, Isaac Marlin, William Marshall, Isaac Gorsuch, Benjamin Heck, Rebecca Heck, John Hunt, Susan Hunt, Richard D. Heck, and Mary Miller.

Reformed Church of America.—The branch of this church located in Colgate district, three miles northwest from Orbisonia, was organized in the Colgate school-house in 1858 by Rev. S. H. Reed, and was at that time a part of Huntingdon charge or circuit.

The pioneer members were Samuel Grove, Daniel Isenberg, Samuel Isenberg, John Enyeart, and Isaac Enyeart. Previous to 1882 the society worshiped in the Colgate and other school-houses, and in that year built the present brick church at a cost of three thousand dollars.

The preachers on this charge were —— Steckel, —— Keefer, and Dole till 1874, when this was separated from Huntingdon charge, when students and others supplied the people with preaching till 1878, when Rev. J. M. Shick was called and remained till October, 1881, when he was succeeded by Rev. E. H. Wrighter, the present pastor. Present membership, one hundred and twenty.

Building committee for church edifice built in 1882 were James Smith, John Enyeart, David Enyeart.

Elders, John Grove and Joel Isenberg.

Deacons, John Hernkane and Jackson Grove.

The average attendance of pupils upon the Sunday-school connected with this branch of the church is forty, with Jackson Grove superintendent.

Industries of Cromwell.—Among the numerous mills and manufactories of various kinds through the township not heretofore mentioned are the following saw- and grist-mills: R. D. Heck's saw-mill, located in the southwest part of the township, and the saw-mill of J. B. Shenefelt, both on the same stream, and the saw-mill of J. R. Lane, in the northwest part of the township, on Bear's Branch. The tannery built by Bryce X. Blair, and known as the "Gap Tannery," and subsequently owned by J. M. & J. W. Supfer, was destroyed by fire in 1879. There was also a grist- and saw-mill at this place, both of which have been abandoned for milling purposes. There are several other small enterprises in the township, of which we could gain no accurate knowledge.

Iron Interests.—For the data for our sketch of the iron interests of Cromwell township we are indebted to Mr. Thomas E. Orbison and Mr. B. F. Ripple, also to Mr. Coons, who furnished a copy of his paper in which Mr. Ripple's article on the iron interests of the township was first published.

The pioneer furnace of this township was built in 1785 by Thomas T. Cromwell, George Ashman, and Edward Ridgley, and was not only the pioneer furnace of Cromwell, but the pioneer west of the Susquehanna River. It was located on the site of and in the rear of what is now the Franklin House, on Cromwell Street. It had a five-foot bosh and sixteen-foot stack. The motive-power was water from both the Black Log Creek and Camp-Meeting Run, applied to an over and undershot wheel.

May 9, 1821, Thomas T. Cromwell purchased from Ruhannah Calhoon the land on which the Rockhill Furnace was built in 1830 and 1831. The tract of land was formerly the property of William Chambers.

In May, 1831, William Morrison and Thomas N. Diven purchased of T. T. Cromwell nineteen acres of this tract, on which they built the "Old Rockhill Furnace." This furnace had a twenty-eight-foot base, was twenty-nine feet high, and had a seven-foot bosh. The contractor for building the furnace was William Davis, and the pioneer furnaceman was Thomas Clugage. The property was subsequently sold to Ford & Bell, and in 1841 passed by lease into the possession of Andrew J. Wigton and John R. Hunter, who ran the furnace for six years.

Mr. Cromwell with his well-known enterprise commenced the erection of the "Winchester Furnace," just below the old Rockhill, in 1832, and finished it in 1833, with Messrs. Bracken & Still as contractors, and after its completion it was operated for a few years by William Pollock and John M. Allen as partners. From 1845 to 1847 the furnace was operated by Eli Beaty and George Davis, when in the latter year John S. Isett, Samuel Isett, Samuel Wigton, Andrew J. Wigton, and R. B. Wigton became the owners, and in 1864 sold the Winchester Furnace property to Levi G. Leamer and Bernard Lorenz, and in 1868 the property passed into the hands of Percival P. Dewees and Lewis Royer, M.D., who sold half their interest to Roberts & Co., of Philadelphia, in 1871.

Among the names most prominently connected with the iron interest of this district, and especially with the Rockhill Furnace, is that of Hon. Percival P. Dewees. Of German origin, and born in Trappe, Montgomery Co., Pa., March 9, 1818, he grew to manhood among the sturdy yeomanry of that grand old county, inheriting from his ancestors, and acquiring from those by whom he was surrounded in early life, that fixedness of purpose and sterling integrity of character which has placed him in the front rank of the successful business men of his county. His ancestors came from Germany and settled in Berks County, Pa., from whence his father, David Dewees, migrated to Trappe, above named, in 1790. He purchased a farm, on which his family of eleven children were born, and on which both himself and wife passed the remainder of their days. For many years they were devout and consistent members of the Lutheran Church, which was organized by Dr. Muhlenberg in 1743. Percival P. was the youngest of the family, and has now but four brothers and sisters living. He was early taught that one of the divine laws was "to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow," that labor was honorable and idleness dishonorable. His education was obtained at the district school during the winter months of his boyhood, and has since broadened and deepened by observation, and by an active business life. Arrived at his majority he started out in life on his own account. Ambitious to leave behind him at his demise a record of having done something in his lifetime to develop the resources of the country,—something that would make the world better for his having lived therein,—with all his worldly possessions in a bundle under his arm, he started on foot for the Green Lane Forge, situated in the northern part of Montgomery County, and owned by Gen. William Schall, for whom he clerked four years. On the 21st of February, 1843, he was joined in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Van Buskirk, daughter of Dr. George Van Buskirk, of Pottstown. The Van Buskirks were an old and prominent family and among the earliest settlers of Montgomery County. Miss Elizabeth was born Feb. 24, 1820, and died Feb. 1, 1881. To them were born three children, of whom two died in infancy. The third, Amelia La Rue, is now the wife of Dr. W. T. Browning, and located in Orbisonia, where the doctor has an extensive and lucrative practice. In May, 1843, Mr. Dewees came to Huntingdon County and became manager of the Paradise Furnace, then owned by Reuben Trexler, of Berks County. Here he remained until 1847, when he received from the owners of the Ætna Furnace Company an advantageous offer to superintend their business. He accepted their offer, and remained with them eighteen months, when sickness compelled him to resign his position. We next find him in Norristown, engaged in the nail business with Gen. Schall, with whom he remained thirteen years. In 1863, Mr. Dewees, at the solicitation of the heirs of Reuben Trexler, again assumed the management of the Paradise Furnace, and remained in that position until 1866, when, the business failing to be profitable, the furnace was abandoned. During his stay at the last-named furnace he had gained some knowledge of the Rockhill Furnace, which was built in 1830, and up to 1867 had been owned and operated by several different firms. About this time he came to Rockhill and made a careful examination of the property. He satisfied himself that the land contained valuable deposits of iron ore, and that the situation was a favorable one for an investment of capital and labor, and he at once, in company with Dr. Lewis Royer, of Montgomery County, purchased the entire property. In December, 1867, he came on and assumed the management of the business. He found Orbisonia a village occupying but one street, and in a very dilapidated condition, while at Rockhill hardly a building had a roof that would shed rain. There were people ready to work and plenty of stock, but scarce anything with which to feed either the people or the stock. To make matters worse, the winter was very severe one, snow covered the mountains to the depth of two feet or more, making the work of cutting wood for charcoal very slow and unprofitable. But the people must live, and the stock had to be cared for, and all depended upon Mr. Dewees, making a task which caused him sleepless nights and gloomy days, and at times a feeling that it was more than he could endure. These were days that tried his enduring qualities, which brought in play and tested the training of his early youth. The spring of 1868 found them ready for business, and in May he made the first blast. During that year it was found difficult to raise ore enough to make five tons per day, and for two years he was putting in shafts and tunnels, in the hope, and with a strong belief, of finding more extensive beds of ore than had been heretofore discovered. In 1870 his labor was rewarded by the discovery of the rich ore-beds or veins which has led to the present wonderful development of this part of the county, the building of railroads and the extensive furnaces now in successful operation at Rockhill. In 1871, Messrs. Edward and Percival Roberts, of Philadelphia, who were largely interested in the Broad Top coal regions, bought of the firm of Royer & Dewees an undivided one-half interest in the entire business. In July, 1873, the Rockhill Iron and Coal Company was formed, and the property became merged therein, and the Messrs. Royer, Dewees, and Roberts became stockholders in the same. Dr. Royer now owns the store at the mines, while Mr. Dewees operates the store and grist-mill at Rockhill, and now, at the age of sixty-four years, contemplates retiring from all active business pursuits. In politics, Mr. Dewees was in early life a Whig, and cast his first vote for Gen. Harrison in 1844. On the breaking up of the Whig party he for a time identified himself with the Democratic party. In 1870 he joined the ranks of the Republican party, believing it to be the party of progress and liberal ideas, also believing that its legislative enactments were for his best interests, and he is now a sturdy exponent of its policy so far as it is for the best interests of the whole people. For many years he has been a school director, and in the fall of 1876 was elected by his party to represent his county in the lower branch of the Pennsylvania Legislature, and served two sessions. He served on the special committee appointed by the Legislature to examine into and investigate the causes of the Pittsburgh riots, was also a member of the committee on corporations and railroads and on iron and coal. Mr. Dewees is now and for many years has been a member of the same church to which his parents belonged.

L. O. Lewis

The following is the article referred to, published in The Leader of the issue of Friday, Jan. 7, 1876:

"The 1872 session of the Pennsylvania Legislature passed the bill incorporating the Rockhill Iron and Coal Company, with a capital of two million dollars, allowing the company to hold property and own lands in Huntingdon and four or five of the adjoining counties. The next autumn or winter a topographical survey of the lands immediately adjoining Orbisonia on the south was made by Mr. Paddock, a civil engineer of Philadelphia. On the northeastern part of this survey the town of Rockhill is located, and on the other the iron-works of the company. The company are the owners of about eight thousand acres of land at this point, extending along Black Log Mountain on both sides, running up Shade Mountain to the top, and scattered at various points along the Aughwick Valley. On their land and in close proximity to the furnaces, of which hereafter, is found both fossil and hematite ores, limestone, and sand. At Rockhill Gap, within a half-mile of Orbisonia, a vein of fossil ore averaging twenty-four inches in thickness, and extending from water-level up over four hundred feet is opened. On each side of the gap there are two openings at different elevations, the longest gangway penetrating the mountain for a distance of one-half a mile. The underlying vein is twenty inches, and is separated from a smaller vein of six inches overlaying by a parting of fire-clay six inches. The rock beneath the vein is hard sand-rock, and the measures above the vein are soft shales. The ores on the south side are compact, coarse fossil ore, reddish-brown color, with somewhat laminated structure. The north side has a hard ore, with numerous small crystals of calcite, darker reddish color. They run about forty per cent. iron, with a trace of sulphur, and about one-tenth of one per cent. phosphorus. The vein dips at an angle of about seventy degrees towards the north, which is of great advantage over flatter veins in respect to the convenience and cost of mining. The mining is done without powder by picking out the soft clay parting and wedging the benches of ore up and down. Hematites are found within a half-mile of the furnaces, and on Sandy Ridge, two miles north, are several openings. From the main mine comes a very hard and compact, containing considerable ochreous iron ore, dark-brown color, yielding from forty-five to fifty-one per cent. iron, and containing little sulphur or phosphorus. There is also a hematite vein in crevice of Medina sandstone on Black Log Mountain which yields largely and seems inexhaustible. They have also opened the Cheet Bank, lying directly under the Oriskany sandstone, Logan Bank in High Valley, and numerous other hematite mines.

"The same company are the owners of about eleven thousand acres lying on Broad Top Mountain and in Trough Creek Valley, of which about ten thousand acres may be classed as coal-lands, the rest being covered with valuable timber.

"These lands lie on the east side of the Broad Top coal-fields, and are reached by the East Broad Top Railroad, the terminus being Robertsdale. The measures are flat but not quite level; there is a general dip towards the southwest. In addition to this general dip, it appears that Trough Creek is a regular basin, having its synclinal axis near the bed of the stream, and its outcrops on the side of Ray's Hill on the east and Broad Top on the west. This formation is the best possible for mining, as it insures drainage towards the openings on Trough Creek. At Robertsdale the company have three mines, and are now shipping to market over four hundred tons coal daily.

"They have a coal-washer, crusher, coke-pits, and store located here, and employ about three hundred hands at this time.

"To return to the furnaces. Messrs. Taws and Hartman, mechanical engineers, furnished the designs and drawings. On the 17th of April, 1873, the centre line of two furnaces was run, and the first ground broken in the afternoon of the same day. The construction was under the superintendence of Mr. C. Constable, a civil engineer of New York, who in February last, after the completion of the furnaces, went to Tennessee, where he is now successfully engaged in running the Rockwood Furnace.

"The furnaces are wrought-iron stacks sixty-five feet high, seventeen feet bosh, with a stone stock house two hundred and eighty feet long, and two large brick casting houses. There are twenty-four boilers, which supply steam to two massive engines with four fly-wheels, twenty-four feet in diameter, having steam cylinders forty-eight inches in diameter and eight feet stroke. The blowing cylinders are ninety inches. The engines are direct-acting, low-pressure, and were built at Southwark Foundry, Philadelphia, said to have cost sixty to seventy-five thousand dollars. The gases are brought from the top of the furnace through a large downcomer to the boilers and the hot ovens, and there take the place of fuel in supplying steam for the engines. There are four brick hot ovens, each containing forty U-shaped cast-iron pipes, through which the blast from the engines passes into the furnace, entering the furnace at eight hundred degrees, and above six hundred and twenty-five being the point that lead is melted. There are five tuyeres, and numerous water-pipe connections. A large reservoir is built on the hill back of the furnaces. A patent air-hoist is used in hoisting the stock. There are forty-eight coke-ovens, twenty-four and twenty-eight inches, on the Belgian plan, each having its own flues.

"In the present condition of the country and the state of the iron trade, it is somewhat surprising that a company would start furnaces so large as these, but it is nevertheless so. Mr. H. G. H. Tarr, lately of the Gaylord Iron and Pipe Company, Cincinnati, is the present superintendent. After filling seven cords wood, fifty tons coke, and other stock, reaching to within eleven feet of the top, the furnace was formally lighted on New Year's day, 1876. There were present a large concourse of people of town and vicinity; the casting-house was brilliantly illuminated. Everything being in readiness, Mrs. Tarr, at 8.23 P.M., after lighting the torch, applied it to the kindling, and lighted No. 1 furnace amidst clapping of hands and applauding. She went off nicely from the first. Several persons were called upon for addresses. Messrs. B. F. Ripple, H. G. H. Tarr, and W. T. Browning made short speeches.

"The blast was put on Monday, January 3d, at 1.10 P.M., and the first cast made Tuesday at 4.15 P.M., producing about fifteen tons No. 2 extra iron. Since this time she has been running very satisfactorily.

"The indications are that before long we will be a manufacturing town second to none in the State. So may it be."

CONSTABLES.

1836, D. N. Carothers; 1837, David Burket; 1838, Hezekiah Irwin; 1839, Daniel Tague; 1840–41, Robert B. Herr; 1842–43, Felix Logan; 1844, David Etnier; 1845–46, Felix Logan; 1847–48, James Falkender; 1849, James Harper; 1850, William Halkenberry; 1851, David Cornelius; 1852, John McDonald; 1853, William M. Chilcote; 1854, B. F. Chilcote; 1855–56, David Irvin; 1857, B. F. Chilcote; 1858–65, J. Cornelius; 1866, Thomas O. Cloyd; 1867, John Kelly; 1868, Martin Hammon; 1869, Thomas L. Chilcote; 1870–72, R. T. Starr; 1873–75, J. M. Rodgers; 1876–77, John A. Rodgers; 1878, Adam Whitsel; 1879, D. W. Laird; 1880, W. H. Hart; 1881, William Lynn.

SUPERVISORS.

1837, Eli Wakefield, Michael Star; 1838, ———— ————; 1839, ———— ————; 1840, William McDonald, Benjamin Bair; 1841, Joseph Cornelius, John Bee; 1842, Samuel Stewart, F. Harman; 1843, David Burket, Aaron Stains; 1844, George Swartz, Andrew Gilland; 1845, John Bolinger, Joseph Cornelius; 1846, Isaac Bee, William Chilcott; 1847, M. Miers, Joel Moore; 1848, Levi Heck, Frederick Harmon; 1849, Thomas Teague, Joseph Cornelius; 1850, Joseph Cornelius, Caleb Kelly; 1851, Louis D. Evans, John Bare; 1852, David Hillman, Louis Evans; 1853, Caleb Kelly, Joseph Cornelius; 1854, F. Haman, Caleb Kelly; 1855, John Wilson, Peter Sechrist; 1856, A. Wagner, George Price; 1857, Thomas Turner, A. Robinson; 1858, George Price, William Jordan; 1859, Joseph Rhodes, George W. Cornelius; 1860, Samuel Stewart, William Jordan; 1861, John C. Bollinger, D. N. Carothers; 1862, Samuel Rank, Peter Secrist; 1863, Peter Secrist, Jacob Wall; 1864, M. Chilcoat, Daniel Book; 1865, Thomas Kelly, J. B. Shenefelt; 1866, Thomas Long, Thomas Kelly; 1867, Thomas Kelly, William Jordan; 1868, Jonathan League, Joel Moore; 1869, Samuel Stewart, Samuel Gilland; 1870, D. Grove, H. Morgan; 1871, ———— ————; 1872, R. D. Heck, W. Jordan; 1873, A. Miller, James McElwee; 1874, R. D. Heck, J. P. McKelvy; 1875, H. Mitchell, J. McElwee; 1876, W. Jordan, A. Miller, J. McElwee; 1877, E. O. Rodgers, S. Gilland, H. Beers; 1878, John Rice, James McElwee; 1879, William Jordan, R. D. Heck, James McElwee; 1880, William Johns, William Jordan, A. G. Whitsel; 1881, James McElwee, Adam Whitsel.

OVERSEERS.

1838, ———— ————: 1839, ———— ————; 1840, David Fleck, John Bee; 1842, George Swartz, Benjamin Bear; 1843, Michael Star, William McDonald; 1844, J. Rutler, M. Miers; 1845, George Sipes, Aaron Stains; 1846, Michael Stare, Enoch McMullin; 1847, Michael Stair, John Bee; 1848, Samuel Book, Daniel J. Logan; 1849, David Etnier, Michael Star; 1850, David Etnier, Michael Star; 1851, W. Rutter, John Fowler; 1852, George Swartz, Thomas Long; 1853, Thomas Long, George Swartz; 1854, George Swartz, Thomas Long; 1855, H. R. Beers, Isaac Enyeart; 1856, A. Wagner, G. W. Cornelius.

ORBISONIA BOROUGH.

The borough of Orbisonia is pleasantly situated in the beautiful valley or basin between Saddle Back and Sandy Ridges on three sides and Black Log Mountain on the other. It is also at the mouth of the narrows or gap in Black Log Mountain through which Black Log Creek flows.

Tradition, that always present and ever reliable old gentleman, tells us that the site of what is now the beautiful and bee-hive like town of Orbisonia was once the site of an Indian village, and to prove his assertion cites the numerous relics of barbarism found upon this plain, also will call the traveler's attention to what is supposed to be a cave some two miles distant in the side of Sandy Ridge.

Pioneer Beginnings of Orbisonia.—This being on the old Indian trail or path leading from the Susquehanna to the then undeveloped West, and being at the outlet of the gaps through Shade and Black Log Mountains, it did not take the keen-sighted George

Irvin long to determine where the best locality was for a store. Accordingly, in 1760 he built a small log store-room on the site now occupied by the Methodist Episcopal Church, southeast corner of Winchester and Cromwell Streets. His patrons were drawn of course from the Indians, a few white settlers, and those traveling from East to West along the old path. Here for several years he dispensed such wares as he had, consisting mainly of sugar, molasses, boots, shoes, a few dry-goods, guns, powder, and New England rum.

Mr. B. F. Ripple, of Orbisonia, has in his possession two of the original bills for goods purchased by Mr. Irvin, or Irwin, as it was frequently written. The bills are on old-fashioned unruled paper, and were undoubtedly written with a quill pen. The following is a copy of the bills:

PHILADELPHIA, April 16, 1768.

MR. GEORGE IRWIN,

Bought of GEORGE FULLERTON,

3 pcs. ⅞ wide Irish Linen,	No. 234, 69 yards, @ 16½	£4	14	10½
1 ps. yard wide do.	No. 237, 24 yards, @ 2-4	2	16	0
1 ps. dd. do. do.	No. 238, 25 yards, @ 2-1	2	12	1
		10	2	11½
Advance @ 85 per ct		8	12	6½
		£18	15	6
1 ps. yard wide do. damaged, No. 239, 22 yards, @ 2		3	13	4
Payable one month after date		£22	8	10
1 ps. Irish Sheeting, No. 149, 74 yards, 2		7	8	0
		£29	16	10

BALTIMORE, May 28, 1773.

MR. GEORGE IRWIN

Bot of DAVID MCLURE.

1 Hhd. Molasses, 102 galn's @ 23	£9	15	6
1 Hhd. N. E. Rum, 121 galn's, @ 2-4	14	2	4
Cash paid porterage		2	6
	£21	0	4

The following letter accompanied the last-mentioned bill of goods, and is also in Mr. Ripple's possession:

"SIR,—I Rec'd your favor of the 25th inst. with £16 6 8 to your Credit, and now send you one Hhd. Molasses & one Hhd. Continent Rum, which I wish safe to hand and to a good market.

"New England Rum is getting very scarce now, but think there will be some here soon—when any Comes I do intend to purchase the Whole that I may serve my friends at a reasonable rate. I have no news; flour Low and likely to fall.

"I am Dear Sir your very Humble Servt.,

"DAVID MCLURE."

The old Bedford Furnace, built in 1785, stood on the site now occupied by the Franklin House, and the old store of Cromwell, Ashman & Ridgley stood where David Etnier's house now stands, on Cromwell Street, and what is now Cromwell Street was the old original highway, or part of the Indian trail or pioneer path, and part of the road laid out from Burnt Cabins to Drake's Ferry in 1787. The next store was by Thomas Cromwell and Benjamin Cornelius, from 1824 to 1827. Their store, as well as that of Messrs. George Taylor and Henry Crownover, or Covenhover, stood on the lot now occupied by Thomas E. Orbison as a garden.

The pioneer tavern was what is now the Franklin House. The building stood on the opposite side of the street, and served the purpose of a horse-stable till 1820, when the old log barn was moved to its present location, converted into a hotel, and Benjamin Franklin honored with another tavern to perpetuate his name and fame. The landlords in the old Franklin have been —— McDonald in 1824, Foreman in 1830, William Pollock in 1834; then followed William McCardle, Robert Giffin, Jacob Baker, —— Cook, and Henry Wilt, from 1872 to the present time.

The pioneer grist-mill was built in what is now the borough of Orbisonia in 1787, and Hezekiah Crownover was the miller from 1812 to 1816. The stone grist- and flouring-mill was built in 1826 by Thomas T. Cromwell, and destroyed by fire in the fall of 1879.

The post-office at this place was established in 1830, and the pioneer office kept in Taylor & Crownover's store.

The Eagle Hotel, corner of Cromwell and Elliott Streets, was built in 1836 by Jonathan Carothers.

In 1833 there were but nine dwellings in what is now the borough of Orbisonia, and but three of the nine were standing in 1882.

The building now occupied as a grist-mill was built for a plaster-mill, and subsequently converted into a sumach-mill, and after the destruction of the grist-mill was, in 1880, converted into a grist-mill.

The pioneer resident physician of this town was G. W. C. James, who located here in 1844 or 1845. He subsequently removed to Fort Littleton, where he remained four years, when he returned to this place and established himself in business, and opened a drug-store corner of Elliott and Ridgely Streets, and is still in the enjoyment of a lucrative practice.

In 1833 there were two distilleries in Orbisonia, one of which was converted into a tannery by T. & J. Carothers, and the other converted to other uses by T. E. Orbison.

In the early part of this century Thomas Galbraith was the owner of a wrought-iron nail-factory which stood near the old Bedford Furnace.

Mr. Thomas E. Orbison came to this place in 1830, was instrumental in procuring a post-office for this then new town, and in April, 1833, engaged in the mercantile business in a log store-room that stood on the lot now occupied by him as a barnyard. The building was subsequently moved across the street. Mr. Orbison was instrumental in laying out and building the town. His was the first brick house in Orbisonia, it having been built in 1835.

Orbisonia in 1882.—There were in 1882 in the borough one general merchandise and hardware-store, by C. H. Reed; five general merchandise stores, Gehrett & Swoope, Downing, Vanzant & Co., J. Brodbeck, G. R. P. Enyeart, and E. B. Orbison (the Orbison store the senior of any now in existence); one drug-store, by G. W. C. James, Sr.; three millinery-stores, by Mrs. Alburns, Mrs. C. Bartello, and Miss Starr & Co.; one dentist, Z. B. Taylor; three physicians, G. W. C. James, Sr., G. W. C. James, Jr., and

W. T. Browning; two hotels, Franklin House and Eagle Hotel; one grist-mill; six churches, Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, United Brethren, Reformed Church, and Protestant Episcopal. The population of the town in 1880 was five hundred and eighty-two. Thomas E. Orbison is the present postmaster.

Rock Hill.—The town of Rock Hill, lying just across the Black Log Creek from Orbisonia borough, was laid out in 1874 into streets, avenues, and alleys. Here is located the depot of the East Broad Top Railroad, other buildings, yard, etc., belonging to the road. Here also is the "Markle House," a first-class hotel, situate in a shady grove, making it a pleasant resort for the summer tourist or the flying business man. There is in the town a large number of dwellings, most of which belong to the Rock Hill Iron and Coal Company, and are occupied by their employés. There is no store in the town, and all trading is done in Orbisonia borough. The name of the station is the same as that of the town.

Civil Organization.—The town of Orbisonia was surveyed and platted in May, 1850, and plan of town recorded May 4, 1850, and was chartered as a borough Nov. 23, 1855, with the following-named persons as borough officers: Burgess, A. W. Sims; Councilmen, William Ott, Amon W. Swoope, John Wilson, Solomon Grove, Solomon Koons, and Abraham Carothers; Return Judge, James S. Burkett.

The following is a list of the officers named, as far as found in the borough records:

BURGESSES.

1856, Simon Gratz; 1857, 1865–68, G. W. C. James; 1858, Peter Ripple; 1859, James Baker; 1860–62, David Hicks; 1863–64, no record; 1869, Lewis Carothers; 1870, W. H. Miller; 1871, James S. Chilcote; 1872, Anthony Cook; 1873, D. R. P. Neeley; 1874, I. F. Gehrett; 1875–77, A. W. Sims; 1878, 1881, W. T. Browning; 1880, B. F. Ripple; 1882, Z. B. Taylor. Mr. Sims resigned, and W. T. Browning elected to fill vacancy March 9, 1877.

TOWN COUNCIL.

1856, Thomas E. Orbison, David Etnire, William Ruttor, William Templeton, John Wilson; 1857, David Hicks, Solomon Grove, Simon Gratz, John Wilson, William Templeton; 1858, R. S. Starr, Solomon Grove, Perry O. Etchison, James Baker; 1859, David Etnire, James P. Tarbox, Perry O. Atchison, Solomon Grove, David Hicks, Esq.; 1860, James Baker, David Etnire, P. O. Atchison, Andrew Shafter, James P. Tarbox; 1861, Thomas E. Orbison, David Etnire, P. O. Atchison, John Wilson, Daniel M. Giles; 1862, Thomas E. Orbison, Solomon Grove, John Wilson, Robert Giffin, David Etnire; 1863–64, 1866, no record; 1865, David Etnire, Thomas E. Orbison, Solomon Grove, Robert Gehrett; 1867, A. Carothers, T. E. Orbison, T. M. Kelley, J. S. Burkett, Robert Gehrett; 1868, T. E. Orbison, R. C. Templeton, Abraham Carothers, Thomas M. Kelley, Alfred Kelley; 1869, R. C. Templeton, Samuel Carothers, Jacob Gehrett, Adam Knight, James S. Chilcote; 1870, J. S. Chilcote, S. Carothers, Adam Kunze, James Nesbit; 1871, T. E. Orbison, Adam Kunze, Solomon Grove, Peter Ripple, A. Carothers; 1872, R. C. Templeton, T. V. Cloyd, T. M. Kelley, A. Carothers, S. Grove; 1873, I. F. Gehrett, George Wilson, T. V. Cloyd, R. M. Brown, H. W. Miller; 1874, James Ruth, William Harper, Henry Wilt, D. P. Enyeart, J. S. Burkett, I. Book; 1875, A. Carothers, Solomon Grove, E. B. Orbison (Mr. Orbison resigned March 3d, and J. S. Burket was appointed to fill vacancy), J. B. Chilcote, William Ott, A. K. Green; 1876, Solomon Grove, Solomon Coons, William Ott, John Wilson, A. Carothers, A. W. Swoope; 1877, J. R. Bell, J. S. Burkett (Mr. Burkett died, and A. W. Sims elected May 9, 1877, to fill vacancy), L. F. Watson, B. F. Ripple, R. C. Templeton, A. M. Pheasant; 1878, L. F. Watson, S. Grove, John B. Chilcote, A. W. Sims, B. F. Ripple; 1879, S. Grove, Jacob F. Gehrett, D. R. P. Enyeart, Jacob Conrad, William H. Miller; 1880, J. F. Gehrett, A. W. Swoope, D. E. Fleck, J. W. Downing, Joseph Repper; 1881, William Keefauver, John J. Rowe, David Isenberg, B. F. Rinker, Solomon Grove; 1882, Henry Wilt, B. S. Willson, Miles Kelley, J. W. Downing, G. W. Kinsell, Joseph Blake.

SECRETARY OF COUNCIL.

1852, 1859–66, David Etnire; 1857–58, David Hicks; 1867, G. S. Blake; 1868, William R. Baker; 1869, A. J. Hamilton; 1870–74, G. W. C. James; 1875–76, G. S. Baker; 1877, R. J. Coons; 1878–79, E. H. Miller; 1880, D. R. Enyeart; 1881–82, D. F. Miller.

CONSTABLES.

1865, Caleb Kelly; 1866, Michael M. Logan; 1867, —— ——; 1868, James Burket; 1869, W. Chilcoat; 1870–71, G. S. Baker; 1872–75, J. Broadbeck; 1876, A. E. Chilcoat; 1877, Robert Wagoner; 1878, Jacob Reikord, G. J. Henry; 1879, Robert Wagoner, John B. Chilcote (high); 1880, George D. Wilson, W. T. Browning (high); 1881, S. P. Cook.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1866, G. W. C. James, David Etnier, Robert Gehrett, Abrm. Carothers, James S. Burket, D. S. Baker; 1867, —— ——; 1868, Robert Gehrett, Thomas M. Keley; 1869, —— ——; 1870, Thomas Weigh, William Harper, J. R. Carothers; 1871, —— ——; 1872, F. M. Keley, W. Harper, F. E. Orbison, A. Carothers; 1873, J. W. C. James, Joseph Repper, Robert Brown; 1874, R. M. Brown, F. D. Rutter, A. Krough; 1875, William Harper, C. H. Reed; 1876, G. W. C. James, James Repper; 1877, J. B. Chilcoate, H. F. Hess; 1878, J. F. Gehrett, C. H. Reed, Henry Loher; 1879, B. F. Repple, G. W. C. James; 1880, A. W. Swoope, J. B. Chilcote; 1881, J. Repper, J. F. Gehrett.

The Presbyterian Church of Orbisonia was organized as early as 1837, and upon the passage of the present free-school law by the State Legislature, a two-story building was erected in the town of Orbisonia, the lower story of which was occupied as a school-room and the second story for church purposes.

This organization was at that time a branch or outstation of the Shirleysburg Presbyterian Church, and remained as such till 1867, when it was recognized by Presbytery as a separate organization, and still continued to worship in the upper story of the school building till 1876, when the church built their present brick meeting-house, which is forty by seventy-five feet, at a cost of four thousand dollars, Mr. T. E. Orbison contributing nearly or quite one-half that sum, and in 1879 the church edifice was dedicated free of debt. In the spring of 1879 Orbisonia and Shade Gap Presbyterian Churches united in calling Rev. J. D. Owens, who is at present serving both churches.

Among the early or pioneer members of the Orbisonia Presbyterian Church were John Bollinger, Sr., Mrs. John Bollinger, William Lykely and wife, Mrs. Hooper, Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. Gilliland, Daniel Montgomery and wife, Mrs. T. E. Orbison, Mrs. Bigham, John Bollinger, Jr., and wife, and Mrs. Noble.

The pastors who have served this people are Revs. Britton E. Collins, who was for forty-two years a pastor of some church, —— Shaffer, —— Forbes, Samuel Alexander, —— Prideaux, and —— Watson (the two last were supplies), and in the spring of 1879, J. D. Owens, present pastor.

Present membership, fifty; value of church property, five thousand dollars. The Sunday-school connected with this church has a membership of ninety pupils, with an average attendance of seventy, with N. E. Otto superintendent.

Methodist Episcopal Church.[1]—Just when the first Methodist class was formed in Orbisonia cannot well be ascertained. However, the first Methodist church edifice in this place was of stone, forty-five feet square, and stood on the line between the lands of Thomas T. Cromwell and William Orbison, each one contributing half the land upon which it stood. It was built in 1846 or 1847, against the side of the hill, and a basement under one-half the building, which was used for school purposes. Mr. Cromwell was one of the projectors and principal contributor to the building fund. The old stone church was destroyed by fire in January, 1865.

The present frame church, located on the southeast corner of Cromwell and Winchester Streets, was built in 1866, and dedicated in 1867. The building committee were B. F. Chilcoate, Thomas Kelley, and James S. Chilcoate. The first trustees were B. F. Chilcoate, Thomas Kelley, Rev. W. H. Stevens, and William M. Chilcoate. The class-leader in 1866 was William M. Chilcoate.

Previous to 1846, when the seed of Methodism was being sown on this territory by the old pioneer Methodist preachers, services were held in school-house, groves, and private dwellings, the residence of Thomas T. Cromwell being the principal place, however, for such meetings.

Among the pioneer members we find the names of T. T. Cromwell, Catharine Cromwell, Ellen Martin, Thomas Martin, James Martin, Mary Harper, Nancy Hockenbury, Adam Hockenbury, David Hockenbury, William Hockenbury, William Rutter, Nancy Rutter, Lewis Evans, Jane Simpson, John W. Chilcoate, and Samuel Hockenbury.

Among the early and later preachers on this circuit may be found the names of Jonathan Monroe, John Ball, David Shaver, Joseph Lee, Joseph Parker, and Dr. —— Green. The following is a complete list of preachers on the circuit, which at first embraced a large territory:

1841, James Brands and Franklin Dysons; 1842, James Brands and John Moorhead; 1843, Elisha Butler and James Ewing; 1844, James G. McKeehan; 1845, James G. McKeehan and W. Gwynn; 1846, Jacob Gruber and —— Beard; 1847, James Stevens and Cambridge Graham; 1848, James Stevens and Alexander McClay; 1849, Robert Beers and David Shoaf; 1850, Robert Beers and W. Waters; 1851, Amos Smith and W. Shaw; 1852, Amos Smith; 1853, W. M. Meminger and Richard Dean; 1854, W. M. Meminger and R. Hinkle; 1855, Dr. James M. Clark and H. Wilson; 1856, Dr. James M. Clark and G. T. Gray; 1857, Amos Smith and G. W. Dunlap; 1858, Amos Smith and G. W. Hyde; 1859, G. W. Bouse and Thomas Care; 1860, G. W. Bouse and J. C. Cook; 1861, James M. Clark and G. W. C. Vanfossen; 1862, James M. Clark; 1863–64, C. Graham and A. W. Decker; 1865, David A[illegible]nberg and D. B. McCloskey; 1866, Seth A. Creveling; 1867, Set[illegible]. Creveling and W. McKendree Reiley; 1868, George Leidy and[illegible]W. Ely; 1869–70, J. P. Long; 1871–72, W. R. Whitney; 1873, W[illegible] McKee; 1874, W. McK. Reiley; 1875, W. McK. Reiley and O.[illegible]ton; 1876, W. S. Hamlin and P. P. Strawinskey; 1877, W. S. Hamlin and J. F. Pennington; 1878, W. E. Hock and W. H. Bowden; 1879, W. E. Hock and Alexander Lambertson; 1880–82, Elisha Shoemaker.

Present membership, one hundred. Value of church property, fifteen hundred dollars. Class-leaders, J. W. Downing and Benjamin F. Chilcoate. Stewards, J. W. Downing, A. W. Swoope, and John Barkle; Recording Steward, A. W. Swoope; Trustees, John Newatha, C. H. Reed, D. R. P. Enyeart, John J. Rowe, and A. W. Swoope.

United Brethren Church.—The pioneer preachers of this denomination who were traveling through the southern portion of Pennsylvania upon their missions of love and mercy, finding something of a settlement at what is now Orbisonia, made this one of their appointments or preaching-places as early as 1838. Notwithstanding the unfavorable prospect before them for several years, they nevertheless kept up their appointments, and in 1853 saw something of the fruits of their labor in the organization of a class of worshipers under the leadership of Andrew J. Kelley and Thomas L. Kelley, with the following-named members: Caleb Kelley, Thomas Kelley, Sr., John Rodgers, Elizabeth Beightel, Matilda Rogers, Margaret Kelley, Rebecca Kelley, Sarah E. Hockenbury, Jemima Rogers, Diannah Coughmore, Margaret Kelley, William Lee, Eleanor Kelley, Mary E. Johns, Elijah Beard, Elizabeth Ow, James Grover, A. E. Taylor, Susan Carothers, David Jones, Noah Stewart, Abram Price, and Margaret Richerbaugh.

Thus far they had worshiped where as best they could, sometimes in dwellings, and at other times in barns or school-houses, and thus continued till 1858 or 1859, when they built their present house of worship, located on the northeast side of Cromwell Street, in Orbisonia borough, at a cost of six hundred dollars.

At this time Rev. George Washington Scott was the preacher in charge.

Among the preachers who have served this people the records give us the names of Rev. J. W. Bonewell, in 1853; William Shepherd and R. G. Rankin, in 1854, and W. G. Rankin alone in 1855; Joseph Potts, in 1856; J. F. Talhelm, in 1857–58; G. W. Scott, again in 1859; E. D. Pringle, 1860–62; P. B. Sherk, in 1863; J. F. Talhelm, again in 1864–65; P. B. Sherk, again in 1866; J. A. Clemm, 1870–71; J. F. Talhelm, again in 1872; W. H. Mattern, in 1875; J. E. McClay, in 1877; C. W. Raver, in 1881, and L. M. Gates, in 1882.

Present membership, seventy. Value of church property, six hundred dollars. Trustees, G. S. Baker, D. L. Grissinger, and A. J. Kelley; Steward, A. J. Kelley. The Sunday-school connected with this church numbers over one hundred, with William H. Carrigan as superintendent.

Reformed Church of America.—The branch or society of this church located at Orbisonia was organized in 1876, with the following-named persons as the original members: David Grove, Isaac Enyeart, Joel Grove, and Jacob Woolfe.

[1] By [illegible] Chilcoate, Esq.

In 1878 the society or church purchased the frame building located on lower end of Cromwell Street, formerly occupied by the Lutherans as a place of worship, for which eight hundred dollars was paid. The building has since been repaired, painted, and refurnished, and is now valued at fifteen hundred dollars. Present membership, fifty.

The present trustees are David Grove, James Smith, and Joel Isenberg; Elders, James Smith, David Grove, and Daniel Isenberg; Deacons, David Isenberg and Luther Hileman.

The Sunday-school connected with this church has an average of twenty pupils, with James Smith as superintendent.

The pulpit of this church was supplied from 1876 to 1878 by students and others, when in the latter year Rev. J. M. Shick was called in connection with other appointments. He remained till October, 1881, when he was succeeded by Rev. E. H. Wrighter, the present pastor.

Trinity Protestant Episcopal Mission was established by the Rev. Thomas O. Tongue, under the direction of the Right Rev. Bishop Howe, in February, 1877.

The following were the original members of the mission: Mrs. A. W. Sims, Mr. and Mrs. John Puckey, and Mrs. B. F. Ripple.

Services were first held in the United Brethren Church, since which time the mission has made such migratory flights as necessity demanded; at the present services are held every two weeks in the lecture-room of the Presbyterian Church.

The following clergymen have been in charge of the mission; Rev. Thomas O. Tongue, from February, 1877, to Oct. 19, 1879; Rev. A. J. Barrow, from December, 1879, to Jan. 9, 1881; Rev. C. E. D. Griffith, from June, 1881, to March 6, 1882; Rev. John Gregson, the present rector, commenced his labors April 29, 1882. There are at present (July, 1882) twelve communicants.

Press of Orbisonia.—The Leader, a seven-column weekly quarto, was established in 1874 by Coons & Crouse, who continued the publication till the spring of 1881, when publication was suspended for a short time, after which the press and material was purchased by Messrs. E. J. Stackpole and B. F. Ripple, and the first number of the Orbisonia Dispatch was issued Sept. 16, 1881, with E. J. Stackpole as editor. The paper was at first a seven-column weekly, and after three months was enlarged to eight columns, with an additional length to each column, making it one of the largest papers in the county. Mr. Stackpole was for several years connected with the McVeytown Journal, and Mr. Ripple is officially connected with the Rock Hill Coal and Iron Company. The Dispatch is neutral in politics and religion.

Orbisonia Lodge, No. 640, I. O. O. F.,[1] organized Aug. 21, 1868. Hall located corner of Cromwell and Ashman Streets, Orbisonia, Huntingdon Co., Pa. Charter members, D. S. Baker, W. S. Thompson, A. J. Hamilton, Samuel Weight, Robert Gehrett, J. M. Booher, G. S. Baker, George W. Cornelius, Jackson Lambertson, W. B. Gilliland, Philip Kabis, T. M. Kelley, Richard S. Starr.

First officers: N. G., D. S. Baker; V. G., W. S. Thompson; Sec., A. J. Hamilton, now M.D.; Asst. Sec., Samuel Weight; Treas., W. B. Gilliland; W., Robert Gehrett; R. S. to N. G., T. M. Kelley; L. S. to N. G., R. S. Starr; R. S. to V. G., George W. Cornelius; L. S. to V. G., Philip Kabis; I. G., G. S. Baker; O. G., J. M. Booher; Trustees, Robert Gehrett, T. M. Kelley, R. S. Starr.

Present officers: N. G., D. H. Warsing; V. G., Jas. W. Rankin; Sec., B. F. Chilcoat; Asst. Sec., William Campbell; Treas., Jacob F. Gehrett; W., J. D. Singleton; R. S. to N. G., H. Galbraith; L. S. to N. G., Matthew Gilliland; R. S. to V. G., Samuel Crowther; L. S. to V. G., Daniel Cox; I. G., Jacob Painter; O. G., John M. Price; C., Joseph Blake.

Regular meetings every Saturday evening. Present number of members, fifty-eight.

Col. Isaac Rogers Post, No. 252, G. A. R.,[1] organized May 30, 1882, at Orbisonia, Pa., with the following officers: C., George S. Baker; S. V. C., William Minnick; J. V. C., A. E. Chilcoat; Adjt., B. F. Chilcoat; Chap., Jacob C. Lockard; Q.M., Henry H. Lahr; O. D., George S. De Bray; O. G., W. B. Snyder; Sergt.-Maj., A. V. Chilcoat; Q.M.-Sergt., Job Shinn; Guard, Eph. J. Hampton.

Names of charter members, their company and regiment:

A. V. Chilcoat, private, Co. K, 49th Regt. P. V.
Alf. Kelly, private, Co. I, 12th P. R. V. C., and Co. I, 19th Regt. Pa. Cav.
E. J. Hampton, private, Co. K, 205th Regt. Pa. Vols.
H. D. Weller, private, 101st Regt. Pa. Vols.
A. E. Chilcoat, private, Co. B, 110th Regt. Pa. Vols., and sergt. Co. B, 6th U. S. Cav.
William Minnick, corp, Co. A, 1st Regt. Pa. Vols., and corp. 2d Pa. Cav.
H. H. Lahr, saddler, Co. L., 19th Pa. Cav.
Jacob C Lockard, private, Co. K, 202d Pa. Inf.
Jacob Conrad, private, Co. H, 205th Pa. Inf.
Job Shinn, private, Co. I, 53d Pa. Inf.
Thomas M. Kelly, sergt., Co. I, 12th Pa. R. V. C., and private, Co. B, 110th Pa. Vols.
W. B. Snyder, private, Co. F, 1st D. C., and corp., Co. A, 191st Pa. Vols.
John E. Johns, private, Co. I, 12th Pa. R. V. C., and private 190th Pa. Vols.
George S. Baker, private, Co. I, 12th Pa. R. N. C., and private 202d Pa. Vols.
Silas James, private, Co. K, 3d Prov. Cav.
George S. De Bray, private, Co. D, 2d Pa. Inf., and lieut. Co. B, 36th Pa. Vols.
Amon W. Swoope, private, Co. A, 22d Pa. Cav., and private Co. G, 1st Pa. Light. Art.
John C. Early, private, Co. I, 149th Pa. Inf.
James W. Hickson, private, Co. M, 16th Pa. Cav.
W. M. Lynn, private, Co. K, 102d Pa. Inf.
David Kelly, private, Co. G, 16th Pa. Cav.

[1] By B. F. Chilcoat, Esq.

Daniel Heck, private, Co. K, 202d Pa. Inf.
James Kelly, private, Co E, 76th Pa. Inf.
B. F. Chilcoat, private, Co. B, 110th Pa. Inf.

Orbisonia Cornet Band.—This musical organization was effected in November, 1880, with fifteen members. The following were the first officers: W. T. Browning, M.D., president; R. J. Coons, vice-president; T. J. C. Ripple, secretary; D. R. P. Enyeart, treasurer; W. C. Wilson, leader; and Professor D. N. Craft, teacher.

The regular meetings of this band are held on Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week in the public school building, Cromwell Street. Present number of members twenty-seven.

Silver Cornet Band.—The Orbisonia Independent Band was organized Jan. 20, 1881, with the following officers and members: President, N. E. Otto; Vice-President and Leader, Thomas Wear; Secretary and Major, Z. B. Taylor; Treasurer, George Trexler; Horace Gratz, W. T. Gratz, Jacob Conrad, Samuel Glaut, C. S. Lewis, Oliver Carothers, John B. Chilcoat, Eddie Williams, Joseph Pearce, E. B. Chilcoat, Lewis Keffauver, and Newton Sunderland.

July 18, 1881, the band was reorganized, and the name changed to "Silver Cornet Band," it having purchased a set of new silver instruments costing six hundred dollars. The band is at present on a sound financial basis, and is destined to be one of the foremost of its kind in the State.

The following is the present organization of the band: President, Thomas Wear; Vice-President, Samuel Glaut; Secretary, George Trexler; Treasurer, George Debray; Major, Dr. Z. B. Taylor; Musical Instructor, Professor Samuel Brewer; Members, Charles Lewis, Charles Gratz, Horace Gratz, W. T. Gratz, Harry Sunderland, Newton Sunderland, Edward Crummy, E. B. Chilcoate, Joseph Pearce, John Pearce, Jacob Conrad, Eddie Williams, James Edmondson, Thomas Puckey.

Educational.—CROMWELL TOWNSHIP.—There are in this township eleven school districts, in each of which were five months' school in 1880. To conduct these eleven schools eight male and three female teachers were employed, at a salary of $26.87 per month for the male, and $25 per month for the female teachers. Total amount raised by tax for support of schools during the year was $2692.83; State appropriations, $369.90; total expenditures, $2870.90.

ORBISONIA BOROUGH.—The pioneer school-house was a small log building that stood at the north end of what is now Cromwell Street. When it was built is not known; however, it was the only school-house in what is now Cromwell township, and was the only one till 1836. The present school-house is a two-story brick building for the accommodation of two or more schools. In 1880 there were two schools in the borough, with five months' term each. Total receipts for school and building purposes during the year, $5801.86; expenditures for the same time, $3020.51.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

DUBLIN TOWNSHIP.

Geographical and Natural Features.—This is the extreme south township in Huntingdon County.

In form the township is an oblong square, laying northeast and southwest, and is fourteen hundred rods wide by two thousand eight hundred rods long. It is bounded on the southeast by Franklin County, southwest by Fulton County, northwest by Springfield and Cromwell townships, and on the northeast by Tell township.

The surface of the township is broken and mountainous, Tuscarora Mountain forming the dividing line between this township and Franklin County, and Shade Mountain the line between this and the townships of Springfield and Cromwell. Jerry Ridge is southeast of Shade Mountain, Turkey Ridge in the centre, Pine Ridge in the northeast end, and Hunting Ridge runs parallel with Tuscarora Mountain. The narrow valleys between the ridges and mountains, where properly cultivated, produce very good crops of cereals and grass.

Shade Creek rises in the northwest corner of the township, and flows southerly and westerly into Cromwell township. Little Aughwick Creek rises in the northeast end and centre of the township, and flows southwest into Franklin County. Trout Creek drains the southwest part of the township, and empties into the Little Aughwick a short distance above the county line.

Early Settlers and Pioneer Incidents.—Among the pioneer land locators and settlers in this township was George Hudson, who came here in 1782 and took up a tract of three hundred acres at the foot of the mountain, below what is now Shade Gap borough. The tract is now owned by his grandson, William A. Hudson, one hundred acres, one hundred acres more in the Hudson family, and the other hundred acres is owned by Henry C. Robinson.

Another of the pioneer settlers in Dublin was William Swan, who came here in 1784 and took up two hundred acres northeast of the Hudson tract. The tract has been divided, and is now owned by Widow Shearer and Widow Hooper.

Alexander Blair, grandfather of D. Blair, of Huntingdon, came to this township in 1784–85, and located on a tract of two hundred acres of land southwest from the Hudson tract. This tract has also been divided, and is now owned by McGinlay, Appleby, and Dr. Jones. Mr. Blair having an eye to business, hung out his sign in 1790, giving notice that he had a tavern and store to be patronized by the public.

Hugh Robinson was another of the pioneers that assisted in opening up this wilderness. He located on a tract of one hundred and sixty acres southwest from the Blair tract, and is now owned by John Minnick.

Among the other settlers who came here between 1790 and 1812 were George Wagner, Jay Robinson, William Newell, Anthony Manny, Andrew Sands, William Mosser, James Cree, David Cree, Jonathan Cree, Robert Cree, William Clements, George Kelley, John Kelley, Robert Peterson, Robert Taylor, John Swan, William Hooper, James Hooper, Brice X. Blair, John Blair.

Alexander McElroy was also one of the pioneers who was under the necessity of braving the fatigues, sufferings, and dangers of a life in the forest. Upon the occasion of his coming over the Tuscarora Mountain with his family, upon their first visit to Dublin township, he performed a feat of daring that none but a pioneer would dare undertake. It was winter, the snow deep and frozen, so that there was a thick crust sufficient to hold a horse. With difficulty "Aleck" and his little family had climbed up the mountain-side upon the slippery crust, and it occurred to the brave pioneer that he could go down the Dublin slope much quicker and easier than he came up from the foot of the Franklin side. Having a feather bed, which was the bulk of his household goods, he tied it in as small and convenient bundle as possible, mounted his improvised sled, took their little child in his arms, bid his wife give him a start, and away he went down Tuscarora's northwestern slope, reaching the valley below in safety. It is said that no more daring feat was ever performed, and certainly not a quicker trip down the mountain was ever made than that of "McElroy's ride."

James McElroy, brother of Alexander, was a "mighty hunter," and always carried with him his trusty rifle wherever he went, for he knew not the moment when he would have use for it. Upon one occasion, when he was on his way to Huntingdon for some provisions, he discovered a deer, and shot it, only wounding it. Before he could reach the deer a panther jumped into the path in front of him and started for the deer and soon overtook his prey, as the deer had become weakened from loss of blood. Before he could get a good shot at the panther a pack of hungry wolves were following on his trail. The situation became quite unpleasant, with a ferocious panther in front and a pack of hungry wolves in rear, and something had to be done and that quickly. No parleying, no chance shots; it was nearly night, and he was far out in the forest. Quick as thought he dispatched the panther as he was busily engaged partaking of his sumptuous evening meal, and then climbed a suitable tree, and awaited the coming of the rest of the menagerie. The tree served as a refuge during the dark hours of the night, and from his elevated fortress, and by his unerring aim and trusty rifle, one by one the wolves paid the death penalty, till when morning came he counted twenty-two dead wolves and a dead panther, the scalps of which he took to Huntingdon, and drew a bounty of twelve dollars each.

Mills and Manufactories of Dublin.—Like most other townships in the earlier history of the county, Dublin had her quota of saw-mills upon the numerous streams. Many of the pioneer mills have gone to decay, as the country has become settled and the timber cut off.

George Hudson, grandfather of William A. Hudson, built a grist-mill as early as 1800 a little south of his residence. The old mill served the purpose for which it was built till 1850, when it was abandoned for mill purposes and went to decay. The remains of the old mill are still to be seen just east of W. A. Hudson's residence.

The saw- and grist-mill at the gap, now owned by S. & N. Price, was built in 1820, and the grist-mill in 1846–47 by Brice X. Blair.

In 1818, John Blair built a tannery on the site of Minnick's steam tannery. It was subsequently owned by John Blair, Jr., who sold in 1848 to John Minnick, the present owner and operator of the Dublin Steam Tannery.

In Dublin township the officers have been the following:

SUPERVISORS.

1789, John Cornelius, Patrick Fitzsimons; 1790, Azaria McLain, James McKee; 1791, James A. McPhelter, Samuel Boman; 1792, Hugh Glenn, James Morton; 1793, Samuel Briggs, Alexander Blair; 1794, Alexander McElroy, William Kelly; 1795, William Kelly, Alexander McElroy; 1796, David Walker, William Waters; 1797, John Person, James Marshall; 1798, John Kelly, James McNeal; 1799, Samuel McMath, John Walker; 1800, Michael Kern, Patrick Fitzsimons; 1801, James Walob, Andrew Fricker; 1802, Joseph Campble, David Cree; 1803, Hugh Davison, Jesse Jeffries; 1804, Jacob Crow, Isaac Thompson; 1805, Adam Story, John Ramsey; 1806, William Gifford, Samuel Cree; 1807, William Pym, Jacob Hage; 1808, John Appleby, Hugh Dougherty; 1809, Michael Welsh, Hector Harper; 1810, David Walker, Gilbert Kennedy; 1811, John Ramsey, Michael Thronel; 1813, John Blair, James W. Nealy; 1814, Samuel Finley, David Hudson; 1815, Robert Fleming, James Cree; 1816, David Cree, Matthew Taylor; 1817, Abraham Long, Matthew Taylor; 1818, John Walker, James Neeley; 1819, James Hudson, James Walker; 1820, William Jamison, Gilbert Kennedy; 1820, James All, Robert Marshall; 1822, William Fitzsimman, Eli McLean; 1823, Samuel Findley, Brice Blair; 1824, John Walker, Archibald Stitt; 1825, David Cree, Jr., Peter Foreman; 1826, Samuel Finley, William Swan; 1827, James Meely, David Jeffries; 1828, John Nave, Eli McLean; 1829, Robert Taylor, Peter Long; 1830, James Cree, George Hudson; 1831, James Walker, George Taylor; 1832, Thomas W. Neely, James Harper; 1833, Eli McLain, James Climans; 1834, John Walker, Alexander McAninch; 1835, Matthew Currey, David Bowman; 1836, Samuel Finley, David Welsh; 1837, William Grush, James McCanninch; 1838, David Cree, W. Harper; 1839, Daniel Brown, Eli McLain; 1840, Samuel Finley, Archibald Stitt; 1841, John Blair, John Walker; 1842, David Bowman, James Neely; 1843, Matthew Taylor, William Marshall; 1844, David Hudson, Andrew Sands; 1845, James Divin, William McLain; 1846, Christian Long, Abraham Morrison; 1847, John Findley, Benjamin A. Stitt; 1848, David Jeffries, Isaac Zigler; 1849, James N. Stitt, David Peterson; 1850, William McClain, Robert Patterson; 1851, Joseph Hall, W. McLain; 1852, W. G. Harper, John Atkinson; 1853, John Spitzer, William Roddy; 1854, George Hudson, John Findley; 1855, J. Hudson, S. Borin; 1856, R. Fleming, S. Long; 1857, B. E. Stitt, W. McClain; 1858, David Peterson, John Swan; 1859, David Peterson, James Neely; 1860, William Harper, John Atkinson; 1861, Robert Fleming, William A. Hudson; 1862, Samuel Doran, William G. Harper; 1863, William G. Harper, Amos Potts; 1864, B. E. Stitt, George Mills; 1865, Robert Morrow, George W. Jeffries; 1866, John Price, Joseph Hudson; 1867, John Findley, John J. Swan; 1868, G. W. Jeffries, Joseph Hudson; 1869, George Foreman, L. Yater, M. C. Stitt; 1870, J. Price, J. M. Gilland; 1872, W. A. Hudson, James Fleming; 1873, George Mills, William Appleby; 1874, James Diven, G. W. Price, Daniel Flat; 1875, James Diven, David Cisney, R. G. Campbell; 1876, D. Hicks, J. W. Fogol, J. Appleby; 1877, Samuel Runk, J. J Swan, J. D. Findley; 1878, John Foreman, Hiram Shadle, J. B. Stitt; 1879, George Mills, A. D. Stitt, John Foreman; 1880, —— ——; 1881, W. Snyder, George W. Jeffries, John Crouse.

CONSTABLES.

1789, William Ramsey; 1790, John Walker; 1791, Jacob Gooshorn; 1792, David Cree; 1793, James Wamb; 1794, Samuel Bowman; 1795, Samuel McMath; 1796, William Steel; 1797–98, Andrew Fricker; 1799, Benjamin Briggs; 1800. James Fleming; 1801. John Person; 1802, Alexander Blair; 1803, Robert Welsh; 1804, Robert Standhard; 1805, John Apllihy; 1806, John Kelly; 1807, James Cree; 1808, John Gilliland; 1809, Patrick Fitzsimmons; 1810, George Wilson; 1811, Matthew Towlor; 1812, Hacket Harper; 1813, William Swan; 1814, Robert Welsh; 1815, David Walker; 1816, Samuel Finley; 1817, William Morrow; 1818, Robert Fleming; 1819, Robert Welsh; 1820, Robert Wels; 1821, James Neely; 1822, James Hudson; 1823, Archibald Stett; 1824, William Fitzsimmons; 1825, James Cree; 1826–30, John Kelly, Jr.; 1831–33, David Welch; 1834, Archibald Stitt; 1835–81, William Clymans.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

89, James Coyl, Hugh Orlton; 1790, James Morton, William Lindsay; 1791, Alexander Blair, Samuel McMath; 1792, Patrick Fitzsimons, George Willson; 1793, Jacob Crow, John Ramsey; 1794, Matthew Taylor, Hugh Glen; 1795, Jacob Crow, Matthew Taylor; 1796, Joseph Fleming, John Appleby; 1797, John Ramsey, Samuel McMath; 1798, Isaac Thompson, James McFeters; 1799, William Waters, John Simson; 1800, Henry Lukley, Matthew Taylor; 1801, Jacob Hegy, Jeremie Robeson; 1802, Adam Strong, William Kelby; 1803, James McKee, Robert Steenhard; 1804, William Gifford, John Ramsey; 1805, Andrew Johnston, Samuel Clemens; 1806, David Walker, Henry Bicherstoff; 1807, James McKee, Andrew Campble; 1808, Peter Bolinger, John Bigham; 1809, Joseph Campbell, Samuel Bowman; 1817, Robert Harper, Robert Taylor; 1825, Robert Fleming, Joel Eby; 1826, David Jeffries, James Carothers; 1827, Isaac Thompson, Archibald Stitt; 1828, Robert Harper, James Carothers; 1829, John Walker, James Neely; 1830, Alexander Appleby, Joel Eby; 1831, Mathew Curray, David Cree; 1832, John Bingham, Alexander McAnich; 1833, Samuel Finley, John Rouse; 1834, David Welch, James Harper; 1836, David Jeffries, James Walker; 1837, Hecket Harper, James Cree; 1838, James Hudson, John Walker; 1839, W. Clymans, David Brownsden; 1840, William Welch, William Appleby; 1841, George Kelley, John Appleby; 1842, Joseph Smith, William Roddy; 1843, James Cree, John Deniney; 1844, James Neely, Joseph P. Hudson; 1845, William Appleby, George Whittaker; 1846, W. S. Morrow, W. A. Hudson; 1847, Joseph Smith, Robert Fleming; 1848, Henry Robison, Jacob Hunt; 1849, Robert Peterson, David Paul; 1850, James Neely, James Harper; 1851, James Cree, A. J. Taylor; 1852, Brice Blair, William Harper; 1853, J. A. Shade, William McLain; 1854, John Appleby, Jacob Kough; 1855, J. Crer, R. Fleming; 1856, James Harper, H. C. Robinson.

Boroughs and Hamlets.—There are in this township but one or two settlements of sufficient size to be mentioned as villages or hamlets, and the only one of any importance is SHADE GAP BOROUGH, located at the easterly end of the gap, at the foot of Shade Mountain.

The pioneer settler in what is now the borough or its immediate vicinity was George Hudson, whose log mansion stood, and still stands, just outside the borough limits, near the old Kittanning path. At the time Hudson located here the site now occupied by the borough of Shade Gap was a dense forest, and not a tree had been cut. The forests have been transformed into fields of golden harvest, hamlets and villages have grown up, and a borough incorporated, all within a century. The old log house became unfashionable and too far behind the times for the young generation, and in 1849 the brick house now occupied by William A. Hudson was built.

One hundred years ago, when Hudson came here, his nearest store or trading-point was Carlisle, forty miles distant.

The pioneer merchant at the gap was James Stark, who came here in 1830, and opened a store in the building now owned by H. C. Zeigler.

The pioneer tavern-keeper was A. Forman, who located here in 1828, and hung out the usual sign, "Entertainment for man and beast." The tavern down at the forks of the road, now kept by R. B. Jones, was also one of "ye ancient hostelries." This was the old stage tavern. Here they changed horses and gave the passengers an opportunity of refreshing the inner man with either liquids or solids, or both, as the appetite and thirst demanded. This was known as the "Jamison Tavern." The old Forman Tavern, now owned by H. C. Zeigler, was occupied as a tavern till the spring of 1881.

The pioneer blacksmith of the gap was a Mr. Goshorn, who had a shop near the old Forman Tavern, in what is now the borough.

The pioneer resident physician of Shade Gap was Dr. Shade, who located here in 1842, and was murdered in 1876 by his son-in-law, Creswell Reese.

Shade Gap borough was incorporated in 18—. The burgess and Council for 1882 were: Burgess, H. C. Zeigler; Council, William McGowan, W. C. Swan, James Cree, William Campbell, W. D. Hyskell, and S. C. Montgomery; Clerk of the Council, D. C. Ray; Constable, D. S. Walters; Street Commissioner, G. W. Lamberson.

The business of the borough in 1882 consisted of one hotel, by William McGowan, who kept a temperance house; two stores, S. C. Montgomery (who is also postmaster) and W. C. Swan; one blacksmith, D. Thomas Bock; wheelwright, D. S. Walters; hardware-store and tin-shop, by H. C. Zeigler; cabinet-shop, by Frank Scott; shoe-shop, by S. D. Harvey. There are two physicians, W. D. Hyskell, George C. Borst; and Z. T. Jones, the druggist. W. C. Swan and H. C. Zeigler are the borough justices of the peace. There are also at this place two churches, academy, and district school-house. Population of Shade Gap borough in 1880 was 170.

CONSTABLES.

1871, George Corbin; 1872, H. C. Zeigler; 1873, Alexander Cree; 1874, G. C. Rhea; 1875–76, Robert Morrow; 1877, I. J. Scott; 1878, William Morrow; 1879–81, Alexander Cree.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

1871–72, J. P. Rody, Henry Hirch; 1873, W. Campbell, H. Shearer, W. McGowan; 1874, D. Appleby, W. C. Swan; 1875, J. A. Shade; 1876, A Cree, John Smith; 1877, Mrs. W. C. Kuhn, W. H. Lee, W. McGowan; 1878, S. C. Montgomery, D. S. Walters, W. C. Swan, W. McGowan, W. H Lee; 1879, W. C. Kuhn, H. C. Zeigler; 1880, J. C. Roddy, S. C. Montgomery; 1881, J. Brown, William Cook, W. C. Swan, W. McGowen, D. S. Walters.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—There are but two churches in this township, one in the borough of Shade Gap, built in 1847. Who the pioneer members were we are unable to say. This society is a part of a circuit, and is served alternately by the senior and junior preacher. The meeting-house is a frame building, located on the west side of Main Street.

The Presbyterian Church is located outside the borough and near William A. Hudson's. The old church was a log building, erected in 1800, and stood on the site of the present brick church edifice, built in 1848. The present trustees of the Presbyterian Church are J. E. Harper, S. C. Montgomery, Robert McNeil, William Wilson, and John J. Swan.

Musical.—The only social or musical organization in this township or borough is the SHADE GAP CORNET BAND, organized in November, 1880, with fifteen members. For 1882 the organization was as follows: S. C. Montgomery, leader; A. A. Minick, 1st E-flat cornet; Frank Scott, 2d E-flat cornet; W. C. Locke, solo B-flat cornet; S. N. Minick, 2d B-flat cornet; Charles Scott, solo alto; S. H. Price, 1st alto; John McGowan, 2d alto; J. E. McGowan, 1st B-flat tenor; John Swan, 2d B-flat tenor; E. H. Montgomery, B-flat baritone; C. G. Minick, tuba; William Wagoner, tuba; Miles Appleby, drum and cymbals; G. Neely and W. McGowan, small drums; J. E. McGowan, president; S. N. Minick, secretary; John Swan, treasurer.

Educational.—DUBLIN TOWNSHIP.—There are in this township eight school districts, which in 1881 had five months' school each, and employed six male and two female teachers at $20 per month each. There were in that year 114 male and 196 female pupils, and an average attendance of 148 scholars. The total amount of tax levied for school and building purposes during that year was $984.14; State appropriation, $311.43; total expenditures for the year, $1184.95.

SHADE GAP BOROUGH.—The borough has one school, and in 1881 a school was taught five months. Total amount of tax levied for that year was $76.81; State appropriation for the year, $42.15; total expenditures, $127.16.

The school board for 1882 were: President, W. C. Swan; Secretary, S. C. Montgomery; Treasurer, D. S. Walters; and Henry C. Zeigler, William McGowan, James Cree.

CHAPTER XL.

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

THIS township extends northeast from the Little Juniata to the Centre County line, a distance of nearly twelve miles, embracing the Spruce Creek Valley and the country lying between the Tussey Mountains on the southeast and the hills of Warrior's Mark township on the northwest. The average width of the township is about four and a half miles. The surface has a general inclination towards the river, and that part of it in the valley of Spruce Creek is underlaid by limestone, and has a very productive soil. Although limited in extent, these lands are held in high esteem for agricultural purposes, and the valley contains a number of fine and well-improved farms. The evidences of comfort and plenty appear in the form of good roads and fences and handsome homes. Much of the northwestern slope of the valley contains rich deposits of iron ore, the development of which has enriched the township, and given it a foremost position among the iron manufacturing districts of the State. Within its bounds are two extensive furnaces, and in the best period of the manufacture of charcoal-iron it was the seat of six or eight forges. For the successful carrying on of these enterprises Spruce Creek and its principal affluent, Warrior's Mark Run, have been important factors. The former is a rapid, constant stream of clear mountain water, affording a number of powers in its course which have been well utilized. The latter stream has a smaller volume, but is also constant and supplied with mill-seats. It has a general southeastern course, and flows into Spruce Creek three miles above its mouth. The township is well supplied with springs, some of which are remarkable for their size and the excellence of their waters.

Early Settlers and Old Surveys.—Mention has already been made of Alexander Ewing. On Aug. 31, 1786, he took a warrant for three hundred and fifty acres of land, including an improvement begun in 1777. The survey, containing three hundred and eighty-four acres and one hundred and forty perches, preserves the north of Ireland name of "Aughnacloy." His next neighbor on the south, Zephaniah Weakland, owned an improvement made in May, 1786, by Jacob Miner. Elexous Fowler, another neighbor on the northwest side, owned a tract, including Spruce Creek, that was improved in 1783. The tract next below Weakland's is the old Travis farm called "Moulines," and was first improved in May, 1777. Continuing down the creek we find next Abraham Dean's tract at the Great Falls, called Mexico, the warrant for which was issued Sept. 2, 1784. From this tract to near the mouth of the creek, which was then called the East Branch of the Little Juniata, the best land had been taken up by speculators in 1766. Richard Rickets, in 1786, owned the tract at the junction of Warrior's Mark Run with Spruce Creek, that had been improved in 1781. Immediately below the forks and on the western side of the creek an improvement was begun in 1761 on a tract that in 1791 was divided between and occupied by John Spanogle and Henry Nearhoof. Passing down the creek the next old and adjoining survey included parts of the farms of John Q. Adams, Robert L. Henderson, David P. Henderson, and others. Immediately below, and extending along the creek to its junction with the Little Juniata and up the north bank of that stream for more than half a mile, is a tract held by a warrant issued June 14, 1762, probably the oldest in the township. The application describes it as being "situated in the forks of Little Juniata Creek, including the clear meadows." On the original field-work of this survey, made Sept. 12, 1766, occurs probably the earliest application of the name "Spruce Creek" to the stream now known only by that designation.

Feb. 22, 1788, Abraham Sells applied for a warrant for twenty-five acres of land "lying on the mouth of Spruce Creek, including of one mill." The improvement was made in 1766.

On the 10th of July, 1789, James Hunter surveyed a route for a road from the head of the Cool Run to the Indian fording on Spruce Creek. The beginning tree stood at the road leading from Huntingdon to Northumberland. The points noted along the route were Charles Montgomery's barn, George Mathorn's lane, and John Smith's barn. The line crossed Warrior's Mark Run, and appeared to terminate about fifty-six perches southwest therefrom. Hunter, who was a surveyor of extensive practice, became the owner by deeds, executed in 1794 and 1795, of a large and valuable farm, since subdivided and held by Robert L. Henderson, John Q. Adams, and others. He resided there for a number of years. In 1817 it became the property of Joseph Moore.

The Gensimer, Pat. Madden, Dysart Plum Bottom, Stewart, Seeds, and other farms are parts of the London Company's land, and were warranted in 1766. An Indian path extending from Water Street to the path leading from Frankstown to the Bald Eagle's Nest, shown upon the old maps, traversed these lands in a northwest direction from the crossing of the Little Juniata, a short distance above Spruce Creek village.

James Armitage settled at an early date on Warrior's Mark Run, near Huntingdon Furnace, and warranted several tracts of land. The oldest warrant was issued July 23, 1776, and a survey was made thereon the next year by Thomas Smith, then deputy surveyor. Other warrants for adjacent lands were granted to him in 1785, 1786, and 1788. Some time before 1787 he had erected a grist-mill.

The following names appear upon the first assessment taken after the organization of the township at March sessions, 1789:

	Acres.
Armitage, James (mill)	300
Addleman, Andrew	.....
Boreland, John	300
Burgess, William	50
Boyd, Andrew (tannery)	150
Crain, Evan	.....
Cheney, Richard	200
Craffius, Peter	82
Clark, William	40
Calderwood, James	.....
Caldwell, James	150
Cox, Joseph	150
Davidson, Benjamin	412
Elder, David	100
Elder, Andrew	250
Fowler, Alexander	50
Foster, John	.....
Ferguson, William	.....
Fee, Joseph	.....
Green, Nathan	50
Gardner, Franciscus	.....
Ganoe, Jacob	100
Gill, John	.....
Hartsock, Jonathan	50
Hartline, Leonard	100
Hyskell, Benjamin	100
Ingram, John	514
Johnston, Benjamin	200
Jackson, James	150
Kerr, James	200
Kelly, William	150
Kent, Joseph	.....
Kane, James	.....
Kerr, Thomas	200
Kinter, John	200
Lewis, John	50
Lutz, Michael	100
Lewis, Evan	215
Loage, Hugh	230
Montgomery, Charles	150
Mattern, George	250
McCartney, Robert	200
McCreary, John	200
Massey, Mordecai	300
Meek, George	100
Moore, William	150
Montgomery, Thomas	150
McGuffock, Benjamin	45
McClellan, William	75
Mann, John	150
McClure, David	250
Mackey, James (distillery)	.....
Noble, John	150.
Nearhoof, Henry	125
Peck, Daniel	200
Parks, James	200
Pennington, Daniel	300
Porter, Andrew, Sr. (grist-mill)	200
Rickett, Richard	80
Rickett, Edward	400
Ramsey, David	200
Ramsey, Alexander	150
Sells, Abraham (mills)	125
Spangle, John	125
Smith, John	350
Stewart, Alexander	100
Stewart, Robert	300
Scott, David	200
Sexton, George	40
Travis, Widow	150
Thompson, William	150
Thompson, Thomas	150
Tipton, John	150
Vaughan, Thomas (mill)	25
Weakley, Zephaniah	100
Williams, James	300
Webb, John	.....
Weakley, William	.....
Weston, Thomas	150

Single Men.

John Montgomery. Alexander Ewing (mill).

Some of the foregoing were among the first settlers, but many had lived for a period in Franklin, and removed to distant parts, leaving no account of their settlement in the township.

George Mattern, a native of Germany, came from Maryland in 1779, and the following year secured a deed for his land, upon which he had already built a cabin. Into this he and his family moved the same year. Besides Catherine, his wife, there were children named George, Jacob, Adam, Andrew, David, John, Elizabeth, and Catherine. The cabin stood near where was afterwards the "Seven Stars" building, a large log house used for tavern purposes many years, and which was not demolished until 1866. The elder Mattern died in 1810. His daughters married Truman Curtis and Andrew Truby. George, the oldest son, married Catherine Hyskell, and settled west of Franklinville, on the present John B. Thompson farm, where he died in 1833. He was the father of John Mattern, of Centre County; Samuel, living at Franklinville at the age of eighty-five years;[1] George P., and Jacob S., deceased. The daughters married Henry Fulton, John Gray, Isaac Gray, and William McPherran. The second son of George, Sr., Jacob, lived on the homestead until his death in 1851, at the age of eighty-one years. He was the father of sons named John W., David B., Andrew, and Henry, who moved to the West; George W., owning the homestead; William J., living in Clarion County; and Jacob and Jeremiah, living in Hollidaysburg. Daughters married Samuel Conrad, William Stevens, George Shoup, John B. Thompson, Samuel Miller, and Alexander Babb. John and Andrew Mattern moved to Ohio and Clarion County. David, the fifth son, married Catherine Wareham, and died on the present Ingram farm in Franklin township. He had daughters, who married John Marks and Samuel Marks, of Tyrone; Samuel Jones, of the same place; Caleb Jones, of Minnesota; Angus Gill, of Clearfield; and [1] Since deceased.

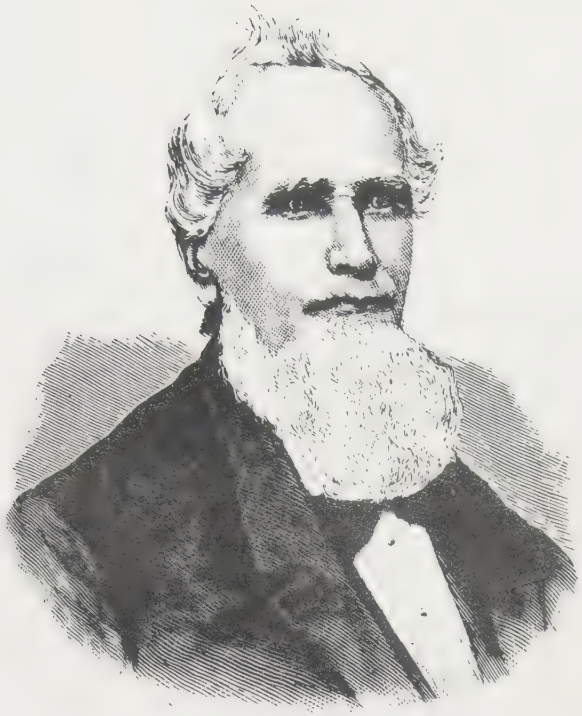
Nicholas Parks, of Franklin. His sons were named David J., John W., and George, the latter being killed by a railway engine at Tyrone Forges.

About the same time, 1780, Charles Montgomery, an Irishman, came from Maryland and settled on the present Stewart farm. He died in the township at an advanced age. Of his sons, John removed to Williamsburg; Thomas died in the township, one of his daughters becoming the wife of William B. Johnston; Charles, after living on the homestead a number of years, removed to Armstrong County. The daughters married John Porter, of Alexandria, and John King, who removed to Clarion County.

William Ingram settled on the present Ingram farm about 1787, living there until his death some time about 1830. He had two sons, John and William. A daughter married Samuel Wigton, of Franklin. The oldest son was married to Mary Ann McCartney, and they were the parents of sons named Robert O., William D., and John W. Ingram. Adjoining the Ingram farm lived as pioneers John Nichol and James Clarke, and below Ingram was the farm on which lived Robert McCartney,[1] one of the earliest prominent settlers of Franklin. Farther up the stream, on a farm yet owned by the Travis family, John Travis settled at an early day. His son James was the progenitor of the family now living in Franklin. Next above was the farm of George Thompson, of Irish descent, the father of Gardner M. and Harris Thompson, who removed to Illinois. Evan Crain lived on the farm next above the latter, and was a settler there before any of the foregoing. The road leading from his improvements was called "Crain's path," and was a landmark among the pioneers. He was the father of sons named John, Evan, Henry, Abraham, and Benjamin, and descendants of his family yet remain in the township.

Alexander Ewing crossed Tussey's Mountain from Barree before 1790, and settled at what is now Graysville, owning a large tract of land in that vicinity, and being also the owner of mills. He was a devout Presbyterian, and in 1809 went to Lancaster County to procure a large Bible, which he carried all the way in his arms to his Franklin home. This book is now the property of his grandson, A. B. Ewing, of Franklinville. He died in 1828, and his wife in 1831. Of their children, Thomas, the oldest son, married a daughter of John Bailey and removed to the West; William, the second son, born in 1798, married Rachel Gray and removed to Venango County. He was the father of Alexander G. Ewing, of Franklin township. James, another son, was the husband of Esther Bailey, and lived until his death at Graysville, departing this life in 1854. The youngest son, John, born in 1808, is yet a resident of Graysville; Mary, a daughter, became the wife of James G. McWilliams, of Centre County, and is also a resident of the above place at the age of eighty-two years. At Graysville, Jonathan McWilliams was an early settler, following the blacksmith's trade. Subsequently he made axes on Fowler's Run near the gap of the mountain. He attained legislative honors, and was elected associate judge. His sons were John B., George W., Thomas, and Samuel, the latter being a banker at McVeytown, Mifflin Co.



David Stewart, a native of Dauphin County, came to Pennsylvania Furnace as a manager, but subsequently became an associate of John Lyon and Anthony Shorb as owners of the furnace. In 1831 he moved to Coleraine Forges, and lived there until his death in May, 1869, aged seventy-seven years. He was the father of S. C. Stewart, of Tyrone Forges, and of other sons who removed to Ohio. Two of his daughters were married to the Rev. J. R. Hughes and L. M. Speer, also of that State; and two others, Catherine W. and Margaret, occupy the homestead at Coleraine. A sister of David Stewart became the wife of John Lyon, who was the father of George W. Lyon, of Pennsylvania Furnace.

George Anshutz, the pioneer of the iron interests in Huntingdon County, lived at Huntingdon Furnace from about 1795 till 1830, when he removed to Pittsburgh. He had sons named George, Jacob, and Christian, who left the township about the same time. At a later period James and Joseph Dysart settled southwest from the furnace, coming from Mifflin County. They were the sons of Joseph Dysart, and nephews of Col. Alexander Dysart, of Sinking Valley, for a number of years one of the most popular men in the county. James Dysart married Betsey Roller, a daughter of Philip Roller, of Morris, and moved to Lee County, Ill. He was the father of John Dysart, of Porter township; of the Hon. Joseph P. Dysart, of Iowa; and of sons named Alexander, William, Philip, and Samuel, living in Illinois. Joseph Dysart lived on a farm adjoining James' many years, when he moved to Tyrone. His daughters became the wives of E. B. Isett, Dr. Samuel Conrad, and —— McLain. The sons were named Wilson, James, John, and William.

Daniel Conrad, from Lancaster County, lived on Eden Hill until his death. He was the father of daughters who married George Dinsmore, David Henderson, James Dickson, and William Hunt. The sons were Samuel, who became a Baptist minister in Indiana County; Daniel, who died in Franklin; John, who lived at McAlevy's Fort until his death, and who was the father of Wilber F. Conrad, of Tyrone; and Fletcher, Benson W., and Charles Conrad, of Philadelphia.

In the same neighborhood Hugh Seeds improved a farm which is now owned by his son, John C. Robert Henderson, a native of County Derry, Ireland, came [1] Robert McCartney was drowned Wednesday, Jan. 27, 1813, in fording the Little Juniata at James Gray's fording, near the Dr. McPherran place. Up to February 11th his body had not been recovered, and his administrators offered a reward of twenty dollars for its recovery. He was remarkable for stature, being six feet and six inches in height.

ALEXANDER STEWART.

Robert E. Stewart was born in County Down, Ireland, and when forty years old left his native land, and in the sailing-ship "Faithful" sailed for the new world beyond the sea. After a stormy passage of ten weeks he landed in New York, and with a spade on his back with which to examine the soil, he started inland on foot. His idea was to travel until he found a location where land was cheap and the soil good. Arrived in the big valley in Huntingdon County, Pa., he obtained employment on a farm, where he remained a short time. Here he met with Miss Elizabeth Emmet, who, unknown to him, had crossed the ocean in the same vessel and at the same time he did. Miss Emmet was thirty years of age, full of life and vigor, and well fitted to be a pioneer wife and mother. After a short courtship they were married. The next spring they came into what is now Franklin township, and located on six hundred and forty acres of land he had bought from the State. As they looked over the broad acres they had bought, covered with the primeval forest, watered by mountain brooks and springs of pure water, with wild game of every kind in great abundance, and with the streams stocked with every variety of fish, and felt that it was all theirs, it seemed to their proud hearts a second garden of Eden. They named it Eden Farm, and it is still known as Eden Hill.

Until Mr. Stewart could build a cabin they lived and slept under a large oak tree. The cabin was built of poles, and covered with short boughs and dirt, and served as a home until fall. The cabin built, he cleared away the trees and brush from a spot whereon he raised a good garden, and later in the year had prepared a piece for buckwheat, on which he raised a crop that season. By fall he had built a comfortable log house, every part of which he made with his axe, save the roof, and it was thatched with straw. In the home thus built their children—who were Alexander, Martha, Elizabeth, and Robert—were born (the last of these died in boyhood), and in it Mr. Stewart died in 1837. His wife died there also, after living sixty years on the farm which she lived to see in truth a garden of Eden to herself and children.

When they first settled on the place the Indians were still very troublesome, and Mr. Stewart and his wife many times slept in the bushes at night, and he learned what it was to dodge around among the hills, expecting every moment to hear the crack of the red man's rifle. At times, when the danger from the Indians became too great, the family would leave their homes and go to the fort at Huntingdon.

They were both members of the Presbyterian Church, and were strict in their observance of the Sabbath and church rules. At his death he left half of his farm to his two daughters, the balance to his son Alexander, who was born Aug. 18, 1794. Growing to manhood on the home farm, among the dangers and hardships of pioneer life, he seemed to inherit the sterling virtues and the rugged character of the men of the times. His school experience was confined to fourteen and one-half days at the Birmingham school. After the school-house was built in the neighborhood he generally boarded the teacher, with whose assistance, after school hours, he fitted himself for any ordinary business.

He married Miss Elizabeth Evens, who was born on shipboard in 1796, when her parents were emigrating from Scotland to this country. They bought a farm in Allegheny County, Pa, on which they settled, and on which they were living when Mr. Stewart went to their neighborhood to visit a friend. He met and became acquainted with Miss Evens, and six months after returned, and their marriage was the result. Prior to her parents settling in Allegheny County, they remained a short time in North Carolina, where they first landed. The wedding tour of the new married couple was a horseback ride from the home of the bride to that of the groom. Her horse, saddle, and bridle was her wedding dowry. In 1840 Mr. Stewart erected a fine cut-stone house, the like of which is not to be seen in all the country around. The cellar wall is three and one-half feet thick. The wall of the house from top to bottom is two feet thick. The stone around the windows and doors reach through the entire thickness of the wall, making a structure as strong as its internal appointments are elegant. It is now, with half of the farm then owned by him, the property of his son, Andrew Jackson.

Mr. Stewart was, like his father, a Presbyterian of the old school, as was his wife. In politics he was a Democrat, and held different township offices, though he was not a politician. He departed this life leaving behind him the record of an honest, upright life. To them were born the following children: Mary; Robert E.; George W., born Aug. 14, 1827; Martha, May 16, 1829; Elizabeth, March 3, 1831; Rachel, June 2, 1832; Andrew J., July 7, 1835; Franklin, Nov. 14, 1836; Jane, Jan. 1, 1838; William W., May 1, 1840, and David P., Feb. 27, 1842. The farm of Alexander is now owned by his sons George W. and Andrew J., both worthy representatives of an honored name.

George W. married Miss Margaret Ginter, Aug. 14, 1852. Their children were Alexander G., born Oct. 22, 1856; John E., Aug. 3, 1858; David P., Feb. 9, 1860; Elizabeth, April 11, 1862; Barbara, Jan. 15, 1864; George B. McClellan, Dec. 20, 1865; Andrew J., Nov. 8, 1867; Rachel, July 24, 1869. For his second wife he married on the 21st day of February, 1872, Miss Martha E. Goodman. Their union has been blessed with six children, viz.: James, born Jan. 22, 1873; Maggie May, March 21, 1874; Esther C., Sept. 5, 1875; Washington, May 27, 1877; Glen Dola, July 10, 1879; Alphed P., April 12, 1881.

David Henderson

from Chester County about 1800, and died on the Bald Eagle Ridge some eight years later, leaving a family of eight children. Of these, Samuel, the oldest, died on the Henry Kuhn place; Thomas removed to Ohio; Robert died in Centre County; John died in Warrior's Mark (he was the father of Robert L. Henderson, of that township); Joseph removed to Colorado, and Elias to California; David, of whom we append a short sketch, another son, has lived in Franklin and vicinity most of the time since 1800. He was married to Margaret Conrad, and reared children as follows: Robert L., residing on the "Moore" farm; Thomas K., living at Union Furnace; Samuel C., living at Warrior's Mark; David P., occupying the homestead; Elizabeth married Daniel Weight; and Isabella, John S. Weight, both of Warrior's Mark; Jane, Samuel Dysart, of Illinois; and Mary, living at Spruce Creek.

David Henderson was born June 30, 1797, in Bald Eagle Valley, in what is now Taylor township, Centre Co., Pa. His father, Robert Henderson, was a native of the Emerald Isle, and emigrated to this country from County Derry during the Revolutionary war. He reared a family of nine sons and one daughter. He died when David, the subject of this memoir, was but seven years old, leaving him at that tender age to the charity of a cold, unfeeling world. When fourteen years of age he was employed by the Anshutz Iron Company at Huntingdon Furnace to carry their mail to and from Alexandria, Pa., which was then their nearest post-office. This position he filled for one year, at the expiration of which time he was apprenticed to Joseph Wagner to learn the shoemaking business. After serving three years and learning his trade, he for a time worked as a journeyman shoemaker. He then for the purpose of bettering his fortune went to the State of Ohio, accomplishing most of the distance on foot. Arrived at his destination he worked for some time at his trade. He was then prostrated by a severe attack of sickness, on recovering from which he concluded to retrace his steps to the land of his nativity. Purchasing a horse for forty dollars he made the homeward journey on horseback, arriving at Wallace's tavern, near Union Furnace, with but twelve and one-half cents in his purse. This he paid for a feed for his horse, then made his way to Half-Moon Valley, where he joined his mother in her humble home.

Soon after he commenced working at his trade in Franklin township, on the premises now owned by Judge Laporte, his only capital being the forty dollars received for his horse. Here he did a large amount of work for the extensive iron-works in that neighborhood, viz., Pennsylvania, Bald Eagle, and Huntingdon Furnaces and Coleraine Forges. It was at a time when the work had to be done entirely by hand, and he employed as many as eighteen journeymen at one time. He received his pay in bar-iron, which he wagoned to Pittsburgh twice a year. About the time he thought the teams would have reached the summit of the Allegheny Mountains he would start on foot, overtake and precede them to Pittsburgh, where he would sell his iron, purchase leather, etc., to reload his wagons for their homeward trip. In 1821 he married Margaret Conrad, a most estimable lady, who, after a life of exemplary Christian piety and usefulness, died April 10, 1877, at the age of seventy-seven years. Mr. Henderson in 1831 commenced farming on the farm now known as the homestead, one and a half miles from the village of Spruce Creek, in Franklin township, Huntingdon Co., Pa. For the farm he paid the then large sum of seventeen hundred dollars. To the pursuit thus adopted by him he ever afterwards devoted his undivided energies. He never speculated nor engaged in any other business, and in time became, as is now said by many, one of the most successful farmers in the county, paying for one farm only to buy and in time to pay for another. In the year 1864 he purchased a property in the village of Spruce Creek, to which he removed and where he spent the last years of his life, dying Oct. 7, 1882. At the time of his death he was possessed of considerable wealth of real and personal estate. He was the father of a large family of children, four sons and four daughters being still living. He died surrounded with all the comforts of life which wealth, domestic happiness, and filial affection were capable of affording, and universally esteemed and respected. Mr. Henderson was a man of genial disposition, social habits, and kindly nature. In his after-years he became very fond of entertaining his friends with the reminiscences and experiences of early life, an interesting fund of which a good memory had blessed him with. He commenced the battle of life under adverse circumstances, but fought it bravely and well with none of the modern advantages of an early education. Without money or friends, and with nothing to rely upon but his own resources, his success in life was owing entirely to diligence in business, untiring industry, and that keen insight into human nature and the practical business affairs of life with which nature had endowed him; and he is an evidence of what may be accomplished by prudence, economy, and industry, habits which, if strictly observed and properly cultivated, cannot fail of ultimate success.

The lands lying at the mouth of Spruce Creek were warranted June 4, 1762, but were not patented until many years afterwards. On the east side of the creek the Bebault brothers erected simple mills in the colonial period, and made other slight improvements. During the Revolution this property was occupied by Levi Hicks, who operated the mill. He was a brother of Moses and Gershom Hicks, both unmarried men, who had their home at Water Street. Levi had a half-breed for a wife and several children. This fact led him to believe that he would have immunity from Indian attacks, and he consequently paid no heed to the warnings of his neighbors, who urged him to go to some fort, in the spring of 1778, when Indians were reported to be about. On the 12th of May that year he started his mill as usual, early in the morning, and then went to get his breakfast. While at the house he procured a needle and thread to mend his moccasins, and returning to the mill seated himself in the door to do this work. He soon heard the rustling of leaves near the mill, but having no idea that Indians were about, he imprudently, and contrary to his custom, went to see what caused it, leaving his wife in the mill. While advancing towards the spot from whence the noise issued, he was shot through the heart. Mrs. Hicks heard the gun and ran down to the river, crossed the fording, and sped with all haste towards Lytle's Fort. On the way she met a horseman, but could hardly make him understand her, but when he comprehended the story he quickly rode to the fort. Mrs. Hicks then for the first time saw her boy, about ten years old, following her, which recalled her thoughts to her children. Arriving at the fort, the men there refused to go in pursuit of the Indians, on one pretext or other, until the next day. They then found Hicks scalped on the spot where he fell. A little girl who had ventured out to see what the Indians were doing to her father was knocked on the head, scalped, and left for dead. The Indians left without entering the house, into which the little girl managed to crawl, where she was found the next day sitting in a corner and gibbering like an idiot. Her face and head were covered with clotted blood. Two children were lying on the floor crying, and the infant in the cradle was moaning for nourishment. The scalped girl lived a number of years, but, not having had medical attendance, became feeble-minded. No clue of the Indians could be obtained, nor did any other depredation follow the murder of Hicks.[1]

After the Revolution Abraham Sells lived a number of years at the mouth of Spruce Creek, and later Jacob Beigle owned a tract of six hundred acres on both sides of the river, including the mill-seat, which was parceled out among his sons. In 1827, Jacob Isett purchased the property, and the same year his son, John S., made it his home, residing at Spruce Creek since that period. He was born at Arch Spring, Oct. 14, 1799, and at the age of twenty-six years married Mary N., a daughter of Edward Bell, of Bell's Mills. Of their family, nine attained majority, viz.: Edward B., president of the Altoona Bank, but residing at Spruce Creek; William D., a merchant in Altoona; Jacob H., living on part of the homestead; John D., a citizen of the upper part of the valley; and daughters who married, Eleanor, James K. Lawrence; Mary, James Gardner, who died at Spruce Creek in 1858; Ann, C. F. Sargent, of West Philadelphia; and Lucretia, the youngest, is the wife of Dr. Sidney Thompson, of Spruce Creek.

Following the development of the iron interests of Franklin, the population increased rapidly, many of those coming in remaining as permanent settlers. The property list of the divided township contained the following names in 1812:

	Acres.
Anshutz, George (furnace, forge, 2 grist-mills, 2 saw-mills, 23 horses)	1000
Boreland, James	40
Barcaloe, James	.....
Biegle, Jacob (grist- and saw-mills)	594
Biegle, Daniel	.....
Biegle, John, Jr.	.....
Bailey, Jesse, Jr.	19
Bartlett, John	100
Biegle, George	.....
Caskey, John	50
Conrad, Daniel	.....
Crain, Evan	200
Clark, James	200
Cartwright, Moses	.....
Cartwright, Edward	.....
Conrad, Michael	.....
Dearmont, Daniel	.....
Dougherty, Anthony	.....
Davis, Morgan	30
Dysart, Joseph	200
Eavy, John	165
Elder, David	116
Ewing, Alexander (grist- and saw-mill)	380
Eighmy, Peter	.....
Foster, John	100
Flemming, Thomas	80
Graham, Jeremiah	.....
Gray, Samuel	29
Gray, John (tavern)	150
Garland, Moses	.....
Graffius, Daniel	60
Garland, Henry	.....
Gurney & Patton (saw-mill and forge)	100
Hicks, Widow	.....
Hunter, James	309
Hastline, Leonard	200
Hostler, John	183
Hardy, George	.....
Haines, Jacob	.....
Johnston, David	200
Jackson, James	.....
Johnston, Thomas	.....
Jackson, George	.....
Ingram, William	534
Jamieson, John	8
Kuhn, Henry	135
Kellerman, Frederick	.....
Kerr, Joseph	8
Law, Benjamin	89
Leeper, Samuel	.....
Miller, John	.....
Mattern, Widow	.....
McClelland, William	.....
Marshall, Samuel (grist-mill, tavern, and distillery)	87
Myers, Jacob	.....
Montgomery, Thomas (saw-mill)	80
Mattern, David	.....
McCartney, Robert (distillery)	332
Mattern, John	.....
Mattern, George (heirs)	280
McCauley, James	.....
Merony, Thomas	.....
McWilliams, James	.....
McDonald, Patrick	.....
McClelland, Widow	46
Mattern, George	104
Mattern, Andrew	.....
Murray, Thomas	.....
Mackey, James	.....
Miller, John	50
Moreland, John	.....
McDermit, William (steel furnace, forge, and store)	178
Mattern, Jacob	33
McWilliams, William	127
Nichol (distillery)	187
Palgrove, George, Sr.	.....
Palgrove, George, Jr.	.....
Peck, Henry	236
Potts, Stephen	.....
Richardson, George	470
Richardson, William	.....
Richardson, Alexander	80
Rumberger, Adam	.....
Rickett, Isaac	12
Roche, Edward	.....
Stonebraker, John	65
Simpson, James	.....
Stewart, John	.....
Stewart, Robert	20
Stonebraker, Valentine	.....
Stewart, William	.....
Truby, Jacob	336
Tritter, Jacob	.....
Thompson, George (distillery)	322
Travis, John	188
Tries, John	.....
Van Zandt, Breese	.....
Van Allen, Peter	.....
Woolheaver, Adam	.....
Wright, Frederick	.....
Williamson, James	.....
Wagoner, Jacob	.....
Wilson, Thomas	.....
Wurtz, Peter	10
Williamson, Hiram	.....
Wagoner, Joseph	.....
Zeek, Charles	.....

Single Freemen.

Belman, Peter.	McPherran, John.
Brady, John.	Montgomery, Charles, Jr.
Cragin, Robert.	Mattern, Daniel.
Clark, Amos.	McCurdy, Daniel.
Clark, James J.	McDermit, William.
Calderwood, John.	McDermit, Joseph.
Elder, Robert.	Patton, William.
Freeman, Adam.	Ramsey, Archibald.
Gray, John, Jr.	Truby, Jacob, Jr.
Hemphill, Jacob.	Truby, Jonathan.
Johnston, Patterson.	Wilson, Abraham.
Kuhn, John.	Wakefield, James.
Murren, Joseph.	Wilson, James.
McKinney, Daniel.	Williamson, Hiram.

In 1880 the population of Franklin township was 1129.

Civil Organization.—At the March sessions of the Court of Quarter Sessions in 1789, the petition of a number of inhabitants of the north end of Tyrone township was read, setting forth the difficulties they labor under from the extent of said township, and praying for relief in the premises, when it was

[1] Vide Jones, Juniata Valley.

"Ordered that it be recommended to his Excellency the President, and the Supreme Executive Council, to erect the north end of Tyrone township aforesaid into a separate township and district for the purpose of electing Justices of the Peace, to be recorded by the name of Franklin Township, and bounded as follows, viz.: Beginning on the Little Juniata River, at the line of Huntingdon township [now Porter], thence up the same to the corner of Frankstown township at Logan Narrows, thence by the line of Frankstown township to the line of Northumberland County; thence by the same to the corner of Barree township; thence by the line of Barree to the line of Huntingdon township, and thence by the same to the place of beginning."

Warrior's Mark township was set off from Franklin January sessions, 1798, and by the formation of Centre County a part of the northern end was shorn off. Since the organization the principal officers have been as follows:

CONSTABLES.

1789, Shadrach Tipton; 1790, Robert Stewart; 1791, Abraham Sell; 1792, Thomas Kerr; 1793, John Mann; 1794, James Dixon; 1795, Daniel Plimpton; 1796, Benjamin Johnston; 1797, Thomas Thompson; 1798, Charles Montgomery; 1799, Jacob Truby; 1800, Mordecai Massey; 1801, Leonard Hastline; 1802, William Ingram; 1803, James Hunter; 1804, John Stull; 1805, Henry Coon; 1806, Henry Traver; 1807, John Stull; 1808, William McClellan; 1809, John Gray; 1810, Alexander Ewing; 1811, David Elder; 1812, John Nichol; 1813, George Mathorn; 1814–15, Benjamin Law; 1816, Jacob Mathorn; 1817, John Stonebraker; 1818, John Kuhn; 1819, Samuel W. Caldwell; 1820, Isaac Hazlett; 1821, Thomas Owens; 1822, James Dysart; 1823, John McFerrin; 1824, Israel Evans; 1825, William Ingram; 1826–32, John H. Stonebraker; 1833, David Garland; 1834, Joseph Tippery.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

1790, Alexander Stewart; 1791, Charles Montgomery, Robert McCartney; 1792, Evan Lewis, Henry Nearhoof; 1793, John Glenn, David Scott; 1794, Andrew Boyd, Charles Montgomery; 1795, David Lewis, Samuel Marshall; 1796, John Nichol, Abraham Elder; 1797, Evan Lewis, James Gibson; 1798, George Hinkle, John Tester; 1799, Henry Nearhoof, John Borland; 1800, James Armitage, John Glenn.

SUPERVISORS OF ROADS.

1790, John Smith; 1791, Thomas Kerr, George Meek; 1792, Robert Stewart, George Meek; 1793, Thomas Weston, Henry Nearhoof; 1794, Archibald Ramsey, George Mathorn; 1795, John McClure, Charles Montgomery; 1796, James Hunter, Alexander Stewart; 1797–98, John Spanogle, David Lewis; 1799, Leonard Hartline, Mordecai Massey; 1800, Jonathan Hartsock, John Evans; 1801, Robert McCartney, Alexander Ewing; 1802, S. Marshall, Evan Crane; 1803, Jacob Truby, John Bickel; 1804, William Ingram, John Spanogle; 1805, Jonathan Travis, John Spanogle; 1806, David Elder, George Mathorn; 1807, George Thompson, John Stonebraker; 1808, John Gray, Thomas Montgomery; 1809, John Foster, Henry Peck; 1810, James Clark, Robert McCartney; 1813, John Nichol, Caleb Roller; 1814, James Borland, Jacob Mathorn; 1815–16, Edward B. Patton, Samuel Gray; 1817, Leonard Hartline, George Beigle; 1818, George Thompson, Jacob Beigle; 1819, John Stonebraker, George Thompson; 1820, John Stonebraker, John Stewart; 1821, James Clark, John Beigle; 1822–23 (no report); 1824, Thomas Ewing, Robert Moore; 1825, Charles Montgomery, Alexander Stewart; 1826, David Mattern, John McPherran; 1826, Robert Elder, William Lytle, Jr.; 1827, David Mattern, Davis Junkinger; 1828, Stephen Davis, John Stonebraker; 1829–30, Adam Rumberger, Thomas Johnston; 1831, James Wilson, Richard Jones; 1832, Henry Crane, Joseph Dysart; 1833, Thomas Montgomery, David Henderson; 1834, William H. Beck, Thomas Taylor; 1835, William H. Beck, John Allen; 1836, Joseph Wagner, John Allen; 1837, John Mark, John H. Stonebraker; 1838, James Ewing, Hugh Seeds; 1839, James Enyeart, James Travis; 1840, John W. Mattern, Samuel McPherran; 1841, Richard Jones, Christopher Getts; 1842, John McCurdy, Daniel Weight; 1843, J. S. Mattern, Anderson Henry; 1844, Samuel Jones, J. H. Stonebraker; 1845, John H. Stonebraker, Gardner M. Thompson; 1846, John H. Stonebraker, Joseph Travis; 1847, John S. Isett, J. McWilliams; 1848, John Conrad, James Oliver; 1849, Christopher Wigton, Abraham Crane; 1850, John L. Travis, John McPherran; 1851, William Coleburn, Alexander Stewart; 1852, David Henderson, John Wray; 1853, George W. Mattern, Hugh Seeds; 1854, Abraham Weight, James Ewing; 1855, J. H. Stonebraker, Abraham Crane; 1856, William B. McWilliams, J. H. Stonebraker; 1857, John B. Thompson, John L. Travis; 1858, John Keimer, G. M. Thompson; 1859, David Henderson, Frederick Crissman; 1860, James Oliver, Robert T. Henderson; 1861, David C. Gates, Abraham Weight; 1862, Samuel Sprankle, Daniel Conrad; 1863, A. Crane, A. S. McPherran; 1864, George W. Mattern, John Q. Adams; 1865, John L. Travis, Washington Stewart; 1866, George W. Reynolds, Abraham Weight; 1867, Daniel Conrad, J. B. Thompson; 1868, W. B. McWilliams, Samuel Thompson; 1869, R. C. Ingram, John McPherran; 1870–71, H. McMonigal, J. Fisher; 1872, James Oliver, J. Q. Adams; 1873, Abram Hight, John Archey; 1874, Samuel Wigton, E. E. Boist; 1875, G. W. Reynolds, Robert Henderson; 1876, C. Miller, John Ebberts; 1877, Andrew Oliver, William Wray; 1878, A. Minnimer, James S. Mattern; 1879, N. Minnimer, W. D. Ingram; 1880, William B. McWilliams, W. S. Love; 1881, W. S. Love, Thomas McWilliams, George Kryder.

A number of roads were located soon after the township was organized, and the highways then opened have retained their essential features until the present. In 1810 the road from Coleraine to the mouth of Spruce Creek was laid out, running over the hills. Before this time the principal road out of the valley was from Marshall's mill to the "Hook," thence over a spur of Tussey Mountain down the narrows to the Little Juniata and the Shaver's Creek Valley. Later the main road from Coleraine was located along the creek, and a turnpike built through the valley, which is yet maintained.

AUDITORS.

1835, James Dysart; 1836, Jonathan McWilliams; 1837, James McPherran; 1838, William Murray, John Ingram; 1839, William H. Beck; 1840, James Ewing; 1841, William Hunt; 1842, Thompson Burdige; 1843, James Dysart; 1844, William Riley; 1845, Hays Hamilton; 1846, Richard Jones; 1847, C. Wigton; 1848, John Q. Adams; 1849, William B. Johnston; 1850, James Travis; 1851, Samuel Wigton, William Riley; 1852, John Q. Adams; 1853, James Oliver; 1854, James Morrow; 1855, Moses Miller; 1856, John Zentmeyer; 1857, Adam Keith; 1858, John Q. Adams; 1859, Samuel Wigton; 1860, Samuel Thompson; 1861, Alfred Porter, William B. Johnston; 1862, A. G. Ewing; 1863, George W. Mattern; 1864, John W. Mattern; 1865, A. G. Ewing; 1866, Samuel Wigton; 1867, G. W. Mattern; 1868, A. G. Ewing; 1869, George W. Mattern; 1870–71, J. Q. Adams; 1872, R. Ingram; 1873, E. B. Isett; 1874, John Laporte; 1875, Samuel Wigton; 1876, D. M. Thompson; 1877, W. B. Johnston; 1878, D. M. Miller; 1879, John B. Isett; 1880, John B. Thompson; 1881, John Q. Adams.

General Manufacturing and Business Interests.—One of the first powers improved was at the mouth of Spruce Creek, and was made to operate the Bebault mill, built about 1775, and being of the same type as the Minor mill, described in the history of Porter township. It was here that Levi Hicks, the miller, was massacred by Indians, May 12, 1778. Next the mill property became widely known as belonging to Abraham Sells, who had also a distillery and public-house. Jacob Beigle was the next owner, and improved the Bebault mill. The property passing into the hands of John S. Isett, in 1828 he built the mill which is at present in operation there. It is a four-story frame, fifty by sixty feet, and is supplied with four runs of stones. The motor is a fourteen-foot overshot-wheel, and the power has also operated a plaster-mill since 1870. The mills have been the property of Edward B. Isett since 1864. In 1836, John S. Isett built a bloom forge of two fires opposite the mill, which was kept in operation pretty generally until 1861. It was called "Stockdale," from the family name of the proprietor's mother, and this title was applied to all the manufacturing interests on Spruce Creek at this point and to that part of the village lying in Franklin, but which is now embraced in the village of Spruce Creek. In 1868 the forge was displaced by a foundry and machine-shop, which was operated a number of years. In 1875 additions were made to the building and the whole converted into the Stockdale Woolen-Factory, by John B. and William D. Isett, and the water-power supplemented by steam. The factory contained one set of machinery and was operated chiefly on jeans, but after a few years was discontinued. The building yet remains, but most of the equipments have been removed, Stockdale's manufacturing interests being limited to the grinding-mills before named.

The building of Huntingdon Furnace was the beginning of the most important era in the industrial history of Franklin township. In 1792, George Anshutz, a native of Alsace, France, erected the first blast-furnace in the neighborhood of Pittsburgh, which was abandoned after two years' operation, on account of the mistake made in locating it there, being too remote from the ore-mines. Returning to the East, Mr. Anshutz had his attention directed to the rich ore-fields of Franklin, and was not slow to see that water-power, wood for charcoal, and all the elements for carrying on a successful business were close at hand. He at once conceived the idea that there a blast-furnace could be easily maintained which might be made the nucleus of an immense iron trade. Filled with this idea he succeeded in enlisting in his enterprise Mordecai Massey, afterwards, Judge John Gloninger, of Lebanon, and Martin Dubbs, of Philadelphia, who formed themselves into the firm of John Gloninger & Co., for the purpose of establishing a charcoal blast-furnace, and carrying on mining at some point in Northwestern Huntingdon County. Although some of the partners had ample means, their faith in the enterprise does not seem to have been very strong, so that the beginning was made on a very small scale. Fifteen acres of land were purchased near the present Warrior's Mark line in 1796, upon which was built a small furnace, and one horse and a yoke of cattle were provided as a working outfit. George Anshutz was a practical ironmaster, and he managed the business with so much care and thrift that from the first it became profitable. The proceeds were invested in the purchase of mineral lands, so that in 1819 the company owned a tract of forty thousand acres, besides having several new furnaces and the celebrated Tyrone Iron-Works, which consisted of forges, rolling- and slitting-mills, and a nail-factory. Besides these there were grist- and saw-mills, stores, and well-tilled farms in such numbers that the company ranked as one of the richest in the State before a score of years had passed around. Meantime it was found that the water-power of the "old seat" was not sufficient to work the furnace up to the capacity required, and a "new seat" was found about two miles farther down Warrior's Mark Run, at Armitage's mill, where a furnace of large capacity was erected about 1805. This locality is yet known as Huntingdon Furnace, and is one of the most beautiful furnace seats in the country. The Armitage mill, which this interest displaced, was one of the oldest in the township. It was built by Caleb Armitage before Franklin became a separate organization. The company maintained its mill at the "old seat" a number of years, but erected, in due time, a good mill near the new furnace which is yet in operation. The furnace has also been rebuilt, and when last in blast produced forty-five tons of excellent iron per week. About 1835 all the partners except Shoenberger sold their interests in Huntingdon County to the firm of Short, Stewart & Co., rival iron manufacturers and proprietors of the Pennsylvania Furnace. Under this arrangement one of the new owners, John Lyon, took up his residence at Huntingdon Furnace, and other partners lived at the different iron-works controlled by the company, which now carried on its business on a scale never before attained. In the course of a few years a division of property was made, whereby Peter Shoenberger became the owner of Huntingdon Furnace and a large tract of land adjoining, rich in mineral wealth or affording good farms. This in time passed into the hands of the present owners, George and John H. Shoenberger. Since the depression of the charcoal-iron trade the furnace has been out of blast, but the dozen or more farms connected with the property are kept in a high state of cultivation. Among the managers connected with the furnace property have been John Maguire, Hays Hamilton, James Shultz, and the present George D. Blair.

The first forge in the township was built by Phineas Massey about 1798, and in 1800 became the property of John Gloninger & Co. It was on Spruce Creek, above Franklinville. In 1826 the forge was rebuilt by James Russell & Co., and was last carried on by Christopher Wigton, and was discontinued many years ago.

On the creek above this power John Gloninger & Co. built a forge about 1830, which received the name of "Elizabeth." After the lapse of years Martin Gates became the owner, and on the 14th of July, 1849, was drowned in the head-waters of his dam. After being carried on some time by his heirs, the forge was discontinued about 1853. Below Franklinville was a forge, built about 1810 by William Patton and Edward B. Roach, which received the name of "Upper Sligo." Three years later he built another forge below that point which received the name of "Lower Sligo." About the same time Samuel Marshall built a forge in the same locality, already having a mill in operation there. In 1814 the two Sligo forges were sold to Edward B. Patton and David R. Porter, who failed in 1819 on account of the depression in the iron trade, and the forges were for a time inoperative. Prior to that time, about 1811, William McDermitt, a Scotchman, came to the Spruce Creek Valley, and established the pioneer steel-works in America at the head of the Upper Sligo dam, just below the mouth of Warrior's Mark Run. The works were called "Millington," on account of the excellent reputation of the steel made at Millington, in Europe. Various articles of steel were made, such as shovels, scythes, etc., the goods having a fine reputation. Soon after the war of 1812 the works were discontinued and the power used to operate a forge of two fires called "Clabunk." This forge was owned, after the McDermitts, by Gilbert Lloyd, Samuel Steel, William Hopkins, William Beigle, and lastly became a part of the Coleraine property. In 1820, David R. Porter married a daughter of William McDermitt, and removed from the township about that time to the borough of Huntingdon. His subsequent career as a public man and Governor of the State is a matter of general history. The Sligo Forges became the property of David McMurtrie about 1820, and later of John Lyon and Robert T. Stewart, who also purchased the Marshall's Mills forge and property, consolidating them under the name of "Coleraine Forges," which name has been retained to the present. In 1828, Lyon & Stewart sold the Coleraine property to Joseph and James Barnett and Anthony Shorb, of the Pennsylvania Furnace, and associated David Stewart with them under the firm-name of Shorb, Stewart & Co., Mr. Stewart being for many years the manager. The forges were operated on blooms, of which the product from Feb. 28, 1828, till Feb. 28, 1860, was twenty-nine thousand six hundred and sixty-one tons. Up to the last-named period there were three forges at Coleraine, but that year the present large forge was built, which was kept in operation until Dec. 4, 1874, being last managed by Thomas S. Lyon. Its capacity is twelve hundred tons of blooms per year, and twenty-five men were employed in carrying it on. The grist-mill connected with the property on Warrior's Mark Run was built in 1868 on the site of one destroyed by fire, and which had been built by Shorb, Stewart & Co. The property is managed by D. M. Thompson for the owners, the Misses Stewart. At Coleraine Forges a store has been almost continuously maintained, and when the foregoing interests were carried on it was one of the busiest places in the county.

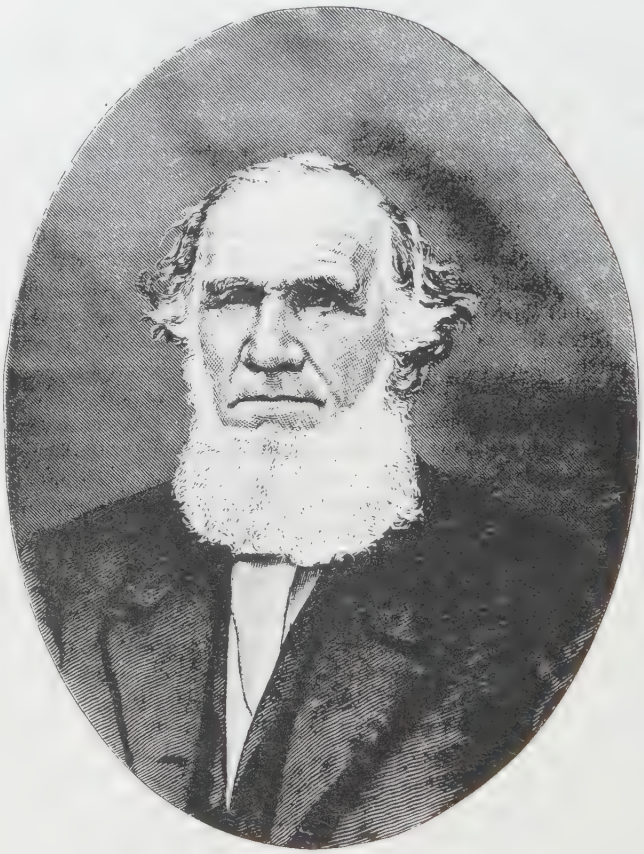
Farther down the creek Robert Moore built a forge about 1830, which he called "Elizabeth No. 2." This he sold to Samuel Caldwell, and he to Samuel Isett, when it was operated some time by Hileman & Hammond. Subsequently G. & J. H. Shoenberger became the proprietors. At a yet later period John Q. Adams became the owner, making blooms about ten years. In 1873 he employed the power to operate the machinery of an axe-factory, producing three hundred dozen per year. The capacity has since been greatly increased, and the manufacture of the "Forest King," "W. Park," and other favorite brands is extensively carried on. Ten men are employed. Immediately below Adams' axe-factory, Lingle & Harvey established a foundry, which had a number of owners, and was the property of Israel C. Caldwell when it was destroyed by fire about 1876. It was devoted to the manufacture of plows, farm machinery, and heavy castings.



At Franklinville the water-power was first improved by Samuel Mattern, who also built most of the houses in the hamlet. The first building was a small stone house for a hat-shop, in which he carried on the hatter's trade a number of years. The water-power was first used to operate carding machinery, and later a fulling-mill and machinery for making woolen goods were added. The factory has been kept in operation many years; Matthew D. Keatley succeeding Mr. Mattern, and Zachariah and Edward Keatley being the present owners. The products are satinets, blankets, and flannels.

In the hamlet, John M. Mattern, John Conrad, Matthew D. Keatley, and others formerly merchandised. Since 1866, Alexander G. Ewing has been in trade, also being postmaster of the Franklinville office. This office was established more recently than the Coleraine Forges office. The latter was first known by the name of Marshall's Mills, Samuel Marshall postmaster, and was the first in the lower part of the valley. In 1830, Joseph Barnett was the postmaster of the office, which now bore the name of Coleraine Forges, by which it is yet known. The present postmaster is D. M. Thompson. Intermediate officials have been David Stewart and John C. Stevenson. The hamlet of Franklinville contains besides a dozen houses, a Methodist Church, and a public hall. Above this place is a water-power, which was improved by Charles Montgomery in the early history of the township, and has been made to operate a saw-mill almost continuously since. The proprietor in 1881 was William B. Johnston.

On Spruce Creek, several miles from the Centre County line, is the small hamlet of Graysville, so called for John Gray, an early settler at that place, whose family removed at his death. John Fowler, another early settler, lived at the mouth of the brook which still bears his name. His farm is now owned by James Oliver. Alexander Ewing built the grist-mill which is still in operation at this point about 1788. Internally it has been somewhat changed, but in the main it remains as built nearly a hundred years ago. It has had numerous owners, and in 1881 was the property of Isaac Woomer. Stores have been kept at the hamlet by a number of parties, among them being John Ewing, Martin Gates, H. A. Bathurst, and the present Johnson Archer. Small public-houses were also maintained by John Gray, Samuel Jacobs, and others, and the foregoing usually served as postmasters of the Graysville office, of which Mary Archy was the postmistress in 1881. A daily mail is supplied by the stage line from Spruce Creek to Centre Hall.

Three-quarters of a mile above Graysville was a fulling-mill, in 1800. Among its owners were Stephen Davis and William Curry. While owned by William S. and James W. Curry it was destroyed by fire. Yet farther above, on the Centre County line, are the interests connected with the Pennsylvania Furnace, the hamlet extending into Centre County, and being but a short distance from Baileyville, in that county; a furnace, grist-mill, store, the mansion of the resident partner of the furnace company, George W. Lyon. The post-office is Graysville.[1] One of the first physicians in this locality was Dr. Hugh Montgomery. Dr. Lemuel Kenslow was a subsequent practitioner. Dr. John McDonald was the resident physician at Baileyville for twenty years. Dr. T. C. Van Tries, the present physician, was born in Bedford in 1840. In 1865 he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, and then established himself in practice at Pennsylvania Furnace, his residence being at Baileyville.

John S. Isett

It is to be regretted that a sketch of the Pennsylvania Furnace, promised for this work, was not received by the publisher.

Prominently connected with the business interests of this locality was Jacob Isett. He was born of German Lutheran parents in Bucks County, Pa., Feb. 16, 1760. In 1787 he came to Sinking Valley, and at the Lead-Mine Fort worked at his trade of shoemaking. There was no money to be had for work, and he took his pay in wheat at fifty cents per bushel. It advanced in price, and he sold the two hundred bushels he had accumulated at one dollar and fifty cents per bushel, which was his start in life. He then bought the Arch Spring property, and in 1789 built a saw- and grist-mill. The grist-mill had but one run of stones, which were obtained in the neighboring mountains, while the bolter was turned by hand and by those who wished their flour bolted. He afterwards bought what is known now as the Union Furnace power, intending to build a merchant and grist-mill. In 1798, Mr. Isett built on the Little Juniata River the foundation for a dam, dug part of a head-race, and put in head-gates, all of which were washed away by a flood the next spring. He then sent his millwright to the Arch Spring Mill, who reported that power could be obtained to drive a fourteen-foot overshot-wheel, and the following spring (1799) he built a stone grist-mill which was forty by forty-five feet and three stories high, and was for that time a very large mill.

In 1795, Mr. Isett married Miss Eleanor Stockdale, who was born of Protestant parents, in County Down, Ireland. Her father emigrated to America, and settled in Baltimore, where he died two years after, leaving his family in very straitened circumstances. Her mother married again, and the family then came to Canoe Valley, in Huntingdon County, Pa. To them were born seven children, of whom John S. Isett was born Oct. 14, 1799. He had done but little, except going to school, until his return from Alexandria in April, 1814, where he had been attending school a couple of years. He there had obtained a good education for that day, and his father gave him his choice, either to go to the Carlisle College or take his axe and go into the clearing. He chose the latter, as he was tired of study. The next fall he went into the store of Cyrus Cartwright as a clerk, where he remained a few months, then went home, and in his father's mill learned the miller's trade. In 1817 he took charge of the mill, receiving the same share of the profits as other millers did. When he had accumulated four hundred dollars he determined to go to St. Louis, where he expected to at once become rich. His father consented to his going, telling him that when his money was gone to come back, if he wished to do so. In company with John Wray, he bought in Pittsburgh a skiff, in which they went to Cincinnati, thence in a raft to Louisville, and then by steamboat to Shawneetown, from there on foot by the way of Kaskaskia to St. Louis. Not finding employment to suit him he went to Carlisle, Mo., where he met Dr. J. H. Lambert and family, with whom he visited a short time, then went into partnership with the doctor in a small store. He was soon taken sick, and on his recovery found the business in such a condition that he was glad to accept the doctor's offer to take his money back and work on a salary. He got the work, but, owing to the failure of the doctor, never got his money, and he returned to his home a sadder but wiser young man than when he left it. For more than a year he worked on the farm after his St. Louis trip, then went into the mill again. In 1824 his father built a new mill (the one now at Arch Spring), which he managed, as well as a store owned by him and his brother-in-law.

[1] A post-office called Pennsylvania Furnace has since been established.

On the 19th day of July, 1825, Mr. Isett was joined in marriage with Miss Mary Ann Bell, daughter of Edward Bell, of Antis township, Blair Co. To Mr. and Mrs. Isett there have been born eight sons and four daughters, of whom three sons and four daughters are still living. In 1826 his father (Jacob Isett) bought of ex-Governor Heister the Spruce Creek property, and in October, 1827, the family moved to the new purchase, which has since remained their home. In 1828 the present mill at Spruce Creek was built by Mr. John S. Isett, which he managed in connection with the mercantile business. In 1831 he built his present residence, intending it for a tavern, but changed his mind and occupied it as a dwelling-house. During this time he was also running the farms owned by him, and was prosperous in all his business matters. In 1836 he built a small bloom forge with one hammer and two refining fires, which he carried on until 1861. In January, 1839, he was appointed by the Hon. Thomas Burnside, president judge of the Huntingdon court, sequestrator of the Huntingdon, Cambria and Indiana Turnpike Company, which pike extended from Huntingdon borough to Blairsville, in Indiana County, Pa., and for twenty-six years he had charge and control of the road.

In 1844, Mr. Isett, with his son Jacob H., made an extended trip to the Hot Springs, Ark.; thence, by wagon, through Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, and Iowa, and in the following year, with his son Edward B., went to Missouri and purchased a tract of land, on which he intended to move the next spring and raise stock; but the season was sickly, and he did not deem it advisable to move his family thereon. His father died in 1852; his mother in 1827. In his religious views Mr. Isett is liberal; in his political views Democratic. He now resides at the old home in Spruce Creek, surrounded by sons and daughters, who ever stand ready, so far as in their power, to make smooth his pathway through the declining years of a long and well-spent life.

Educational and Religious.—The pioneer religious history of Spruce Creek Valley is the same as that of Warrior's Mark township. For a number of years the settlers of this part of the county maintained a common place of worship in a locality which is now known as Dry Hollow, but where were two springs of good water, the only ones in all that region. That fact and the further one that it was a central point for the Presbyterians living in the half-dozen valleys round about caused them to build a small log meeting-house there, probably about 1790, in which worship was statedly held a number of years. Prior to this evangelists visited the people, preaching at the houses of the members, and in the summer season in the woods, near some spring where the people might refresh themselves during the noon intermission. The Rev. Matthew Stephens preached as early as the fourth Sabbath in June, 1786, and was probably the first Presbyterian minister to venture west of Tussey's Mountain. The next preacher of whom any account has been preserved was the Rev. Samuel Wilson, a licentiate, who held a meeting on the first Sabbath of August, 1786. Following him was the Rev. Mr. Caldwell, a "probationer" from Ireland. The Rev. James Martin assumed pastoral relations about 1789, and remained until his death, which occurred June 20, 1795. His salary was fixed at sixty-five pounds specie "to relieve him from worldly concern." He was an able man and a popular minister, and it was while he labored among the people that the Dry Hollow meeting-house was built. His successors in the pastoral office were supplies sent by the Presbytery of Huntingdon, among the number being the Revs. Wiley, Johnston, and Bard.

In 1797, Thomas Wilson, who seems to have been an elder, besought the Presbytery for preaching supplies, and Mr. Stephens again visited the people of Warrior's Mark and Franklin, who, although regarded as a congregation, do not appear to have been regularly organized, being united probably only by a common purpose to maintain preaching. But about this time the congregation of Spruce Creek was formed, and from this period, 1798, we may properly date the history of Spruce Creek Presbyterian Church.—The congregation absorbed the chief element of the worshipers at the Dry Hollow meeting-house, and joined the congregation of Sinking Valley in calling a pastor, providing a new house of worship in the Spruce Creek Valley. The old meeting-house was abandoned, and not long afterwards was burned by a forest fire. The church building was in what is known as the cemetery lot at Graysville, and was built of logs, about thirty feet square. It had galleries on the two sides and one opposite the high pulpit, being for that day quite a spacious building. It was not finished before 1805, and when it was first occupied had no seats, the congregation sitting on the sleepers. Then came board seats without backs.

On the 20th of November, 1798, Rev. Samuel Bryson was ordained the first pastor of the united congregations, the ceremony taking place at the house of Robert McCartney, on lower Spruce Creek. He served in that relation until 1803, and was followed by the Revs. James Linn, William Stewart, and John Hutchinson as supplies. Rev. William A. Boyd, a native of Lancaster, became the next pastor of the two congregations April 2, 1817. He was married to a daughter of Henry McWilliams, and his home was on the farm now owned by Judge Laporte, in Franklin. Resigning on account of ill health, he died May 11, 1823.

From 1825 till 1843 the Rev. Samuel Hill served as pastor, following the Rev. John McIlhenny, who had supplied the congregations a short time. Mr. Hill preached long sermons and impressed his individuality upon his hearers. He paid much attention to catechetical instruction, and was an outspoken temperance man. Some of his hearers had not yet been educated to accept the radical views of Mr. Hill, and frequently manifested a hostile disposition towards him and those who fully accepted his views. To show their disrespect for him, some one entered the church and chopped to pieces the pulpit and cut into shreds the Bible. He was the exclusive pastor of Spruce Creek from 1836 until he resigned.

On the 3d of September, 1845, Rev. John White became the pastor, and during his connection with the church, which was terminated two years later, a division arose about psalmody, which gave rise to the First and Second Churches of Spruce Creek, both congregations using the same house of worship. This was a frame building which had displaced the old log church in 1830. In the course of years the first congregation built the present house of worship below Graysville, which was dedicated March 26, 1858. It is a stately-looking edifice of blue limestone, forty-five by seventy-six feet, neatly finished, heated from the basement, and is one of the most complete country churches in the county. It was built in the pastorate of the Rev. John Elliott, and cost about six thousand dollars. The Second Church meantime occupied the frame meeting-house, each congregation calling its own minister. The pastor of the First Church was the Rev. David L. Hughes, who was installed June 13, 1848, and was relieved October, 1857. The Second Church, which accepted Rouse's version of the Psalms, called the Rev. Israel W. Ward in 1849, and he was the pastor until June, 1853. His successor was the Rev. Thomas Stevenson, who was installed in the spring of 1854, and resigned in April, 1859. In May, 1859, the two churches reunited and became one congregation, under the pastoral care of the Rev. John Elliott, who had been called by the First Church two years before. The old frame meeting-house, which the Second Church had used until this period, was taken down and removed to Rock Springs, where it was used for the afternoon meetings of members residing in that part of the valley until 1873, when it was sold to private parties. The same year the chapel at Pennsylvania Furnace was built, and the appointment at Rock Springs transferred to that place. The parsonage at Pennsylvania Furnace, a large and comfortable residence, was built in 1850, and the Coleraine Chapel the same year. The congregation yet maintains these three places of worship, and in 1881 the church property was controlled by Trustees John Bailey, John Goheen, Robert Gardner, George W. Reynolds, Thomas Davis, Andrew Oliver, and John M. Wigton.

The pastors of the united congregations have been the Rev. John Elliott till 1861; the Rev. William Alexander, stated supply, in 1861; the Rev. Oscar A. Hill, D.D., 1862–65; the Rev. S. T. Owes, Ph.D., 1866–69; and the Rev. J. C. Kelley since 1870. From a historical sermon of the latter this sketch has been prepared. The congregation in 1881 had about two hundred members.

Among the elders of Spruce Creek Church have been Joseph McPherson, Alexander Stewart, William Cooper, Henry McWilliams, John Nichol, Robert McCartney, Charles Montgomery, Robert Gardner, William McWilliams, Samuel Cooper, John Bailey, Jonathan McWilliams, Gardner Thompson, William Rankin, John Stalkin, John McCurdy, Charles Montgomery, Jr., Christopher Wigton, William Riley, and John Gardner. The elders in 1881 were William B. McWilliams, G. W. Reynolds, Dr. T. C. Van Tries, Samuel Wigton, William B. Johnston, and D. M. Thompson.

In 1828 the first Sabbath-school maintained by the church was organized at Baileyville. George W. Reynolds was many years the superintendent of the Graysville school, John Porter being the superintendent in 1881, and the Coleraine school was in charge of A. G. Ewing.

Spruce Creek Lutheran Church.—The members of this church first worshiped in the old Dry Hollow meeting-house, among the number being George Mattern, George Anshutz, the Ginters, the Mentzers, Martin Funk, Adam Mong, Samuel Rider, John Black, Moses Garland, Thomas Saylor, and Daniel Conrad, a number of the latter being workmen at Huntingdon Furnace. In 1805 a log meeting-house was built on a lot of ground donated by George Mattern, a part of which was set aside for cemetery purposes. In about 1847 the present church edifice was erected, a frame standing on the lot of the old church and being thirty by forty feet. The building committee was composed of George W. Mattern, Frederick Crissman, and M. R. Jones. The house, though plain, affords a comfortable place of worship. In 1881 the congregation consisted of fifty members and a church council which had George W. Mattern and Joseph Kinch as elders, John Kinch and David Sherman deacons. The pastor was the Rev. Robert Fletcher. His immediate predecessor was the Rev. George Straup. Other ministerial service was from Water Street and Sinking Valley. Joseph Kinch is the superintendent of a flourishing Sunday-school maintained by this church, and former superintendents were William Stiver and Christian Musser.

The Franklinville Methodist Episcopal Church.—Among the pioneer Methodists in the neighborhood of Franklinville were George Mattern, Jr., and his wife Catharine, and the Stonebraker family. Preaching was held at the house of the former as early as 1803, and in the old stone mill at Huntingdon Furnace at a later date; but about 1830 a meeting-house—a frame plastered on the outside—was built on the old road above Franklinville, which was the place of worship a number of years. After the turnpike was built the building was taken down and removed to Franklinville, where, in a remodeled condition, it now is. The trustees in 1881 were D. R. Miller, D. B. Parks, Joshua Cornelius, Nicholas Parks, and Henry Omo. The congregation forms a part of Warrior's Mark Circuit, and has had its ministerial supply from that source. The first Sunday-school in this part of the valley was opened in the old stone mill at Huntingdon Furnace about 1821 by Samuel Mattern, Samuel Conrad, Ephraim Galbraith, and Jeremiah Cunningham. It was maintained regardless of a church connection, and having a large attendance from that part of the township exerted a great moral influence upon the young people. The Franklinville Sunday-school had an attendance of fifty-four scholars in 1881, and was superintended by D. R. Miller.

Lower Spruce Creek Presbyterian Church.—In the winter of 1871 a revival of great power was held in the Union Church at Spruce Creek, under the preaching of Rev. J. J. Coale, from Baltimore. In consequence of this visitation of divine grace, a desire was expressed to form the converts into a church organization of Presbyterian persuasion. The Presbytery being petitioned to this end and the request being granted, at the session held at Bellefonte in April, 1871, the Revs. R. M. Wallace and J. J. Coale and Elder Samuel McCamant were appointed a committee to effect the organization. They performed this work on Saturday, April 9, 1871, when fifty-one persons were enrolled as members of the Lower Spruce Creek Church. Dr. Sidney Thompson, Samuel C. Tussey, and Osborne Laird were chosen ruling elders. The former two still serve, but Mr. Laird died March 14, 1874. Angus McBean and Robert McPherran were elected deacons. At the same time the Rev. J. J. Coale became the pastor and yet serves the congregation, in connection with the Sinking Valley Church. The meeting-house which the congregation occupies is at Spruce Creek, on the Franklin side. It was built in 1871 on a lot of ground donated by Edward B. Isett, who, together with G. W. Stewart and J. Q. Adams, composed the board of trustees in 1881. The house is an attractive brick, costing six thousand dollars, and was built by Jacob Baker, of Alexandria, who was run over by the cars at Spruce Creek and killed before the house was completed. Lower Spruce Creek congregation had ninety-one members in 1881, and maintained a Sunday-school of sixty members, which had Dr. Sidney Thompson as superintendent.

No very authentic account of the early schools of Franklin can be given in this sketch of the township history. The records have not been preserved, and tradition is too vague to be trustworthy. Early schools were maintained at Huntingdon Furnace, Graysville, and at the Lutheran Church. Under the free-school system the following were elected as directors:

1835, Christopher Wigton, James Travis; 1836, Jonathan McWilliams, Alexander Stewart; 1837, John McCurdy, John Stonebraker; 1838, John S. Isett, Thompson Burge, John Sissler; 1839, Hugh Seeds; 1840, John Ingram, Robert Bell, John D. Bell; 1841, Daniel Hileman, John Laporte; 1842, John Zentmeyer, John S. Isett, Samuel Jones; 1843, John Conrad, Nicholas Parks; 1844, James Dysart, A. J. Wigton, William Riley; 1845, Anderson Harvey, James Ewing; 1846, John D. Bell, J. H. Stonebraker; 1847, William McIlvain, Joseph Dysart; 1848, David Kinch, John Laporte; 1849, James Harvey, Benjamin Hopkins; 1850, William Riley, James Dysart; 1851, Calvin J. Smith, James Ewing; 1852, John Ingram, David Conrad; 1853, Henry L. Harvey, Joseph Dysart; 1854, Washington Reynolds, John Zentmeyer; 1855, George W. Mattern, J. W. Matten, John Keimer; 1856, John Steiner, John Hughes; 1857, John Zentmeyer, G. M. Thompson; 1858, Samuel Wigton, John Clark; 1859, John Keimer, William B. McWilliams, John A. Mattern; 1860, William B. Johnston, John W. Mattern; 1861, John Ebberts, John Clark, Joseph Kinch; 1862, John Ebberts, William McWilliams; 1863, William B. Johnston, J. W. Mattern; 1864, Samuel C. Stewart, Nicholas Parks; 1865, James Oliver, John Ebberts; 1866, Daniel Conrad, Daniel Clark, Alfred Porter; 1867, A. G. Ewing, Samuel Wigton; 1868, G. W. Reynolds, Robert McPherran; 1869, Daniel Conrad, Robert Henderson; 1870–71, John Ebberts, D. L. Wray; 1872, D. R. Miller, R. Henderson, William Wray; 1873, John Hughes, M. G. Keatley; 1874, John Travis, Henry Hoffman; 1875, David Henderson, A. S. Weakland; 1876, J. Woomer, S. Spangler, W. B. McMillan; 1877, John Archy, Isaac Woomer; 1878, George Shultz, R. L. Henderson; 1879, David Goss, Thomas Davis; 1880, Henry Kinch, Isaac L. Woomer; 1881, George Shultz, William Stiver.

In 1880 there were eight districts in the township, in which school was maintained six months. The male attendants numbered 136; the female, 123. The average attendance was 203. The cost of instruction was eighty-three cents per pupil per month. The sum of $1542.40 was raised for building purposes.

CHAPTER XLI.

HENDERSON TOWNSHIP.

THIS township lies north of the Juniata and east of the centre of the county. It embraces in the main all that body of land lying between the township of Miller on the northeast and the river on the southwest, which is inclosed by the Stone and Lick Ridges. The former and Murray's Run separate Henderson from Oneida, while the latter are along the Brady line, except the upper part of Henderson, which extends to the valley of Mill Creek. The general surface of the township is elevated, and in the main is much broken by deep and narrow valleys, whose inclosing hillsides are usually too steep to admit of profitable cultivation. The uplands are of the nature of plateaus, containing some level lands, whose soil is thin and only moderately productive. The soil of the township is variable, a slaty loam predominating. It appears to be well adapted for fruit culture, and lately that industry has become one of the chief occupations of the inhabitants. The drainage is good, being afforded by numerous ravines in which are brooks, and a few streams of larger size. Among the latter class are Sugar Grove and Pike Runs, both in the southeastern part of the township, flowing into the Juniata. The name of the latter stream was derived from the presence of large schools of fish of the pike species in the early history of the county. The former title was applied on account of a fine grove which grew along the stream. Murray's and Brown's Runs in the northwestern part of the township derived their name from early settlers on their waters. In the northeastern part are the head-waters of Mill Creek. Some of these streams afford limited water-powers, which have been utilized to operate small saw-mills and woolen factories.

Pioneer Settlers.—In no township of the county have the changes of population been greater than in Henderson. Scarcely a representative of the original settlers remains, and in many localities the entire population consists of people whose citizenship in Henderson does not extend beyond a quarter of a century. Another peculiarity attending the transformation of the population of the township is the fact that almost entire communities removed to the same locality in the West, Illinois and Indiana receiving the chief influx of immigration, while their places were taken by settlers from other parts of this and adjoining counties, a considerable number being of foreign descent. The history of Henderson, consequently, is less complete than it would be if ordinary conditions prevailed, as much of the story of the pioneer life of the ancestors of the present inhabitants will have to be given in the sketches of other townships.

Col. John Fee lived on the Juniata opposite the Raystown Branch as early as 1774. He served in the Revolution, and was an active member of Capt. Blair's expedition against the Tories. His sons John and George both were in the American army in the war of 1812. He kept a public-house on the river, and later was engaged in the same business at the Warm Springs. His last place of residence was in the eastern part of Henderson, on what is known as the John Lower farm. Col. Fee was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Kelley, the second a Miss Jackson. By the former he had a son named John, and by the latter, among other children, a son named George, who married Mary Porter and reared a large family of children bearing the names of Jackson, William, John, Washington, James, Rachel, Lydia, and Mary. The first daughter became the wife of Isaac Brown. George Fee removed to Fairfield, Iowa, when he was eighty-six years of age. Stephen Kelley was a half-brother of James Kelley, an early settler in Brady. He located on Pike Run about the close of the last century, and died there more than fifty years ago. He was married to Mary Stewart, of Union township, and had children,—Elizabeth, who married Jesse Yocum, and died at Mill Creek, and other daughters named Lydia, Rachel, and Rebecca. A son, Aaron, is yet an old citizen of Mill Creek. In the same valley lived James and John Williamson, whose families have long since passed away.

Matthew Campbell was a pioneer on the Peter Swoope place in the eastern part of Henderson. He was married to Hannah Postlethwaite and reared a large family, the living members of which all reside in the West,—John A. moved to Warren County, Ill., where he died; William removed to the State of Ohio; Thomas P., for years a prominent attorney at Huntingdon, died at Davenport, Iowa; Matthew Fairman, for several terms register and prothonotary of the county, moved to Kankakee, Ill.; James, a printer by trade, died a young man. His daughters married,—Hannah, Samuel R. Boggs, of Henderson, but who removed to Mercer County, Ill., in 1848, where he died; Martha became the wife of Alexander Porter, of Henderson, and migrated to the same place in Illinois; Rebecca Ellen married H. R. Gilleland, and moved to Illinois. Robert Campbell became a resident of the same State. Matthew Campbell died in Henderson, and his widow survived him about forty years, removing with her children to Illinois. Another senior member of the Campbell family, John, died at Mount Union. He was the father of Matthew F. Campbell, of Mapleton, and of Robert Campbell, of Pittsburgh, where he died in 1852; Sarah was the wife of Richard Rush, of Allegheny City; Mary Campbell became the wife of John Beatty, a pioneer teacher, who was commonly known as Master Beatty; Rebecca Campbell was the consort of James Hemphill, of Huntingdon, the father of Samuel Hemphill; Martha Campbell became the wife of John Postlethwaite, a son of Col. Postlethwaite, of Mount Union. They settled in Henderson on the Simon Bayles farm, moving from there to Mercer County, Ill. They had sons,—Matthew, Carmon, and John, who also moved to Illinois. The daughters married,—Ellen, James Lane, of Brady; Hannah, Arthur Graham, who removed to Illinois; Martha, John Simpson, of Henderson; the youngest daughter married the Rev. William Meade Jones, a Baptist minister to Hayti, and subsequently to Jerusalem, where Mrs. Jones died. He is at present the pastor of a Seventh-Day Baptist Church in London, England.

Micajah Corbin, a native of the State of Maryland, after living a short time on Murray's Run, on the farm now owned by James S. Hall, made a home on the Ridge in Henderson, on a farm which had been occupied by Abraham Corbin. He died in Trough Creek Valley. He was the father of Asa, Nicholas, Abel, W. K., and Micajah Corbin. The latter two are yet residents of Oneida. Of his daughters, one was married to Capt. Abraham Shore, of Cass township; another to Amon Chilcott, of Trough Creek Valley; a third to Matthew Glasgow, of Brady; another to Abraham Evans, of Henderson; and yet another to John Hight, of the same township. Her husband died a few years ago at the age of ninety-six years, and she yet resides at Centre Union at the age of eighty-one years. [She since died.]

The Hight family came from New Jersey, and lived in the Murray's Run Valley. Besides John, James Hight lived many years in Henderson, removing to Huntingdon. Mark Evans was the son of Rolland Evans, who settled in the northern part of Henderson at a very early day, and brother of Mark, Asahel, Jesse, and William Evans. Descendants of this family in the third generation yet reside in Henderson.

On the present John Warfel farm Daniel Brown was a pioneer, dying in that locality about sixty years ago. His son, Asahel H., removed to Iowa. Nancy became the wife of James Hight, of Huntingdon; Mary, of Henry Hutchinson, of Henderson, father of James Hutchinson, of this township; Sarah, of George Hanawalt, who moved to Iowa; Ruth, of James Sloan, of Henderson; Elizabeth, of —— Weaver, a school-teacher, who moved to Iowa. Among the settlers of a later period was James McCartney, who lived east of Union Church, and died on a farm which he had improved. He was the father of John R., Robert, William, and Daniel McCartney, the former being a citizen of Henderson at this time.

William Porter, a native of the north of Ireland, came to America about the beginning of the present century, soon after settling in Henderson, where he purchased a large tract of land, most of which is at present owned by the Rhodes family. This land he divided between his sons, James and John, who became well-known citizens of the township. He died at Huntingdon in 1850, aged eighty-seven years. Mary, his wife, had died many years previously. Their children were Nancy, the wife of Samuel Wiley, who moved to Indiana; Mary, born on the passage to America, became the wife of George Fee, son of Col. John Fee, who removed to Iowa in 1855; Jane became the wife of John Brown, of Henderson; Martha, the wife of David Thompson, of Henderson, died about 1860. The husband survived until December, 1880, when he died at the age of eighty-two years on the farm which he had occupied more than sixty years. He was a blacksmith by trade, and a very exemplary man, serving many years as an elder in the Presbyterian Church. Of a large family, one is Dr. James P. Thompson, of Johnstown; three of the sons, Joseph H., David, and Robert, served in the Union army in the Rebellion, the former filling a soldier's grave at Huntingdon. One of the daughters is the wife of Joseph Garner, of Henderson township. Another daughter of William Porter became the wife of Samuel Steel, of Huntingdon, and died in 1827. He had two sons. Maj. James Porter, the oldest, was born in Ireland in 1789, and died in Henderson in 1858. He was married to Sarah, daughter of Robert Wray, and reared a family of ten children, viz.: William, Robert W., James D., and John, all living in Warren County, Ill., the latter being a judge there; Joseph, living at Lynchburg, Va.; Thompson, in Missouri; Taylor, in Illinois; and Andrew J., in Nebraska. Of the daughters, Nancy married James Boggs, of Mercer County, Ill., and Martha Mary, John Henry, of the same State.

The other son, John Porter, was married to Matilda, daughter of Alexander Steel, of West township, and lived on the homestead in Henderson until his removal to Illinois in 1866, where he died in 1880, about eighty years of age. His children were Alex. S. Porter, who died in Missouri; James M., died about 1859; and William, John, Alice, Martha, Emeline, and Nancy, all of whom became citizens of Illinois.

Robert Wray, a Scotch-Irishman, lived about a mile from Porter's, being nearer the river. He died about 1840, having reared several children, viz.: John, who removed to Illinois; Douglass, who died in the same State; William, who became a citizen of Morris township; James, who removed to Iowa; Mary, who became the wife of John A. Campbell, and removed to Illinois; and Sarah, who was the wife of James Porter, and died in Henderson about 1855.

John Brown was born in the north of Ireland in 1794. When about twenty-three years of age he emigrated to America, becoming a school-teacher at Lewistown and McVeytown. On the 1st of April, 1824, he married Jane Porter, a daughter of William Porter, of Henderson, and after teaching in Mifflin County until 1835, he also became a citizen of the township, living near the Union school-house. He died from injuries received from falling in his barn in August, 1847, leaving a family of eight children. These were B. F. Brown, of West township; Samuel T., an attorney of note at Huntingdon; William P., an editor, who was killed by a mining accident in California in 1855; Mary Ellen, who married Christopher Capp, and died in 1858; James A., who is a merchant at Huntingdon; John D., who became a Methodist missionary to India, but died at Harrisburg, Pa., in 1878; Robert B., the editor of the Erie Observer; and the youngest daughter, who became the wife of J. Randolph Simpson, of Huntingdon. Mrs. Brown died at the residence of her son, Samuel T., in 1865, aged sixty-seven years.

Matthew Hall, a son-in-law of Rev. Samuel Lane, settled in the Unity Church neighborhood, from where, after living a number of years, he removed to Murray's Run, in Oneida, some time about 1840. He was the father of John Hall, and grandfather of James S. Hall, who is one of the foremost farmers in that township.

In the Sugar Grove neighborhood James Hemphill was one of the pioneers, removing from there to Illinois. A few of his descendants remain in the county.

The general condition of the settlements may be seen in the following list of citizens of Henderson township in 1820, including at that period the borough of Huntingdon, a part of Oneida, and all of the present Brady township. An asterisk denotes the ownership of a town lot with a house thereon.

Armitage, George.
*Allison, Robert, Esq.
*Africa, Michael.
Armitage, Caleb (184 acres).
*Africa, Jacob.
*Allen, William.
Amer, Patrick (3 acres).
Africa, Jacob, Jr.
*Bank of Huntingdon.
Biler, John (147 acres).
Brown, Thomas (negro).
*Barber, James, Esq.
Brenneman, Michael.
*Brandt, Elizabeth.
Brandt, John.
*Beatty, John.
*Black, George.
Brown, Asahel.
Brown, Daniel (deceased; 200 acres).
*Brotherline, Charles.
*Barigman, Sophia.
Bye, Reading.
Brown, John (143 acres).
Bartlett, William (101 acres).
*Bobanna, Margaret.
Byers, Isaac.
Cartwright, Samuel.
Coulter, Joseph (200 acres).
*Cadwallader, Catharine.
*Cryder, Daniel.
Cornpropst, Joseph.
Campbell, Robert.
*Colestock, Christian.
Coplin, Matthias (distillery; 225 acres).
Campbell, Matthew (223 acres).
Corbin, William (213 acres; saw-mill).
Case, Peter (100 acres).
*Clabbaugh, Martin.
*Clark, James.
*Chilcott, Anson.
Cornelius, John.
Cahoon, Joseph.
Carson, Thomas.
Covenhover, Ezekiel.
Carman, John.
Ciesser, Andrew.
*Coffey, James, Dr.
*Dopp, Henry.
*Dorland, Isaac.
Dorland, John, Est. (235 acres).
Duncan, James.
Detweiler, Jacob.
Detweiler, Christian, Jr.
Detweiler, Christian, Sr. (384 acres).
Drake, Samuel (ferry; 50 acres).
Drake, James.
*Dudan, Daniel.
*Davis, John (hatter).
Derr, Peter (109 acres).
Dorland, Joseph (200 acres).
Davis, Rev. James (100 acres).
*Donaldson, Alexander.
Davis, Thomas.
*Dorris, William.
Duncan, James, Jr. (200 acres).
Detweiler, Jacob.
*Elliott, Benjamin (saw-mill; 182 acres).
*Evans, Ellis.
Echelberger, Walter (for McMurtrie; 97 acres).
Echelberger, Jacob (for landlord; 150 acres).
Eli, John.
*Flickinger, Frederick.
Fee, John (300 acres at Warm Springs Tavern).
Fife, Samuel (4 acres).
*Fockler, George (brewery).
Foley, James.
*Ferguson, James.
Forsby, Thomas.
Grady, William (150 acres).
*Graffius, Martin.
Glazier, Mary.
*Glazier, John.
Gorsuch, Nathan (213 acres).
Glasgow, Matthew (130 acres).
*Gwin, Patrick (172 acres).
Given, John.
Gillis, Robert.
Gray, George.
Grady, Hiram.
Gorsuch, Thomas (300 acres).
Hess, Peter.
*Hemphill, Samuel.
*Hildebrand, Jonathan.
Hoffman, Jacob (doctor).
Hook, John.
*Henderson, John (doctor).
*Haines, Susannah.
Hooley, John (200 acres).
Hight, John (100 acres).
Hight, Richard (100 acres).
Humphries, Richard.
Hampson, James (250 acres; saw-mill).
Hildebrand, Samuel.
*Houghton, D. Sterne.
Hare, John.
*Howe, Jane (widow).
*Hemphill, James.
Hight, James (for landlord; 100 acres).
*Henderson, Joseph.
Huston, Matthew (400 acres).
Hall, Matthew (for landlord; 100 acres)
*Householder, George.
*Isenberg, John.
*Isenberg, Henry.
Isenberg, Nicholas.
Igo, Peter (120 acres).
*Johnston, Rev. John.
*Jackson, William.
Johnston, George.
*Keim, John.
*Kerr, Thomas.
Kurtz, Abraham (saw-mill; 220 acres).
*King, Thomas.
Kelley, Stephen (100 acres).
*Kurtz, Widow.
*King, Alexander.
Kelley, William (50 acres).
Kemberlin, John (150 acres).
Kelley, Moses.
Kelley, James, Est. (150 acres).
King, Solomon (96 acres).
Kurtz, Jacob.
Knox, Alexander (negro).
Lambert, Gershom (farmer).
Lantz, David (250 acres).
Long, Samuel.
Leever, Joseph (80 acres).
Long, William.
*Levy, Abraham.
Litzinger, Anthony.
Long, John.
Lewis, John.
Lytle, James.
Lear, James (negro).
Lindsey, David.
Lytle, Robert (for landlord; 40 acres, saw- and grist-mill).
Lane, Mary (widow).
McGahan, Jacob (48 acres).
McLenahan, Henry (75 acres).
Metz, John, Dr. (163 acres).
McCartney, John (172 acres).
*Miller, Jacob (330 acres).
*McCahan, John (186 acres).
*McConnell, John.
McConnell, Alexander, Esq.
*Mays, Ray.
Maxwell, Robert (51 acres).
Miller, Christian (350 acres).
*McKennan, John.
*McNamara, John.
*Murphy, Thomas.
*Morrison, John.
*McCabe, John.
*Miller, John, Esq. (205 acres, tannery).
McCarthy, John (120 acres).
McFarland, William (for landlord, 140 acres).
Miller, William (200 acres).
Mays, Joseph.
Miller, John (20 acres).
Moore, John.
McMurtrie, David.
McCool, Joseph.
*Morrow, Alexander.
Morrets, Michael (150 acres).
Morrets, George (260 acres).
McCutchen, Robert.
Meredith, Lloyd (13 acres).
McFarland, Robert (15 acres).
Marshall, Samuel.
McCoy, Thomas (205 acres).
Marks, John.
*Mackey, Margaret.
*Nash, John.
Nichols, Samuel (100 acres).
*Nail, Frederick.
*Newingham, David.
Nelson, Robert (103 acres).
Newingham, Henry.
Nightwine, William.
Nightwine, Joseph.
Nail, John.
Newman, Peter.
Orlady, Martin (142 acres).
*Orbison, William.
Osborn, James.
Otenkirk, George (107 acres).
Oaks, Peter (3 acres).
*Owens, Ishmael.
Porter, James (fulling-mill).
Plowman, Absalom (175 acres).
Porter, William (140 acres).
Park, John.
Patterson, Thomas (16 acres).
Petty, Joshua.
Plowman, Charles.
Perkins, Robert.
Pecht, Jacob.
Robinson, Vincent (260 acres).
*Ramsey, Alexander.
Ridenour, Mary.
*Renner, Samuel.
Ramsey, Samuel.
Rothrock, Daniel.
Raymond, Charles.
*Robinson, William.
Reddick, Jonathan W.
Robinson, Joseph.
Ross, James (100 acres).
Smith, Charles (ground-rents, 100 acres).
*Smart, John.
Starr, James (for landlord, 250 acres).
*Shultz, Lawrence.
Souders, Henry (120 acres).

Sharp, Solomon (100 acres).
Simpson, John (100 acres).
Slagle, Margaret (12 acres).
*Smith, Richard (ground-rents, 82 acres).
*Shultz, Philip (distillery).
Speck, Michael (100 acres).
*Saxton, James.
*Steel, Samuel.
*Stevens, Benjamin R.
*Swoope, Peter.
*Simpson, William (95 acres).
*Snyder, David.
*Steel, William (173 acres).
*Smith, William R.
Smith, William M. (ground-rent).
*Sowers, Philip (distillery).
Shorthill, John (239 acres).
Simpson, Robert (380 acres).
*Schnarr, Casper.
*Smith, Rev. Thomas.
Starr, Arthur.
*Sturtzman, Adam.
Switzer, Daniel.
Sturtzman, Henry.
*Shippen, Henry.
Stover, Christian (for landlord, 400 acres).
Starr, Stewart (for landlord, 63 acres).
Simpson, Alex.
Shoup, Henry (50 acres).
Selfredge, William.
*Shultz, Peter.
Snowden, Richard (negro).
*Tanner, Margaret.
Thomas, John.
Taylor, Simeon.
Uman, Eli.
Van Devender, Peter (194 acres).
*Vantries, Abraham.
*Vantries & Newingham.
*Walker, Samuel (tannery).
Woolverton, William (grist-mill, saw-mill, distillery, 500 acres).
Williamson, John (100 acres).
Wray, Robert (200 acres).
*Wilson, William.
Weston, John.
Wilson, Matthew (grist-mill, saw-mill, distillery, 128 acres).
*Whittaker, John (ferry).
*Woods, William.
Westbrook, John.
Wolfkill, William (200 acres).
White, Joseph.
Wright, John (136 acres).
*Westbrook, Catharine.
Whittaker, John, Jr.
Wright, Matthew (136 acres).
Wyand, Philip (50 acres).
Weaver, Henry (105 acres).
Wise, Jacob (63 acres).
Wise, Andrew.
Wildebrand, Henry.
Wasson, Samuel.
Wells, Jacob.
*Westbrook, Levi.
Yoder, Daniel (170 acres).
Yoder, Christian (175 acres).
Yocum, Peter.
Yocum, Jesse (130 acres).
Yocum, John, Jr.

Single Freemen.

Armitage, Benjamin (distillery, 170 acres).
Africa, Daniel.
Africa, David.
Africa, John.
Agnew, James.
Anderson, Miller D.
Brown, William.
Brendle, Jacob.
Cadwallader, Proctor.
Custon, Seth.
Cline, John.
Copland, William.
Davis, Huston.
Douglass, James.
Fee, John, Jr.
Fee, George.
Fockler, George.
Fockler, Jacob.
Fife, James.
Gable, George.
Given, George.
Henderson, Andrew.
Hazzard, George, Jr.
Hazzard, David.
Hampson, George.
*Henderson, John A.
Hall, William.
Isenberg, Gabriel.
Kilpatrick, Joseph.
King, Christian.
Kemp, John R.
Kurtz, Jacob.
Kerr, Thomas, Jr.
Kenslow, William.
Kelley, Moses.
Kelley, Aaron.
Kelley, James.
Lane, George.
Lyons, John.
Lincoln, Abel.
Linn, Thomas (negro).
Lytle, David.
Miller, Alexander.
Miller, Henry (tannery).
Montgomery, Thomas.
Morrison, Robert.
Mower, Joseph V.
Miller, Samuel.
McCurdy, James.
McKennan, Alexander.
Nelson, James.
Price, Marcus (negro).
Polands, Jonathan.
Patterson, John.
Patton, James A.
Riley, George.
Robinson, Samuel.
Robinson, John.
Smith, William W.
Sleigle, Henry.
Smith, John.
Steel, James.
Shorthill, James.
Simpson, James (420 acres).
Steel, William.
*Simpson, James (of Huntingdon).
Smiley, Samuel (200 acres).
Smiley, William.
Sites, Jacob.
Simpson, John.
Simpson, Foster.
Souders, David.
Steel, Robert.
Van Devender, Abraham.
Wiley, John (63 acres).
Williams, William.
Williamson, James (100 acres).
Woolverton, Charles.
Woolverton, Isaac.
*Weaver, Daniel.
Wisner, Isaac.
Wolfkill, Daniel.
Weaver, Joseph.
Yocum, John.

A number of children of school age were reported as being unable to attend on account of the destitute circumstances of their parents.

Civil Government.—The petition of a number of persons, inhabitants of the township of Huntingdon, was presented to the court at its session in April, 1814, setting forth "that they would be much aggrieved by the confirmation of the division of the township, as reported upon by certain viewers and returned to the court, and praying that other viewers might be appointed to divide the said township so as to suit the convenience of the inhabitants thereof. Whereupon it was considered by the court and ordered that Lewis Mytinger, Maxwell Kinkead, and Robert Provinse be appointed to inquire into the necessity or propriety of dividing the said township, and if in their opinion it is necessary to divide the same so as to suit the convenience of the inhabitants thereof and to make a plat or draft of the township proposed to be divided, and the division line proposed to be made thereon, and of the township proposed to be laid off, if the same cannot be sufficiently described by natural boundaries, and make a report of their proceedings thereon to the next court."

At the time appointed the report was made, but no action thereon was taken by the court until its November sessions, when the following record appears:

"The report of Lewis Mytinger, Maxwell Kinkead, and Robert Provinse, who were appointed at the last April court to view and, if they thought it necessary, to divide the township of Huntingdon, which was read at the August sessions, and is now again read and the same ordered to be confirmed as follows, to wit: Agreeably to the annexed order or rule of the court, we, the persons therein named, having all met at Huntingdon on Saturday, the 23d of July, 1814, for the purpose of dividing Huntingdon township, and having examined a draft of said township, and from our own knowledge of the local situation of the said township, are of opinion that the following division line will divide the said township so as to best suit the convenience of the inhabitants of each division, viz.: Beginning at the corner of West township line, on the Frankstown Branch of the Juniata River, near the limekiln, thence down the same to the mouth of Raystown Branch and to the corner of Union township, as may more fully appear by a draft of said township."

Gen. Andrew Henderson, in honor of whom the township was named, was prominently identified with the then infant colonies in their struggle against British oppression during the Revolutionary war. He was distinguished for his uprightness of character, and, where best known, most merited the approbation of his fellow-men. One of his descendants, James Pinckney Henderson, was prominent in the affairs of the republic of Texas, and subsequently represented that State in the United States Senate.

The western boundary of the township extended northeast from the limekiln on the river to a point beyond the Warm Springs, crossing Standing Stone Creek above that place, where it struck the West township line; thence from that point along that line to Mifflin County; thence to Jack's Mountain, along which to the Juniata at Drake's Ferry.

That part of Huntingdon township lying south of the Juniata at the same time received the name of Porter, "in consideration of the distinguished uprightness of the late Gen. Andrew Porter, surveyor-general, as a public officer, and his services during the Revolutionary war." It was bounded on the east by Union township, from which it was separated by Terrace Mountain; on the south was Hopewell township; on the west Woodberry and Morris; and on the north the Little Juniata and the Frankstown Branch of the Juniata.

The township of Henderson has been reduced to its present limits by the formation of Brady in 1846 and Oneïda in 1856–60. The principal officers, including those of the old township of Huntingdon, have been the following:

CONSTABLES.

1789, Andrew Donaldson; 1790, Edward Hunter; 1791, James Dean; 1792, John Ashbaugh; 1793, William McKane; 1794–95, John Ward; 1796, Daniel McMurtrie; 1797, Henry Benner; 1798-99, David Caldwell; 1800, John Dorland; 1801, John Spencer; 1802, David Lloyd; 1803, Henry Canan; 1804, John Eshelman; 1805, John Bare; 1806, Isaac Adams; 1807–8, Nicholas Isenberg; 1809, Thomas McIthon; 1810–11, Henry Lloyd; 1812, John Huyett; 1813, William Kerr; 1814, William Moore and James Hampson; 1815, John Brown; 1816, Robert Wray; 1817, William Woolverton; 1818, Abraham Kurtz; 1819, Abraham Vandevender; 1820, Matthias Copeland; 1821, John Fee; 1822, Asahel Brown; 1823, Henry Weaver; 1824, Robert Simpson; 1825, Solomon Sharp; 1826, David Hooley; 1827, David Yoder; 1828, Samuel Goodman; 1829, James Simpson; 1830, James Lane; 1831, John Wolfkill; 1832, John Hight; 1833, John McCartney; 1834, Paul Orlady.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

1789, Jacob Laird, Henry Neff; 1790, James Dean, Alexander Dean; 1791, Edward Hunter, Alexander Dean; 1792, John Spencer, George Faulkner; 1793, John Spencer, Henry Miller; 1794, James Dean, William Kerr; 1795, James Nesbit, Alexander Dean; 1796, Peter Swoope, Simon Potter; 1797, David Caldwell, John Fee, Sr.; 1798, Adam Hall, Wm. Moore; 1798, Israel Cryder, Caleb Armitage.

APPRAISERS.

1790, George Reynolds, John Dean; 1791, Peter Graffius, William McCoy; 1792, Andrew Anderson, James Dean; 1793, George Faulkner, Thomas Whittaker; 1795, William McConnell, Joshua Davis.

SUPERVISORS OF ROADS.

1789, George Reynolds, Peter Vandevender; 1790, William Kerr, George Faulkner; 1791, Israel Cryder, Jacob Laird; 1792, John Patton, William McCoy; 1793, John Patton, Caleb Armitage; 1794, Thomas Whittaker, Edward Hunter; 1795, Nathaniel Jarrard, David Lloyd; 1796, Charles Green, John Dorland; 1797, John Spencer, Henry Summers; 1798, David Caldwell, Joseph Exeter; 1799, Thomas Johnston, John Wertz; 1800, Charles Kelley, James McGinnis; 1801, Christian Detwiler, Martin Shultz; 1802, William Igo, William Gray; 1803, John Brown, Charles Caldwell; 1804, Henry Lloyd, Isaac Yoder; 1805, Henry Lloyd, John Fee; 1806–7, Henry Lloyd, James Hampson; 1808, Henry Lloyd, Thomas Harrison; 1809, Henry Lloyd, Robert Wray; 1810, Daniel Carpenter, Valentine Heffner; 1811, James Williamson, Valentine Heffner; 1812, James Hampson, Valentine Heffner; 1814, Nicholas Isenberg, James Hampson; 1815, Jonathan Dean, Samuel Renner; 1816, Abraham Kurtz, William Porter; 1817, Joseph Carothers, Henry Souders; 1818, Vincent Robinson, William Henry; 1819, Matthias Copeland, Benjamin Armitage; 1820, John Fee, Peter Case; 1821, James Hight, Abraham Vandevender; 1822, Martin Orlady, John Bailer; 1823, Jacob Detwiler, Robert Simpson; 1824, James Hight, Peter Case; 1825, Robert Wray, Peter Case; 1826, Abraham Kurtz, James Hight; 1827, Christian Miller, John Given; 1828–29, Robert Wray, John Hight; 1830, John Fee, James Hight; 1831, James Porter, Daniel Yoder; 1832, James Hight, William Porter; 1833, James Hight, Daniel Yoder; 1834, James Hight, Jacob Detwiler; 1835, John Decker, Jacob Detwiler; 1836, Andrew Huey, John Fee; 1837, Samuel Hampson, Jacob Dorland; 1838, Samuel Miller, Emanuel Warfield; 1839, William Barefoot, Jesse Yocum; 1840, Robert Wray, Abraham Shadle; 1841, John A. Campbell, Joseph Ross; 1842, Andrew Allison, Robert Huey; 1843–44, John Wolfkill, Henry Cornpropst; 1845, John Wolfkill, James Hight; 1846, John Wolfkill, Thomas Hamlin; 1847, Andrew Allison, Thomas Hamlin; 1848, Robert Wray, Andrew Decker; 1849, John Porter, Andrew Decker; 1850, David Goodman, John Decker; 1851, James Hight, James Wilson; 1852, James Hight, James Porter; 1853, James Hight, Henry Hutchinson; 1854, James Hight, Hiram Grady; 1855, Jacob Miller, George Numer; 1856, James Hutchinson, John Drennen; 1857, Jacob Hetrick, John Decker; 1858, Abel Corbin, Hiram Grady; 1859, John Numer, Daniel Kyper; 1860, Jacob Hetrick, John Numer; 1861, Jacob Hutchinson, George Miller; 1862, Henry Steel, George Miller; 1863, George Miller, Samuel Hetrick; 1864, A. Allison, J. Numer; 1865, Jacob Hetrick, John Flenner; 1866, Jacob Hetrick, James Sloan; 1867, Laben Hall, John Warfel; 1868, Jacob Hetrick, David Rupert; 1869, Jesse Henry, James Wilson; 1870–71, Samuel Eby, J. S. Warfel; 1872, Samuel Eby, John R. McCartney; 1873, R. M. McCartney, H. P. Decker; 1874, no report; 1875, Henry Steel, Andrew Decker; 1876, William Mundorf, H. P. Decker; 1877, J. K. Hetrick, William Mundorf; 1878, J. K. Hetrick, Michael Enders; 1879, Lewis Bergantz, Joseph Rupert; 1880, Joseph Enders, George Black; 1881, Andrew Decker, C. C. Evans.

General Industries.—The chief employment of the people of Henderson is the tillage of the soil in the ordinary farm operations and fruit-culture, but formerly the lumber interests gave occupation to a large number of men, nearly all the small streams being made to operate mills of limited capacity. A number of these are noted in the several property lists of this book, and others are here briefly mentioned. On Brown's Run, in the northwestern part of the township, John Colestock built a saw-mill many years ago, which is now operated by J. S. Warfel. On Sugar Grove Run James Simpson built a mill, which became the property of Samuel Goodman, and later of John Rupert, who yet owns and operates it. Near Mill Creek, on the canal and operated by the waters thereof, Samuel Simpson had a lumber-mill for many years, which was built about 1847 by William Buchanan. At the same place was formerly operated machinery for grinding fire-clay, which has been removed and is now in use in Brady for preparing fire-clay for the markets.

Midway between Mill Creek and Huntingdon is an extensive and fully-equipped lumber manufacturing establishment belonging to Isaac Deihl & Co., and operated the past few years. The logs are supplied chiefly by the Raystown Branch, and are gathered into a boom near the mill. Steam is the motive-power, and the machinery consists of circular saws, edgers, lath saws, and other apparatus used in first-class mills. The capacity is about twenty thousand feet per day, and when fully in operation the mills give employment to a considerable number of men.

Above that point, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, are the Ardenheim Pipe Works. These were established in 1878 by C. H. Anderson for the manufacture of pipe and stoneware from the clay deposits in that locality. The vein is seven feet in thickness, and appears about five feet below the surface. It consists of three distinct clays, of whitish, bluish, and yellowish colors. When properly manipulated it produces superior vitrified ware, being surpassed for these purposes by no other native clays. Mr. Anderson employed hand-machines in his works, lack of capital preventing the employment of steam-power. The capacity consequently was limited, and after a year's operation the works were discontinued. A small pottery, formerly carried on by P. Snyder at Ardenheim, has also been discontinued.

Ardenheim Station received its name at the suggestion of one of the officials of the railway company, who wished in this way to perpetuate the memory of a German recluse by that name who lived near Philadelphia. Its nearness to Huntingdon (being only a mile and a half below the borough) has prevented it from becoming a business point. It is a flag-station, and contains half a dozen houses. At this and at other points on the old turnpike, when that thoroughfare was one of the great highways, inns were kept for the entertainment of the traveling public, one of the most noteworthy being known as the "Red House," which was a short distance above Mill Creek. It had a number of keepers, Gershom Lambert being among the number. He removed to the West, where his son Daniel became a very wealthy man. Alexander Carmon was also one of the landlords at this house, removing thence to Huntingdon. The proximity to that borough has prevented the citizens of Henderson from engaging in mercantile pursuits, only one small store being kept in the township. In 1871, Jacob Hetrick began selling a few goods at Union Church, and still carries on a limited trade. He is the deputy of the only post-office in the township, Joseph L. Bergantz being the postmaster. Union Church post-office was established in the summer of 1876, with George F. Hetrick as postmaster, Mr. Bergantz being his successor. Mails are supplied on Wednesday and Saturday of each week, the service being from Huntingdon by way of Cornpropst's mills. In that locality mechanic shops have been maintained many years. On a tract of land which had been improved by the Rev. Jesse Ash, for some years the pastor of the Baptist Church at Mill Creek, dam Warfel lived and carried on a blacksmith-shop. Subsequently Samuel Tyhurst, the father of the late Al. Tyhurst, was the owner of the shop. While returning to his home here from Newark, Ohio, Samuel Tyhurst sickened and died at the residence of his brother at Neff's Mills. The family soon after removed to Alexandria. The next smith was Jacob Hetrick, who came to the neighborhood in 1855, and for ten years followed that trade on the old Thomas Gorsuch place. For a short time Samuel Hetrick carried on a shop near Union school-house, selling out to James Barris, a carpenter. In the vicinity of the church, David Thompson was for a long term of years a blacksmith, and in the northern part of the township Lewis Bergantz has a smithy for the accommodation of the people of that section. At Union Church is a hall in which assemble statedly a grange of Patrons of Husbandry, of which Joseph Bergantz is the secretary.

Among the enterprising men of the present day in Henderson may be mentioned Mr. Samuel Eby, of whom the following is a brief sketch.

The Ebys of Lancaster County, Pa., figured among the early settlers in the Keystone State, and in old Lancaster developed into a large connection. Benjamin Eby, a native of Lancaster County, moved to Franklin County early in life, and followed an active career as blacksmith and farmer. He had six sons, of whom Joel, Jacob, Benjamin, and Henry went to the West, John died in Perry County, and George (born in Lancaster County, April 2, 1795) settled in Franklin County, Pa. The last named married Susanna, daughter of Jacob Lutz, of Huntingdon County.

Samuel Eby

In 1828, George Eby moved from Franklin County to Shirley township, Huntingdon Co., where he died Jan. 16, 1882, aged eighty-seven. Although blind for some years previous to his death, he was fairly active and hearty to the last. His widow died in August, 1882, aged also eighty-seven. They were married in 1819, and accordingly enjoyed a union of sixty-three years. They had seven children,—Jacob, Nancy, Samuel, George, Catherine, John, and Sarah.

Samuel, the third child, was born in Franklin County, March 3, 1824, and remained at home until his twenty-sixth year, assisting his father in farming. April 1, 1851, he married Catherine E., daughter of John Morrison, of Shirley township, Huntingdon Co., and soon thereafter embarked in business as store-keeper at Mount Union, in partnership with his brother George. At the end of two years Samuel purchased his brother's interest, and conducted the store alone for the next three years. He then retired from mercantile life, and forming a partnership with Mr. Wise for that purpose, took a contract for building a bridge in Juniata County, having already had experience in that direction in the erection of a bridge at Huntingdon. In March, 1859, he bought a fine river farm of upwards of three hundred acres, lying in Henderson township, Huntingdon Co., and removing thereto at once, has resided upon it ever since. He has handsomely improved the place, and in 1876 erected upon it what is by far the best residence in the township. Mr. Eby has been a township school director pretty much all the time he has lived in Henderson, and in minor local offices has always borne his share of duty. He is a lifelong Democrat, as was his father before him. He is the friend of progressive ideas, a stanch supporter and promoter of the cause of public education, and fully alive to the belief that every man, whatever his condition, owes it to himself to keep step with the advancement of the age. Mr. and Mrs. Eby have had nine children. The living are Hannah M., Alice S., Wilbert E., Juniata, and Samuel P.

Educational and Religious.—In the neighborhood of Union Church lived a class of people who early devoted much attention to school and church matters, and consequently their descendants became very worthy citizens. Although nearly all removed from the township, the recollection of their boyhood days has caused them often to revert to the scenes of their life in Henderson, and in the summer of 1881 a reunion of the surviving citizens was held at the Union school-house, when the events of those times were appropriately recalled by a number of speakers. Extracts from their addresses are here given. Said Judge John Porter, of Illinois,—

"Previous to the erection of the house the school had been held in the upper story of a dwelling-house near by, the teacher with his family occupying the lower story. The speaker well remembered his first visit to the school-house as a pupil on a frosty autumn morning, in his bare feet, and being early and finding the door locked, and being compelled to warm his feet in the sunlight on a pile of chips till the arrival of the teacher. The furniture of that school-room consisted principally of a dozen or so of benches made of yellow-pine slabs, hauled from the saw-mill at Huntingdon, with legs so long that the smallest boy could, when seated, just reach the floor with his toes. Some of the boys in this crowd were there during that winter. The teachers he could not attempt to describe. His impression then was that they were rather severe, and disposed to keep the boys a little too close to work, but he was now inclined to think that they were but doing their duty with the rough material and appliances at hand. The object was to instill into the youthful mind the Shorter Catechism and the rules of arithmetic, with an occasional effort to force upon us a few of the rules of grammar, in which they did not succeed, as the audience would observe before the speaker concluded his remarks.

"The house was erected in 1831, and he could not tell how much time he had spent there. It seemed to him a long time, but he remembered of being kept at home one or two winters, in order to keep him even with the rest, his father being very democratic in his ideas, and not wishing any of his sons to get too far ahead. The surroundings have all changed. It does not look like it did then. He remembered the long weary hours he had spent there during a session in summer, and could imagine nothing short of an ague chill that could make time last so long. He used to sit on one of the high benches all forenoon and wish it was noon, and for four long hours during the afternoon wishing it was night; when he wanted out so badly that he built castles in the air, and imagined a causeway built from the farther window, extending around the grove and back to the other window, and spent hours traveling in that circle, and having a good time, until awakened to a sense of duty by the teacher's rod. School-houses have improved since then. One word in regard to the old worthies that built this house fifty years ago. They were then in the prime of life, and were performing a duty to their children to the best of their ability. They built this house and planned it, and there is scarcely one of them left. Nearly all have laid down the burden of life and gone to the better land, but the fruits of their labor no mortal will ever know. It was built for a school-house, but they built and planned it also for a house of worship. Thank God, they were catholic enough to build a house where all men could meet and worship according to the dictates of their own conscience, where Presbyterians, Baptists, and Methodists might mingle in the common worship of a common Father. Like the Puritan fathers they came here to worship, and unlike them they permitted others to do the same. They were free from the fell spirit of persecution which the Puritan fathers brought with them, and were so much farther advanced in Christianity and religious toleration that they agreed that all might worship here. Many of us have attended the indiscriminate ministry of all denominations and received good lessons from all. They were God-fearing men, and built their ideas of religion and secular education on the Bible and its teachings, and they built wisely and well. They were all farmers, and not one of them had ever seen a rubber applied to a wagon. Not one had ever seen a railroad train, and not one had ever seen a threshing-machine, except the old-fashioned flail. Times are changing, and we are changing with them, but this old Bible upon which they builded, and the doctrines upon which it is based, are immutable and will stand forever. Those hills in which I could once see no beauty in looking over them, after an absence of thirty years look beautiful now. Fruitful fields and smiling farms are now to be seen where then there was nothing but woods."

Concerning the house and its builders, Samuel T. Brown, of Huntingdon, said,—

"What of the founders and early scholars of this institution? I would like to speak of them as individuals, but would I stop? Had they any distinguishing traits as a class or community? They were not wealthy, powerful, or learned. They had to contend from the start with a rugged forest, a sterile soil, and steep hillsides. Not a rich man among us all to give us influence or power. Our common school system was not then in existence. Education could only be obtained by the determined perseverance of our parents and ourselves. Every family must devote the long months of summer and fall to labor in order that the children might have a few months of schooling in the winter, and yet it would be hard to find a neighborhood in which so few could be found without a fair common education. As a general rule, we could read, and did read all the books we could buy or borrow. Although the conditions of life were somewhat hard, we were not at all intimidated or cast down. Perhaps we enjoyed life as well, after all, as many communities more highly favored. Every man, woman, and child was ready to help a neighbor in a pinch. Even the labors of the farm and household were made the occasion of many a social gathering, and I venture to say that very many of us look back to apple-cuttings, the choppings and log-rollings, the stone-haulings and corn-huskings as among the happiest days of our lives. We did not see or handle much money, but we learned how to do all sorts of useful work while yet very young. Training of this kind made us healthful, vigorous, and self-reliant. Many of us, I know, came to the conclusion early that the boy or man who could make a living here could make a living anywhere, and might make a better one some other place. So we scattered and separated until to-day the homes and the graves of that sturdy band are found in every State stretching westward from these slopes of the Alleghenies to the far-off Nevadas on the Pacific coast. As a general rule, they have held their own wherever they went in the battle of life. They have not been office-seekers or office-holders to any extent, and this, I hold, is to their credit. All they asked was a fair field and no gouging. They were willing to give the odds of wealth and start where others had it, and often managed to come out even at the end of the race.

"That the graduates of this log college succeeded in life was owing as much to the store of health here laid in as to any mental training. Clearing and tilling these rugged hills was hard work, but the air was fresh and invigorating. We had no college campus or gymnasium for our youthful sports when at school, but the open woods all about the building gave ample space for prisoner's base, corner-cat, and town-ball. Here I must say no amount of learning will produce its best results unless accompanied with vigorous health. The practice of imposing on children and youth a long course of school and college training, at the expense of physical development, is like crowding a cargo of rich merchandise into a frail and feeble vessel and sending it forth to meet the storms and tempests of the ocean. If the early settlers here had any distinguishing trait of character it was, in my judgment, a sturdy, honest self-respect. Every man had his own opinion, and stood ready to maintain it. This, as a general rule, applies to the generation of my own age as well as that preceding it. I can say for myself that though I have been as poor and obscure as I well could be, I never saw the day when I did not consider myself the equal of the best boy or man I ever knew or heard of, and just as good as I am to-day. I believe that was a prevailing trait of character among my kindred and friends here, and if any of them differed from that standard they fell just so far below the general average in all that made this community respectable and respected.

"In looking back over the roll of scholars of thirty or forty years ago, I find that a very large proportion of them became teachers, for longer or shorter periods. I think more than one-half of them taught school more or less; not as a permanent business, but doing it well for the time being, and making it a stepping-stone to something more lucrative. In the family of my uncle, James Porter, there were eight sons, and seven of them taught school. In our family there were eight children, and seven of them were teachers for a time. It has been said that the boys of New England are born with spelling-books in their mouths, but I doubt whether you could find many school districts in New England that would 'spell down' the old 'Union' in its palmiest days. We prided ourselves in the art and mystery of spelling, and our spelling-schools ranked well up with our singing-schools. These institutions gave us a great deal of fun and solid enjoyment. I think there has never been anything invented quite equal to a country singing-school as conducted here.

"During my early life this was not only a school-house, but it was our church, our lyceum, and our academy of music and public hall as well.

"This was always a religious community, and though in my day here the majority of the people were Presbyterians, they always turned out to hear any preacher who came along, and filled the old house from door to platform. Mr. Peebles gave us the gospel according to Presbyterian forms, and Jesse Ash and old Father Thomas gave us the Baptist doctrine. Afterwards William Jones came here as a young Baptist minister. He was somewhat sensational, and stirred up a little breeze among our conservative old church-goers. Theology, immersion, and sprinkling were the leading topics of discussion among us for a time. I remember my mother told Rev. Jones to his face that the Baptists were sound Calvinists just as the Presbyterians were, but he was not preaching the doctrine of his own church, but preaching Arminianism, and she would hear no more of it. My mother knew all about the Catechism and the Confession of Faith, and she read the Bible and Buck's Theological Dictionary with close attention. Mr. Jones was never converted to Presbyterianism, however, but he afterwards married a daughter of Mr. John Postlethwaite, a Presbyterian elder, then became a Seventh-Day Baptist, went to India as missionary, returned to England, and is now preaching to a congregation in London. I believe the Methodists never had any regular preaching here, at least in my day. The Lutheran Church has now become the leading denomination, and I am glad to know they maintain the reputation of the old neighborhood for religion and good morals."

Of one of the attendants of the schools maintained in the aforesaid building the Rev. William M. Jones wrote from England,—

"I think I can safely say that one of the earliest scholars in that log or block-house was Elizabeth Postlethwaite, afterwards my dear companion for nearly a score of years, and who became accustomed to the French language in the West Indies, Hayti; afterwards a teacher in Shelah Academy, New Jersey, and after that a student in Arabic and Hebrew in Palestine. In all three languages she was quite proficient. Though never pretending to brilliancy, she was, nevertheless, solid and real in all that she did, and her linguistic attainments were perfect as far as they went. There was no show in her attempts to speak either French or Arabic, and her Hebrew was good enough for a theological graduate and some to spare. Her mortal remains, and those of her youngest child, lie buried in the American cemetery on Mount Zion, just without the walls of Jerusalem."

Among other teachers at the Union school-house were John Brown and his wife, Jennie Porter. Mr. Brown was a thorough teacher and a rigid disciplinarian. He was endowed with quick perceptions and a wonderfully retentive memory, which enabled him to repeat page after page of Burns, and to retain the facts of history fully in mind. On the return of each Sabbath-day he apportioned to every member a certain amount of Scriptures or catechism, which had to be learned during the week, under penalty of severe punishment. Contrary to general custom, he used neither liquor nor tobacco, and abhorred the forms of profanity so prevalent in many localities. As illustrating this trait of his character, it is related that on one occasion, while his pupils were at play, a young man passing along the road used profane language in conversation with the children. This being reported to the teacher, he was greatly incensed, and he determined to punish the young man on his return home. When he saw him approach the house he tapped on the window to attract his attention, and called him in. After ascertaining the truth of the report from the young man himself, he took down the ever-ready birch and gave the astonished fellow a sound thrashing, and after admonishing him not to repeat his offense, told him to proceed on his way. Although this was rather an arbitrary use of power, it gives us a glimpse of the stern qualities of the teachers of that period when they were actuated by moral principles.

The excessive immigration from Henderson had a depressing effect upon the schools and churches of the township, so that these interests have latterly not been conspicuously noteworthy. The future of schools, however, promises to be more auspicious, and even now Henderson has a not unfavorable exhibit in educational matters. In 1880 seven schools were maintained, each five months, at a cost of nearly one thousand dollars. The average number attending was one hundred and forty-one.

No record exists of the first school board under the common-school system, but since 1836 the directors annually elected have been the following:

1837, William Campbell, Jacob Detweiler; 1838, Andrew Allison, Dr. John Metz; 1839, Jonathan H. Dorsey, John Hight, Alexander Simpson; 1840, James Shorthill, James Sloan; 1841, Andrew Allison, Dr. John Metz; 1842, John Hight, Jonathan H. Dorsey; 1843, Alexander Simpson, James Shorthill; 1844, Leonard G. Kessler, Dr. John Metz; 1845, John Hight, John A. Campbell; 1846, Martin Fleming, David Thompson; 1847, John Porter, James P. Wray, S. Goodman, John Colstock, and Jacob Miller; 1848, James Goodman, George Numer; 1849, John Colstock, Stephen Gorsuch; 1850, John Porter, T. P.

Campbell, David Black, John Colstock, Thomas Fisher, George Taylor; 1851, Jackson Fee, James Wilson, Dennis Buoy; 1852, Andrew Decker, Stephen Gorsuch; 1853, James Goodman, John Flenner; 1854, Jacob Miller, John Warfel, James Wilson; 1855, Elisha Shoemaker, George Numer; 1856, John Rhodes, John Flenner; 1857, John Goodman, John Porter; 1858, James D. Hight, John Warfel; 1859, John Numer, Adam Rupert; 1860, David Hare, Jacob Hess, George Miller; 1861, Samuel Eby, John Warfel, Henry S. Miller; 1862, Thomas Dorland, Daniel Rupert; 1863, William Mundorf, Lewis Bergantz, John Warfel; 1864, Samuel Eby; 1865, James Barras, Simon Bayles; 1866, James Wilson, John Rhodes; 1867, Daniel Rhodes, Simon White; 1868, John Numer, Lewis Bergantz; 1869, William Mundorf, Samuel Eby; 1870–71, A. Decker, J. A. Shultz; 1872, George Miller; 1873, Samuel Steel, Joseph Enders; 1874, D. Rhodes, L. Bergantz; 1875, Samuel Eby, Charles Estes; 1876, Laben Hall, G. F. Hetrick; 1877, Samuel Eby, David Peightal, Samuel Steel; 1878, Laben Hall, George W. Bergantz; 1879, Daniel Rowland, Samuel Eby; 1880, Henry Steel, Andrew Decker; 1881, Henry Lamp, William Hern.

About thirty years ago the only meeting-house in the township was erected near Union school-house by a congregation of Presbyterians, which had for a time a flourishing existence. Subsequently the members became so few that the organization was given up, the church at Huntingdon absorbing the remaining interest. The history of that religious body consequently is not produced here. Unity Church, after being unoccupied some time, became the property of

The Mount Zion Evangelical Lutheran Congregation, and has since served as a place of worship for that church. The congregation was formed about 1858 of a number of persons, among whom were Joseph Camp and wife, Jacob Hetrick and wife, John and Rosina Rhodes, Samuel Hetrick and wife, Rachel, Catherine, and Elizabeth Hess. The church had the same pastors as Huntingdon until 1874, when, in connection with Mill Creek and McAlevy's Fort, a new charge was constituted, with the Rev. A. A. Kerlin as pastor. His pastorate was terminated May 1, 1881, and in July following the Rev. S. Croft took charge of these churches. Mount Zion has ninety communicants, and a church council composed of William Mundorf, John Hall, Henry Steel, and Joseph Bergantz. In the first council were Robert Sherlon, elder, and Jacob Hetrick, deacon. Among the elders have been George Hetrick, James Hall, Daniel Rowland, Joseph Garner, and others.

Unity meeting-house has been repaired, and now presents a fair appearance. In this house a Sunday-school has been maintained, first by the Presbyterians and since by the Lutherans, which has been attended by the people of the central part of the township in general. In the summer of 1881 the enrollment was one hundred members, and William Mundorf and William Hern were the superintendents. Although other denominations have a following in the township, their main organization is outside the limits of Henderson.

CHAPTER XLII.

HOPEWELL TOWNSHIP.

HOPEWELL was one of the six original townships of Huntingdon County at the time of its organization, in 1787. It then included the territory now embraced in the townships of Union, Tod, Cass, Penn, Carbon, and Lincoln. Union, which then included Tod, Cass, and Carbon, was formed from it in 1791; Penn, in 1846; and Lincoln, in 1866. It is now one of the smallest townships in the county.

As now constituted it is bounded on the north by Lincoln township, east by Lincoln, Tod, and Carbon townships, south by the county of Bedford, and west by Bedford and Blair Counties. It is the southwestern township in the county. It lies between Terrace and Tussey Mountains, and between these, running parallel with them, are several lesser ranges of mountains or hills, known respectively as Allegrippa Ridge, Pine Ridge, Backbone, Warrior Ridge, and Mulberry Ridge.

It is traversed by the Raystown Branch of the Juniata River, which runs in a northeasterly course along the base of Terrace Mountain. The principal affluent of this stream in Hopewell is Shy Beaver Creek, which rises near Cove Station and empties into Raystown Branch near the line between Hopewell and Lincoln townships.

The surface of the township is hilly generally, though there is some level land in the valleys along the above-named streams, and there, as well as on the hillsides, are excellent farms. The hilly regions are mostly utilized for farming, which is the principal business in the township. The mountainous parts of the township are covered with timber, mostly locust, chestnut, and the different varieties of oak.

The only manufactory in the township is the tannery of W. S. Enyeart & Bros. This is located in Puttstown village, near the southeast corner of the township. This was first established in 1857 by Messrs. Pepser and Putenbaugh. It had been a carding- and cloth-dressing mill, but was converted into a tannery by the above firm. The machinery was propelled by the water of Shoup's Run. The firm became Pepser & Enyeart, then Enyeart & Sons, then, in 1877, as at present. In 1880 the tannery was rebuilt, and in the spring of 1882 new machinery was introduced, propelled by a steam-engine of twenty horse-power; five hands are employed, and the tannery has a capacity of two thousand five hundred hides annually.

The only grist-mill now in Hopewell was erected in 1842 at Puttstown by Henry Putt. It was first a log mill, with one run of stones that were quarried on Broad Top Mountain. It was propelled then as now by water from Shoup's Run. In 1853 the old log mill was taken down and the present framed

David B Weaver

David B. Weaver was born in Hopewell township, Huntingdon Co., Pa., in 1840. His mother was of the Berkstresser and Sheckler families, the first settlers along the Raystown branch of the Juniata River. He was brought up as a farmer. His father owned a farm at Weaver's Bridge. He gave up farming as an occupation in 1863, and went to the Broad Top Coal-Mines, in the capacity of weighmaster at the Crawford Colliery. In 1863 and 1864 he was engaged in mining coal for supplying fuel for the motive power of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad at the Prospect Colliery. In the spring of 1864 he went to Iowa, got an outfit, and crossed the plains to the gold-fields of Montana, arriving at Emigrant Gulch in the latter part of August the same year. He was one of a party of three men who first found gold in paying quantities in the Yellowstone Valley. This was on the 30th of August, 1864. He raised the first potatoes that were cultivated on the upper Yellowstone Valley, in the summer of 1865. Was engaged in gold-mining during the seasons of 1864, 1865, and 1866. In the fall of 1866 Mr. Weaver went to San Francisco. Was employed as a pumping engineer at Mt. Diablo Coal-Mines, California, from Dec. 3, 1866, until Jan. 1, 1868. Returned to Pennsylvania and married Miss Elizabeth Mountain, a granddaughter of Jane McGuire, whose narrow escape from capture by the Indians is chronicled in Jones' "History of the Juniata Valley" (when Francis Donnelly and son were killed by the Indians near Standing Stone Fort). Mr. Weaver went to Missouri in the spring of 1869, and returned on account of his father's death the next fall to the place where he now resides.

In 1875 he was elected a member (and took the oath of office on Jan. 3, 1876) of the board of county commissioners of Huntingdon County, this being the first full board under the present constitution of Pennsylvania. After serving out his term of office he retired to private life.

In January, 1883, Mr. Weaver purchased the "Morrison Mills," near Hawthorn, Fla., where he intends to reside.

structure erected on its site by Levi Putt, a son of Henry. In this there are three run of burr stones.

At a very early day there was a rude grist-mill on the Raystown Branch, about two miles above the mouth of Shy Beaver Creek. It has long since gone to ruin, though the remains of the dam are still to be seen. Tradition says the last person who carried on this mill was a man named Walters.

In times past there were in this township many saw-mills. On Shy Beaver Run four are remembered, and on Shoup's Run and Raystown Branch four others, besides several on smaller streams. Of these only two remain, one on Shy Beaver, owned by John B. Beaver, and the other on a smaller stream, by William Stone.

Of the iron ore which abounds in this township, one mine is worked by Robert H. Powel, of Philadelphia, who, in 1882, erected an extensive furnace a few miles away.

The village of Puttstown, in the southern corner of the township, was commenced by Jacob Putt, who erected the first house there in 1840. It has now a grist-mill, a tannery, and about thirty dwellings.

At Cove Station there is a post-office, a small railroad depot, and a few dwellings. In the northern part of the township is a small hamlet, where Shy Beaver post-office is located.

The Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad passes through the township in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction. On this is a flag station named Rough and Ready, about a mile and a half from the north line of the township, and Cove Station, near the southern boundary.

The original thoroughfare or highway through the township ran along the eastern base of Warrior's Ridge, but this ceased to be used some seventy years since. It was originally an Indian trail. Along this road the first settlements in the township were made. Subsequently the road through Woodcock Valley, between Warrior Ridge and Tussey Mountain, was constructed. (Tradition says that the valley was so named because the workmen on this road found many of these birds there.) The present road, or rather roads along Raystown Branch were not built till about 1839, though a poor excuse for a road had previously existed there.

Pioneers.—It is not now known who were the first settlers in what is now Hopewell, nor when they came. The original settlers, as before stated, came on the old Indian trail along the eastern base of Warrior's Ridge. Of these, the names of Skelly brothers, Michael and Felix, are known. They settled near Elk Gap, in Woodcock Valley, on land now owned by John B. Weaver. What was known as Elk Lick was near the house of the Skellys. This was much frequented by elk and deer at that early day, and even at the present time they often come here. Of these brothers, Michael was killed here and Felix was taken prisoner by the Indians.

Michael Diamond was also an early settler here. He erected the log house that is now occupied by J. B. Weaver, the oldest in the township. None of the descendants of these families are in this region.

George Elder and his sons George and William were among the pioneers here. They located in Woodcock Valley, about half a mile from what is now Cove Station. The wife of William was made a prisoner by the Indians at the same time Felix Skelly was captured. None of the descendants of the Elder family are here.

Jacob Weaver came in 1791 with his wife and five children from the vicinity of Hagerstown, Md. They followed the Indian trail, and brought their effects on the back of a cow. They located on the farm now owned by John B. Weaver, opposite Elk Gap. They had five sons and three daughters. Of the sons, two, Peter and John, went West; Henry, Christian, and Leonard remained and reared families. Of the sons of Henry, John B., sixty-three years of age, resides on the farm where his grandfather originally settled, and William lives on a part of the same farm. John B. has three children living in this vicinity, and William two. Six of the children of Leonard and two of the grandchildren of Christian reside in the township.

George Russell came in 1795 from Berks County, Pa., and located near Jacob Weaver in Woodcock Valley. He had three sons and three daughters. Many of the grandchildren of the sons reside in Hopewell.

Jeremiah and William Smart were early settlers on the Raystown Branch, but none of their descendants remain.

Frederick Sheckler also came from Maryland, and settled on the Raystown Branch near Puttstown. Some of his descendants in the female line are still here. Boston Heeter came from Maryland and settled on the Raystown Branch half a mile above the mouth of Shy Beaver Creek. George Buchanan settled early, midway between Puttstown and the mouth of the Shy Beaver, on Raystown Branch. Andrew McFurran settled just above Mr. Buchanan. James Lynch was an early settler at the head of what was known as "Rogue's Hollow," near the branch. None of the descendants of these men are in Hopewell.

Daniel Imler settled at an early time on the Shy Beaver, about a mile from its mouth. Jacob Kochenhower came early, and located near where Shy Beaver post-office now is.

Official List.—The officers of Hopewell township have been the following:

SUPERVISORS.

1789, Joseph Norris, William Hoake; 1790, Alexander Huston, Jacob Ganshorn; 1791, Wilkinson Lane, Solomon Sill; 1792, John Shaver, Martin Mixel; 1793, Henry Shultz, John Shaver; 1794, John Norris, Joshua Davis; 1795, David Swoope, Lewis Reigh; 1796, John Skelly, Joseph Norris, Sr.; 1797, Isaac Easton, Michael McAffee; 1798, Frederick Heeter, John Freet; 1799, Thomas S. Wilson, William Elder; 1800, Jacob Grace, George Russell; 1801, William Smart, Joseph Fay; 1803, James Entrekin, John Pechel; 1804, John Keith, Valentine Fink; 1805, Isaac Bowers, Adam Keith, Jr.; 1806, John Craff, Joseph Kerry, Jr.; 1807, Sebastian Heeter, Michael Garner; 1808, Adam Aumer, John Bailey; 1809, John Bailey, Adam Amer; 1810, John Reihley, Frederick Heeter; 1811, William Eynart, Matthew Gardner; 1814, Nicholas Isenberg, James Thompson; 1815, William W. Harris, John Reed; 1816, George Buchanan, Joseph Norris; 1817, Daniel Summers, William Barrack; 1818, Jacob Grove, Evan Davis; 1819, Christian Shontz, Harry Weaver; 1820, William Houk, Jacob Barrick; 1822, Adam Snyder, Alexander McCall; 1823, Alexander McCall, Michael Stone; 1824, William Elder, Peter Pechtel; 1825, Henry Hannawalt, John Hoover; 1826, Abraham Kuntz, James Hight; 1827, Levi Wilson, Daniel Brumback; 1828, Michael Garner, Adam Snyder; 1829, John Shultz, Isaac Bowers; 1830, John Boyer, William Elder; 1831, Abraham Grubb; 1832, Jacob Fink, William Elder; 1833, Lloyd Houck, Thomas Enyeart; 1834, Christopher Moses, Joseph Kneely; 1835, David Schner, Leonard Weaver; 1836, George Prough, Isaac Peichtal; 1837, Jacob Fink, Frederick Heeter; 1838, Jacob Fink, Jacob Weaver; 1839, Jacob Weaver, Philip Holler; 1840, Jacob Hess, Daniel Shultz; 1841, David Shultz, Joseph Norris; 1842, John Russell, Thomas Norris; 1843, Henry Zimmerman, Francis Haller; 1844, Henry Shultz, Jefferson Simonton; 1845, John Garner, David Mountain; 1846, Daniel Shontz, Charles Magill; 1847, Leonard Weaver, Samuel Beaver; 1848, David Miller, John B. Weaver; 1849, David Miller, Robert McCall; 1850, John Brumbaugh, Abraham Brumbaugh; 1851, Jacob Summers, Martin Hysong; 1852, Samuel Beaver, Henry Putt; 1853, Edward Duncan, William Weaver; 1854, Samuel Schell, John I. Decker; 1855, J. Russell, Edward Duncan; 1856, John Donaldson, Henry Carbough; 1857, J. Moyer, G. Barkstresser; 1858, W. Brumbaugh, S. Grove; 1859, Henry Shultz, Jacob Weaver; 1860, Henry Shultz, Charles Buller; 1861, Daniel Brumbaugh, Jonah Reed; 1862, David Lynn, William Weaver; 1863, David Lynn, Nicholas Lynn; 1864, George Russell, John Beaver; 1865, David Lynn, Nicholas Lynn; 1866, David Lynn, Andrew Brumbaugh; 1867, Solomon Lynn, Charles Butler; 1868, William Morgan, John K. Russell; 1869, John B. Weaver, Adam Speck; 1870, Miles Putt, W. Weaver; 1872, W. Weaver, A. Russell; 1873, Andrew Carvey, William Fleck; 1874, T. N. Weaver, John B. Weaver; 1875, Levi Hanpt, Abraham Russell; 1876, A. Lloyd, Noah Smith; 1877, Abner Lloyd, J. B. Russell; 1878, Abner Lloyd, David Russell; 1879, Leonard Smith, Jacob Stone; 1880, John W. Russell, J. Wilson Weaver; 1881, Frederick Evans, Isaac Russell.

CONSTABLES.

1788, William Dean; 1790, John Bishop; 1791, Jacob Shoup; 1792–93, Richard Plummer; 1794, Michael Gardner; 1795, Martin Maxwell; 1796, William Smart; 1797, Abraham Grubb; 1798, Joshua Davis; 1799, Michael McAfee; 1800, William Estep; 1801, John Keith; 1802–3, Fred. Heeter; 1804–5, Andrew McFerren; 1806, Jacob Ditwyler; 1807, Henry Sommers; 1808, Joseph Fray; 1809, Richard Dowlin; 1810, William Elder; 1811, S. Hoover; 1812, Henry Shultz; 1813, John Dean; 1814, William Enyartson; 1815, Joseph Norris; 1816, George Russell; 1817, Benjamin Bailey; 1818, William W. Harris; 1819, Henry Hannawalt; 1820, Thomas Clark; 1821, George Buchanan; 1822, Amos Clark; 1823, William Barrick; 1824, Matthew Gardner; 1825, Michael Garner; 1826, Peter Pechtel; 1827, William Enyeart, Jr.; 1828, Abraham Vantries; 1829, John Keith; 1830, Lloyd Houck; 1831, Jacob Summers; 1832–33, Lloyd Houck; 1834, Samuel Watson; 1835, Caleb Swoope, 1836, Jacob Hess; 1837, William Dean; 1838, John Bowers; 1839, William Richardson; 1840, Eli Plummer; 1841–42, John B. Weaver; 1843, Eli Heeter; 1844–46, George Russell; 1847–48, Thomas Hall; 1849, Jacob Summers; 1850, David Mountain; 1851, J. W. Berkstresser; 1852–53, Samuel Beaver; 1854, William Johnston; 1855, Alexander Park; 1856, Jacob Russell; 1857, Jackson Beaver; 1858, J. Bundle; 1859, William Richardson; 1860, John Rothrock; 1861-62, David Shoup; 1863–64, John Fulton; 1865, W. S. Entrekin; 1866, John Fulton; 1867, George Berkstresser; 1868–71, George C. Hamilton; 1872, George Berkstresser; 1873–75, David Helsel; 1876–77, George Berkstresser; 1878–81, William Stone.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

1789, William Shirley, Hugh Shalley; 1790, Adam Keigh, Michael Keigh; 1791, William Shirley, Levi Moore; 1793, Levi Moore, William Shirley; 1794, Levi Moore, William Shirley; 1795, Joseph Morris, Joshua Davis; 1796, Peter Harstock, Adam Keigh; 1797, Peter Hartsock, Adam Keith; 1798, Peter Hartsock, Adam Keith; 1799, Joseph Davis, Sr., Joseph Norris, Sr.; 1800, Joshua Davis, Joseph Norris; 1801, John Dean, Sr., Joseph Norris, Sr.; 1803, Adam Keith, John Norris; 1804, Adam Keith, Sr., Michael Keith; 1813, Robert Wray, Robert Wason; 1815, George Russell, Adam Duman; 1816, Richard Dowland, Joseph Norris; 1817, Henry Hanawalt, George Brumbaugh; 1818, Daniel Shaffer, William Elder; 1819, William Barrick, Henry Hanawalt; 1820, Henry Hanawalt, John Norris; 1822, William Elder, R. Brown; 1823, George Russell, Peter Pechtel; 1824, Daniel Brumbagh, Christian Shontz; 1825, Jacob Barrick, Christian Shontz; 1826, Joseph Doland, John Hught; 1827, Henry Hannawalt, William Barrick; 1828, John Keith, John Garner; 1829, George Ruple, John Bowers; 1830, Jacob Barrick, John Bowers; 1831, William Barrack, Peter Pechtel; 1832, Jacob Grove, Abraham Bowers; 1834, Thomas Clark, Isaac Brumbaugh; 1835, Daniel Brumbaugh, Thomas Clark; 1836, Matthew Garner, George Brumbaugh; 1837, Jacob Stouffer, George Garner; 1838, Peter Peightel, Henry Sheeder; 1839, Henry Summers, Dewalt Fouse; 1840, —— ——; 1841, Dewalt Fouse, Edward Duncon; 1842, John Anderson, John Barkstresser; 1843, Felix Linn, David Miller; 1844, Eli Plummer, Thomas Norris; 1845, Jacob Fink, Jefferson Simonton; 1846, William Dean, Jacob Fink; 1847, Robert McCall, Leonard Weaver; 1848, Jeffries Simonton, John Plummer; 1849, Jeffries Simonton, John Shultz; 1850, John Shultz, Jacob Summers; 1851, Jacob Summers, Michael Star; 1852, John Weaver, Nicholas Lynn; 1853, John Brumbaugh, George Russell; 1854, Leonard Weaver, Samuel Johnston; 1855, Adam Fouse, D. Mountain; 1856, Samuel Schell, Samuel Johnston.

ASSESSMENT OF 1788.

Arranged according to present townships.

Hopewell (now Penn).

Anderson, Stewart, 50 a. propr. land, 2 h., 2 c.
Bishop, John, 150 a. W., propr. land, 4 h., 2 c.
Barrut, William, 100 a., propr. land, 1 c., 2 c.
Denis, Jacob, 100 a. L.
Dean, John, 190 a. deed, 2 h., 1 c.
Dowland, Richard, 150 a. W., 1 h.
Dean, William, 100 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Donaldson, Moses, 150 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Engard, William 170 a. L., 2 h., 3 c.
Engard, John, 50 a. W., propr. land, 2 h., 1 c.
Hartsock, Peter, Jr., 50 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Hartsock, Peter, Sr., 200 a. L. (George Elder).
Hartsock, Samuel, 1 h., 1 c.
Knowles, Daniel, 10 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Norris, Joseph, 390 a. W., 2 h., 1 c., 2 negroes.
Norris, John, 200 a. W., 2 h., 3 c.
Reed, Alexander, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Reed, John, 200 a. W., 2 h. 2 c.
Sills, Solomon, 150 a. deed, 4 h., 4 c.
Sills, Solomon, 200 a. propr., 4 h., 4 c.
Spoon, Henry, 100 a. L.
Wilson, Thomas, Esq., 150 a. L., 2 h., 4 c., 1 mill.

Huntingdon (now Penn), 1788.

Ashbock, John, 300 a. manor., 4 h., 4 c., 1 still.
Bowers, Mary, 100 a. manor, 2 h., 2 c.
Brackenridge, Mary, 300 a. manor.
Bittle, John, 150 a. deed, 2 h., 4 c.
Buckhannon, George, 200 Lunnon, 2 h., 1 c.
Davis, John, 200 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Donnelson, Andrew, 150 a. manor, 3 h., 3 c.
Donnelson, Andrew, 100 a. W.
Entrican, James, 100 a. Lunnon, 2 h., 3 c.

Hopewell (not Classified).

Brown, William, 200 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Brown, James, 200 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Butcher, Philip, 200 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Burns, Nathan, 1 h.
Canon, Charles, 50 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Case, John, 200 a. (See Union.)
Deckerhoff, Ferdinand, 2 h., 2 c.
Florah, James, 50 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Gibboney, Edward, 100 a. W., 1 h., 1 c.

Hutson, Richard, 100 a. W.
Hughes, William, 50 a. L., 1 h.
Howard, Henry, 2 h., 2 c.
Hall, Thomas, 200 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Hock, William, 250 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Hutson, Matthew, 2 h., 1 c.
Hall, William, 300 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Hines, Henry, 150 a. W., 1 h., 1 c.
Paine, Daniel, 300 a. L.
Lavery, Henry, 20 a. L.
Moushour, Balser, 100 a. L., 1 c.
Mask, Richard, 100 a. L., 2 h., 1 c. (Abn. Sells.)
McFaran, Andrew, 100 a. L., 2 h., 1 c. (Abn. Sells.)
Parker, John, 30 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Rolf, David, 100 a. W.
Rakey, Adam, 100 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Rockhold, Nath., 50 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Shirley, William, 100 a. L., 1 h. 3 c.
Sheets, Jacob, 150 a. W., 2 h.
Swigard, John, 30 a. L., 1 h.
Shepherd, William, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Shoupe, Jacob, 75 a. L., 1 h., 2 c.
Stephen, Vincent, 100 a. L., 2 c.
Toverry, Thomas, 300 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Wilson, Robert, 100 a. W., 3 h., 4 c. (Bayton and Wharton.)
Wilson, Hill, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 c., 1 still.
Whitston, Susanna, 65 a. W., 1 h., 1 c.
Whitnel, Robert, 100 a. W., 1 h., 2 c., propr. land.
Wagoner, Peter, ———, 2 h., 2 c.
White, Francis, 1 c.

CARBON.

Houck, William, 250 a. W., 2 h., 2 c. (Hock.)

HOPEWELL (NON-RESIDENT).

John Cannon, 100 a., deed.

CASS.

Johnston, Hugh, 50 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Lucket, Thomas, 500 a. L., 2 h.
Riley, Peter, 300 a. W., 2 h., 1 c.
Shop, Lawrence, 193 a.
Thomson, Peter, 200 a. L., 2 c., 2 c. (Is this Penn?)

CLAY.

Lane, Samuel, 100 a. W., 1 h.

PRESENT HOPEWELL.

Cannum, William, 50 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Heeter, Boston, 2 c.
Shackler, Frederick, 25 a. L., 2 h., 2 c., 1 still.
Skelly, Michael, 100 a. L., 1 h., 3 c. (land Mr. Donaldson).
Skelly, Hugh, 50 a. L., 2 h.
Dimmond, Daniel, 50 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Linch, James, 300 a. W. (Mr. Donaldson, of Baltimore).

LINCOLN.

Cline, John, 50 a. deed, 1 h., 1 c. (where John Donaldson lives).
Huston, Alexander, 30 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Hale, James, 100 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Moor, Levy, 200 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Moor, Zebulon, 150 a. L., 2 h., 3 c.
Mrs. Caspord, 100 a. L., 1 h.
Mrs. George, 1 c.
Plumer, Richard, 450 a. L. (Reub. Haines), 1 h., 1 c.
Plummar, Elizabeth 450 a. L. (Reub. Haines), 2 h., 2 c.
Smart, William, Jr., 50 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Smart, William, Sr., 50 a. L., 1 c.
Anderson, William, 100 a. L., 2 h., 3 c.
Abt, William, 30 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
Arvason, Hugh, 20 *, 1 h.
Davis, Joshua, 300 a. L., 3 h., 2 c.
Elder, George, 150 a., non-resident.

JUNIATA.

Johnston, Joseph, 60 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
Shavor, John, 300 a. W., 3 h., 3 c.
Stark, Philip, 50 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Shaver John, 300 a. W., 3 h., 3 c.
Thompson, Samuel, 100 a. W., 4 h., 2 c.
Weston, John, 150 a. L., 3 h., 2 c.

HUNTINGDON (NOW JUNIATA), 1788.

Donnelson, Moses, 200 deed.

TOD.

Crum, Nicklis, 50 a., held by L., 2 c., and 1 mill. (This mill was on old site at Paradise.)
Clark, Cornelius (Neil?), 100 a. L., 3 h., 2 c.
Corbin, William, 200 a. L., 1 h., 2 c.
Donning, John, Sr., 200 a. L., 3 h., 2 c.
Donning, John, Jr., 2 h., 1 c.
Ellery, Ludwick, 50 a. W., 1 h., 1 c.
Edwards, John, 150 a. L., 2 c., 1 c.
Freekes, Robert, 300 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Gutroy, Hugh, 120 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
Heeter, George, 165 a. deed, 3 h., 2 c.
Hiland, Edward, 2 c. (Where did he live?)
Hornick, August, 150 a. L., 1 h., 1 c. (Where did he live?)
Houck, Jacob, 400 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
(Keech) Keith, Adam, 100 a. L., 2 h., 1 c.
(Keech) Keith, Adam, Jr., 100 a. L., 1 h., 1 c.
(Keech) Keith, Michael, 150 a. L., 2 h., 2 c.
(Keech) Keith, Jacob, 1 h., 1 c.
Lane, William, 180 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Lane, Richard, 100 a. L., 1 h.
Laine, Daniel, 300 a. L.
McLane, Elias, 200 a. L., 2 h., 3 c.

UNION.

Covenhoven, John, 100 a. held by deed, 2 h., 2 c.
Hampson, James, Sr., 45 a. W., 2 h., 2 c.
Hampson, James, Jr., 1 h.
Hampson, William, 50 a. L., 1 h.
Prigmor, Joseph, 120 a., deed, 3 h., 2 c.
Tanner, Hugh, 100 a. W.
Case, John, 200 L., 2 h., 1 c., 1 still (Mr. Lilly to pay).

German Reformed Church.—This society was organized about the year 1829, with ten members and Rev. Christian Barnes as pastor. In that year a log church building was erected in Woodcock Valley, near where the Shy Beaver post-office now is. This building was twenty-four by twenty-eight feet, and was finished according to the primitive fashion of those times. Some of the seats were made of split chestnut staves, and others of peeled poles of the same timber. Only an axe and an auger were required in the manufacture of this furniture. In this temple the congregation worshiped till 1859. In that year it was taken down and the present stone structure erected on its site. This is thirty-five by forty-five feet, and its ordinary seating capacity is three hundred.

Mr. Barnes served the church as pastor till 1844, and was followed in succession by Revs. F. B. Rupley, Dewalt Fouse, Jacob Hessler, J. Witmar, John H. Sykes, Cyrus H. Reiter, and the present pastor, H. F. Long.

The present membership is seventy. Of the original members of this church but one, Nicholas Lynn, of Lincoln township, is now living.

Methodist Episcopal Church of Hopewell.—The first Methodist preaching in the township of Hopewell was about the year 1857. Among the earliest preachers who came here the names are remembered of Revs. Clever, Graham, Leckey, McKindless, Long, and White. Others whose names are forgotten occasionally held services here.

The first house of worship was a school-house at Rough and Ready Furnace, then the Weaver school-house. Services were held here without the formation of a class or society till 1877, when a church organization was effected, of which the constituent members were Mrs. Elizabeth Myers and her daughters Margaret and Hannah, Mrs. Elizabeth Bussick, John Bullar, Mrs. Emeline Snow, and Thomas Keith. Mr. Keith was the first class-leader, and continues in that position.

In 1877 a framed church was erected in Woodcock Valley, half a mile north from Shy Beaver post-office. It is a plain edifice, thirty-eight by thirty feet, and its cost was one thousand dollars. The erection of this building was largely due to the efforts of Mr. Thomas Keith, who contributed freely in money and labor for the purpose of securing this place of worship.

The clergymen in charge of the circuit of which this society is a part have been Revs. —— Montgomery, J. F. Rogerson, and the present incumbent, George W. Baker.

The four public schools in Hopewell were in 1881 kept open during five months, and the number of pupils instructed was one hundred and seventy-three.

The population of the township in 1850 was 788; in 1860, 1005; in 1870, 412; and in 1880, 579.

CHAPTER XLIII.

JACKSON TOWNSHIP.

JACKSON is one of the border townships of the county, occupying the upper parts of Shaver's Creek and Standing Stone Valleys. On the west and north is Centre County, Mifflin County forming the eastern boundary. On the south is Miller township, and on the west Barree. The greatest portion of the area is mountainous, seven distinct ranges appearing in the northern and eastern parts. Of these, Tussey Mountain and Standing Stone Mountain are dividing ridges between Huntingdon and Centre and Mifflin Counties. The intermediate and parallel ridges are Shaver's Creek Ridge, Greenlee Mountain, Long Mountain, Bare Meadow Mountain, and Broad Mountain. These confine the tillable lands to the southeastern part of the township, except a few narrow vales between the ranges named. The latter were originally heavily timbered, chiefly by pine-trees, although a large area of timber land yet remains upon some of the higher ridges. Bare Meadow Mountain owes its name to the fact that it is an almost treeless plateau, with a surface soft and yielding, being somewhat of the nature of swampy lands. In the valleys the soil is usually fertile and in some localities it is underlaid by limestone. The drainage is afforded by Shaver's Creek and by Standing Stone Creek and its branches, the chief of which, the East Branch, is a stream of considerable volume, flowing near the base of Standing Stone Mountain. The main branch of this creek has an almost parallel course with the former, the two streams being about a mile and a half apart. It is fed by a number of affluents, the principal ones being Laurel, Little Laurel, Ross, and Detweiler's Runs. Iron ore is found in abundance in many parts of the township, and the deposits are especially rich between the Broad and Standing Stone Mountains, where they are developed to supply Greenwood Furnaces.

Pioneer Settlers.—In the history of Barree may be found the names of many of the early citizens of the present township of Jackson, whose descendants, in the third generation, may be found among its population to-day. In general these suffered but little at the hands of hostile Indians in the times of the Revolution, but were not free of the fear of an attack by predatory bands. To provide a place of safety in case of sudden emergency a stockade fort was erected near the house of Gen. William McAlevy, which locality and existence has been perpetuated by the village of McAlevy's Fort. It was built about 1778, in consequence of the many Indian alarms in the lower part of the valley, and may have been designed more as a place of rendezvous for the people who wished to go in a company to the stronger forts at Standing Stone or in the Kishacoquillas Valley than as a place of defense. The location of the fort was near the house of William McAlevy, which was by a large spring, above the present residence of Robert McBurney, and every vestige of it was removed many years ago. It appears that this fort was occupied in the summer of 1778 by a number of settlers, who had gathered here in consequence of a rumor that hostile Indians had entered the valley, although their presence had not been clearly noted, and some were doubtful whether the alarm was well founded.

Murder of James McClees and Mrs. Huston.—Among these was an old lady by the name of Huston, whose age had made her somewhat garrulous. Her home was in the valley several miles above the fort, and among the other crops she had growing on the farm was a patch of flax, whose possession and care gave her a world of concern. Indeed, after she reached the fort she could do nothing but talk about her flax and lament constantly that it would go to waste because she could not give it her attention. Yet, yielding to her fears, she dared not leave the fort alone to attend to it, and tried in vain to persuade the men of the fort to accompany her. To no purpose did they set forth that the flax was well enough off where it was, and that owing to the wildness of the country adjacent her land to go there would be attended by the greatest risk of ambuscade by the Indians,—a venture too great when no good could be accomplished. She persisted in her purpose to go to her flax-patch until she became an object of good-natured ridicule and the butt of some jokes. One morning, about the middle of August, 1778, a group of men were seated before the fort when she again commenced talking about her flax, to the amusement of the men, who began twitting her about the great loss if her flax could not be gathered. At this a young man by the name of James McClees got up and said, "Boys, it's bad enough to be too cowardly to help the old woman gather her flax, but to ridicule her misfortune is a shame." To this the others retorted, "If you think it is cowardly, why don't you go and help her pull it." "That is just my intention," replied the spirited young fellow, and turning to the old woman he said, "Mrs. Huston, get ready, and I'll go with you to pull your flax."

The old woman was overjoyed, and in a few moments the two departed, the young man carrying with him his rifle. He was but eighteen years of age, but well developed, strong, and utterly without fear. They left promising to return that evening or the evening following at furthest. The first evening passed and they came not. The second one went by and still no signs of them. Their absence caused alarm, and a search was instituted. When the scouting party reached Mrs. Huston's house they found everything quiet, with no signs of one having been there. They started up the hill to the flax-patch, where they found Mrs. Huston dead and scalped, with cuts from a hatchet in her forehead. The flax was untouched, showing that she was killed on her way to the patch. About one hundred years farther lay the body of young McClees, stabbed and cut in every part of the body, no bullet-holes being visible, while on every hand were the evidences of a fearful close encounter. The ground was bloody for twenty yards around, and there were remnants of Indian dress lying around, but his rifle was gone. By his side was his knife, broken and bloody. The full nature of the conflict was not known until a few days later, when on a bench of the mountain, a mile distant from the cabin, were found the remains of three Indians covered with bark. It was thought that there were five Indians, and that McClees killed two outright, dying in a hand-to-hand struggle at the same time that the third Indian yielded up his life.[1]

The annals of the township do not contain accounts of other Indian outrages, but the massacre of Mrs. Huston and young McClees had the effect of keeping out many settlers until after the close of the Revolution. A participant in that struggle and the first to make a permanent home in the upper part of Stone Valley was the Gen. William McAlevy spoken of in connection with the fort. He was born in County Down, Ireland, in 1728, his parents being of Scottish descent. About the middle of the last century he emigrated to America and settled in the neighborhood of Carlisle, in the Cumberland Valley. He married Margaret Harris, a sister of John Harris, the founder of Harrisburg, and had by this union sons, named William and George, and daughters, Jane, Margaret, and Elizabeth. Some time prior to 1770[2] he came to Huntingdon County, and with the aid of an assistant put up a cabin and made a small clearing where the village of McAlevy's Fort now is, upon which he planted some of the common vegetables. Having done this, he felled a large tree on the bank of the creek near his home, from the trunk of which he fashioned a large canoe, which he floated down Standing Stone Creek into the Juniata and so on down that stream into the Susquehanna, landing at a point nearest to his old home. After making the necessary arrangements he embarked with his wife and children and what goods he had, and after days of arduous toil he reached his forest home. Most of the way the boat was propelled by means of poles, but where he could do so he hitched a horse to the boat, leading him along the banks of the streams.

Not long after his settlement his wife died, and marrying a second time he had for his wife Miss Mary Hays. For his third wife he married Mrs. Margaret Allen, and had children named Allen and Mary. Gen. McAlevy served with credit in the Revolution, as is elsewhere noted, and was one of the most prominent men in the county in the period in which he lived. He was born a leader of the people, and although he never put himself forward unduly, he had a most enthusiastic following. To him, right was a ruling principle, and wrong was abhorred, no matter by whom entertained. He died in 1822, full of honors, at the unusual age of ninety-four years, and was interred on the high hill on his farm, which he had set aside for a cemetery. The oldest surviving son of the general, William, married Ruth Allen, a daughter of his third wife, and reared four sons and two daughters, viz.: William, George, Samuel, and Miles, Margaret and Catherine. By a second wife he had a son David. He died in the prime of life in 1817, having served in the Legislature a number of years and filled other offices of trust.

William McAlevy, his oldest son and grandson of the general, was born in 1796, and married Asenath Semple, rearing eight children, as follows: Jane A., William, David S., Alexander T., George Miles, James S., Asenath Ann, and Samuel Elliott. Of these, Alexander T. was a young man of brilliant promise, who died in 1851, before having completed his studies at Jefferson College; George Miles, born in 1826, and married to Elizabeth Mitchell, who died in 1875, is a well-known citizen of Huntingdon borough. Other members of the family removed to the western part of the State and to Iowa.

[1] From Jones' Juniata Valley.

[2] Mrs. Mary Crum, in a statement taken by Jos. Adams, 22d June, 1845, said, "That she remembers hearing her father, Gen. McAlevy, say that when he removed to this county he had no neighbor nigher than ten miles. That he removed his family to the county in a canoe some time about 1768." "That she heard her father say Lytle's (Little's?) was the first mill built in their part of the county."

Jane, the first daughter of Gen. McAlevy, married James Reed, who died at the age of eighty-two years. One of his sons, John, was for several years a recorder of the county, and afterwards an attorney. He was the father of William D. Reed, of Walker township, and the Rev. James A. Reed, of Springfield, Ill. The second son of James Reed, Sr., William, a single man, who died at an advanced age, was well known as a surveyor. Of the many other children of the McAlevys, in the second and third generations, a number yet remain in the interior of the State, but the most of them have removed to other localities.

The Jackson family, from which the present township took its name, was one of the earliest in the county. George Jackson came from Wilmington, Del., and settled on the Swoope farm, on Raystown Branch, about 1766. In the course of half a dozen years he settled on the Little Juniata, in the present township of Logan, below Jack's Narrows, on what is now known as the G. P. Wakefield farm. There he lived during the Revolution, forting at Anderson's and being enrolled as a member of a scouting party. He died in 1806, and was buried in the old Shaver's graveyard, below the railroad at Petersburg. He reared children named Joseph, William, Thomas, and daughters,—Jane, who married Col. John Fee; Mary, John Beatty; Rachel, Joseph Potter, of Shaver's Creek; Elizabeth, William Spencer, of Alexandria; and Prudence, Samuel Keller, of Blair County. Joseph, the oldest son, was born on Raystown Branch, a short time after the settlement of the family, and was one of the first white children born in the county. He was baptized at Huntingdon by the Rev. William Smith, the proprietor of the town, on the occasion of one of his visits from Philadelphia. In 1791 he was married to Margaret Wilson, a daughter of John Wilson, who settled on Herod's Run in Jackson, and what is now known as the Jackson homestead, in 1776. To this place Joseph Jackson came about 1792, and lived there until his death in 1838. Of his eight children, the four daughters were married to James Wills, of Mifflin County; Robert Massey, of Masseysburg; Samuel Hawn, of Jackson; and Thomas Osborne, of Jackson. David, the oldest son, died in the township in 1839; George, the second son and father of sons named J. C., Hugh, and William, is yet a citizen of Jackson township; the third son, John, is yet a resident of Jackson, near the homestead. He is the father of Drs. William and John Jackson, of Huntingdon. Joseph, the fourth son, removed to Missouri. Of the other sons of George Jackson, William was well known as the keeper of a public-house at Huntingdon which bore his name, dying in that borough in 1831. Thomas, the youngest son, lived in Logan many years, finally removing to Hollidaysburg, where he died.

The Jackson homestead was settled by John Wilson in 1776. At that time he had a wife, Jane Nevin, and two children. The daughter Margaret married Joseph Jackson, and the son William was drowned in the Juniata about 1800, while attempting to cross that stream near Cryder's Mills. John Wilson died in 1812, and his wife in 1820. In the Revolution he served in Capt. McAlevy's company, his family being meanwhile at Reedsville, where the settlers of the upper part of Standing Stone Valley found protection from Indian attacks.

Joseph Oburn was another of the soldiers in the McAlevy company in the Revolution. He came from Delaware about 1770, and settled on the present David Cunningham place. He was a very righteous man, and extremely generous. It is related of him that in 1777 he raised a large crop of wheat, when that grain had failed in many localities and commanded so large a price that it was eagerly sought after, and many buyers were attracted to Mr. Oburn's house. One morning a man, reputed to be rich, rode up to the house, and accosting the owner, said, "Mr. Oburn, have you any wheat?" "Plenty of it: have you the money to pay for it?" "Certainly." "A horse to carry it, and bags to put it in, I see." "Oh, yes; everything," replied the wheat-buyer. "Well, then," said Mr. Oburn, "you can go to Big Valley for your wheat; mine is for people who have no money to pay, and no horses to carry it off." It is said that he absolutely gave away his large crop to such as could not afford to buy wheat or go to other localities to procure that article. Joseph Oburn reared two sons,—Joseph and Daniel. The former married a Miss Logan, and died on the homestead. His daughters married into the Harkness, McElroy, and Huston families. There was also a son Joseph, who died below Ennisville. He was the father of William Oburn, of Jackson; Joseph, of Mooresville; and Harrison, of Tyrone. The latter two served in the war of the Rebellion and endured captivity.

On the Flenner farm Richard Miller settled about 1787, but sold out at an early day, and removed to the West. At where are now Strunk's Mills, John Little settled about 1770. He too went out to do service for the patriot cause in the Revolution. Little built pioneer mills and made other substantial improvements at an early day. He died about 1814, and his only son also died many years ago. One of the daughters married Samuel Porter, an early settler near Little's, and the progenitors of the Porters of the township. Others of the Little daughters married into the Boggs, Coulter, and Bell families, and most have removed to the West. On the Powell place Thomas and John Ferguson were early citizens, but removed to Centre County, where a township bears their name. The Glen family also moved to that township, and made some good improvements on the head-waters of Spruce Creek. Robert Smith was the warrantee of a large tract of land above the claim made by Gen. McAlevy, which he improved somewhat, and then sold out to Samuel Mitchell, of Mifflin County, who located on it in 1790. He built his house above the present Mitchell homestead, and there commenced the distillation of liquor, afterwards selling that interest to Gen. McAlevy. The sons of Samuel Mitchell were Thomas, William, Robert, David, James, and Samuel, and the daughters married John Stewart, David McClelland, and Robert McClelland. Of the sons, David died on the homestead, at the age of sixty-two years; Samuel, by trade a blacksmith, moved to Iowa; and Thomas, the oldest son, married Betsey Hughes, and lived on the homestead until his death in 1826. His oldest son, Samuel, born in 1803, now occupies the homestead. Part of the Mitchell tract was surveyed in 1766, and was called "Unexpected Discovery."

In 1800, Hugh Smith moved from Sherman's Valley to where Ennisville now is, where he died at the age of eighty-two years. One of his sons, William B., died in the township, and was the father of James Smith. The second son, John M., is yet a resident of Ennisville, and his sons are William S., Samuel C., and D. B. Smith, of Jackson township.

John Oaks came from Dauphin County in 1798, settling first in West township, but in 1801 came to Jackson, and moved on a place which had previously been occupied by James Ramey, a blacksmith. In 1835 he died, at the age of seventy-seven years. Of his seven daughters, six were married to James Armstrong, Robert Johnston (grandfather of John N. Johnston, of Barree), William Myton, Thomas Wilson, William Stewart, and Samuel Shaver. The oldest son, William Oaks, married Ann McCormick, and lived in the neighborhood of Mooresville. He was the father of sons named Alexander, John, and Reuben, and of daughters who became the wives of Robert McBurney, Robert M. Cunningham, and Henry Neff. The youngest son, John, was born on Shaver's Creek in 1798, and after attaining manhood married Jane Stewart, of Barree township. He then settled on the homestead in Jackson, where he yet lives, and which is also the home of his son, William Asbury. Another son, James, lives at Petersburg. One of the daughters married the Rev. William R. Mills. In the Oaks neighborhood John Magill, an Irishman, was one of the early settlers. He reared two daughters, who married Samuel Morrison and William Cummins.

The Cummins family, although not among the first settlers, has for many years been one of the most prominent in the township, its members being among the foremost agriculturists and active business men. Their connection with the various interests of Jackson is appropriately noted in the following pages.

In 1845, the year following the organization of Jackson as a separate township, the owners of seated lands and other property were as below indicated:

Anspach, Jacob (chopping and saw-mills).
Adamson, James.
Angle, Wesley.
Alexander, James.
Alexander, Hugh.
Barr, John, Sr.
Bush, Peter (saw-mill).
Ball, Josiah.
Bell, D. S.
Black, James.
Burns, James.
Barr, Samuel, Jr.
Bell, George M. (saw-mill).
Bruce, William.
Barr, Gabriel (tannery).
Barr, Robert (grist- and saw-mills).
Barr, Samuel, Sr.
Becker, William.
Becket, Samuel.
Bell, James (factory).
Black, Daniel.
Black, William D. (saw-mill).
Barrick, David.
Barr, John, Jr.
Benchfried & Co. (saw-mill).
Barr, Samuel (saw-mill).
Brooks, Jacob.
Barr, William.
Cummins, John.
Colombine, Henry.
Cummins, William.
Carmon, James.
Cummins, Charles.
Chilcot, Benjamin.
Cummins, Robert (saw-mill).
Caroles, George.
Caroles, John.
Cowen, Hannah.
Campbell, John.
Cole, William.
Clarke, Isaac.
Clarke, Hezekiah.
Campbell, Mary.
Call, Peter.
Call, John.
Chamberlain, Daniel.
Coplin, Richard.
Cummins, Samuel.
Clark, William.
Dearmont, John.
Dearmont, James, Sr.
Dearmont, James, Jr.
Dearmont, George.
Duff, John, Jr.
Dittsworth, Abraham.
Dittsworth, Samuel.
Davis, Cornelius.
Duff, James.
Dougherty, Edward.
Duncan, Daniel.
Dinsmore, William.
Eckley, Jacob.
Evans, Lewis.
Edmundson, Joseph.
Edmundson, David.
Ewing, Thomas D.
Fleming, Robert.
Fagan, John.
Fitzgerald, John.
Fleming, James.
Fleming, John.
Franks, James H.
Fleming, Joseph.
Gooden, William.
Garver, Benjamin.
Gilleland, Matthew.
Gilleland, James.
Gilleland, John.
George, James.
Green, John.
Gillap, Aaron.
Gates, George.
Hartman, Christian.
Henry, David.
Havens, Samuel.
Huston, Thomas.
Heffley, Joseph.
Henninger, Michael.
Hays, Samuel P.
Hall & Rawle (furnace, grist- and saw-mills).
Hirst, John (inn-keeper).
Huber, Samuel.
Henry, William.
Hamer, Solomon.
Hoffman, William.
Hays, William, Jr.
Hartman, Benjamin.
Horning, John.
Hays, James.
Henderson, Joseph.
Harkness, Joseph.
Hunter, Joseph.
Johnston, Robert.
Jackson, John.
Jones, William, Sr.
Jones, William, Jr.
Jackson, George (saw-mill).
Johnston, James (saw-mill).
Johnston, Alexander.
Keith, Kinzie.
Katterman, Michael.
Kyler, Jacob.
Keller, Jacob.
Kennedy, Robert.
Kemp, Philip.
Leech, John M.
Lightner, Matthias.
Lightner, Benjamin.
Lerish, Benjamin.
Lee, Henry.
Lang, Nicholas.
Lego, Stephen.
Lego, Charles.
Langwell, James.
Leonard, James.
Mitchell, Robert.
McClelland, William.
Magill, Mary.
Miller, David.
Miller, Stephen.
McClelland, John.
Miller, George.
McKinney, James.
McCartney, James.
Musser, William.
McAlevy, Allen.
Mitchell, David.
Magill, William.
Magill, James.
McMonegal, Henry.
McMonegal, Samuel.
McElroy, John.
McAlevy, Samuel.
Mitchell, James, Sr.
Murray, George.
McCord, Thomas.
Murray, Thomas.
Mitchell, William (grist-mill)
Mitchell, Samuel.
Mitchell, Samuel (shoemaker).
Moore, John.
Mitchell, Thomas.
Mitchell, James, Jr.
Mitchell, John.
McKee, William.
McCracken, William.
Morris, Thomas.
Milliken, David (saw-mill).
Moyer, Daniel.
Myton, John W.
McCauley, Andrew.
McBurney, Robert.

Mitchell, Thomas.
Murray, William.
Nunnemaker, Nicholas.
Oaks, John.
Osborne, Thomas (saw-mill).
Osborne, Joseph.
Orr, Robert.
Oaks, William A.
Oaks, James S.
Pearce, Isaac.
Porter, William (saw-mill).
Porter, David.
Parker, David.
Parker, Hugh M.
Porter, George.
Peightal.
Rudy, Nicholas.
Rorer, George.
Roper, Joseph L.
Randolph, John.
Rudy, John.
Rudy, George.
Randolph, William, Sr.
Rudy, Samuel.
Rudy, Henry.
Ross, George.
Rorer, Daniel.
Rankin, William D.
Randolph, William, Jr.
Stewart, Robert (woolen-factory).
Spangler, Jacob.
Steffey, Samuel (inn-keeper).
Steffey, George.
Selfrage, Henry.
Stern, John.
Stewart, James.
Smith, Thomas.
Scott, James.
Stern, George.
Shunkweiler, Henry.
Sasserman, Michael.
Stewart, Samuel.
Stewart, William.
Stirly, Henry.
Stewart, Samuel.
Stewart, John.
Sasserman, Joseph.
Stewart, James.
Smith, John.
Smith, Hugh.
Smith, William B.
Stewart, William (saw-mill).
Semple, Robert.
Stewart, Samuel M.
Sasserman, Peter.
Stiver, Samuel.
Sasserman, Daniel.
Snyder, John.
Scott, Alexander (saw-mill).
Thompson, Alexander.
Tully, William.
Treaster, George.
Tate, Edward.
Thompson, Roswell.
Thompson, John.
Updyke, Lewis.
Updyke, George.
Van Buskirk, John.
Weston, William.
Watson, Thomas.
Wagoner, Jacob.
Wilson, George.
Watt, James.
Wilson, Robert.
Wood, William.
Walls, John.
Walmer, Thomas.
Walborn, Henry.
Walborn, Simon.
Whaler, William.
Walborn, Henry, Jr.
Wolfkill, Leonard S.
Yoders, Cyrus.
Zook, Christian.

Single Freemen.

Agnew, J. S.
Angle, Benjamin.
Barr, Daniel.
Bickett, Robert.
Beale, John H.
Confer, John.
Campbell, James.
Cummins, James.
Campbell, Armstrong.
Caroles, William.
Coplin, Samuel.
Collobine, Anthony.
Clepper, John.
Duncan, James.
Daugherty, Adam.
Devore, William.
Duff, Joseph.
Emmis, Joseph.
Erb, Joseph B.
Fleming, Henry.
Fleming, Robert.
Grossman, Jacob.
Gross, Herman.
Gorley, William.
Grossman, John.
Hughes, James C.
Hagan, James.
Hall, James.
Hays, David.
Hamlin, John.
Hutchinson, John.
Hope, John.
Johnston, John.
Johnston, L.
Johnston, George.
Jones, George.
Kinman, Nathan.
Lee, John T.
Miller, William.
Moody, Thomas.
Magill, James.
McAlevy, James.
Moore, James.
McCortney, William.
McCofferty, William.
McClellan, Samuel.
McMonegal, John S.
Murney, Daniel.
McVey, John.
McCord, Samuel.
Murphy, George.
Mitchell, William, Jr.
McAlevy, Alexander T.
McAlevy, David.
Miller, Matthew (doctor).
Nunnemaker, Samuel.
Osborne, John B.
Porter, Samuel.
Porter, Robert H.
Parker, Constance C.
Porter, James.
Ramsey, Samuel.
Riddle, William.
Reedy, Henry C.
Reed, William.
Rorer, Jackson.
Scott, James T.
Stewart, John C.
Stewart, William A.
Semple, Francis.
Semple, William.
Stewart, Alexander.
Scott, Nathaniel W.
Swartzell, Henry.
Stewart, Samuel.
Snider, Lewis.
Semple, James.
Snider, Abraham.
Tate, Nelson.
Trainer, Barnabas.
Vance, Alexander B.
Vance, David S.
Vance, Joseph.
Wilson, John.
Williamson, Robert.
Wood, William P.

By the official census of 1880 the township was credited with a population of 1665.

Civil Organization.—The township was organized for civil purposes in conformity with the following report:

"To the Honorable Judges of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace of November Term, 1846:

"In pursuance of the order to inquire into the propriety of dividing the township of Barree, we, the subscribers appointed to view and divide the said township, being all sworn, proceeded to make the necessary examination of the boundaries and number of inhabitants, and are of the opinion that the great length of said township makes it inconvenient. We, in compliance with our appointment, have divided the same as follows: Beginning on Stone Mountain, at McConkey's Gap, where the old Indian path crosses the same; thence north twenty-eight and one-fourth degrees west sixteen hundred and sixty perches to a post near Steffey's field; thence north five degrees and sixteen hundred and forty perches to the top of Tussey Mountain near the Warring Run.

"JAMES SIMPSON,
"JOHN COLESTOCK,
"ANDREW JOHNSTON,
"Commissioners.

"And now, to wit, January Sessions, 1845, 15th day, the report again being read, and the division of said township as reported by the aforesaid commissioners is hereby confirmed, and the new township laid off is to be called Jackson; and the other part thereof, in which the election district is, to remain as and retain the name of Barree."

When the line was first run it divided the Jackson homestead, but it was afterwards so modified that the Jackson place fell wholly within the new township, which before the official announcement was called by some Jackson's township, and the present name was subsequently adopted as the proper title.

Since the township has been organized the following have been elected to fill the principal offices:

ROAD SUPERVISORS.

1847, Robert Johnston, John Campbell; 1848, J. Anspach, Alexander Thompson; 1849, John Smith, Samuel P. Hayes; 1850, Robert Cummins, Thomas Osburn; 1851, William Oaks, Thomas Osburn; 1852, William D. Black, David Mitchell; 1853, James S. Oaks, John Campbell; 1854, Henry Lee, John Rudy; 1855, Robert Barr, Samuel McAlevy; 1856, Samuel Mitchell, Robert Cummins; 1857, M. Fleisher, S. Cummins; 1858, John Cummins, Samuel Steffey; 1859, George W. Porter, John Oaks; 1860, Henry Lee, John Barr; 1861, Samuel Mitchell, Samuel Cummins; 1862, John Duff, John B. Smith; 1863, Robert Huey, Samuel McCord; 1864, Henry Lee, E. E. McGill; 1865, Samuel Sauer, John Brooks; 1866, Samuel Beckett, Robert Fleming; 1867, Joseph Stewart, George Jackson; 1868, Samuel McAlevy, Jacob Ayers; 1869, John M. Smith, Robert Huey; 1870–71, John Oaks, William Tulley; 1872, John Jackson, M. Fleischer; 1873, Robert Huey, Robert Fleming; 1874, Robert Huey, John Henry; 1875, Wesley Miller, Samuel McCord; 1876, Wesley Miller, J. A. Wilson; 1877, John A. Wilson, John B. Smith; 1878, James H. Lee, John B. Smith; 1879, James H. Lee, William Hayes; 1880, John A. Wilson, James Smith; 1881, James Smith, Washington Randolph.

AUDITORS.

1847, James Stewart; 1848, George Jackson; 1849, J. T. Campbell; 1850, Samuel Stewart; 1851, John Duff, Samuel Mitchell; 1852, George Rarer; 1853–54, Samuel Stewart; 1855, John Cummins; 1856–57,

Samuel Porter; 1858, William B. Smith; 1859, Samuel Cummins; 1860, Elias Musser; 1861, John A. Wilson; 1862, James Barr; 1863, John M. Smith; 1864, Thomas Mitchell; 1865, William Oburn; 1866, Sterret Cummins; 1867, Asbury Oaks; 1868, Matthew Miller; 1869, W. S. Smith; 1870–71, George Jackson; 1872, J. M. McIlvaine, J. A. Wilson; 1873, John Cummins; 1874, William Huston; 1875, T. F. Shipton; 1876, W. O'Brien; 1877, H. A. Jackson; 1878, T. F. Shipton; 1879, Dr. M. Miller; 1880, Jacob Schnee; 1880, John B. Smith.

General Industries and Hamlets.—Aside from the pursuit of agriculture, which gives employment to the larger number of the inhabitants of the township, considerable attention has been paid to manufacturing, a number of the small water-powers having been utilized to operate saw- and grist-mills. The Little Mills, on Laurel Run, were the first built, probably as early as 1780, occupying the site of what are now known as the Strunk saw- and grist-mills. The present mills were built by Henry Walborn. The property has had many owners, but the locality is one of the oldest and best known in the northern part of county. Above this mill Garner Jackson and others had a saw-mill, which has been destroyed by fire; and yet farther above is a power which was improved by Thomas Johnston, the mill being yet operated. Below the Phineas Strunk mill the Porter family improved the power about 1818 to operate a saw-mill, which is yet carried on by the Anspachs. On the same stream, on the Barr place, David Barr got in operation a saw-mill about 1815, which was later the property of Thomas Osborne and John A. Wilson, but has been abandoned. On Herod's Run, so called for a hunter who had a camp on the present Oaks place, the first improvement was made by Joseph Jackson, who put up a saw-mill about 1806. The next mill on that stream was at what is now Saulsburg, and was built by Henry Weidensall about 1816. Later William Hirst built another mill on that stream, which is now the property of Martin Walker. In 1840, George Jackson built a saw-mill on De Witt's Run, which is yet operated a few months each year, and on the same stream Daniel Troutwein built a mill, which has been demolished.

On Standing Stone Creek, near the township line, Maj. John Magill made the water-power operate a saw-mill about 1820, which was operated until it went down, when William Cummins built a grist-mill at that place which is yet successfully operated. Among the subsequent proprietors were James Magill, Robert Cummins, and Richard Cunningham. At McAlevy's Fort Gen. McAlevy built mills about the beginning of the century, and that water-power has been employed ever since to operate milling machinery. After Gen. McAlevy's death, William Flickinger became the owner of the property, selling to Robert Barr, who built the present mill on the west side of the creek, the old mill being at that time converted into a plaster-mill. The present owner of the property is Robert McBurney, who is also the owner of the greater part of the McAlevy homestead farm. Above the McAlevy site is a mill-seat, where a saw-mill was built about 1816 by Thomas Mitchell, and a grist-mill ten years later. These mills were subsequently operated by Samuel and William Mitchell, who sold to William Musser. John Crownover built the present mill, and a later owner was Robert Barr, to whose family the property yet belongs.

In the immediate neighborhood of this mill was Mitchell's Furnace, built in 1841, by Thomas and John Mitchell. It was of small capacity, and the stack being improperly constructed, it was never operated with paying results, although in the hands of a number of parties. Scarcely a trace of this furnace remains. At this point a number of tenements were built and stores kept by the proprietors of the furnace or the mill, and the place was quite a business point. The last to be in trade there were Green & Gregory, who discontinued their business about 1879. The next power above the furnace was improved to operate a carding-machine for Robert & James Stewart, from which originated a factory for the manufacture of woolen goods some time about 1836. The present factory is a new one, in room of the old one, which was destroyed by fire a few years ago, and is operated by B. A. Gibbony. In other localities small saw-mills have been built which were operated until the timber supply rendered them unprofitable, and they have, with a few exceptions, been discontinued.

The most important manufacturing interest in the township is on the head-waters of the East Branch of Standing Stone Creek, five miles from McAlevy's Fort, and near the Mifflin County line.

Greenwood Furnace was begun in the fall of 1832, but owing to the difficulty in procuring the necessary building material, it was not put in blast until June 5, 1834. The stack was built for a quarter-blast furnace, and the proprietors were Judge Rawle and James Hall. The latter became the resident partner, and in 1833 built the furnace mansion, which he occupied about a dozen years. The firm having failed, Sterritt & Potter worked up the stock, and for some time the furnace was idle. In 1849 it was again put in blast by John A. Wright & Co., and was carried on by that firm in connection with their works in Mifflin County.

The combined interests were operated in 1856 by the Freedom Iron Company, of which Joseph M. Thomas was the president, and John A. Wright superintendent. At this time the manager at Greenwood was D. A. W. Wright, and until the spring of 1858, when John Withers came in his stead and remained until Oct. 1, 1872, when he was succeeded by the present manager, W. H. Womer, who had for fifteen years prior served in the same capacity at Freedom, following Joseph Morrow, who was the manager when the company was formed. Since 1865, R. H. Lee has been the superintendent of the interests of the Freedom Iron and Steel Company and its successor, the Logan Iron and Steel Company. The latter company was formed in 1871, with John M. Kennedy, president, who filled that office until February, 1881, when Henry F. Townsend became the president. The second stack at Greenwood was put in blast in 1866, steam-power being supplied, and the capacity of the furnace is at present forty-four tons per week, the metal having an excellent reputation among founders and iron-workers. The ore is procured on the lands of the company near the furnace, being carried thither by a tramway about three miles in length, and yields forty-four per cent. of iron. The lands of the company in Huntingdon and Mifflin Counties number about forty thousand acres, and at Greenwood, besides the furnace, the fine mansion, offices, mills, etc., there are about ninety good tenements. Employment is given to nearly two hundred men. The store was opened soon after the furnace was put in blast, but the mill was not built until a dozen years later. About the same time Greenwood Furnace post-office was established, and since Oct. 31, 1878, L. C. Heskett has been the postmaster. He has also been the book-keeper for the company at this point since 1863. A tri-weekly mail is supplied from McAlevy's Fort. At Greenwood Furnace are also a good school-house and a fine Methodist Church, the whole forming an attractive mountain village.

ENNISVILLE is a pleasant hamlet on the main branch of Standing Stone Creek, about a mile and a half above the Miller township line. It is on the "Unity survey," a part of which became the property of Joshua Ennis in 1807, who lived where is now the home of William Oburn, where he died about 1830. He had sons named James and Alexander, who founded what is now called Ennisville, the latter being the chief promoter of the enterprise, opening a store in 1816. But the first store in this locality was opened half a dozen years earlier by Alexander Campbell, on the present Widow Smith farm, Ennis purchasing the store and moving it to the south side of the creek. The Ennis family was in trade a number of years, and later a dozen different persons merchandised there, the present store being kept by David B. Smith. The Ennisville post-office was established about 1820, with Alexander Ennis as postmaster. Among the subsequent appointees have been Jeremiah Betts, Joseph Watson, John W. Myton, W. H. Harper, and the present John M. Smith. The mail service is daily from Petersburg, and the office is in charge of D. B. Smith. At Ennisville the common mechanic trades have been carried on by a number of persons, among them being William Randolph, James Short, John Dinsmore, and William McFadden. The latter opened the first good carriage-shop about 1860, and for a number of years carried on coach-making extensively. The hamlet also contains a fine Methodist Church, and in 1880 had seventy inhabitants.

MCALEVY'S FORT, which had in 1880 one hundred and forty-five inhabitants, several good stores, public-house, a mill, and in the neighborhood were Presbyterian and United Presbyterian Churches. Gen. William McAlevy, the first settler in this locality, lived in the rear of the present McBurney residence, in the neighborhood of the large willow-tree standing there. The fort was farther down the brook on the flats near the creek, instead of on the hill, overlooking the villages, as some imagine. Although there was a mill and shops as early as 1800, a store was not opened until about 1809, when Alexander Campbell began trading in a small building which stood near the site of the old fort, removing a year later to the Smith place, near Ennisville. John Mitchell and Mordecai Massey were the next in trade about 1843, in the house which is now the residence of George E. Little. This building was erected a few years prior, and is the oldest house in the village. Subsequently Love & Oyer, George Cresswell, John Conrad, Joseph Porter, and William Couch were in trade there. Stewart Bell erected the brick store-house now occupied by Robert McBurney in 1844, and the following year opened a good store. A few years later the property passed into the hands of Robert McBurney, and he and his nephew, Robert McBurney, have since merchandised there, the latter for more than a quarter of a century. Other merchants are William Harper and William B. and Robert Little.

The first licensed public-house was kept in 1846, nearly opposite the old store-room, by John Hirst, who carried it on about three years. Henry Selfridge, James Fleming, Robert Stewart, and the present John Crownover have been among the subsequent landlords. The present McAlevy's Fort hotel was built by Edward Little, and in its day was a well-appointed hostelry. For the past four years it has been kept by V. B. Hirst.

McAlevy's Fort post-office was established about 1847, with John Hirst as postmaster, and three mails per week, on the route from Alexandria to Reedsville. The office has since had as postmasters Samuel W. Myton, George M. McAlevy, and Robert S. Cummins; Robert McBurney being the deputy, and keeping the office in his store. This is the terminus of a stage line from Petersburg, and a daily mail is supplied.

Among those who have carried on the mechanic trades have been William Franks and J. F. Schnee, undertakers; John Thompson, A. D. Scott, and Lewis Bigdon, blacksmiths, with Wesley Thompson, at another stand since 1862, at the same trade.

The first physician to locate permanently at McAlevy's Fort was Dr. Matthew Miller, who settled there in 1845, and has since been a resident of the place, being an active practitioner until a few years ago. He was born in Miller township in 1819, and received his education in the common schools of the county. After reading medicine with Dr. John Henderson, of Huntingdon, he graduated from Jefferson College in 1845. The next physician to locate in the township was Dr. William Bigelow, who was at Mitchell's Mills a few years, while Eliphas Bigelow was at the head of the valley in the practice of medicine, although not as a regular physician. In 1868, Dr. William Duff began practicing with Dr. Miller and continued until 1876, when he removed to Harrisburg. Dr. J. H. Bigelow came about the same time, and yet continues. Dr. Samuel Croft has been in practice the past few years, and since the spring of 1881, Dr. G. M. Couch and Dr. H. C. Cummins.

The United Brothers' Lodge, No. 176, I. O. O. F., was instituted April 20, 1846, with the following charter members: John R. Hunter, Thomas Bell, Charles Dowden, John Thompson, and Daniel Massey. The first named was the Noble Grand, and the meetings were held in West township. After some years of prosperity the lodge was discontinued, and on the 18th day of May, 1870, was reinstituted at McAlevy's Fort, with Abraham Miller, Shadrach Chaney, Elias Musser, J. F. Schnee, William Dickey, A. D. Scott, W. H. Huyser, and A. M. Chaney as charter members. In 1881 the lodge had a membership of eighty, and the following officers: L. C. Heskett, Jr., N. G.; Wesley Miller, V. G.; L. A. Bigelow, S.; J. W. Bigelow, A. S.; and V. B. Hirst, Treas. The meetings are held in a neat hall, and the lodge is fairly flourishing.

Educational and Religious.—Since the organization of the township those elected to serve as directors have been,—

1847, John Duff, John Oaks, William Cummins; 1848, W. D. Black, Robert Johnston; 1849, George Rarer, Samuel Steffey; 1850, James Oaks, Alexander Stewart; 1851, Samuel Cummins, Robert Stewart; 1852, John Campbell, Samuel Cummins; 1853, William B. Smith, Lewis Evans; 1854, W. A. Oaks, Hugh Alexander; 1855, Samuel Mitchell, John Jackson, Henry Lee; 1856, John Stein, E. Bigelow; 1857, James McGill, James S. Oaks; 1858, Hugh Gary, Joseph Oburn; 1859, Samuel Barr, James Miller, Robert Cummins; 1860, S. B Grassman, Alexander Morrison; 1861, James H. Lee, John Jackson; 1862, George M. Decker; 1863, Jacob Hunter, Matthew Miller; 1864, Liberty Johnston, William A. Oaks; 1865, John Cummins, Samuel Steffey; 1866, Joseph Harkness, R. A. Gibbony, John A. Wilson; 1867, Thomas Mitchell, John M. Smith; 1868, Joseph Bonslow, Hugh Cary, Robert Fleming; 1869, James Stewart, James Barr; 1870–71, Thomas Yothers, John Davis; 1872, F. Strunk, George McAlevy, D. H. Fisher, J. Thomas; 1873, P. D. Moore, William Jackson, William Keys, L. C. Heskitt; 1874, Wesley Miller, William Hall; 1875, J. F. Schnee, J. A. Wilson; 1876, Thomas Mitchell, W. A. Oaks, Samuel Rybold; 1877, Washington Randolph, Sterrett Cummins; 1878, J. F. Schnee, Samuel Rudy; 1879, James Smith, D. S. Cunningham; 1880, Cyrus S. Cummins, William C. Bell; 1881, James F. Schnee, Wilson Henderson.

The township contained in 1880 twelve school districts, in which were enrolled as pupils two hundred and thirty-three males and two hundred and seventeen females, giving an average attendance of two hundred and twenty-six pupils for five months in a year. These were instructed at a cost of sixty-five cents per month for each pupil. The entire amount raised for school purposes was $2140.16.

In addition to the foregoing, a private school, by the name of Stone Valley Academy, is maintained in the township. The board which controls the school was first organized Sept. 9, 1873, and the members were Rev. J. M. Adair, president; George M. McAlevy, treasurer; William S. Smith, secretary; James Magill and Samuel Morrison. The academy was opened in the old church building of the United Presbyterian congregation near McAlevy's Fort, under the principalship of E. S. McCarthy. In 1875–76 the teacher was N. Wingart, and in 1877, W. S. Smith, when the school was taught in the village. James R. Millan came next, and since 1879, J. B. Work has been at the head of the academy, which was attended by about twenty pupils. In some of the previous years the enrollment reached thirty-two students. In 1881 the trustees were Rev. J. M. Adair, president; Thomas Mitchell, secretary; Sterritt Cummins, Matthew Miller, and James W. Magill. The school is at present taught in the old academy building east from the village, and is in good repute among the people of the valley.

The United Presbyterian Church of Standing Stone Valley.[1]—This congregation is the lineal descendant of the Associate Presbyterian congregation which was organized in Huntingdon borough in 1801 by the Presbytery of Philadelphia. The first settled pastor was the Rev. Thomas Smith, born in Dumfries, Scotland, and educated at the Edinburgh University. He came to America in 1808, but was not installed pastor of the Huntingdon congregation until 1811, continuing in that relation until his death in 1825. At that time the congregation, including the members from Shaver's Creek and Standing Stone Valleys, numbered about one hundred persons, embracing members who belonged to the Brown, Huston, Corbit, McConnell, Pollock, Smart, Reed, Fleming, Anderson, Moore, Robb, Johnston, Wilson, Irwin, Cummins, Bickett, Barr, Porter, Semple, Magill, McGiffin, McElhenny, and Carmon families, many of whom lived in the Standing Stone Valley. Owing to a combination of causes the Huntingdon part of the congregation flourished but little after 1825, while the membership in the valleys increased so that the preaching-places at Manor Hill and Standing Stone Creek became more important than the church itself. The latter especially seemed to inherit the life of the declining congregation, and was soon relatively the principal part of the charge, maintaining that position until the present.

In 1836, Dr. J. S. Easton, a native of Scotland, and a graduate of Union College, was settled in Standing Stone Valley, in connection with two small congregations in Mifflin County, and maintained pastoral relations towards them until 1855. In 1858, Standing Stone Valley was made a separate pastoral charge, and the following year the Rev. J. M. Adair was installed pastor, which relation yet continues.

In 1858 the union of the Associate Presbyterian

[1] From a sketch by the Rev. J. M. Adair.

Church and the Associate Reformed Church was effected, under the name of the United Presbyterian Church, and since that period the congregation in Standing Stone Valley has been designated by the title which introduces this sketch. In 1881 it had a membership of two hundred and twenty, thoroughly organized. There is a congregational library with an endowment of one thousand dollars to keep it up, and Sabbath-schools, prayer-meetings, and missionary societies are maintained. East from McAlevy's Fort is a commodious and convenient house of worship of brick, which was erected in 1869 at a cost of ten thousand dollars. In the basement are rooms suitable for session purposes and Sunday-school use. This building took the place of one erected there in 1832, and which was used until the period named, when it became too small to accommodate the growing congregation. It is yet standing upon the same lot, and is used for school purposes. A part of the same ground is devoted to cemetery purposes. At Manor Hill a meeting-house was built in 1817, which was statedly used until 1850, when it was taken down, and no meetings were held there by the congregation until 1863, when a mission church was again established there. The original church of the congregation at Huntingdon was sold about twenty-five years ago and converted into a residence.

The congregation of Standing Stone Valley is the only one in the county belonging to the United Presbyterians, and it has been a most useful factor among the religious bodies of this part of the State. Besides its large aggregate membership the following ministers have originated in the congregation: the Rev. Dr. Samuel Irwin, the Rev. Dr. J. G. Smart, Rev. J. P. Smart, Rev. Cyrus Cummins, Rev. William Magill, Rev. J. A. Magill, Rev. Dr. S. B. Reed, Rev. W. B. Barr, and the Rev. J. C. Hunter.

The Shaver's Creek Presbyterian Church established a preaching-place in Jackson at an early day, and in 1844 built a meeting-house on Standing Stone Creek a short distance above the village of McAlevy's Fort. A lot of land was conveyed for that purpose by Samuel Mitchell to George Jackson, John Stewart, and Henry Lee, as trustees for the congregation. On this a frame building was erected, which in a repaired condition is yet in use. The lot was also designed for burial purposes, and becoming too small, an addition was purchased in 1855. The trustees of the property in 1881 were James Stewart, James M. Stewart, John B. Smith, Samuel Smith, William Davis, and Thomas Mitchell. At the same time the elders were Hugh A. Jackson, James Smith, and David McAlevy. The latter office has also been filled by Alexander Thompson, Samuel Mitchell, Robert Huey, William D. Black, George M. McAlevy, and Robert Fleming. In the history of Barree township may be read a full account of the Shaver's Creek Church, from which it will be seen that in its relation to that part of the congregation worshiping in Jackson the preaching-place has become more important than the mother-church. The last few years services have been regularly maintained in Jackson, and preaching only occasionally at Manor Hill. There were about sixty members in the congregation, and a Sabbath-school is maintained in Jackson under the superintendence of James Smith, which had a good attendance in 1881.

Among the ministers of the old Shaver's Creek Church, in the order named, from 1790 to the present time, have been the Revs. John Johnston, James Johnston, Matthew Stevens, Samuel Wilson, David Sterritt, Richard Curran, Samuel Hill, Moses Floyd, John C. Wilhelm, W. W. Campbell, and since October, 1878, the Rev. William Prideaux.

The Ennisville Methodist Episcopal Church.—Among those who adhered to the Methodist Church at an early day were members of the Oaks, Miller, Green, Smith, and Chaney families, who had their pastoral service from the Huntingdon, and later from the Manor Hill Circuit. About 1830 a plain frame meeting-house was built near Ennisville, which was used as a place of worship by the Methodists of this part of the county until the present Ennisville Church was erected to afford greater accommodations.

It was built in 1865, at a cost of six thousand dollars, and was dedicated in November of that year, by the Rev. Dr. Pershing, of Pittsburgh. The material is brick, and the size forty by sixty feet. The building committee was composed of Joseph Oburn, Joseph Jackson, Asbury Oaks, James Oaks, John M. Smith, Matthew Miller, and William Randolph. The house has been kept in good condition, and is one of the most inviting country churches in the northern part of the county. The board of trustees in 1881 were John M. Smith, A. W. Oaks, J. H. Oaks, William Randolph, D. S. Cunningham, S. C. Smith, Wesley Thompson, and J. E. Martin. About one hundred members worship at Ennisville, forming three clasess, led by W. S. Smith, William Randolph, and Washington Randolph.

The present pastoral service is by Ennisville Circuit, which was formed in 1872, to embrace Ennisville, Greenwood Furnace, Steffey's School-house, and State Hill, in Jackson township,—and Wesley Chapel, in Miller township. The preachers in charge have been: 1872–73, Rev. Elisha Shoemaker; 1874–75, Rev. Isaac Heckman; 1876, Rev. W. J. Owens;[1] 1877–78, Rev. W. A. Stephens; 1879–81, Rev. W. A. Clippinger. At Ennisville is the parsonage of the circuit, built in 1875, and valued at thirteen hundred dollars, and the church itself stands on an acre of ground, a part of which serves as a place for interment. The class at State Hill numbers twenty-six members, and has Elias Musser as the leader; the Steffey class has twenty-seven members, and J. C. Henderson as leader. Ennisville Sabbath-school has

[1] Died on this charge, in the fall of 1876.

W. S. Smith for superintendent, and has two hundred members.

Greenwood Furnace Methodist Episcopal Church is a fine, substantial stone edifice, built in 1865, but was not dedicated until September, 1867. The committee having in charge the building was composed of John Randolph, John Withers, Rev. J. A. De Moyer, Joseph Bonslough, and Robert De Armit. The size of the house is thirty-four by forty-eight feet, and the cost was in the neighborhood of six thousand dollars. In 1881 the trustees were W. H. Worner, L. C. Heskitt, Samuel H. Wilson, James Howard, and Joseph Bonslough. At the Furnace are forty-four members, constituting two classes, under the leadership of Samuel Wilson and Robert Bonslough. A Sabbath-school of ninety members has W. H. Worner for superintendent. The appointment belongs to Ennisville Circuit, and prior to 1872 had the same pastoral service as the Manor Hill Church. From Ennisville Circuit have gone as ministers of the Methodist Church the Revs. John Miller, Shadrach Chaney, and William Hirst.

Standing Stone Valley Evangelical Lutheran Church.—This house of worship is several miles northeast from McAlevy's Fort village, and was dedicated Nov. 7, 1849, although built several years earlier. The committee having the work in charge had among its members Nicholas Troutwein, Henry Walburn, and J. Anspach. The house is a plain frame, forty by forty-five feet, and is on an acre of ground which also served for cemetery purposes. At the organization of the congregation Nicholas Troutwein and J. Anspach were chosen elders, and the membership did not exceed a dozen persons. At present there are about ninety members, representing thirty families. The aggregate number belonging has been more than two hundred. In 1881 the church council was composed of Elders William Mitchell and John Baumgartner, Deacons Solomon Troutwein, James Als, Moses McMullen, and James McAlley. A Sunday-school was organized in this locality about 1843, which has been continued since, almost continuously under the superintendence of J. Anspach. The average number attending is about forty.

Since the organization of the church in 1843 the ministers have been the Rev. Daniel Moser, until his death, being assisted part of the time by Robert H. Fletcher and O. S. Kemper, coming from Pine Grove, in Centre County. Becoming a mission, the Rev. E. Studebaker preached as a missionary about two years. In 1868 it was again supplied by Pine Grove Church, the pastor being Rev. D. Sell. The next supply was the Rev. J. M. Rice, followed in 1872 by the Rev. A. A. Kerlin. In 1874 the latter became the pastor and continued until 1881, the church being connected with Lick Ridge and Mill Creek in forming a charge. Since June, 1881, the pastor has been the Rev. S. Croft.

CHAPTER XLIV.

JUNIATA TOWNSHIP.

THIS is one of the mountain townships of the county, situated south of the main branch of the Juniata, where the Raystown Branch empties into that stream, including a narrow belt of country on the east side of the latter, extending to the summit of Terrace Mountain, which separates Juniata from Union township; on the southwest is Penn township, and on the northwest is Walker, from which it is separated by the summit of Piney Ridge. Closely hemming the Raystown Branch is another ridge of broken lands of a mountainous nature, called the Allegrippis Ridge. The southern part of the township forms a plateau, containing a considerable area of tillable lands of light soil, but admitting of profitable cultivation. Along the streams are narrow belts of land whose fertility is equal to any in the county. The drainage is chiefly afforded by the Raystown Branch, which has a very sinuous course through the township, and sometimes becomes in seasons of freshets a wild and turbulent stream, causing much damage. Flowing into it and the main river are a number of small mountain streams whose volume becomes very small as the forests are being cleared away. In the northwestern part of the township is the mouth of Vineyard Creek, whose flow is almost wholly in Walker township. The minor streams afford limited water-power, which has been utilized to operate small lumber-mills, the forest products of Juniata constituting its principal source of revenue. Large quantities of bark are annually shipped from Huntingdon, which is the market of the township, both for sale and supplies, there being no hamlet or business point within its bounds.

Pioneer Settlers.—Although possessing so little land to invite settlements, some of the first improvements in the county were made in what is now Juniata. At the mouth of Vineyard Creek lived a Mr. Brady, the father of the Capt. Brady so greatly distinguished as a scout and Indian-fighter. His claims were probably based on possession, since these lands were warranted to other parties, and as the property of William Smith, D.D., were unimportant in the pioneer history of the county, being occupied by tenants for short periods only. It is believed that the Brady family removed to the West Branch of the Susquehanna some time during the Revolution, and no well-authenticated account of it can here be given. What is well known as the old Ridenour property, on the Raystown Branch, was occupied as early as 1770, by Caleb and Amos Folk, who disposed of their interests a few years later to John Cunningham. Then it was owned by old Master John Shaver, who served in the war of 1812, and from the hands of his son Roger passed into the possession of the Ridenour family, which came from Maryland. John Ridenour reared ten children, he dying in 1852. Of his family, William resides at Altoona, John died in 1863 at Huntingdon, Levi lives in Juniata, David died in the township in 1860, Mary married Rudolph Brenneman, of Porter; Lydia is the widow of Thomas Dean; Rosa, widow of Michael Speck; Sophia, widow of William Dean; and Sarah is the wife of William B. White, of Penn township.

William Corbin, also a native of Maryland, settled on the Raystown Branch, on a farm which had been improved before the Revolution by a man named Pridmore. Corbin died on that place some time about 1820. He was the father of sons named William, David, John, and Abraham, and of a daughter who became the wife of Reading Bye. The first-named son settled in Springfield; David married Nancy Enyeart, and occupied the homestead where now resides his son, William E. Other sons, John and Abraham also live in Juniata, Alexander in Nebraska, David in Mifflin, and George H. in Bedford. His daughters became the wives of John Horning, Samuel Proudfoot, John Bolinger, Joseph Beck, Andrew E. Grove, and Hiram D. Rhodes. Other members of the Corbin family died in Juniata township.

ABRAHAM CORBIN, alluded to above, was one of the leading farmer-citizens of Juniata township, is of the third generation of Corbins known to Huntingdon County history. His grandfather, William Corbin, a descendant of an old Maryland family, moved from near Hagerstown, Md., to Huntingdon County before 1800. Soon afterwards he settled upon the farm in Juniata township now owned by William E. Corbin. Some of his sons and daughters lived to be very old, passing in some cases the great age of ninety. David G. Corbin, one of his sons, was born on the old homestead in Juniata, and after spending his life there, died in 1876 aged seventy-five. He married Nancy, daughter of William Enyeart, of Huntingdon County, and had fourteen children, of whom all lived to marry. Eleven are still living; William E., John, and Abraham being residents of Juniata.

Abraham (born Jan. 30, 1826) was the fourth child, and during all his life has been familiar with the business of farming. The years 1855 and 1856 he passed in Iowa, where he farmed and followed the business of carpentering. Two years in the far West satisfied him, and in 1856 he sold out and returned to Pennsylvania. He had been farming in Juniata on his own account before he went to Iowa, and when he returned he resumed operations upon the same place. About 1865 he bought the farm he now owns and occupies (consisting of one hundred and seventy-eight acres of table land), and subsequently added two hundred acres of mountain land.

May 26, 1847, he married Ann, daughter of Charles Snyder, of Huntingdon County, by whom he had two children,—Margaret Ann (now Mrs. Henry Haun) and Lewis Charles. His wife died, and Aug. 29, 1850, he married again, his wife being Nancy, daughter of Adam Rupert, of Huntingdon County. Of this marriage (ended also by death) there was no issue. May 6, 1852, Mr. Corbin married his present wife, Harriet C., daughter of George Mark, a well-known farmer of Juniata township. Of the third marriage the children have been Martha A., George A., David M., James H., Mary Jane, John G., Abraham L., Frank W., Esther Belle, Ellis M., William M., and Nancy H. Only four—David M., James H., Abraham L., and William M.—are living.

Mr. Corbin is a leader in matters that affect public advancement, and in many ways has identified himself with popular progress in Juniata township. For many years he has been a school director, and in educational concerns takes a warm and active interest. In church affairs he is strong and earnest in his labors. He has been a member of the Baptist Church since 1845, and is now a deacon in the Juniata Baptist Church, of which he was one of the founders, and whose house of worship he erected and liberally supported with a handsome contribution. He is the superintendent of the Sabbath-school, a member of the home temperance organization, and a friend, in short, of all measures looking to the promotion of moral good.

On the same stream, in the upper part of the township, and partly in Penn, William Enyeart began his improvements about 1770. During the Revolution he sought protection in the fort at Standing Stone, and when no Indians were supposed to be about tilled his farm in company with a neighbor by the name of Reed, who improved an adjoining tract of land, one standing guard while the other worked. They several times escaped barely with their lives, on one occasion Enyeart jumping down the bank of the river and running to the fort near Marklesburg, thus avoiding the savages, who waited to waylay him should he try to return to Huntingdon. William Enyeart was several times married, having five children by the first wife and sixteen by the second. Of these, John moved to Indiana, William lived near Marklesburg, David in Shirley, Polly married Isaac Vandevender, and Betsey, Joseph Norris. By the second wife there were sons, Silas, James, Joseph, Thomas, Benjamin, Levi, and Abraham, all of whom removed to the West, and daughters, who married Peter Heffner, William Wilson, John Heffner, John McMonegal, William Watson, David Corbin, and —— Graffius.

The Reed above alluded to was from the north of Ireland, and died about 1800. His sons David and Samuel settled on the ridge, and remained in the township until their death. The latter reared sons named John, William, and Daniel, who removed to the West; Samuel and Robert, who became ministers of the gospel. Near the Reeds lived John Anderson, the father of James, John, Samuel, and of a daughter who married David F. Tussey, of Porter township. In the same locality, on the present Lininger farm, lived William Dean, the father of James and Thomas Dean. Another William Dean was an early settler on the ridge. His house was destroyed by fire while occupied by two of his daughters. One was burned to death, and the other sustained severe injuries. Daniel McMonegal was a pioneer in the same part of the township. The farm he improved was afterwards occupied by Adam Morningstar, and Jacob Pecht was the pioneer on the present John Montz place. On the present Henry Mark place lived Thomas Monroe, and before him a man named John Bigam.

ABRAHAM CORBIN.

On the Raystown Branch, on the present Kaufman farm, Joseph Douglass settled in 1813. He moved there from Alexandria, and being a blacksmith by trade, put up a shop on his farm, in which he worked until his death in 1841. He had sons named Thomas, who moved from McConnellstown to Ohio; Joseph, a merchant, who recently died at McConnellstown; David, a machinist at Altoona; and daughters who married William Snyder, Alfred Ganoe, William Vandeventer, Samuel Wilson, and William Gibson. At that time Martin Neroushe owned a farm in that locality, which was tenanted by David Shriver. Reading Bye, a cabinet-maker, also lived in the same neighborhood.

On the north side of the river, below the old Douglass place, Michael Brenneman was an early settler. He had a number of sons, among them being Rudolph, living in Porter township; Henry, who moved to Williamsburg; John, who died in Juniata; Michael, living in Porter; and Abraham, who removed from the county. A settler of an earlier period was George Jackson, who lived on the farm which was afterwards occupied by Lawrence Swoope, who there reared sons named Caleb, David, and Moses. This farm became the property of the Shenefelt family. George Shenefelt, who lived in that locality, had no children, but his brother Frederick reared sons named John B., yet living in the county; Abraham, who occupied the old mansion until his death in 1880, and where now reside Miles and John Shenefelt; Jacob, yet a citizen of the township; David, and Isaac, the former living in Henderson.

One of the old Enyeart farms became the property of the Yocum family. John Yocum came from Chester County in 1800, and for some years had a smith-shop at Huntingdon. From there he removed to McConnellstown, where he died. Of his family, Richard, the second son, died in Hollidaysburg; Edmund died in Walker; William lives in Scott County, Iowa; Samuel is a citizen of Henderson; Isaac, of Walker; and James, of Iowa. His daughters married James and Samuel McGee, of Indiana; Jesse Yocum, of Brady; Arthur Foster and Joseph Gibbony, of Shaver's Creek; Robert Carmon, formerly of Alexandria; and John Houck, of Fulton. The oldest son of John Yocum, also called John, lived on the Enyeart place until his death in 1857. He was the father of John W., J. Williams, Silas E., Rittenhouse Porter, Elmer W., and Lewis C. Yocum, most of whom yet remain in the township.

Above the Yocums lived William Dowling and his sister Polly, the latter's farm being occupied many years by John Thompson, who reared sons named John and Edward, who are yet citizens of the township.

What is now known as the mansion-house of the Haun brothers was formerly the residence of the Kisling family, who are interred on the farm. John Haun, the ancestor of the family, was a native of Germany, where he was born in 1768. After coming to America he lived for a time in York County, but before 1795 became a resident of what is now Brady township, living near Mill Creek, where he died in 1805. After that event all the members of the family, except Michael, removed to Woodcock Valley, and about 1829 to Juniata. Of these brothers, Jacob, John, George, David, Daniel, Peter, and Isaac, the former is the only one that entered the marriage relation, and reared a large family, most of the members yet living in Juniata, and the three last named are the only survivors of this somewhat remarkable family of brothers. The Haun's were very industrious, and amassed considerable wealth, which induced a robbery of the mansion and attempts on the lives of some of the inmates, John dying from the injuries he then received. Michael Haun was born in 1793, and died at Mill Creek in 1864. He was married to Eva Speck, and was the father of George Haun, of Mill Creek; Daniel, of the township of Brady; and Michael, a boatman, who died of cholera while on one of his trips down the river. Isaac has also deceased.

Martin Speck, a son of Michael Speck, an early settler on Jack's Mountain, in Brady, located on Piney Ridge some time about 1800, the country being at that time wild and an almost unbroken forest. He died some time about 1860. Of the family he reared, Abraham is a well-known citizen of Brady, and David of Juniata. Other boys were Michael, Peter, John, Adam, Henry, Alexander, Valentine, and William. A daughter Mary married Jacob Lininger.

John Geissinger, a native of Northampton County, after living a number of years in Juniata County, in 1825 moved to Piney Ridge, where he died in 1839. He was the father of Charles Geissinger, who died in Union township in 1879; of John Geissinger, who married Jane Barrick, of Walker, and who is now living, at the age of seventy-six years, in Penn township. He is the father of Sheriff William J. Geissinger. William, the third son, yet occupies the homestead on Piney Ridge.

The names of other pioneer settlers may be seen in the lists of inhabitants of old Huntingdon township in 1788 and 1802, of Porter township in 1815, and of Walker township in 1828. The year following the organization of Juniata as a separate township the following persons were its residents and property-owners:

	Acres.		Acres.
Anderson, John (saw-mill)	253	Lindsey, Henry (tenant)	.....
Anderson, John, Jr.	200	Leffard, Joseph	173
Brenneman, Rudolph	325	Morningstar, Adam	116
Corbet, Stewart	150	Morningstar, George (tenant)	.....
Corbin, William E.	100	Morningstar, John (tenant)	.....
Corbin, Abraham	74	Mark, George	159
Corbin, David	240	Mark, Henry (tenant)	.....
Corbin, John	100	Mosser, John	64
Coulter, Simon (tenant)	.....	Miller, Henry (tenant)	.....
Dean, Thomas	163	Oswald, John (tenant)	.....
Dean, William	146	Oswald, Benjamin (tenant)	.....
Dicker, Nicholas	127	Parks, James (tenant)	.....
Forshey, Anthony	150	Quarry, John	165
Garner, Henry	199	Quarry, David (tenant)	.....
Geissinger, William	194	Ridenour, John and Levi	250
Gilleland, John (farmer)	.....	Richardson, John	183
Hawn, John (of Jacob)	150	Ross, William (tenant)	.....
Hawn, John and Morningstar	212	Steel, George	90
Hawn, David (saw-mill)	42	Sloan, John	206
Hawn, Peter and Isaac	300	Shaver, John	119
Hawn, George (farmer)	.....	Showalter, Jacob	150
Hawn, Jacob (saw-mill)	170	Shaver, Roger (tenant)	.....
Haffner, John (of Jacob)	170	Speck, Abraham	200
Heffner, Isaac	90	Speck, David	145
Heffner, Joseph	170	Speck, Martin	137
Heffner, Jacob	70	Speck, William	130
Heffner, Peter	82	Shenefelt, Abraham	209
Heffner, Charles (farmer)	.....	Stover, Jacob (tenant)	.....
Isenberg, Henry S.	166	Thompson, John, Jr.	150
Isenberg, Henry, Sr.	.....	Thompson, John, Sr.	80
Johnston, James	130	White, Simon (tenant)	.....
Kile, Samuel (tenant)	.....	White, William (tenant)	.....
Long, Isaac (tenant)	.....	Yocum, John	143
Long, Samuel (tenant)	.....	Yocum, J. N.	123

Single Men.

Corbin, William A.	Quarry, Matthias.
Dean, John R.	Ridenour, David.
Long, Washington.	Snyder, Frederick.
Long, Jackson.	Weston, George.
Morningstar, William.	White, David.
Oswalt, William.	Yocum, Silas (143 acres).

In 1880 the population of Juniata was four hundred and thirty-eight.

About the only machinery that has been operated in the township is that connected with saw-mills, of which Jacob Hawn had one of the first as early as 1825, and members of that family have operated saw-mills ever since. In 1881 there were mills owned by George W. Hawn, John Morningstar, John W. Snyder, and Elmer W. Yocum. A few years previous portable steam saw-mills were operated by Aiken & Chilcott and Steel & Lytle, which manufactured large quantities of lumber.

In 1875, Richard Langdon erected a distillery in Juniata, near Huntingdon, which was put in operation in October, 1876, by Martin Gruhe, and carried on by him until May, 1881, since when the firm has been M. Gruhe & Son. The house is of brick, thirty by forty-five feet, and two stories high. It is supplied with steam-power, but is not operated to its full capacity.

Civil Organization.—The township became a civil body by order of the Court of Quarter Sessions, Nov. 19, 1856, when the name of Juniata was bestowed upon the territory indicated in the following report:

"To the honorable the judges within named:

"We, the persons appointed by the within order of the court to inquire into the propriety of forming a new township out of a part of Walker township, in Huntingdon County, do hereby most respectfully report: That agreeably to due notice being given both to the commissioners and the inhabitants of said township, we met at the house of Benjamin Megahan, in McConnellstown, in said township, on the 10th day of April, A.D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six, when, after being duly sworn according to law, we proceeded to hear the complaints of the petitioners, and also the objections offered by those opposed to said division. We then proceeded with much care to examine into the propriety of forming said new township, as prayed for by the petitioners, when, after examining the boundaries of said township and the territory contained therein, and the advantages and the disadvantages which would be likely to arise from the proposed division to the inhabitants on each side of said division, we arrived at the conclusion that by making the summit of Piney Ridge the line, as prayed for by the petitioners, it would interfere very little with the individual rights or interests of any one, and would make an equitable division as to quantity of territory, and would, in a measure, obviate the great inconvenience set forth by the petitioners, arising from the distance required to travel, and the crossing and recrossing of the said Piney Ridge in the ordinary transaction of the business of the township. And we believe that it would have a tendency to allay that state of feeling that now appears to exist on the part of the citizens on each part of the said Piney Ridge towards the other; and, further, we believe that each side of said ridge is sufficiently able to sustain itself as a corporate body, separate and apart from the other, so far as township purposes are concerned; and in finding said Piney Ridge a complete natural division of said township, dividing the territory nearly equal as to schools, etc. In taking into view these facts, in connection with others that could be advanced, we firmly believe that the prayers of the said petitioners ought to be granted, and we therefore beg leave to report to your honorable court for confirmation the following described boundaries of said new township, to wit: Beginning at a rock-oak on the south side of the road leading to Huntingdon along the summit of Piney Ridge, two miles and six perches from a stump, a corner on the line dividing Penn from Walker township, and about four miles from the summit of Tussey Mountain, and about the same distance from the summit of Terrace Mountain, on said line between Penn and Walker townships, near to Martin Speck's, on said Piney Ridge, and running from thence along the summit of said ridge with the various bearings represented on the draft hereunto annexed nineteen hundred and eighty perches to the lower abutments of the lower bridge across the Juniata River at Huntingdon; thence down the meanderings of said river four miles to a post on the margin of said river, opposite the summit of Terrace Mountain; thence along the summit of said mountain eight and three-quarters miles to the corner between the said Penn and Walker townships; thence along said line north fifty-four degrees west four miles to the place of beginning. Provided, always, that the part lying north of said division line shall be at the expense of keeping in repair the road along the said Piney Ridge, as it is now located; and said northern division shall keep in repair that portion of the two bridges that cross the Juniata River at Huntingdon that the said Walker township was entitled to keep in repair previous to said division, and shall hereafter be entitled to no assistance from the said southern division in making the aforesaid repairs; and, further, all the roads that have been petitioned for, confirmed, and in process of being made, but not yet finished, south of said division line in that part of said Walker township lying between the summit of Piney Ridge and the summit of Terrace Mountain shall be finished in a customary and suitable manner to accommodate the traveling community by the two divisions of said township jointly, as though no division had been made of the same; and, further, we would recommend the court to give a name to said new township as described above, a draft whereof is hereunto annexed.

"WILLIAM CHRISTY,
"JOHN PORTER,
"JOHN CRESSWELL,
"Commissioners."

The following have been the principal civil officers of Juniata since its organization:

ROAD SUPERVISORS.

1857, Isaac Long, Peter Heffner; 1858, Adam Morningstar, George W. Clark; 1859, John Heffner, David Corbin; 1860, John Richardson, Rudolph Brenneman; 1861, John Richardson, John Hawn; 1862, Henry Miller, Levi Ridenour; 1863, David Corbin, William Dean; 1864, Thomas Dean, John Heffner; 1865, John Hawn, Isaac Long; 1866, John Hawn, Rudolph Brenneman; 1867, R. Corbin, Augustus Bush; 1868, Abraham Corbin, Augustus Bush; 1869, William H. Brenneman, Augustus Bush; 1870–71, W. E. Corbin, James Parks; 1872, W. E. Corbin, James Parks; 1873, Peter Heffner, George Mountain; 1874, John Montz, L. C. Corbin; 1875, John Thompson L. C. Corbin; 1876, John Oswalt, Charles Heffner; 1877, Adam Bagshaw, H. A. Mark; 1878, Peter Heffner, Augustus Bush; 1879, John Corbin, Ellis Beames; 1880, Augustus Bush, Martin Getz; 1881, Enos Ridenour, Augustus Bush.

AUDITORS.

1857, J. W. Yocum, John Oswalt, Henry Mark; 1858, Abraham Corbin; 1859, William E. Corbin, William Geissinger; 1860, John Hawn; 1861, William Speck; 1862–63, William E. Corbin, J. N. Geissinger; 1864, Henry Hawn; 1865, William Yocum, Henry Mark; 1866, John N. Geissinger; 1867, J. W. Yocum; 1868, Albert Hawn; 1869, A. H. Kaufman; 1870–71, William Chilcott; 1872, A. H. Kaufman; 1873, Lewis Corbin; 1874, M. Shenefelt; 1875, A. H. Kaufman; 1876, Harrison Speck; 1877, W. H. McCall, L. C. Yocum; 1878, George R. Mountain; 1879, John Shenefelt; 1880, John Geissinger; 1881, J. P. Snyder.

Educational and Religious.—In the sketch of Walker township appears an account of the early schools. It seems that the free-school system was not kindly received by many of the inhabitants at first, but after its advantages were better understood it was not so strenuously opposed as to become inoperative. The sparsely settled condition of the country had much to do with the slow advancement of the cause of education, necessarily keeping the schools backward, and preventing until recently the erection of a good class of buildings. In the winter of 1881 the school-house in the Corbin neighborhood was swept away by an ice gorge, and in its place a new brick house has been built which well accommodates the people of that section. In 1881 there were in all five districts, each provided with a house in which five months' school were taught. The males attending numbered sixty-six, the females forty-nine, and the average attendance was sixty-two. The salary paid to teachers was but twenty dollars per month. The officers of the school board were William Geissinger, president; D. W. Womelsdorf, secretary; and Enos Ridenour, collector and treasurer. Their co-members of the board were David Speck, Abraham Corbin, James Parks, and J. W. Yocum. The following have been the directors since the township became a separate organization:

1857, William E. Corbin, William Geissinger, John Thompson, George Morningstar, William Speck, Abner Speck; 1858, John Ridenour, William Dean; 1859, John H. Stone, Levi Ridenour; 1860, William A. Corbin, James Johnston; 1861, Thomas Dean, Abraham Speck; 1862, William Geissinger, Isaac Long; 1863, William E. Corbin, W. B. White; 1864, Isaac Heffner, John Heffner; 1865, William Geissinger, A. B Shenefelt, Abraham Corbin; 1866, William E. Corbin, Abraham Corbin, J. P. Snyder; 1867, Charles Heffner, John Heffner; 1868, Daniel Weight, Samuel Bagshaw, Samuel Peightal; 1869, William E. Corbin, Charles Heffner; 1870–71, A. B. Shenefelt, W. A. Corbin, J. W. Yocum, J. P. Snyder, Adam Fouse; 1872, John Heffner, George Hawn; 1873, W. E. Corbin, J. W. Yocum; 1874, William Geissinger, John Lefford; 1875, J. P. Snyder, James Parks; 1876, W. E. Corbin, Joseph Logan, W. H. McCall; 1877, Charles Heffner, David Speck; 1878, John Oswalt, J. P. Snyder; 1879, D. W. Womelsdorf, John Heffner; 1880, William Geissinger, David Speck; 1881, A. Corbin, James Parks, J. W. Yocum.

The only house of worship in the township is the Hawn meeting-house, which was erected by the Hawn brothers, John, George, Peter, and Isaac, for the use of such persons as adhered to the Evangelical Lutheran Church. It is a brick building of plain but not unattractive appearance, and affords ample accommodations for all who congregate there. Among these is a small Lutheran congregation, which has the same pastoral service as the church at Huntingdon, and is, for all practical purposes, a part of that organization.

The house is also occupied at stated periods by the Juniata Baptist Church as one of its preaching-places, Corbin's school-house being the other. This society was first formed in August, 1869, and at that time bore the name of Raystown Branch Baptist Church. It was constituted of nine members who had previously sustained a membership at Huntingdon, and had been favored with preaching as an outstation of that church. The pastor of the Huntingdon Church, the Rev. J. W. Plaunett, ministered to the church until 1871, when the Rev. W. G. Coulter for the next two years served them in holy things. The society, unfortunately, did not enjoy great prosperity, and in 1874 it was disbanded. In 1876 the pastor of the Huntingdon Church again began holding meetings in Juniata, and in the course of a revival many persons were converted, who joined the church at Huntingdon. In December, 1879, fifty-seven of these received letters of dismissal, and constituted themselves into the present Juniata Church, which was formally recognized by a council Dec. 9, 1879. The Rev. D. W. Hunter was called to the pastorate, and still serves the church, preaching twice per month. The officers in 1881 were William E. Corbin, Abraham Corbin, Adam Bagshaw, and E. W. Yocum.

CHAPTER XLV.

LINCOLN TOWNSHIP.

LINCOLN, so named in honor of President Abraham Lincoln, was erected Aug. 18, 1866. Its territory was taken from the township of Hopewell, which now bounds it on the south. On the northwest it is bounded by Blair County, on the northeast by Penn, and on the southeast by Tod township. It lies between Terrace Mountain on the east and Tussey Mountain on the west, and, as in the case of Hopewell, it is traversed in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction by nearly parallel ridges and intervening valleys, making the surface quite uneven, except narrow areas along the principal streams. These ridges are Allagrippa, between which and Terrace Mountain runs Raystown Branch of the Juniata, Pine Ridge, Backbone, Warrior, and Mulberry Ridges.

Raystown Branch pursues a tortuous course through the township, along the base of Terrace Mountain, and into this empty Coffee Run, Tatman's Run, and other small streams that rise in and traverse portions of the township. Coffee Run was so named from the circumstance that on one occasion a party of surveyors who were camped near the stream spilled in it their coffee. Tatman's Run was named from Joseph Tatman, who was an early settler on it.

Agriculture is almost the sole industry of the township. The valleys and hillsides are covered with cultivated fields, while the mountain-sides and the crests of the lesser ridges are covered with large areas of timber, from which the wild denizens of the forest are not yet wholly exterminated.

Coffee Run village took its name from the stream which passes by it. It came into existence after the construction of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad, which has a station here. It has ten or fifteen houses, two stores, and a post-office. The first store was established by David Foster and James Gilliam in 1856. Several have carried on mercantile business at this place. The stores now here are conducted by Cunningham, Hess & Co., and Simon Cohn. Drs. Figart and Shultz have their offices in this village.

Pioneers and Early Settlers.—John Plummer came to Lincoln prior to the Revolutionary war, and settled on a farm on the Bedford road, near the southern boundary of the township. Early during the Revolution Mr. Plummer was killed by the Indians near Coffee Run, and at the same time one of his daughters, Nancy, was made a prisoner. She died before she reached Canada, whither the Indians were taking her. Eli, his son, then ten years of age, and Sarah, another daughter, were captured and taken to Canada, where the girl remained with the Indians during her life. The son was kept during three years and then liberated. He rejoined his mother and sisters, who had returned to Maryland, and subsequently came back to Lincoln. He was the progenitor of all the Plummers in Huntingdon County, and his descendants by four daughters still remain here.

Felix Lynn came to what is now Lincoln township in 1832, and settled near Coffee Run, where his son, David Lynn, now resides. He had ten children, of whom four—George, Nicholas, David, and Eliza (now Mrs. Spangler)—now reside in the township. Daniel Brumbaugh was a resident here more than half a century since. Of his descendants many still reside in the township.

James Entrekin, Sr., came here between 1790 and 1800, and settled at the mouth of Coffee Run. He established there a store, the first in this region, and conducted it till 1835, when he sold the business to his nephew, James Entrekin, Jr., who continued the business till 1852. During the first few years of his residence here he kept "bachelor's hall," but after a time he married Margaret Wilson. They had no children. He was a surveyor, and in the prosecution of that business he became well acquainted with the different localities in this region, and as time went on he became a very large landholder. He was during thirty years a magistrate, and a man of much influence in Huntingdon County. His nephew, James Entrekin, Jr., came in 1829, and at first engaged with his uncle as a clerk. In 1835 he purchased the store, and continued the business during nearly twenty years. He was largely engaged in the purchase of land warrants and the location of wild land, and by the sale of such land he acquired a large fortune. He was distinguished for being the promoter of all measures of public interest. He was twice married; first to Margaret Steel, of Huntingdon, and after her death to Elizabeth S. Shirley, of Martinsburg. Of his children by his first wife only William S. Entrekin is living. He resides on the old homestead at Coffee Run. Two children by his second wife reside here. One is a son, Horatio T., and the other is the wife of John H. Hess, of Coffee Run.

Of the other pioneers in the valley of the Raystown Branch the names are remembered of John Keith, who located near Tatman's Run. His sons, Thomas and James, and his daughter, Mrs. Peter Brumbaugh, are residents of the township.

Abraham Brumbaugh settled near Mr. Keith. His son Andrew resides on the old homestead.

John Donaldson located on Raystown Branch, a mile and a half below the mouth of Coffee Run. His son, John H., owns the farm his father settled on, and another son, Isaac, is a resident of the township.

Rev. Dewalt Fouse came to this township in 1833, and settled in the north part, near the borough of Marklesburg, where his son Samuel now resides. He was a farmer, and in 1842 he became a clergyman of the Reformed Church. He continued his ministerial functions till his death in 1873. Of his children, Adam, Samuel, and a daughter, Mrs. Anthony Shultz, reside in the township.

Henry Shultz came to Lincoln township at a very early date, probably about 1797, and settled on the farm now owned by David Fouse, about a mile and a quarter south from Marklesburg. He resided there till his death, which occurred in 1837. Of his eleven children, two sons, John and David, lived in this township till their death. None of the children of John are here. Of David's children, John, Henry, Anthony, Martin, and David are now residents of Lincoln township.

Summers came at about the beginning of the present century, and located on the farm now owned by his grandson, Jacob Summers. His sons, Henry and Jacob, succeeded him on the same farm, where both died. Of the children of Henry, Jacob resides on the old homestead, and David and Henry are residents of Lincoln township.

In 1870, Lincoln had a population of five hundred and thirty-two. In 1880 it was six hundred and four.

The township officers since its organization have been as follows:

CONSTABLES.

1867–68, Harris Richardson; 1869, William Stapleton; 1870–78, John Fulton; 1879–81, Jonathan Biddle.

JAMES ENTREKIN.

James Entrekin was the eldest son of Col. John and Nancy Entrekin, and was born Oct. 18, 1804, in Ross County, Ohio. His father was a farmer, and served in the war of 1812. About the year 1829 he came to Coffee Run, Huntingdon Co., Pa., in company with his uncle, James Entrekin, who was engaged in the mercantile business. He remained there until 1840, when he purchased his uncle's interest in the store, and continued in the business until the spring of 1852, when he sold out to J. T. Shirley & Bro. On the 20th of February, 1833, he married Miss Margaret Steel, of Huntingdon. They had four children, and but one (son) is living, William S. He was then engaged in the real estate business; built three flouring-mills and the "Rough and Ready Furnace," was one of the principal proprietors of the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad, and after it was completed he was for many years principal director of the same. He was postmaster at Coffee Run for twenty years. Was a Republican, and always took an active part in politics; was school director for a number of years. In 1840 his wife, Margaret, died.

In 1854 he married Miss Elizabeth S., daughter of James Shirley, of Martinsburg, Blair Co. He had by his second wife two children, Anna M. and Horatio T.

William S. Entrekin remained with his father until he was of age. He was educated at the public schools of Coffee Run and Huntingdon. When he was about eighteen years old he began the stock business. In 1857 he embarked in the mercantile business, and in about a year sold out and commenced farming in connection with the stock business.

He built a storehouse and hotel in 1866 at Coffee Run, where he again carried on the mercantile business a few months and sold out. He has since been engaged in the real estate business and farming.

Mr. Entrekin has held a number of township offices. Has been school director for the past eight years. Is a member of the Reformed Church. On the 6th of November, 1877, he married Miss Martha Stoler. Two children have been born to them, James T. and Maria Margaret.

SUPERVISORS.

1867, Authony Shultz, Frederick Berkstresser; 1868, John H. Donaldson, Henry Shultz; 1869, Henry Shultz, J. Donaldson; 1870, David Fouse, Samuel Schell; 1872, I. Keith, N. Lynn; 1873, J. W. Books, Henry Shultz; 1874, John Beaver, Casper Fisher; 1875, Harris Richardson, David Lynn; 1876, John A. Shultz, C. Shoutz; 1877, Nicholas Lynn, David Fouse; 1878, Philip Garner, David Fouse; 1879, S. H. Grove, David Fouse; 1880, S. H. Grove, Samuel Schell; 1881, Jacob Harker, Henry Shultz.

Tanneries.—In very early times there was a tannery on Coffee Run, about midway between Coffee Run village and the mouth of the stream. The builder of this tannery is forgotten. More than forty years have passed since operations ceased there, and nothing of the establishment remains.

Another was on the Bedford road, about a mile north from Marklesburg. Operations there ceased in 1844.

In 1882, George Park and Daniel Brumbaugh commenced the erection of a tannery at Coffee Run. This, when completed, will have twenty-five vats.

Grist-Mill.—In 1844 a grist-mill was erected on the Shy Beaver Creek at its mouth by James Entrekin, Jr. It is a large framed mill, with four run of stones. It has been owned by Orbison & McMurtrie, Peter Brumbaugh, and the present proprietor, G. W. Baker, from whom it takes its name, Baker's mill.

Zion's Reformed Church.—This society was organized Oct. 28, 1843, by Rev. Theobald Fouse, with sixteen constituent members. During five years the congregation worshiped in a log school-house on the old Summers farm. In 1848 the present church edifice was erected on the Bedford road, about three-fourths of a mile south from Marklesburg. It is a framed structure, thirty-eight by forty-eight feet, with a seating capacity of four hundred.

Mr. Fouse continued to be pastor of this congregation till his death in 1873. He was followed by Rev. John H. Sykes, and he in 1878 by C. H. Reiter. The present pastor, Rev. H. F. Long, entered on his duties in November, 1881. The present membership is one hundred and fifty-five.

Brethren.—In 1876 a house of worship was erected at Coffee Run for the accommodation of the members of James Creek congregation residing there. It is an unpretentious wooden structure, with a seating capacity of two hundred.

There are in the township four schools, which in 1881 aggregated one hundred and eighty-five scholars, and were kept open during five months.

CHAPTER XLVI.

LOGAN TOWNSHIP.

THE township of Logan embraces the lower part of Shaver's Creek Valley, its southwestern boundary being in the main the Little Juniata River, which separates it from Porter township. Northwest is Franklin township, the summit of Tussey Mountain forming the boundary line. The opposite boundary of the valley is Warrior's Ridge, a high and broken tract of land, lying in the southeastern part of Logan and the northwestern part of Oneida townships. Above Logan is the township of West, from which it was but a few years ago set off. The width of the township is about four miles, and its length one-half greater. Not more than two-thirds of the area is tillable; but the soil is usually fertile, and the township contains a number of very fine farms, and its improvements rank with those of other leading townships in the county. Flowing from the northeast, and bisecting Logan near its centre, is Shaver's Creek, the only stream of any size in the township. It is sluggish and not noted for good water-powers. The name was derived from a very early settler by the name of Shaver who lived near its mouth. There is a tradition that he was murdered one evening while he was putting his horse in the pasture-lot, and from the fact that he was beheaded, but not scalped, it was believed that the crime was perpetrated by a white man. It is said that the most liberal reward failed to secure the least clue by which the author of this cruel deed might become known. Shaver was buried on the right bank of the creek, below the present railroad bridge at Petersburg, where was afterwards established one of the earliest graveyards in the valley.

Early Settlers and Old Surveys.—One of the few warrants of 1755 located in Huntingdon County was granted March 8th to Barnaby Barnes for two hundred acres of land "at a place called the Two Springs, and to include the same about two miles from Peter Shaver's, on the north side of Juniata." In 1768 this tract became the property of William Smith, D.D., founder of the town of Huntingdon. It embraces the Myton farm, and extends along the river from a point less than half a mile below Petersburg to the Oneida township line. It was patented to Dr. Smith in 1787, and called "Smithfield."

Mention has already been made of Samuel Anderson in connection with the Bridenbaugh farm. It appears from the records of the land office that John Lytle had obtained an office title, or had made application for one that would conflict with the claim of the heirs of Peter Shaver. Accordingly, on June 25, 1765, "Samuel Anderson, on behalf of John Shaver and Peter Shaver, the minor children of Peter Shaver, late of the county of Cumberland, Indian trader, deceased, enters a caveat against the acceptance of a survey or patent being granted to John Lytle or any other person for a tract of land at the mouth of Shaver's Creek, about four miles above the Standing Stone, whereon s^{d} Peter, the father, made an improvement about the year 1754, the said Samuel Anderson alleging the right or claim of improvement is vested in the said children until they have a hearing in the office." On the 9th November, 1784, Samuel Anderson obtained a warrant for this land, in which Jacob Neff, Hugh Mears, and John Reed, deceased, are mentioned as adjoining owners. The application is dated 19th July, 1784, and Thomas Mitchell, Oliver Wallis, and John Walker, the witnesses, made oath that the improvement was made in 1754.

The tract upon which a part of the borough of Petersburg is located was applied for by Andrew Anderson, April 9, 1768. A survey was made on Dec. 11, 1860, but altered before return to the land office.

Next above Samuel Anderson's, or Shaver's, on the Juniata, is a tract warranted June 3, 1762, to Jacob Hiltzheimer. The warrant calls to adjoin "the improvement made by Peter Shaver." The next tract, extending to the mouth of the Little Juniata and up that stream for nearly a mile, as well as the one lying immediately north of these two tracts, was warranted in 1762. The fertile lands along the valley of the creek and along the Warrior's Ridge were taken by office titles or improvements from 1760 to 1768.

Old records show that Charles Elliott had made an improvement in 1762; some of the McKnitts, Thomas Armstrong, and William Wilson in 1763; Daniel McFaul in 1766. Adam Torrence, who owned the Crawford farm, had resided in the county in 1755.

Samuel Anderson, referred to above, in a deposition taken Jan. 12, 1790, stated that he had been an inhabitant of this locality since 1767. In 1772 he resided on his land at the mouth of Shaver's Creek, and at April and July sessions of the court of Bedford County he served as a grand juror.

Michael Maguire, in a statement made in 1845, said that his father came to this locality about seventy-two years ago, which would place the date about 1773. The Spencer family came about the same year. The Wilson family settled some time about 1770 or 1773.

William Johnston, Robert Erwin, and William McNitt took out warrants for lands April 25, 1763, and were then or soon afterwards became settlers.

"Alexander McNut's (McKnitt?) land" is mentioned in several orders of survey granted in 1766.

He was followed by the Andersons, Maguires, Donnellys, and others, who took up the choicest tracts of land a number of years before the Revolution. Samuel Anderson was one of the most prominent of these settlers, and in the struggle for independence was a very active man in preparing defense against the savage allies of the British. He lived on the tract of land on the opposite side of Shaver's Creek from Petersburg, which later became known as the Bridenbaugh farm, and was instrumental in building a small fort in that locality which bore his name. It was of the nature of a block-house, and was never assailed, although doubtless a comfort to the settlers, who could more readily take refuge there than at Standing Stone. It is not improbable that the fort was intended more as a rendezvous for the settlers when they gathered to go to Standing Stone, when an incursion was feared, than as a means of protracted defense against assault. Anderson lived here until the close of the war, but of his subsequent history nothing is known in the township.

Bartholomew Maguire settled in the western part of Logan, at the base of Tussey's Mountain, some time before 1770. He had a daughter named Jane, who had a narrow escape from the Indians, as will be further on related, and a son Michael, who lived to become one of the oldest men in the township, dying a number of years ago. He was a man of a wonderfully retentive memory, and had a vivid recollection of the early events of the country. His youngest son, James, is a citizen of Iowa. Jane Maguire married into the Dowling family, and removed to the Raystown Branch, where some of her children yet live. A neighbor of Bartholomew Maguire was Felix Donnelly, who lived in the neighborhood of Barree Iron-Works. One of his sons was named Francis. These families had a very thrilling adventure with the Indians, which resulted fatally to the two Donnellys. In consequence of the presence of Indians the Maguires and Donnellys made preparations to go to Standing Stone to fort early in the summer of 1777. Accordingly, on the 19th of June that year, Felix Donnelly and his son Francis, and Bartholomew Maguire and his daughter Jane, with some of their goods and cattle, left their homes for Standing Stone. Nothing disturbed their progress until they had passed down the river to a point near the Big Spring, above Huntingdon. Jane Maguire was in the advance driving the cows, the men following on the horses. Suddenly the Indians fired from an ambuscade, killing young Francis Donnelly. As he was falling his father caught him for the purpose of keeping him on the horse, and thus prevent his being scalped. Maguire urged Donnelly to flee for his life, but the old man refused to leave his son, when Maguire came back, and the two men carried the dead boy between them on the horse. The Indians fired another volley, one of the bullets striking Felix Donnelly, and another grazing Maguire, carrying off a lock of his hair. Both the Donnellys now fell to the ground, and Maguire rode forward with all haste, going by the girl and the cows. The Indians, after scalping the Donnellys, rushed after Jane, evidently with the intention of making her a prisoner. One of them, more fleet than the others, overtook her, and, with a yell of delight, grasped her by her dress. Fortunately the string of her short gown tore, leaving that garment in the hands of the Indian, while the girl, now freed from the grasp of the savage, in her haste to escape, caught hold of the tail of one of the cows, which, taking fright, ran with terrific speed down the road towards the fort, overtaking Mr. Maguire, who had by this time sufficiently recovered himself to aim his rifle at the pursuing Indian. Upon seeing this the savage took shelter behind a rock, and both the Maguires succeeded in reaching the fort in safety. Meantime some men on the opposite side of the river, at Cryder's mill, who had heard the firing and the yells of the savages, had set off in a canoe for the purpose of engaging the savages. But before they could do so the Indian had succeeded in reaching the top of the bluff, where he joined his companions and disappeared. The whites fearing an ambush, returned to the mill, where they were soon after joined by a scouting party from the fort; but failing to discover the trail of the savages, pursuit was abandoned. The bodies of Felix and Francis Donnelly were taken to Huntingdon and interred upon a spot which is now the centre of the town.

The following year the fort at Anderson's was built, and in the summer of 1779 was the scene of a ludicrous fright. A half-witted boy who had been sent for the cows in the woods near by soon returned, white with fear, saying that the Indians were coming down the river in full force. The fort was quickly prepared for their reception, and as they did not appear, a part of the garrison marched up the hill to see where the enemy was. After looking in vain for some time, nothing but three mild-eyed cows were seen coming down the path. The occupants of the fort now having recovered from their consternation, indulged in a mock court-martial, in which the boy was sentenced to be shot. The poor fellow could not understand that he was only the butt of their sport, and was almost frightened to death before he realized the imposition practiced on him.

The mouth of Shaver's Creek was the scene of the abduction by the Indians of Mrs. Moses Donaldson and her two children, related in the history of Porter, and in the township occurred the last massacre by the savages in the county. This happened in the latter part of August, 1781, at a time when no hostile Indians were supposed to be about. At the period mentioned Peter Crum was operating the Minor mill, at the place where are now Barree Iron-Works, under a lease. He had gone to the mill early in the morning to set it a-going, and was returning home for his breakfast, carrying his rifle over his shoulder and a string of fish in the other hand. When about a mile below the mill, at the old Jackson farm, he heard the crack of a rifle, and looking up the hill saw two Indians. He dropped his fish and opened the pan of his rifle, but having been shot in the hand, the blood had moistened the priming so much that he could not use his gun. Seeing this the Indians rushed upon him and dealt him a blow behind, followed by others until his head was beaten in. When he was found, several hours later, Crum was lying upon his face, his rifle by his side, and an Indian war-club, clotted with blood, lying across his body. The Indians eluded the scouts which immediately set in pursuit of them and escaped, carrying the scalp of Crum as a trophy to the British garrison at Detroit, probably the last one carried from the Juniata Valley.[1]

[1] Vide Jones' Juniata Valley.

Among the pioneers who retained a permanent settlement in the township was James Porter, an Irishman, who bought a tract of land from James McClay about the period of the Revolution, living and dying on the farm now owned by his grandson, James Porter. He reared sons named William, Joseph, John, and James, and several of his daughters married Robert Gillis, of Washington County, and David Anderson, who removed to Indiana County. William, the oldest son, moved to Ohio; Joseph to Washington County; John died in Jackson township; James married Susan Borst, and lived on the homestead until his death, about 1861, leaving a family of nine children, viz.: William, died in Illinois; Jacob, living in Oneida; James, on the homestead; George B., in Petersburg; and Samuel, near the homestead. The daughters were married to William Stewart, of Logan, Jesse Henry, and Daniel Longanecker. William and Samuel, brothers of James Porter, the elder, were also pioneers in Logan.

After the Revolution came George Wilson, also an Irishman, and located on the James Walls place, dying there. His son Robert moved to Centre County; David to Clearfield County; James died in the township without issue; George, the youngest, died in Logan, on the old Armstrong place, in 1873. He was married to Jane Reed, and was the father of George W. Wilson, occupying the homestead. A daughter married W. L. Armstrong. The daughters of George Wilson, Sr., were married to members of the Stewart, Porter, and McClellan families. William Armstrong came to Logan as early as 1769. He was the grandfather of Robert Armstrong, of the township of Logan.

On what are now known as the Miller and Oaks farms James Reed was the pioneer. He died in 1834, aged eighty-two years, and his wife, Jenny, in 1826. He was the father of sons named Robert, William, John, James, and Joseph, and several daughters. On a neighboring farm was Thomas Johnston, who had sons named William, John, and Thomas. This family has become extinct in the township. Farther up the valley lived William Nelson, an Irishman, who had been with Braddock in his campaign in 1755. In 1765 he settled on the John C. Wilson place, on Nelson's Run. He was a scout during the Revolution. He died in 1804, and was buried at Manor Hill. His sons were John and William. The former was born in Logan in 1774, and married Margaret, a daughter of Nicholas Graffius, in 1802, moving to Mercer County the same year. His son John is yet a resident of the township. William, the other son, born in 1777, married Elizabeth Thompson, and lived on the homestead until his death in 1853.

William Wilson came a little later, but was also one of the settlers who helped to build Anderson's Fort. A number of his descendants yet live in the township, very aged men. In about 1796, John Wall became a citizen of Logan, and remained in the township until his death in 1848, aged eighty-one years. He had sons named John, Jacob, Joseph, Andrew, David, Eli, and James. But few of their descendants remain, Jonathan, a son of John, being about the only one to perpetuate the name in the township.

The Cresswell Family.—1. ROBERT CRESSWELL emigrated from the County Down, Ireland, and settled in Kishacoquillas Valley, Mifflin Co. He sold his farm there to Rev. James Johnston, who became, about 1784, pastor of the East Kishacoquillas Presbyterian congregation, and continued in the service of that church until his death in 1820. Robert Cresswell doubtless moved to what is now Huntingdon County with his sons, as his remains rest in the Ewing graveyard in Barree township. His children were:

2. Samuel.
3. Matthew.
4. John.
5. Robert.
6. Alexander.
7. Edward Potter.
8. A daughter, who married Silas Anderson and moved to Ohio.
9. A daughter, who married —— Denyne.

III. MATTHEW married a daughter of Patrick Leonard. One of his sons, Jacob (10), was a prominent citizen of the county. He served as deputy surveyor from 1837 to 1839, and afterwards for some time taught school in Huntingdon, where, in 1841, the writer hereof was one of his pupils. Subsequently he was appointed agent for the trustees of the Savage estate and moved to Savage Forge, in Tod township, from which, after a residence of some years, he took his family to Cassville, where he died March 11, 1868, aged about sixty-three years. He married first a Miss Wilson, of Sinking Valley, by which union he had two daughters. The surviving daughter is the wife of James W. Hughes, a member of the House of Representatives from Bedford County. His second wife, a daughter of Stephen Davis, with several of her children, now resides in Tyrone.

V. ROBERT married Mary, a daughter of Nicholas Graffius,[1] who had settled on Shaver's Creek. He and his brother Matthew bought and made their homes on the tract on Warrior's Ridge now known as the Schuck farm. After a residence here of some years, where most, if not all, his children were born, Robert pushed with his family into the wilderness of Clearfield County, and settled on the bank of the Susquehanna above Anderson's Creek, at a spot designated by the watermen as the "Pewees' Nest," where he died Aug. 24, 1807. His children were:

11. John.
12. Nicholas.
13. Robert.
14. Elizabeth.
15. Martha.
16. Abraham.
17. Mary.
18. Catharine.

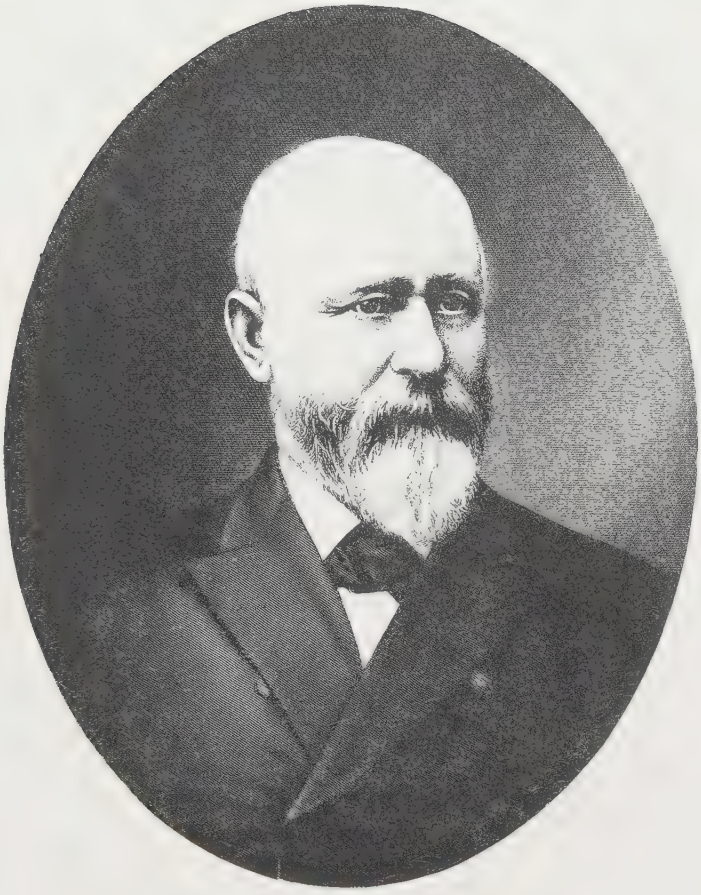
Robert's wife survived him many years. She returned to Barree township and died there about 1832.

XI. JOHN CRESSWELL, b. in what is now West township, Dec. 28, 1794, died at Petersburg, June 23, 1881. He learned the trade of chair-making, and carried on the business in Alexandria up to about the year 1832. He served many years as a justice of the peace, and in 1822 was elected county commissioner. Afterward he became a contractor on the Wabash Canal, in the State of Indiana. In January, 1839, he was appointed by Governor Porter prothonotary, and served until a successor was chosen at the following October election. Subsequently he was appointed collector of tolls on the canal at Huntingdon, to which he moved his family and remained there several years. In 1847 he commenced the mercantile business at Manor Hill. In 1853, Petersburg became his residence, where, with his son George M., under the firm-name of John Cresswell & Son, he continued until his death to take an interest in the mercantile and grain trade. In his earlier years he took an active interest in military affairs, and from service in the militia received the appellation "colonel," a designation by which he was universally known. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and for many years was a prominent and useful member of his congregation. Politically he was always a Democrat, and cast his first presidential vote for James Monroe, in 1816, and the last for Winfield S. Hancock, in 1880. He was a member of Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 178, A. Y. M., at Huntingdon, and although the lodge was disbanded during anti-Masonic times, he never ceased his interest in the work of the craft.

He married, first, Margaret, daughter of Jacob Mytinger, in Alexandria, Aug. 27, 1816, who died March 29, 1832; and, second, Marilla Burr, Oct. 29, 1835, who died childless Oct. 23, 1878. The children by the first marriage were:

19. Robert, b. June 24, 1817, a member of the firm of Breed, Cresswell & Washburn, of Philadelphia, and for many years a dry-goods merchant there.

20. John, Jr., b. Jan. 16, 1819, for a long time a resident of Hollidaysburg, and a practicing attorney-at-law there. He served two terms in the State Senate, and was Speaker thereof in 1859. He married a Miss Armitage, of Huntingdon, and d. in Hollidaysburg, Jan. 27, 1882.



21. Elizabeth, b. Dec. 10, 1820, unmarried, resides with her brother George M., in Petersburg.

22. Mary, b. Oct. 12, 1822, unmarried, resides with her brother Robert, in Philadelphia.

23. George Mytinger, b. Oct. 1, 1824.

24. Silas Anderson, b. Aug. 1, 1826, m. Abigail Wakefield, Jan. 23, 1853. Their surviving children are Ella and Henry M. He is a member of the firm

[1] For the Graffius family, see Porter township.

Geo. M. Brewster

of Cresswell & Porter, engaged in merchandising and as grain dealers at Petersburg.

24. Henrietta M., b. June 22, 1828, wife of Dr. J. H. Shumaker, principal of the Chambersburg Academy.

25. Matthew, b. Sept. 25, 1830, is in the wholesale dry-goods trade in Philadelphia, senior member of the firm of M. Cresswell & Co.

XII. NICHOLAS, b. Oct. 23, 1796, learned the trade of a potter with John Glazier, in Huntingdon, m. Mary Ann Gemmill, and died at his residence in Alexandria, Aug. 27, 1876.

XIII. ROBERT, b. April 5, 1798, d. unmarried in Petersburg, Sept. 29, 1867.

XIV. ELIZABETH, b. Nov. 22, 1799, m. James Ewing, and died in Barree township, Sept. 18, 1877.

XV. MARTHA, b. Jan. 16, 1802, d. in youth, in Clearfield County.

XVI. ABRAHAM, b. Oct. 21, 1803, m. Margaret Hope, d. in Petersburg, Feb. 11, 1871.

XVII. MARY, b. March 1, 1805, m. Jacob Bolinger, and resides in Hollidaysburg.

XVIII. CATHARINE, b. Feb. 11, 1807, widow of Thomas Stewart; resides in Barree township.

XXIII. GEORGE MYTINGER, b. in Alexandria, Oct. 1, 1824, received his education in the common schools of his native borough and at the Huntingdon Academy. His first employment was as a clerk in his father's office as collector of tolls at Huntingdon. In 1844 he clerked for the house of James M. Bolton & Co., in Philadelphia; next in the store of John Wesley Myton, at Ennisville; then in a store at Guysport. In 1846 he opened a store at McAlevy's Fort; April 1, 1847, sold out to his father, and entered the store of A. & N. Cresswell, his uncles, at Petersburg, where he remained until the fall of 1848. Then followed five years' experience boating on the Pennsylvania Canal, at the end of which he became the junior partner of the firm of John Cresswell & Son, at Petersburg, which continued until the death of the father in 1881. In 1874 the store was sold to Cresswell & Miller. In 1868, in connection with his father, purchased the Neff mills on the Little Juniata, and in 1878 he became the owner of the "Juniata Forge property," including the forge and flouring-mill below Petersburg, and about two thou-

d acres of woodland in Logan and Oneida townships. He rented out the Neff mills and forge, and is now running the Petersburg flouring- and saw-mills. As his father was so he is, in religion a Presbyterian, and in politics a Democrat. He does not covet political preferment, and, except in serving his immediate neighbors as school director or burgess, he was but once a candidate for office. In 1876 he was the Democratic nominee for senator for the district composed of Huntingdon and Franklin, and in his own neighborhood ran largely ahead of the other candidates on the same ticket. He married, May 31, 1853, Martha W., daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Kyler) Forrest, who was born in Barree township in 1830, and died Sept. 30, 1873. Their children were:

26. Henrietta, b. May 9, 1854, d. July 12, 1854.

27. Joseph Forrest, b. Aug. 25, 1855, m. May 16, 1882, Fanny M. Wakefield; is a member of the firm of Cresswell & Miller, running the Neff flouring-mill.

28. Margaret Mytinger, b. April 28, 1858, d. Oct. 28, 1860.

29. Bertha, b. Dec. 25, 1860.

30. George Mytinger, b. July 22, 1863, d. Oct. 1, 1869.

31. Anna Gibson, b. June 14, 1866.

32. John, b. Oct. 10, 1868.

The Stryker family came from Hunterdon County, N. J. In 1816, John Stryker settled at Masseysburg, in Barree township, where he had purchased a small farm. To this he added by purchase until he was a large land-owner. He died in 1855, and was buried in the Neff cemetery at Petersburg. His family consisted of John T. Stryker, who died in Tyrone township; Peter, the second son, died in Porter, opposite Alexandria, in 1857; Samuel, the third son, immigrated to California; Mahlon T., the fourth, lived and died in West in 1873. The fourth son, Joseph W., graduated at Union College, N. Y., and is at present a citizen of Washington. For seven years he was the American consul at Pernambuco. William W., another son, is a citizen of Logan, living near Petersburg. The daughters married,—Eliza, Adam Lightner, of West; Adam Lefford, of Mifflin County, Lewis Lightner, of Illinois, and Elijah Perry, of Missouri.

The Neffs are of Swiss descent, and those in America are the offspring of three brothers, two of whom settled in Philadelphia, the other in Lancaster County. From the latter have descended the Neffs of this part of the State. About 1794, John, Jacob, and Henry, brothers, came from Lancaster to Logan to live; but the latter soon returned to his old home. Their mother, Christiana, came with them, and died in 1806, at the age of seventy-three years. She and nearly all her numerous descendants who have deceased were buried in the Neff burying-ground west of Petersburg. John Neff, the oldest of the two brothers, lived on the present William Stryker farm until his death in 1810. His wife Fanny died in 1815. Of their family, John, the oldest son, was married to Margaret Mong, and their children were Mary, the wife of William McClure, of Logan; Isaac M., living in Logan; Samuel, who died in the township; Margaret Ann, single; Eliza and John, deceased; Benjamin L. and Henry A., living in Logan. John Neff was a very active business man, building the mills and other improvements west of Petersburg. He died in 1862 at the age of seventy-seven years, and his widow yet resides in the township at the age of eighty-seven years.

Jacob K., the second son, died at Petersburg in 1829, at the age of forty years. He was the father of sons named John A., living in Philadelphia; Edwin, living in Detroit; and Dr. Henry K., who died in the borough of Huntingdon.

The third son, Andrew, married Elizabeth Grove, and lived in Porter until his death in 1833, at the age of forty-five; his wife died in 1866, aged sixty-nine years. His family consisted of Benjamin, living on the homestead; Andrew G., living in the southern part of Porter; Henry G., in the same township; and Jacob, living on the homestead. One of the daughters, Eliza, is the wife of Samuel Hatfield, of Porter; and Mary is the wife of Dr. Martin Orlady, of McConnellstown.

The fourth son, Daniel, was married to Elizabeth Hewitt, and lived in Porter until his death in 1849, at the age of sixty-two years. His widow died eight years later, at the same age. They were the parents of Henry Neff, of Neff's Mills; John Neff, of the same place; William and David, living on the homestead; and a daughter became the wife of Abraham Harnish, of Morris.

Isaac, the fifth son, was born in 1795 and died in 1859. He was the father of Edward Neff, of Warrior's Mark; William and Isaac, living in Cleveland; and of daughters who married John McMullen and John Martin.

A sixth son, Henry, died at Alexandria. He was the father of Elvira Neff, of Tyrone, and of Mrs. Perry Moore, of Morris.

The only daughter of John Neff, Sr., married for her first husband Henry Swoope; and for her second, Jacob Harncame, of Logan.

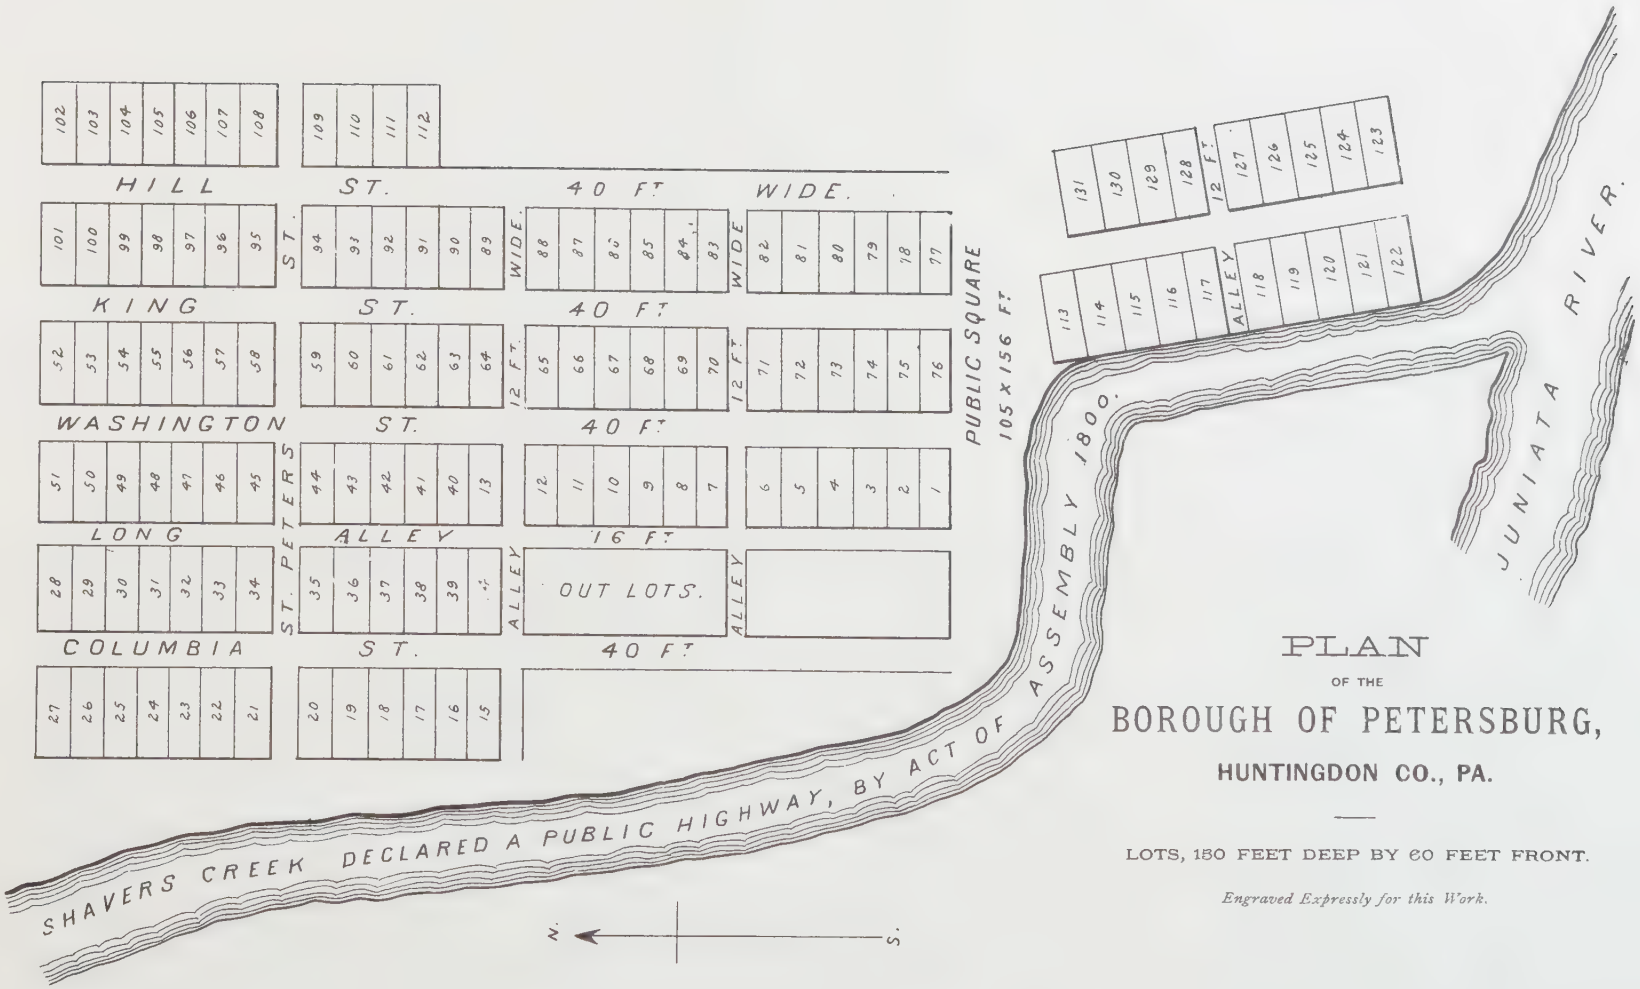
Jacob Neff, Sr., was born in 1763, and died in Logan in 1834. Barbara, his wife, died in 1822. Their children were Jacob, who lived on part of the homestead which is now occupied by his son Benjamin; Rudolph, another son, resides in Altoona; and a daughter married Capt. Martin, of Harrisburg.

A second son of Jacob Neff, Daniel, married to Mary M. Burket, lived in West township. They were the parents of David and John Neff, and of daughters who married Thompson Stryker, William Ake, Lee Wilson, and David Ross. The daughters of Jacob Neff, Sr., were Mary, Nancy, Barbara, and Susan. The latter was the wife of Isaac Neff, Sr., of Logan; Barbara was the wife of Christian Hoover, of Logan; Mary, of Christian Stoner, of Sinking Valley; and Nancy, of Daniel Neff, of Lancaster County, but who lived and died in Logan. These were the parents of Andrew Neff, of Logan, and of Benjamin K., who died at Baden, Germany.

At Petersburg among the early settlers were Dr. Peter Shoenberger and his parents. The latter died at this place, and are buried in the old Shaver graveyard. The family removed from the township about forty years ago. His settlement took place about 1794. George Rung came at a later day, and carried on a tannery until within a few years of his death, in 1842. He was born in Lancaster County in 1777. His children were Henry, who died in 1833, at the age of twenty-eight years; Mary was the wife of Samuel Metz, of Logan; Anna married John Mytinger, of Water Street; William removed to Illinois; John, married to Mary Lightner, lived on the lower part of the Johnston farm until his death, in 1877, leaving no representatives of the family in the township.

John Dopp settled on a part of the Smith tract below Huntingdon in 1790, coming from Hagerstown. The flood of 1810 forced him to leave that place, and he died in Smithfield in 1813. He reared three sons and two daughters,—Henry, who kept a public-house at Huntingdon; Jacob, who went to sea, where he lost his life; and John, who was a soldier in the war of 1812. The latter was the father of Jacob Dopp, of Petersburg, and grandfather of John T. Dopp, of the same place.

Valentine Wingert, a Pennsylvania Dutchman, whose wife's maiden name was Todd,—a very intellectual woman,—early settled at Petersburg, living in the plastered building near the public spring. He died about 1850. Eveline, his youngest daughter, became the wife of Gen. Charles Albright. Of his sons, Samuel became an attorney at Pittsburgh and Charles a paymaster in the United States army.



Samuel Renner was one of the first settlers in what is now the upper end of the borough of Huntingdon, clearing up a farm there, which until quite recently was known by the family name. He died in 1828. He was the father of John Renner, of Blair County; Jacob, who died at Altoona in June, 1881; Isaac, who died at Lock Haven; and Abraham, living at Petersburg. One of the daughters, Mary, became the wife of E. M. Jones, of Altoona, who was for many years a clerk at Juniata Forge, at Petersburg.

James Murphy, a son of Francis Murphy, of Chester County, became a citizen of Petersburg in 1814, and continued a resident until his death in 1876, at the age of seventy-nine years. He was the father of John P. and Alexander Murphy.

An account of other early settlers of the valley may be found in the sketches of West and Barree townships, in another part of this book. In 1880 the population of Logan, exclusive of Petersburg, was six hundred and eleven; including the borough, nine hundred and ninety-two.

Civil Organization.—On the 10th of April, 1878, Henry Wilson, William Ewing, and Thomas Bell, commissioners to inquire into the expediency of dividing West township, reported that they had met at the residence of Elijah Gillam, in West, on Monday, March 18, 1878, and made a draft of the proposed division, the line being as follows:

"Beginning at a post on the line between Oneida and West townships, eight hundred and seventy perches from the Barree township line, and twelve hundred and twenty-one perches from the Juniata River; thence north forty-three degrees west seven miles, one hundred and nine perches to a small pitch-pine on the summit of Tussey Mountain, on the line of Franklin township."

PLAN

OF THE

BOROUGH OF PETERSBURG,

HUNTINGDON CO., PA.

LOTS, 150 FEET DEEP BY 60 FEET FRONT.

Engraved Expressly for this Work.

The court then ordered an election to ascertain whether the voters approved the proposed division with the foregoing bounds, and on the 10th of June, 1878, returns were made that one hundred and eight voters were for the division and ten against. On the 15th of June of the same year, the court confirmed the action bearing on the division, and ordered that the north part retain the name of West, and that the south part be called by the name of Logan.

The following have been the principal officers since the organization of the township: 1879, Constable, John S. Nelson; Supervisor of Roads, George P. Wakefield; Auditors, Henry Graffius, John T. Dopp, K. J. Myton; 1880, Supervisors, Henry A. Neff, James G. Stewart; Auditor, George B. Porter; 1881, Supervisors, Michael Sprankle, George P. Wakefield; Auditor, John T. Dopp.

General Industries. — The power of Shaver's Creek being limited to a few mill-seats, and that of the Juniata not being available along its whole course, but few manufacturing interests have been established in Logan. On the former stream a water-power was improved in 1810 by Thomas Johnston, who built saw- and grist-mills. The property has been altered at different times and had a number of owners, among them being William Johnston, John Byers, Judge Thomas F. Stewart, and the present James G. Stewart. It is regarded as a good country mill. The tannery at this point has not lately been carried on. It was established by Judge Stewart. The old Rung tannery at Petersburg, which had a good reputation years gone by, was discontinued a quarter of a century ago.

Juniata Forge was built at Petersburg a few years before 1800 by Dr. Peter Shoenberger, occupying the site where are yet the ruins of an old forge. Shaver's Creek alone at first supplied the power, but in course of time the waters of the Juniata were also utilized, affording a power of large capacity. From the first the products of the forge achieved an excellent reputation among iron-workers, and the revenues derived from its operation in the beginning of this century laid the foundation of the great wealth of the Shoenberger family. After Dr. Shoenberger's retirement his sons, George and John H., carried on the forge on an extended scale, and about 1846, Edward Shoenberger, a third son, had charge of the forge and established a rolling-mill in connection. The flood of 1847 inflicted great damage, and the latter enterprise was soon after abandoned. About 1861, John R. Hunter and John N. Swoope purchased the Shoenberger interests in Logan for forty thousand dollars, and operated the forge until the depression in the trade following the panic of 1873 made it unprofitable. It has since been allowed to remain idle.

The Petersburg Flouring-mill is operated by the same power. It commenced running in the spring of 1866, with Hunter & Swoope as owners, and was carried on by them until the firm was dissolved by the death of Mr. Hunter, in 1878. Since that time the owner of the property has been George M. Cresswell. The mill is capacitated to grind sixty barrels of flour per day. At the same place is a saw-mill and machinery for grinding fire-clay.

The "Juniata Mills" are a mile above Petersburg, near the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the power is supplied by the Little Juniata. The improvements were first made by John Neff about 1800, and consisted of a saw-mill only. Six years later a grist-mill was built which, in an enlarged condition, is yet in use. The mill is supplied with modern machinery, and has a good capacity and a fine reputation for its products. Besides John Neff, the property had as owners Harncame & Neff, John Cresswell & Son, and, since 1881, George M. Cresswell.

The Petersburg Foundry was built in 1849 by McCullough & Orlady, and was carried on for them a number of years by Elias Maise. It is at present the property of John Slack. The products are ordinary farm machinery and general repair work. The motor is steam, furnished by a ten horse-power engine.

